There are considerable timber resources, mostly of the spruce, hemlock and red and yellow cedar sort. The National forests in Alaska (June 30, 1920) have an area of 20,579,740 acres. In 1910 there were 152 industrial establishments, employing a total of 78,479 persons (3,099 wage earners), having a capital of 13,060,116 dollars. The pulp manufacturing industry is becoming established, spruce being suitable for the purpose and abounding in large quantities.

The chief industries are seal and salmon fisheries, and mining. The sea fisheries of the Pribilof Islands are under the charge of the Federal Department of Commerce In 1920 the seal herd contained 525,000 animals

The salmon fisheries are very valuable, and Government has provided for their preservation by securing legislative enactments for the construction and maintenance of hatcheries The catch of salmon in 1918 was valued at 53,424,765 dollars In 1919 there were 134 salmon canneries, employing 28,534 men The capital invested was 74,181,560 dollars Halibut, cod, herring, and whales are also caught, the herring and whales for the manufacture of oil and manure In the fisheries in 1918 there were employed 31,213 persons, 639 vessels and 7,587 boats Total value of fish products in 1918, 59,099,483 dollars, total capital invested, 73,764,289 dollars

Gold is worked in South East Alaska, where a low-grade ore is found, in the interior on the Yukon river, and at Nome and other places on the west coast The output of gold in 1919 was 437,131 fine ounces, valued at 9,036,300 dollars, of silver 690,151 fine ounces, valued at 705,273 dollars, and of copper, 56,534,992 pounds, valued at 8,783,063 dollars From 1880, when gold first began to be mined in Alaska, until 1919, 15,039 922 fine ounces have been produced, valued at 302,944,234 dollars Tin ore deposits near Cape Prince of Wales are of a high grade, lead is produced, coal is worked, petroleum, gypsum, and marble are found Total value of mineral output in 1919, 19,620,913 dollars, in 1920, 22,070,000 dollars

Commerce and Communications—The value of the domestic merchandise shipped from the United States to Alaska in the year ending December 31, 1920, amounted to 36,876,855 dollars, and from Alaska to the United States 60,939,061 dollars, besides gold ore and bullion In the calendar year 1919, 1,130 vessels of 477,878 tons entered the ports of Alaska in domestic trade, and 1,367 of 486,744 tons cleared The chief ports of shipment of the United States to Alaska are on Puget Sound

There is a railway of 112 miles from Skagway to the town of White Horse (in the Canadian Yukon region), thence transport is by coach or, in summer, by steamer The Copper River and North Western Railway completed its line (standard gauge) from Cordova to Kennebecott, a distance of 197 miles, in 1911 In 1915 the route for the Alaska railroad was decided upon, to run from Seward to Fairbanks, a distance of 471 miles (509 miles with branches) Of this 398 miles are already being used The Alaskan towns are connected with the United States and with Canada by telegraph There are about 164 post offices and good mail services in the territory

HAWAII

Government.—The Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands formed during the greater part of the nineteenth century an independent kingdom, but in 1893 the reigning Queen, Liliuokalani (died November 11, 1917), was deposed and a provisional government formed, in 1894 a Republic was proclaimed, and in accordance with a resolution of Congress of July 7, 1898, the Islands were on August 12, 1898, formally annexed to the United States. On June 14, 1900, they were constituted as the Territory of Hawaii. The Organic Act has since been amended several times. There is a Legislature of two Houses, a Senate of 15 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 30 members elected for two years. Sessions, limited to 60 days, are held biennially. The Governor and Secretary are appointed for four years by the President of the United States.

Governor —C. J. McCarthy, 1918–1922 (7,000 dollars)

Secretary —Curtis P. Iaukea

The Territory is represented in Congress by a delegate elected biennially.

Area and Population.—The total area of the islands is 6,449 square miles. The principal islands of the group are Hawaii, 4,015, Maui, 728, Oahu, 598, Kauai, 547, Molokai, 261, Lanai, 139, Niihau, 97, Ka hoolawe, 69. According to the census taken on April 15, 1910, the total population of the islands numbered 191,909, an increase of 37,908, or 24.61 per cent. since 1900. The average number of persons to the square mile in 1910 was 29.75. The Capital, Honolulu, in the Island of Oahu, had 83,327 inhabitants on January 1, 1920.

Population on January 1, 1920, 255,912.

The estimated number of Hawaiians on June 30, 1920, was 22,000, and 16,900 part Hawaiians. There are estimated to be 22,600 Chinese, 113,500 Japanese, 24,800 Portuguese, 23,400 Filipinos, 5,300 Porto Ricans, 1,000 Spanish, 25,000 Americans, British, German, and Russian, 5,200 Korean, 600 all others.

Religion and Instruction.—Nearly all the natives are Christians. There is an Anglican bishop at Honolulu, also a Roman Catholic bishop, and ministers of various denominations. Schools are established all over the islands. Elementary education has always been free. The language in general use in schools is English. In 1919, there were 173 public schools with 1,161 teachers and 38,295 enrolled pupils, also 59 private schools with 384 teachers and 7,406 enrolled pupils. Of the pupils in public schools in 1919, 7,393 were Hawaiian or part-Hawaiian, 5,304 Portuguese, 22,711 Asiatics, 1,033 Anglo-Saxon. In Hawaii there are, besides, a normal and training school, a reformatory industrial school for boys and one for girls, also a Territorial University.

Justice.—Hawaii has a supreme court, circuit courts, district courts and a land registration court. The circuit judges sit also as juvenile courts. The judges of the supreme and circuit courts are appointed by the United States President; the district magistrates by the Chief Justice of Hawaii. There is also a United States District Court, the judges of which are appointed by the President.

FINANCE, DEFENCE—PRODUCTION, ETC.—SHIPPING, ETC. 641

Finance, Defence.—Revenue is derived mainly from taxation of real and personal property, income and inheritance taxes, licences, land sales and leases, waterworks and road, school and poll taxes. For the year ending June 30, 1920, the receipts and disbursements were to the following amounts —

On June 30, 1920, the bonded debt amounted to 10,894,000 dollars. In 1920 the assessed value of property was 287,006,792 dollars, an increase of 36,482,446 dollars over the previous year.

On June 30, 1920, the Hawaiian National Guard contained 3,933 men, and 55 officers. The Federal Government, with a view to the protection of the Pacific Coast and the control of the Panama Canal, has expended money for the construction of extensive military works at Pearl Harbour, about 7 miles from Honolulu, and at Honolulu and other places on the island of Oahu. The dry dock at Pearl Harbour (Oahu) naval station was officially opened on August 21, 1919.

Production and Commerce—The islands are to a great extent mountainous and volcanic, but the soil is highly fertile and productive. In 1910 there were 4,320 farms with an acreage of 2,590,600, of which 305,053 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 93,363,229 dollars. Sugar and pine apples are the staple industries, while coffee, honey, hides, sisal, bananas, rice, wool, tobacco, cotton, and rubber are also exported. In 1918 the sugar exported amounted to nearly 600,000 tons. The sugar plantations are extensively supplied with irrigation canals, and this system is coming into general use. The forest reserves in the Territory now number 47, aggregating 817,114 acres, and other reserves are contemplated. At the close of the year there were 904 domestic corporations in operation, with a total capitalization of 192,965,838 dollars.

For the year ended June 30, 1919, the imports amounted to 63,283,647 dollars, and the exports to 104,779,804 dollars. The shipments of merchandise from the United States to Hawaii for the year ending June 30, 1920, amounted to 53,669,174 dollars, and those from Hawaii to the United States to 101,194,733 dollars, of which 78,589,467 dollars was for sugar, 18,509,028 dollars for fruits, 521,316 dollars for coffee, and 238,218 dollars for rice. The imports from the United Kingdom in 1920 totalled 80,655 dollars, and the exports to the United Kingdom, 928,372 dollars.

Shipping and Communications.—The harbour of Honolulu has been enlarged and dredged to a depth that will admit the largest steamers afloat. At Hilo Bay, on the east side of Hawaii Island, the construction of a breakwater has now been completed, Hilo being an important place for the shipment of sugar At Kahului, the principal port on the Island of Maui, the construction of a breakwater has been completed and dredging of the harbour has been finished Many lighthouses have been constructed in recent years

Several lines of steamers connect the islands with the United States, Canada, Australia, the Philippines, China, and Japan In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, 1,069 vessels of 5,430,976 tons entered ports of the islands An inter island steam navigation company with 12 small steamers provides communication between the different islands There are about 969 miles of railway in the islands, including 667 miles of plantation railways There are telephones on the islands of Oahu, Maui, Hawaii, Kauai, and Molokai Honolulu is lighted by electricity and has lines of electric tram ways Wireless telegraphy is in operation between the islands for commercial purposes and for communication with vessels at sea and with the Pacific coast, and also with Japan Hawaii is connected by cable with both shores of the Pacific

PORTO RICO.

Government.—Porto Rico, by the treaty of December 10, 1898, was ceded by Spain to the United States Its constitution is determined by the 'Organic Act' of Congress (1917), known as the 'Jones Act,' the main features of which are the granting of American Citizenship to the people of Porto Rico, the separation of the legislative and executive functions, extension of the appointive judiciary system and an elective senate Porto Rico has representative government, the franchise being restricted to citizens of the United States twenty one years of age or over, residence (one year) and such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislature of Porto Rico, but no property qualification may be imposed The executive power resides in a Governor appointed by the President of the United States. The legislative functions are vested in a legislature which consists of two elective houses: the Senate, composed of 19 members (2 from each of the 7 senatorial districts and 5 senators at large), and the House of Representatives, composed of 39 members (1 from each of the 35 representative districts and 4 elected at large). Porto Rico is represented in Congress by a Resident Commissioner to the United States elected by the people for a term of four years.

There are six heads of departments, who form a Council to the Governor, known as the Executive Council. The essential features of the United States civil service have been incorporated into a local law by the Legislature. The judiciary comprises an Attorney General and staff and a United States court appointed by the President, a Supreme Court of 5 members also appointed by the President, 7 District Courts appointed by the Governor, and 34 municipal courts, the judges and officials of which, as well as the 51 justices of the peace, are appointed by the Governor.

Governor —Arthur Yager, 1920-24 (10,000 dollars)

Executive Secretary —Ramón Siaca Pacheco

Area, Population and Instruction.—The island has an area of 3,606 square miles. The population in 1920 was 1,297,772 or 377.8 per sq. mile. The negroes in 1910 numbered 50,245, and mulattoes 335,192. There were, in 1910, 732,555 whites and 20 Chinese and Japanese. The coloured population was 38.2 per cent of the whole in 1900 and 35 per cent in 1910. Chief towns, San Juan, 70,707 inhabitants (1920), Ponce, 41,561, Mayaguez, 19,069. Of the working population, 63 per cent are engaged in agriculture, fisheries, and mining, 21 per cent in domestic and personal service, 8 per cent in manufacturing industries, 8 per cent in trade and transportation. In 1910 the percentage of illiteracy was 66.5.

In 1899 the school system was reorganised and education was made compulsory. In 1919 there were 3,090 class rooms in 1,903 school buildings, with 184,991 pupils enrolled, and a well distributed system of night schools and kindergartens. There are also a number of private schools. The University of Porto Rico, established in Rio Piedras, 7 miles from San Juan, is open to both men and women.

Finance.—Revenues are derived from customs and excise, from the general property tax, a collateral inheritance tax, taxes on incomes, on insurance companies and from various licences and fees. Receipts and disbursements for the year ending June 30, 1920 —

	Dollars
Balance, July 1, 1919	5,022,316
Receipts, 1919-20	16,685,782
Total	21,708,098
Disbursements, 1919-20	15,621,963
Balance, July 1, 1920	6,086,135

The assessed value of property on June 30, 1919, was 254,169,242 dollars. The total outstanding bonded indebtedness is 10,264,000 dollars. The police force consists of about 700 men, and the military force of about 3,000.

Production, Industry and Commerce—The cultivated land in 1910 was divided into 58,371 holdings, having a total area of 2,085,162 acres, of which 1,570,304 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 102,377,801 dollars. The chief products of the island are sugar, tobacco, coffee, pineapples, grape fruit, oranges, and other tropical fruits, sea island cotton, textile fibres, bat guano, phosphate, and vegetables, and the principal industries are manufactures of cigars, cigarettes, hats, embroideries, drawn-work, rum, &c. Sugar crops for 3 years: 1918, 453,795 tons, 1919, 406,002 tons, 1920, 485,070 tons. Sugar exported in 1920 amounted to 419,388 tons, valued at 98,923,750 dollars, being over 60 per cent of all products exported. In 1920, 223,316,450 cigars and 5,123,850 cigarettes were exported. Over 20,000,000 pounds of leaf and scrap tobacco, valued at 13,416,388 dollars, were exported in 1920. Coffee increased from 27,897,971 pounds, valued at 6,065,573 dollars in 1919, to 32,776,754 pounds, valued at 9,034,028 dollars in 1920. Orange exports amounted to 833,575 dollars, fresh pineapples to 479,461 dollars, canned pineapples to 99,172 dollars, grape fruit, a comparatively new product (7,586 dollars in 1907), amounted to 1,332,742 dollars, while coconuts amounted to 1,142,412 dollars. In 1910 there were 939 industrial establishments in Porto Rico, employing 18,122 persons (15,582 wage earners), having a total capital of 25,544,385 dollars, with an output valued at 36,749,742 dollars. There is no established mining enterprise, but gold, silver, iron, copper, bismuth, tin, mercury, platinum and nickel are found in the island. There are very productive salt works.

In 1920 the imports into Porto Rico amounted to 96,388,534 dollars, the domestic exports to foreign countries amounted to 17,503,941 dollars. Shipments of United States merchandise to Porto Rico, 90,724,259 dollars, of foreign merchandise 5,664,275 dollars. Shipments from Porto Rico to United States, value 133,207,508 dollars.

Shipping and Communications.—In 1919-20, 1,599 American and foreign vessels of 3,915,607 tons entered Porto Rico from the United States and foreign countries. The harbour of San Juan, the chief port, and naval station proper, is being improved to have an entrance 600 yards wide and 30 feet deep.

There are over 1,100 miles of road in the island, and about 339 miles of railway. The railway system connects towns on the west coast and now almost encircles the Island, and penetrates the interior. A line is operated from Rio Piedras to Caguas inland. Extensions of existing lines are being under taken, and a new line across the Island, with many branches, is projected. There are 1,574 miles of postal (government) telephone and telegraph wire. There are 90 post offices, and 77 telegraph stations.

The Porto Rican island of Vieques, 13 miles to the east, is about 21 miles long and 6 miles broad, and has about 10,000 inhabitants, who grow sugar and rear cattle. Like Porto Rico, the island of Vieques is fertile and healthy.

The island of Culebra, between Porto Rico and St. Thomas, has a good harbour.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

These islands, ceded by Spain to the United States by the treaty of peace concluded between the United States and Spain on April 11, 1899, form the largest island group of the Malay Archipelago, and extend almost due north and south from Formosa to Borneo and the Moluccas, embracing an extent of 16° of latitude and 9° of longitude.

Governor General.—Major General Wood, appointed February, 1921.

Government.—The government of the Philippine Islands is administered through three separate and co-ordinate departments, namely, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial.

The Governor-General is the chief executive of the islands, and represents the sovereign power of the United States. He is appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Under him are the secretaries of six executive departments, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Public Instruction, the Department of Finance, the Department of Justice, the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and the Department of Commerce and Communications. With the exception of the Vice Governor, who is appointed in the same way as the Governor General, and who at the same time is Secretary of Public Instruction, all the secretaries are Filipinos.

The Philippine legislative body is made up of two houses, the Senate and the House of Representatives. There are in all ninety-one representatives and twenty-four senators, representing the forty-eight provinces of the archipelago, all of whom are elected by popular vote, with the exception of nine representatives and two senators, who are appointed by the Governor-General to represent Agusan, Bukidnon, Cotabato, Davao, Lanao, Zamboanga, Sulu, Nueva Viscaya, and the Mountain Provinces.

A Council of State, created by Executive Order subsequent to the enactment of the present Organic Act, commonly known as the Jones Law, forms the connecting link between the executive and the legislative branches of the insular government, and represents the people's counsel in the administration of the government. The Council of State is composed of the Governor-General, as President, the Presidents of both houses of the Legislature, and the Secretaries of the Departments.

The provincial and municipal governments are supervised by the Department of the Interior through the Executive Bureau and the Bureau of Non-Christian Tribes, the former exercising authority over the thirty-six regular organised provinces, and the latter over the twelve so-called special provinces. The chief executive of each province is a provincial governor. He and two other members form the provincial board, which constitutes the legislative branch of the provincial government. All these three offices are filled by popular vote, while in the special provinces, with the exception of Mindoro, Palawan, and Batanes, the provincial governors are appointed officials. The municipal president is the chief executive of each town or municipality, and the local legislative branch consists of a municipal council of from eight to eighteen councillors, depending upon the size of the municipality. The president, the vice president, and the councillors are all elected by popular vote.

Area and Population.—The group is composed of 7,083 islands, of which 2,441 are named and 4,642 are not. The total area is 114,400 square miles. The eleven most important islands are Luzon, with an area of 40,814 square miles, Mindanao, 36,906 square miles, Samar, 5,124 square miles, Negros, 4,903 square miles; Palawan, 4,500 square miles, Panay, 4,448 square miles, Mindoro, 3,794 square miles, Leyte, 2,799 square miles, Cebu, 1,695 square miles, Bohol, 1,534 square miles, and Masbate, 1,255 square miles.

The total population, according to the Philippine Census of 1918, is 10,350,730, chiefly of Malay race, 91.5 per cent of whom are Christians, and only 886,999, or 8.5 per cent, are Moros and Pagans, though these are fast taking advantage of the all-pervading system of public schools. The population of Manila, the capital and the leading commercial and industrial centre, is 283,813, of whom 257,356 are Filipinos, 17,856 Chinese, 1,611 Japanese, 3,124 Americans, 1,955 Spaniards, 635 English, 236 Germans, 160 French, 95 Swiss, and the rest of other nationalities.

Other towns with their estimated present population, including suburbs, are Iloilo on Panay, 48,000, Cebu on Cebu, 46,000, Laoag, 46,000, Albay, 43,000, Vigan, 18,000, Naga, 12,000 (all on Luzon), and Zamboanga on Mindanao, 30,000. Baguio, in the Mountain Province, is the summer capital, corresponding to Simla in India.

Justice and Defence—For the administration of justice there are a supreme court, with a chief justice (a Filipino) and eight associate justices (three Filipinos), 26 judicial districts, each with a judge of first instance, except the ninth district, which has four judges, the same covering the city of Manila, the municipal courts of Manila and Baguio. There is also one justice of the peace and one auxiliary justice for each organised municipality and for such other towns or places as may be determined by resolution of the Philippine Senate.

Public order is maintained through the municipal police and the Philippines Constabulary. The strength of the Constabulary at the close of 1918 was 360 officers and 5,708 enlisted men, distributed throughout the Archipelago. The United States maintains in the Philippine Islands a force of about 5,600 troops of the U S Army, and about 8,700 Philippine Scouts.

In March, 1917, an Act was passed to establish a militia which should consist of every able bodied male citizen of the Philippine Islands between the ages of 18 and 45.

Religion—The dominant religion of the islands is the Roman Catholic (7,815,242 adherents). In 1901 an independent Filipino Church was founded. The religious dogmas promulgated and followed by this new sect are practically identical with those observed by the Church of Rome. The Independent Filipino Church has 1,361,740 followers. Several Protestant denominations have extensive organisations and have many communicants (118,845). The inhabitants of Mindanao and Sulu are to a large extent Mohammedans, and there are pagan tribes (now numbering about 300,000) in some of the more remote regions.

Education.—Education in the Philippines is free, secular, and co educational, its principal aim being the spread of literacy on the basis of a common language, the English. In 1919-20 there was an annual enrolment of 791,626 pupils in the public schools. The annual expenditure on education is about 5,000,000 dollars. A number of special schools, some particularly intended for the benefit of the non-Christian populations, are maintained by the insular Government. For higher education there is the State supported University of the Philippines, the total number of students in 1918-19 was 1,341 in the collegiate departments and 1,972 in the other departments. There are also 262 private schools of all grades, with a total of 28,838 pupils and 1,229 teachers. The University of Santo Tomas, founded in 1611, is conducted by the Dominican order.

On December 31, 1917, there were 21 newspapers and periodicals published in English, 15 in English Spanish, 22 in Spanish, 9 in Spanish native dialects, 25 in native dialects, 2 in Chinese, 3 in English native dialects, and 1 in English Spanish native dialects.

FINANCE—PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY—COMMERCE 649

Finance.—The revenues and expenditures of the central government for six fiscal years were —

	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenues	22,852,427	83,007,493	98,887,749	78,019,153	73,694,016	84,289,982
Expenditure	20,453,400	70,073,314	91,830,064	55,215,272	57,210,230	88,549,778

The total debt service in 1921 amounted to 3,459,281 dollars

Production and Industry —The principal products are rice, Manila hemp, coconut, sugar cane, corn, tobacco and maguey. The total area cultivated to these crops during 1919–20 was 7,513,305 acres, the largest single crop being rice (3,453,347 acres). The total production of rice in 1919–20 was 2,533,623,664 litres.

Agriculture is still in a somewhat primitive condition, although rapid steps are being made in its improvement, through different branches of the government. Modern sugar centrals have been installed in the largest sugar producing regions. The abaca (Manila hemp) industry has been greatly benefited through a government system of inspection and grading. A fibre grading law has been in force since January, 1915, by which the grades of Philippine fibres, especially abaca and maguey, have been standardised. Nine large modern coconut oil factories are in successful operation.

The Islands possess about 40,000 square miles of forests furnishing chiefly timber, but also gums and resins, great quantities of rattan and bamboo, tan and dye barks and dye woods.

The Philippines is rich in mineral wealth, as shown by the reports of new discoveries of mineral deposits. The most important mineral deposits found in the Islands are gold, iron, silver, copper, and coal. Other minerals of non metallic nature capable of great development are clay, stone, limestone, lime, asbestos, gypsum, gas, petroleum, sulphur, asphalt, alum, manganese, gems and precious stones, salt, and mineral waters.

On account of the abundance of suitable local materials for hat making and the excellent prices offered for Philippine hats, the manufacture of hats is a profitable industry. In 1919, 540,332 hats, valued at 1,470,026 pesos, were exported, chiefly to the United States, United Kingdom, Italy, and France. Philippine hats are made from native materials, such as bamboo, buri, sabutan, and pandan.

Commerce.—The values of imports and exports for fiscal years ending June 30 are stated as follows in U S dollars —

Imports	44,479,861	45,978,625	51,988,278	88,761,290	107,774,000
Exports	50,915,061	61,464,081	71,715,375	114,576,393	113,118,000

In the calendar year ending December 31, 1919, the commerce was mainly distributed as follows —

United States	150,982,829	113,305,384	Switzerland	1,266,707	81,213

Shipping and Communications—The greatest bulk of overseas shipments is made from the port of Manila, although other smaller ports also have direct connections with foreign ports. The most important of these are Iloilo, Cebu, and Zamboanga. More than 400 inter island vessels are now operated in the coastwise trade of the Philippines. During 1919, 740 foreign vessels, with an aggregate net tonnage of 1,711,981, entered the Islands, while 719 vessels, with an aggregate net tonnage of 1,705,869 were cleared for foreign ports.

On December 31, 1917, there were in operation, 818 post offices, 318 money order offices, 5,471 miles of insular telegraph lines, and 986 miles of cable, with 315 telegraph and cable offices. At the same time there were 388 postal savings banks in operation, with 68,860 accounts. The amount of deposits in the banks on December 31, 1917, was 4,242,179 pesos (Philippine currency). Of the depositors 60,795 were Filipinos.

When the United States entered the islands in 1898 there was but a single line of narrow gauge track running between Manila and Dagupan, a distance of about 120 miles. Additions have been made to this until the total length of lines in operation at the close of the calendar year, 1920, was 778 miles. The lines are owned by two companies, the Manila Railroad Company, now taken over by the Government, and by the Philippine Railway Company, which the Government is about to take over. Total length of roads (December 31, 1920), 6,200 miles. Besides the foregoing roads there were 1,941 miles of trails passable for horses only.

Banking and Coinage.—There are eight banks doing business in the Islands: the International Banking Corporation, Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the Bank of the Philippine Islands, formerly the Banco Español Filipino, the Philippine National Bank, the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Pangasinan Bank, and the Monte de Piedad. The Philippine National Bank was inaugurated, under a special charter granted by the Philippine Legislature, on May 2, 1916, with an authorized capital of 10,000,000 dollars, of which 5,050,000 dollars was subscribed by the Government. On July 1, 1916, the Bank was declared the sole Government depository.

The coins used in the Philippine Islands are of the following denominations: Peso, one-half peso, peseta (20 centavos), media peseta (10 centavos), five centavo, one centavo, and one-half centavo. Treasury certificates and bank notes are issued in one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty, one hundred, two hundred, and five hundred peso denominations. The Philippine peso is equivalent to fifty cents of the United States money. The maintenance of the parity of the peso with the gold is provided for by the Currency Reserve Fund Act of May 6, 1918. The new peso now coined contains twenty grams of silver, .800 fine; the fifty centavo piece contains ten grams of silver, .750 fine; the twenty centavo piece, four grams of silver, .750 fine; and the ten-centavo piece, two grams of silver, .750 fine. The Philippine coins have been until lately coined in the United States, but recently the Mint of the Philippine Islands, located in Manila, was established for this purpose.

GUAM

The Island of Guam, situated at the southern extremity of the Mariana Archipelago, in latitude 13° 26' N, longitude 144° 43' E, is the largest island of that group. It was ceded by Spain to the United States by the Treaty of Paris (December 10, 1898). It is under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department of the United States, and has been designated as a Naval Station for the purposes of government and protection. A garrison of marines and a shore naval force are maintained here. Guam is a saluting port.

The length of the island is 32 miles, the breadth from 4 to 10 miles and the area about 225 square miles. Agaña, the seat of Government, is about 8 miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbour. The port of entry is Piti. The number of inhabitants (exclusive of the military establishment) on June 30, 1920, was 14,246, of whom 13,698 were classed as 'natives'. The birth-rate was 43.4, and the death rate 12.4 per 1,000. The native language is Chamorro, but Spanish and English are also spoken.

The Governor of the island, a naval officer appointed by the President, takes precedence over and is entitled to the honours due to an Admiral. The Governor is also the Military Commander of the island, Commandant of the naval station, and combines the functions of the executive, legislative and judicial power of the Government. The judiciary system comprises one police court, an Island Court, a Court of Equity, a Higher Court of Equity, and one Court of Appeal. The Spanish Colonial laws, modified when necessary by executive general orders of the Governor, are still in force.

Elementary education is compulsory. There are 2,239 pupils registered, 1,894 of whom are of school age (7 to 12). English, handicrafts and agriculture are taught.

There is a Government radio station on the island, which is in cable telegraphic communication with all parts of the world. There is a monthly mail service per west bound U.S. army and navy transports, from San Francisco, via Honolulu, and to Manila.

The port is closed to foreign vessels of war and commerce except in special cases. Permission to visit the island must be obtained of the Navy Department in each case.

The products of the island are maize, copra, rice, sweet potatoes, coffee, cocoa, and sugar, besides valuable timber. There are about 4,000 head of cattle, including 900 water buffaloes. The imports into the island in the year ending June 30, 1920, amounted to 408,263 dollars, and the exports to 34,132 dollars.

The official currency is that of the United States.

Governor —I. C. Wettengel, Captain U. S. Navy (appointed May 27, 1920).

SAMOAN ISLANDS

(AFRICAN SAMOA)

The Dutch were the first to visit the Samoan Islands, in 1722, French explorers followed in 1768 and 1787. In 1791 a British war vessel visited the islands.

The history of American Samoa commenced in the year 1872 when the harbour of Pago Pago, in Tutuila, was ceded to the United States for a naval and coaling station. In 1878 this cession was confirmed and rights of freedom of trade and extra territorial jurisdiction in Samoa were granted. On June 14, 1889, the conference between the representatives of the United States, Germany, and Great Britain was held at Berlin, resulting in the treaty recognising the Samoan Islands as neutral territory, with an independent government, the natives being allowed to follow their own laws and customs, while for civil and criminal causes, in which foreigners were concerned, there was established a Supreme Court of Justice, in which an American citizen was the presiding judge. This arrangement continued till 1898, when disturbances regarding the right of succession to the office of king arose. In 1899 the kingship was abolished, and, by the Tripartite Treaty of November 14 of that year, accepted in February 13, 1900, by the United States, Great Britain and Germany renounced in favour of the United States all rights over the island of Tutuila and the other islands of the Samoan group east of 171 degrees of longitude west of Greenwich, the islands to the west of that meridian being assigned to Germany.

The island of Tutuila, 70 miles from Apia, has an area of about 77 square miles, with a population of 6,185 (3,166 males and 3,019 females), according to the 1920 census. Tau and the other islets (Ofu and Olosega) of the Manua group have a united area of about 25 square miles with a population of 1,873 (926 males and 947 females). According to the 1920 census American Samoa thus contained 8,324 inhabitants (including 266 Europeans of the United States Naval Service) on January 1, 1920 (4,092 males and 3,966 females). Tutuila is mountainous, luxuriantly wooded and fertile. The harbour at Pago Pago, which penetrates the south coast like a fiord, is the only good harbour in Samoa. It is a United States naval station under a Commandant, the Government having acquired there a land area of about 40 acres.

The Commandant is also the Governor of American Samoa by commission from the President of the United States. He appoints officers and frames laws or ordinances, but native customs (not inconsistent with United States laws) are not changed without the consent of the people.

The islands are organised in three political divisions corresponding to the old Samoan political units —1, the Eastern District of Tutuila, with the islet of Aunuu, 2, the Western district of Tutuila, and 3, the District of Manua, composed of Tau and the neighbouring islets. In each District there is a native governor, under whom are native chiefs in the counties, those having the control of village chiefs. Judicial power is vested in village courts, in five judicial district courts, and in a high court.

There are no public lands in American Samoa. Nearly all the land is owned by natives. The soil is fertile, the fruits comprise orange, grape fruit, lime, and citron. Copra is abundant and is of excellent quality.

There are four religious missions at work. The London Missionary Society (established in 1830), the Roman Catholic (French) mission, the Mormon mission, and the Wesleyan mission. Besides the sectarian schools, there are two non sectarian schools, one maintained by the Island Government, and one mainly supported by natives. There are 69 schools in the islands, attended by 1,081 boys and 979 girls, making a total of 2,060.

The natives pay their taxes in copra, the amount of copra annually assessed for fiscal purposes being from 500,000 to 550,000 lbs. The annual output of copra is about 1,500 tons. At Fagatoga the natives are allowed to pay their taxes in cash. There is a native guard (Fitaifitas) of about 85, including the 22 members of the native band, trained by a drill sergeant and a bandmaster of the U.S. navy. The chief island products, besides copra, are taro, breadfruit, yams, coconuts, pineapples, oranges, and bananas. Copra is the only article exported.

About 50 miles of public roads have been constructed. There is a United States Naval high powered radio station located on the island of Tutuila, which has daily communication with New Zealand, Australia, Honolulu, the United States, and the islands of the Pacific. This radio station is open to commercial traffic. The fast mail steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company touch here on their regular trips between the United States, Hawaii and Australia.

PART THE THIRD

OTHER COUNTRIES

ABYSSINIA.

(ETHIOPIA.)

THE ancient Empire of Abyssinia, or 'Ethiopia,' includes the Kingdoms of Tigre, with Lasta, in the north-east, Amhara, with Gojam, in the west and centre, Shoa in the south, besides territories and dependencies as far as Kaffa in the south and Harar in the south east, with considerable portions of the Galla and Somali Lands. The following are the provinces into which the country is divided —(1) Harar and Dependencies, (2) Wollo, (3) Kassa and Magi, (4) Gore, (5) Tigré, (6) Damot and Gojam, (7) Equatorial Provinces, (8) Gondar, (9) Jimma. The whole area is 350,000 sq miles, with an estimated population of over 8 millions. For treaties relating to the boundaries of Abyssinia see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1907, p 667. An agreement was reached in December, 1907, for the delimitation of the frontier towards British East Africa. The frontier follows the Dawa up to Ursulli, whence it runs mainly westwards, passing the south end of Lake Stephanie, and, after crossing the north eastern branch of Lake Rudolf, runs mainly northwards and terminates at 6° N 35° E. This frontier, however, is not yet finally delimited and accepted by the Abyssinians.

Government

By the convention of Addis Abbaba of October 26, 1896, between Italy and King Menelik, the independence of Abyssinia was recognised.

Under an Agreement signed December 13, 1906, on behalf of Great Britain, France, and Italy, the three Powers undertake to respect and endeavour to preserve the integrity of Abyssinia, to act so that industrial concessions granted in the interest of one of them may not injure the others, to abstain from intervention in Abyssinian internal affairs, to concert together for the safeguarding of their respective interests in territories bordering on Abyssinia, and they make agreements concerning railway construction in Abyssinia and equal treatment in trade and transit for their nationals.

After the overthrow of Theodore, King of Amhara, by the British in 1868, the suzerain power passed to Prince Kassai of Tigré, who assumed the old title of Nigusa Nagastli ('King of Kings'), and was crowned in 1872 as Johannes II, Emperor of Ethiopia. After the death of this potentate in 1889, Menelik II, King of Shoa (born 1842), G C B, G C M G, became the supreme ruler of Abyssinia. Menelik died in December, 1913, and was succeeded by Lij Yasu, born in 1896, son of his second daughter, Waizeru Shoa Rogga and Ras Mikael, the chief of the Wollo Gallas.

On September 27, 1916, Lij Yasu was deposed by public proclamation, and Waizeru Zauditu, another daughter of Menelik, born 1876, was nominated Empress, and Ras Taffari, G C M G, proclaimed regent and heir to the throne. The Empress was crowned at Addis Abbaba on February 11, 1917. The new government has been recognised by Great Britain.

The political institutions are essentially of a feudal character, analogous to those of mediæval Europe. There is a vague State Council consisting of the most important rases, under whom, for administrative purposes, are governors of districts and provinces and chiefs of villages. In August, 1919, Cabinet Government was again introduced after over a year's personal administration by the Regent.

The Abyssinian Army in the field consists of two main parts. The standing army composes the nucleus, and the remainder of the forces are drawn from the chiefs and their retainers summoned in time of war, a sort of militia Besides the above, a varying number of irregulars may join the army on the outbreak of war. The standing army, instituted by Menelik, forms in effect the paid standing garrison of each province, and might amount altogether to something under 100,000 men. Both they and the militia amounting to perhaps another 200,000 men, are very loosely organised, and have very little in the shape of transport or modern equipment. Practically every man is armed with a rifle, and often with shield and sword as well.

Population

The population, which is of Semitic origin, consists of four groups—the Gallas and Somalis, in the south and south west, the Shoans in the centre, the Tigrrians in the north, and the Danakil in the east. The Gallas comprise one half of the entire population, and are a pastoral and agricultural people. The Shoans number 1,500,000 and furnish the ruling class. Every one is a soldier, and the present ruler depends upon them to maintain her sovereignty. The Tigrrians are a lighter coloured people and show their Semitic descent. They formerly furnished the rulers of Ethiopia. The Danakil are Mohammedans, and on account of the inaccessibility of their country preserve a sort of independence, merely paying an annual sum to the Emperor as a tribute. There are also some Negroes (in the South West), and the Falashas (of Jewish religion) in the N E centre with a number of non natives (Indians, Arabs, Greeks, Armenians, and a few Europeans) in the towns.

Except Harar, and perhaps in the north, there are no towns in Abyssinia in our sense of the word—not even Addis Abbaba, which consists of villages and suburbs scattered round the Palace, and is about three miles in diameter. The most important towns, politically and commercially, are Gondar, capital of Amhara, 3,000, Adua, capital of Tigre, 5,000, Axum, ancient capital of Ethiopia, and still the seat of the Abuna, 5,000, Antalo, former capital of Tigré, 1,000, Ankober, former capital of Shoa, 2,000, Addis Abbaba, present capital of Abyssinia, and Shoa 40,000–50,000 (with a foreign population of about 150, largely Indians, Greeks and Arabs), Debra-Tabor (Mount Tabor), Magdala, and Makallé, Gore, Saiyu, Nekemtti, Saméré, 3,000–4,000, and Sokoto, 1,500, important trading centres; Mahdera-Mariam (Mary's Rest), 4,000. The population of Harar is estimated at 50,000, of whom about 300 are Europeans, at Diré Dawa there are a considerable number of Europeans. Gambela, in Western Abyssinia, is a trading station leased to the Sudan Government. It is an important outlet for the trade in the West. A service of steamers is maintained from June to November with Khartum.

Religion and Instruction.

Since the conversion of the Abyssinians to Christianity in the fourth century they have remained members of the Alexandrian Church. The Abuna, or head bishop, is always a Copt, appointed and consecrated by the Coptic Patriarch of Alexandria, but his influence is controlled by the Echehgeh, a native ecclesiastical dignitary, who presides over the spirituality, numbering about 100,000 ecclesiastics. Both Copts and Abyssinians are monophysite, rejecting the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon (A D 451).

Education has hitherto been restricted to the teaching of the secular and regular clergy, but in October, 1907, an edict was issued enjoining compulsory education on all male children over the age of 12. This is, however, a dead letter. There is one school in Addis Abbaba, directed by a few Coptic teachers, introduced by the Abuna—this is the only Abyssinian school in the country.

It has over 100 pupils, but the attendances are most irregular, and the institution is unpopular as yet with the ignorant people.

Justice is administered by the provincial governors, and shums, or petty chiefs, with the right of appeal to the Emperor. The legal system is said to be based on the Justinian Code.

Agriculture.

The chief industries are pastoral and agricultural. Cattle, sheep, and goats are numerous. The horses of the country are small but hardy, mules are bred everywhere, being used as pack animals, donkeys are also small and serve for baggage animals. The soil belongs theoretically to the Negus, the idea of landed property scarcely exists among the populace, and agriculture is therefore backward. Cotton, the sugar cane, date-palm, coffee, and vine might thrive well in many districts, but are nowhere extensively cultivated. The production of Harari coffee (long berry Mocha) is on the increase. Besides this, which is cultivated, there grows more especially in southern and western Abyssinia a wild coffee plant, yielding a berry known as Abyssinian coffee, which grows in extensive forests. The supply is said to be unlimited. The total coffee exports of the country have been estimated as follows—6,364 metric tons in 1916, 5,121 metric tons in 1915, and 3,810 metric tons in 1914. The native produce includes hides and skins, barley, millet (dhurra), wheat, gesho (which serves as a substitute for hops), and tobacco, but not in sufficient quantities for export. Manufacturing industries are also in a backward state. The forests abound in valuable trees and rubber. Iron is abundant in some districts and is manufactured into spears, knives, hatchets, &c. Placer gold mining and washing are carried on in many districts, coal is mined in the Shoa province, but is not of commercial importance, silver, copper, and sulphur have been found.

Commerce.

The principal artery of trade is the French Ethiopian railroad, but caravans also do a large trade in the interior. The chief trade routes besides the railway are the following—(1) Khartum Gambella, Khartum Gallabat, and Khartum Roseires (Sudan), (2) Mombasa-Nairobi Moyale (British East Africa), (3) Bulhar Ogaden (British Somaliland), (4) Massawa-Asmara-Gondar, Assab Dessie (Italian Eritrea), (5) Mogadishu Lugh Dolo Aisui (Italian Somaliland).

The exports consisted mainly of hides and skins, coffee, wax, ivory, civet, and native butter. The imports comprised grey shirting (abu jedid), cotton goods, arms and ammunition, provisions, liquors, railway material, sugar, and petroleum. The imports are chiefly from England, France, India, Italy, and the United States. The total trade between Abyssinia and Great Britain for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns) was as follows—

Imports from Abyssinia	3,930	—	—	28,947	8,986
Exports to Abyssinia	3,774	3,833	12,750	10,869	81,628

Abyssinia has commercial treaties with Great Britain (1897) for 'most favoured nations treatment', with Italy (1897), terminable on six months' notice, with the United States

(1906) for 10 years, then subject to one year's notice, with Germany and Austria Hungary (1906) for 10 years, then subject to one year's notice, with France (1908) for 10 years, and then subject to a year's notice

Communications

Roads in Abyssinia are mere tracks, and transport is effected by means of mules, pack horses, donkeys, and, in some places, camels. In the capital and its vicinity a few miles of metalled road have been constructed. There is a railway of a metre gauge from the port of Jibuti in French Somaliland to Diré Dawa (about 25 miles from Harar) in the south east of Abyssinia, 187 miles. In January, 1909, a new company was formed to complete the line to Addis Abbaba, taking over the portion completed on French territory, and the section to the Hawash River, 150 miles from Diré Dawa, and the same distance from Addis Abbaba, reached the capital in 1917.

There are telegraph lines (1,056 miles) connecting Addis Abbaba with Harar, with Sidamo, with Jibuti in French Somaliland, and with Massawa in Eritrea. Telephone lines connect Addis Abbaba with Harar, also with Gore and Gambela (in the west), Jimma and Sharada (south west), Dessie (north), and Debra Tabor and Gojam, and with Ankober, and Asmara with Adua and Barromeida.

Money and Credit

The Bank of Abyssinia, with authorised capital of 500,000*l* and paid up capital of 125,000*l*, has its head office at Addis Abbaba and agencies at Harar, Diré Dawa, Gore, Gambela and Dessie. By its constitution the Governor of the National Bank of Egypt is its President, and its governing body sits at Cairo. The current coin of Abyssinia is the Maria Theresa dollar, but a new coinage (coined at Paris) has been put in circulation, with the Menelik dollar for the standard coin. This new coin, the talar, or dollar, worth about 2*s*, weighs 28.075 grammes, 835 fine. It has nominally the same value as the Maria Theresa dollar, but in the capital is disliked, and in some places is not taken at all. The Bank of Abyssinia has introduced a large stock of Menelik piastres (16 to the dollar), the amount of the bank note issue on December 31, 1917, was 214,765 dollars, of which 149,140 dollars were in circulation and 65,625 dollars at the bank. Other silver coins are the half, quarter, and sixteenth (gush or piastre) of a talar. Copper coins are the besa (= one hundredth of a dollar) and the half and quarter gush found only at Harar. Various articles, however, are used as medium of exchange, bars of salt are regularly accepted as money all over the country, in two sizes, and at a fluctuating rate according to supply and cost of transport. Cartridges are also currency, although there is a dread letter edict against them, and in most places barter prevails.

The Abyssinian ounce weighs about 430 grains (the weight of the Maria Theresa dollar), a pound of ivory contains 12 ounces, of coffee, 18 ounces, the Abyssinian ferasla contains 37½ lbs av, or 50 lbs Abyssinian (ivory). Grain measures are the kunna, about ¼ bushel (the measure varies in different localities), and the dawla, 2¼ bushels. The mètre is largely used at Harar, native measures are the sinzer, 9 inches, and the kend (cubit), 20 inches. A kalad contains in some places 60 acres, in others 96.

Minister — C. H. W. Russell

Acting Consul-General — Major J. H. Dodds, T. D.

British Vice-Consul at Addis Abbaba — Cyril Cane

There is a Consul also at Harar, Gondar, Gore and Mega.

AFGHANISTÁN.

AFGHANISTÁN is a country of Asia lying between parallels 29° and 38° 20' of north latitude, and 61° and 72° of east longitude, with a long narrow strip extending to 75° east longitude (Wakhán). On the north east, the boundary follows a line running generally westward from a fixed point near one of the peaks of the Sarikol Range to Lake Victoria, thence along the line of that branch of the Oxus which issues from the lake, and so, following the course of the Oxus, to Khamiab. From Khamiab, the line runs in a south westerly direction to Zulfikár, on the river Hari-Rúd, and thence by Kal i Kalla to Hashtadan, thence to the south between Hashtadan and Siah Koh, north of Bandan, the boundary is undefined. The Sístam lake and the Helmund river form the boundary between Siah Koh and Band i Seistan, and thence the boundary runs south in a straight line to Koh i-Malik Siah, where the frontiers of Persia, Afghanistan and Baluchistan meet. Here the boundary turns round and runs generally eastwardly to the Khwája Amran range. The eastern and southern boundaries of Afghanistan long remained uncertain, but the basis of a delimitation was settled, in 1893, at a conference between the Amír Abdur Rahmán and Sir Mortimer Durand, and the boundary agreed upon, with the exception of the Asmar section, has since been demarcated. The Amír agreed that Chitral, Bajaur and Swát should be included within the British sphere of political influence, while he himself was to retain Asmar and the Kunar valley above it, as far as Arnawai, also the tract of Birmal, west of Waziristán. In the subsequent demarcation, Káfiristán was included within the countries, under Afghan control, and is garrisoned by the Amír's troops. The Amír has withdrawn his pretensions over Waziristán. Between March, 1903, and May, 1905, the boundary towards Persia was demarcated from Koh i Malik Siah to the Helmund, and thence to Siah Koh. In July, 1905, Sir Henry McMahon announced his award concerning disputed water rights over the Helmund river, but the award has not yet been ratified by the Persian Government. The Kháibar boundary was demarcated by Mr J. L. Maffey in 1919.

Amanullah Khán, the reigning Amír, the third son of Amír Habibullah Khán by his principal wife, Ulva Hazrat, was born on June 1, 1892, and succeeded on the assassination of his father, February 20, 1919. The Amír has five brothers — Inayatulla Khán (born Oct. 20, 1888), Hayatulla Khán (born Dec. 29, 1888), Kabirulla Khán (born Oct. 4, 1895), Asadulla Jan (born May 23, 1910), and Obedulla Khán (born Nov. 18, 1915). Uncles of the Amír are — Aminulla Khán (born Oct. 12, 1885), Muhammad Umar Khán (born Sept. 16, 1889), and Ghulám Ali Khán (born Sept. 3, 1890).

For earlier British relations with Afghanistan, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916, pp. 662-3.

The government of Afghanistan is monarchical under one hereditary prince, whose power varies with his own character, skill, and fortune. The dominions are politically divided into the four provinces of Kábul, Turkistán, Herat, and Kandahar, Badakhshán being now under Turkistán. Each province is under a hákím or governor (called Naib ul-Hukuma), under whom subordinate officials dispense justice and collect taxes. Spoliation, exaction, and embezzlement are not infrequent.

Area and Population.—The extreme breadth of Afghanistan from north east to south west is about 700 miles, its length from the Herát frontier to the Kháibar Pass, about 600 miles, the area is about 245,000 square miles. The surrounding countries are, on the north, Russian territory and Bokhara on the west, Persia, on the south, the British Political Agency of Baluchistán and, on the east, the mountain tribes scattered along the north western frontier of India, and included within the sphere of British influence in the North Western Frontier Province. There are five larger and two smaller provinces, in addition to the Province of Kábul, each under a Governor, and each possessing its own army.

Population about 6,380,500, the dominant race being the Afghans, of whom the leading tribes are the Durianis and the Ghilzais, who amount to about 2,200,000 souls, then follow other Afghans, and the Tajiks, Hazáras, and Aimaks, and Uzbaks. The languages spoken are Persian and Pushtoo. The predominant religion is Islam. Two newspapers are published in the country, one in Kábul, the capital (population about 150,000), and the other in Jalalábád. Other large towns are Kandahár (population 31,500) and Herat (population 20,000).

Justice—Justice in criminal cases is administered by Government officials, in civil cases by a Kazi, or judge, who follows the law of the Koran.

Finance—The revenue of Afghanistan is subject to considerable fluctuations. The Government share of the produce recoverable is said to vary from one third to one tenth, according to the advantages of irrigation. The total revenue is estimated at between 12 and 13 million rupees, but this estimate is probably too low.

The late Amír received a subsidy from the Indian Government of Rs 18,50,000 a year, in accordance with the treaty of 1893. But in accordance with paragraph 3 of the Peace Treaty of August 8, 1919, the arrears of the late Amír's subsidy have been confiscated and no subsidy is granted to the present Amír.

Defence—In addition to his regular army the Amír's military forces are largely supplemented by local levies of horse and foot. The mounted levies are simply the retainers of great chiefs, or of the latter's wealthier vassals. The foot levies are now permanently embodied, and as irregulars form an auxiliary to the regular infantry. The mountain batteries are believed to be serviceable. As engineers, the Hazára 'sappers,' who are regularly enrolled, are excellent workmen. The Afghan army is said to number 98,000 men, including 18,000 cavalry and 396 guns. The real military strength of Afghanistan lies in the rugged and inhospitable nature of the country, the absence of roads, and in the capacity and aptitude of its inhabitants for guerilla warfare, which have been greatly enhanced of recent years by the wholesale importation of rifles and ammunition from the Gulf.

Production—Although the greater part of Afghánistán is more or less mountainous, and a good deal of the country is too dry and rocky for successful cultivation, yet there are many fertile plains and valleys, which, with the assistance of irrigation from small rivers or wells, yield very satisfactory crops of fruit, vegetables, and cereals. There are four classes of cultivators—1st, proprietors, who cultivate their own land, 2nd, tenants, who hire it for a rent in money or for a fixed proportion of the produce, 3rd, bazgars, who are the same as the métayers in France; and 4th, hired labourers. There are two harvests in the year in most parts of Afghánistán. One of these is sown in the end of autumn and reaped in summer, and consists of wheat, barley, Ervum Lens, and Cicer arretinum, with some peas and beans. The other harvest is sown in the end of spring and reaped in autumn. It consists of rice, millet, arzna (Panicum italicum), Indian corn, &c. The castor oil plant, madder, and the assafetida plant abound. Fruit, viz the apple, pear, almond, peach, quince, apricot, plum, cherry, pomegranate, grape, fig, mulberry, is produced in profuse abundance.

They form the principal food of a large class of the people throughout the year, both in the fresh and preserved state, and in the latter condition are exported in great quantities

An extremely curious variety of fat tailed sheep is native to Afghanistan. It is characterised by the immense weight and size of its tail, caused by development of masses of fat, forming stores of nourishment which are drawn upon during the winter months, when fodder is scarce. These sheep furnish the principal meat diet of the inhabitants, and the grease of the tail is a substitute for butter. The wool and skins not only provide material for warm apparel, but also furnish the country's main article of export.

Northern Afghanistan is reputed to be tolerably rich in copper, and lead is found in many parts. Iron of excellent quality comes from Bajaur (outside Afghanistan), and the Farmuli district (or Birmal), and a gold mine is being worked under the supervision of a British mining expert at Kandahar, gold in small quantities is also brought from the Laghman Hills and Kunar. Badakhshan was famous for its precious stones, especially lapis lazuli.

Silks, felts, carpets, articles from camels' and goats' hair, are some of the principal industries. At Kabul, soap, cloth, boots, and some other articles are manufactured for local consumption, but chiefly for the army. The sheepskin coat, or poslan, manufacture is one of the important industries. The government factories and workshops at Kabul have as their partial object public education in mechanical methods and appliances, and as a feature of such work classes are organised in different industries.

Trade—No accurate registration of the trade of Afghanistan has yet been obtained. The trans frontier trade between India and Afghanistan (according to Indian statistics) was as follows in five years ending March 31

Imports into India	1,116,000	1,144,000	1,147,000	1,194,000	1,975,000
Exports into Afghanistan	1,021,000	1,150,000	1,238,000	2,020,000	1,607,000

Of the exports from India to Afghanistan the chief items are cotton goods, indigo and other dyeing materials, sugar, hardware, leather and silver treasure. The imports into India include timber, fruits and vegetables, grain and pulse, ghi and other provisions, assafoetida and other drugs, spices, wool, silk, cattle, hides, and tobacco. Formerly the trade with Afghanistan was subject to many restrictions in the way of heavy duties and monopolies, but with the removal of some of them, the trade with India has expanded of late years, but not to such an extent as seems possible.

The imports from Bokhara are stated to amount to nearly 4,000,000 roubles, and the exports to Bokhara to as much.

Communications—Afghanistan is not a member of the International Postal Union, so that the sending of letters or parcels to the country is attended with some uncertainty and inconvenience. Letters, etc., from all parts of the world have to be sent, at present, to the Political Agent, Khairat, Landi Kotal, who arranges to forward them to the Afghan border. Letters are despatched by runners twice a week, they require three days for delivery. Bulky packages and boxes are forwarded by the Afghan trade agent in Peshawar.

The trade routes of Afghanistan are as follows—From Persia by Meshed to Herat, from Bokhara by Merv to Herat, from Bokhara by Karshi, Balkh, and Khulm to Kabul, from East Turkistan by Badakhshan and Kandahar to Kabul, from India by the Khairat road to Kabul, from India by the Gomál

Pass to Ghazni and Kelat-i-Ghilzai, from Chaman, the terminus of the North-Western Railway beyond Quetta, to Kandahar and thence to Kabul or Herat.

There are no railways in the country. The Khairbar and Bolan roads are fit for light wheeled traffic as far as Kabul and Kandahar respectively. There is no wheeled carriage, except artillery, proper to the country, and merchandise is still transported on camel or pony back. There are practically no navigable rivers in Afghanistan, and timber is the only article of commerce conveyed by water, floated down stream in rafts. Telephonic communication exists between Dakka, Jalalabad and Kabul, a distance of 136 miles, and it is being extended to Kandahar.

Money and Currency—The Kabul rupee is the usual currency, though Government demands are often paid in kind. Currency notes of local manufacture in denominations of 1, 5, 25, 50, and 100 rupees, were introduced in July, 1920.

The Amir's mint at Kabul was for some years under the supervision of a European. The current coins in Kabul are Dinar, Paisa, Shahi, Sannar or Misqali, 'Abbasi, Qaran, Rupee and Tuman. Dinar and Tuman are legendary coins intended for purposes of calculation only. Paisa and Shahi are copper coins, and Misqali, 'Abbasi, Qaran and Rupee are silver coins.

10 Dinar = 1 Paisa or Paka	1½ 'Abbasi = 1 Quran
5 Paisa = 1 Shahi	2 Qaran = 1 Rupee
2 Shahi = 1 Sannar, Saddinur or Misqali	20 Rupees = 1 Tuman
2 Sannar = 1 'Abbasi

One Kabul rupee is equal to about eightpence at the normal rate of exchange between Afghanistan and India.

ALBANIA.

(SKYPIANIE.)

THE geographical district known as Albania was made up of the Turkish Provinces of Scutari and of Yanina, and of the parts of the Ottoman vilayets of Kossovo and Monastir, which bordered upon those Provinces. The Albanians are divided into two principal groups—the Ghegs, who live in the north, and the Tosks, who live in the south.

Little is known of their early history. From 1431, when the Turks captured Yanina, the Albanians remained under Turkish rule, except for two brief periods of independence, first between 1443 and 1477, under the Gheg Chieftain George Castriot, and again in the eighteenth century, under the Tosk, Ali of Tepedelen. In 1880 the short-lived Albanian League was founded, making an unsuccessful effort to obtain independence.

The Albanians have an hereditary aristocracy, and a more or less well defined feudal system. Whilst in the north they are divided into clans or tribes, in the south the people look for guidance to a system of beys or chiefs, whose power is very considerable. The Albanian language is held by most authorities to be of Aryan origin. The dialects employed in the north and in the south are somewhat different.

The independence of Albania was proclaimed at Valona on November 28, 1912, and on December 20, 1912, the London Ambassadorial Conference agreed to the principle of Albanian autonomy. Subsequently that Conference approximately decided the frontiers of the new country, and agreed that a European Prince be nominated to rule it. Prince William of Wied, having accepted the crown of the new country from an Albanian deputation, which offered it to him at Neuwied, on February 21, 1914, arrived at Durazzo on March 7, 1914.

The Government of the country was vested in the hands of the Prince, supported and advised by an International Commission of Control, the creation of which was agreed to by the Ambassadorial Conference in July, 1913.

After the outbreak of the European war in the latter days of July, 1914, the Prince and nearly all the members of the International Commission left Albania, which fell again into a state of anarchy. An attempt was made by Essad Pasha Topdani, who had been expelled from the country in May but who returned in September, after the departure of the Prince of Wied, to establish a military government with its seat at Durazzo, but the effort failed (October 5, 1914). Disorder continued, and eventually the Austrians overran Albania, capturing San Giovanni di Medua on January 25, 1916, and Durazzo on February 28, 1916. On June 3, 1917, the general in charge of the Italian forces proclaimed Albania an independent country, and a provisional Government was set up at Durazzo. The final status of the country will be determined by the Peace Conference.

Area and Population.—The frontiers of Albania, which were provisional, were shown in the map of the Balkan Peninsula which accompanied THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1914. The estimated probable area of the country is between 10,500 and 11,500 square miles, and the population between 800,000 and 850,000 souls. The principal towns, with estimated population, are as follows:—Durazzo, the provisional capital, 5,000; Scutari, 32,000; Elbasan, 13,000; Tirana, 12,000; Argyrocastro, 12,000; Berat, 8,500; Korytza, 8,000; Valona, 6,500.

Religion and Instruction.—About two-thirds of the Albanians are Moslems. Of the remaining one-third the Christians in the north are for the most part Roman Catholics, and the Christians in the south are members of the Orthodox (Greek) Church. Whilst large numbers of the Mohammedans belong to the Bektashi sect, in many districts both Christian and Moslem worship may be found.

Under Turkish rule little was done for education. The only school which maintained its existence without ever being actually closed was that founded at Korytza in the year 1891, for the education of girls, by two Albanians, who worked in the interests of Protestantism and of the Albanian nationality. Mention should also be made of the Roman Catholic schools, opened in the north by the Jesuits, and the Orthodox schools, which existed in the south, and which were opened as a result of the ancient privileges possessed by the Patriarchate.

Justice—The Albanians have a strict code of honour, but in the past no universal system of Justice has been in force. Whilst the South has been more or less ruled by the Ottoman code of law, the districts of the North have practically managed their own affairs according to their own ideas.

Production and Industry—Great tracts of the country remain uncultivated, and the areas at present under cultivation are dealt with in a primitive way. The country for the greater part is rugged, wild, and mountainous, the exceptions being along the Adriatic littoral and the Korytza Basin, these two sections being particularly fertile and capable of great agricultural development. Tobacco, wool, and olive oil are the principal products of the country. The wool is made up into coarse and heavy native cloth. Forests are scarce, and as for minerals, Albania is said to possess copper, coal, silver, gold and lead.

Central Albania has no roads, but in the South the Italian administration has constructed military roads extending South via Tepeleni and Argyrocastro, and the North and East via Liascoviki and Erzek to Korytza. Northern Albania has one road, connecting Durazzo and Tirana with Alessio and Scutari. As yet there are no railways in the country. The ports are five in number, viz San Giovanni di Medua, Durazzo, Valona, Porto Palermo, and Santi Quaranta. Valona is intended to be the head of the Trans Balkan Railway, which will connect Italy with Constantinople.

The country has no banks and no currency.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA ARGENTINA)

Constitution and Government.

ARGENTINA was discovered in 1508 by Juan Diaz de Solis and Vicente Yanez Pinzón. In 1535 Don Pedro de Mendoza was sent out by the King of Spain, and in that same year founded the town of Buenos Aires. On May 25, 1810, the population rose against the Spanish rule, and on July 9, 1816, Argentine independence was proclaimed. Between 1816 and 1852 was a period of anarchy, and in 1853 stable government was once more established.

The Constitution of the Argentine Republic bears date May 15, 1853, with modifications in 1860, 1866 and 1898. The executive power is left to a President, elected for six years by electors appointed by the fourteen provinces, equal to double the number of senators and deputies combined, while the legislative authority is vested in a National Congress, consisting of a Senate and a House of Deputies, the former numbering 30, two from the capital and from each province, elected for nine years by a special body of electors in the capital, and by the legislatures in the provinces, and the latter 158 members elected by the people. By the Constitution there should be one deputy for every 33,000 inhabitants. According to the census of 1914 the rate is one deputy for every 49,000 inhabitants. A deputy must be 25 years of age, and have been a citizen for four years. The deputies are elected for four years, but one half of the House must retire every two years. Senators must be 30 years of age, have been citizens for six years. One third of the Senate is renewed every three years. The two chambers meet annually from May 1 to September 30. The members of both the Senate and the House of Deputies each receive 18,000 pesos per annum. A Vice-President, elected in the same manner and at the same time as the President, fills the office of Chairman of the Senate, but has otherwise no political power. The President is commander in chief of the army and navy, and appoints to all civil, military, naval, and judicial offices, and has the right of presentation to bishoprics, he is responsible with the Ministry for the acts of the executive, both President and Vice President must be Roman Catholics, Argentine by birth, and cannot be re-elected, unless a period of six years intervenes.

President of the Republic—Señor Hipólito Irigoyen. Assumed office, October 12, 1916.

Vice-President—Señor Dr. Benito Villanueva.

The Ministry, appointed by and acting under the orders of the President, consists of eight Secretaries of State—namely, of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Justice and Public Instruction, Agriculture, Marine, and Public Works.

The President has a salary of 96,000 dollars paper, and 28,800 dollars paper for official expenses, the Vice-President 36,000 dollars paper as his salary, and 24,000 dollars for official expenses, and each of the eight ministers 39,600 dollars per annum.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The Constitution, with certain small exceptions, is identical with that of the United States. Such matters as affect the Republic as a whole are under the superintendence of the Central Government. The Republic is divided into 14 provinces, 10 territories and 1 federal district (Buenos Aires). The governors of the various provinces are invested with very extensive powers, and in their constitutional functions are independent of the central executive. They are elected by the people of each province for a term varying between three and four years. The provinces elect their own legislatures, and have complete control over their own affairs. The territories are under the supervision of governors appointed by the President. In Buenos Aires municipal government is exercised by a Mayor appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. He is assisted by a deliberative council elected by tax paying inhabitants. The deliberative council votes on measures relating to city finance, works, and general administration, and its decisions are carried out by the Mayor. Other municipalities have constitutions of a similar character.

Area and Population.

The Argentine Republic consists of fourteen provinces, ten territories and one federal district, containing the land area and population shown below —

Of the total in 1914, 4,227,023 were males and 3,658,214 females. Of the population on January 1, 1918, 4,440,367 were males and 3,838,792 females.

The movement of population for four years is given as follows —

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1915	46,699	283,176	124,008	83,019	148,025

In the years 1857–1917 the number of immigrants by sea was 4,812,729. By the Constitution of the Republic, all children of foreigners born in the country are Argentine.

Population of the capital, Buenos Aires, on June 1, 1914 (census), was 1,575,814 (on December 31, 1920, it was estimated at 1,674,000). Rosario (Santa Fé), 222,592, Córdoba, 104,894 (on November 30, 1913, 156,000), La Plata, 90,436, Avellaneda, 46,277, Tucuman, 91,216, Bahía Blanca, 44,143, Santa Fé, 59,574, Mendoza, 58,790, Parana, 36,089, Salta, 28,436, Lomas de Zamora, 22,231, Río Cuarto, 18,421, Corrientes, 28,681, Quilmes, 19,311, Concordia, 20,107, Mar del Plata, 27,611, Santiago del Estero, 23,479, Chivilcoy, 23,241, Resistencia, 8,387, Mercedes (San Luis), 18,256, Tandil, 15,784, Junín, 21,172, Bell Ville, 8,732, Gualleguaychu, 17,880, Pergamino, 20,549, San Juan, 16,631, Catamarca, 13,262, Posadas, 10,128, La Rioja, 8,245, Jujuy, 7,622.

Religion and Instruction.

There is no State religion, though the Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State, all other creeds are tolerated and freedom of conscience prevails. There are 1 archbishop (Buenos Aires) and 10 suffragan bishops. For the clergy there are 8 seminaries. In 1888 civil marriage was established in the Republic.

Primary education is free (subsidised by the General and Provincial Governments), secular and compulsory for children from 6 to 14 years of age. Population of schoolage (1920), 1,756,053, of whom 1,076,045 attended school. Of the total population over 7 years of age, 35.1 per cent were illiterate. There were (1919) 9,268 primary public schools, 7,801 being public and 1,285 private, with 1,190,231 pupils and 36,615 teachers. The secondary or preparatory education is controlled by the general Government, which maintains 42 national colleges with 11,022 pupils and 1,244 teachers. Side by side with the Government colleges there are also 33 private institutions of the same grade, with 2,959 pupils and 398 teachers. There are 82 normal schools with 14,202 pupils and 1,843 teachers, 37 for special instruction (commercial, industrial, artistic, also for the blind, &c) with 11,081 pupils and 1,034 teachers. There are national universities at Córdoba (founded 1613), with 1,506 students in 1918, Buenos Aires (founded 1821), with 10,404 students, La Plata (founded 1905), with 2,979 students, and the National University of the Litoral, in Rosario (founded in 1920), and provincial universities at Santa Fé and Tucuman (founded 1912). There is a well equipped national observatory at Córdoba, and another at La Plata, museums at Buenos Aires and La Plata, and a national meteorological bureau at Buenos Aires.

For 1920 the Government budgeted for education 38,798,656 paper dollars on primary education, 8,274,720 dollars on secondary, 5,381,424 dollars on technical and commercial education, 10,931,864 dollars on normal schools, and 7,464,158 dollars on university education; miscellaneous, 1,034,512 paper dollars, total, 71,885,335 dollars.

In Argentina there are 520 newspapers published, 493 in Spanish, 4 in Italian, 5 in German, 5 in English, and others in Scandinavian, French, Basque, Russian.

Justice.

Justice is administered by Federal and by Provincial Courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The Federal Courts are the Supreme Courts, with 5 judges at Buenos Aires, 5 Appeal Courts, one with 5 judges at Buenos Aires, and with 3 each at La Plata, Parana, Córdoba, and Rosario (Santa Fé), and courts of first instance in each of the provinces and territories. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so called) and several minor courts. Trial by jury is established by the Constitution for criminal cases, but never practised.

In 1916 the total wealth of the country was estimated at 32,656 million dollars paper (2,850,920,0001), including 10,623 million dollars paper the value of agricultural land, 6,800 million dollars the value of urban land, 3,375 million dollars the value of the railways, 3,203 million dollars the value of cattle

Defence.

ARMY.

The army of the Argentine Republic is a National Militia, service in which is compulsory for all citizens from their 20th to their 45th year. For the first 10 years the men belong to the 'active' army, or first line. After completing 10 years in the first line, the men pass to the National Guard and serve in it for another 10 years, finishing their service with 5 years in the Territorial Guard. The period of continuous service, or training in the ranks, is for 1 year. The reservists can be called out for training periodically.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military districts, each of which provides on mobilisation a complete division of the first line, and also a reserve division, irrespective of the National Guard and Territorial troops. The strength of the 'active' divisions will be about 20,000 men each. The 'active' army comprises — Infantry, 20 regiments of 2 battalions of 2 companies; 1 railway battalion of 4 companies, 4 independent companies, cavalry, 12 regiments of 3 squadrons, 1 gendarmierie regiment of 3 squadrons, 1 independent squadron and 2 machine gun squadrons, artillery, 5 regiments field artillery of 2 groups of 2 batteries, 2 groups mountain of 2 batteries, 2 groups of 2 horse batteries, 1 siege battery, engineers, 5 battalions of 4 companies.

The total peace establishment of the army is about 1,750 officers and 18,000 men. There is a trained reserve numbering 300,000 men, of whom 150,000 men are of the first line, and 150,000 of the special reserve. The territorial reserve is in process of formation.

The weapon of the Argentine infantry is at present the Mauser magazine rifle. The cavalry have a carbine of the same system. The artillery are armed with a Krupp 7.5 cm. Q. F. gun.

The estimated military budget for the year 1921 was 3,000,000.

There are also the old cruiser Nueve de Julio, and several small gunboats and torpedo gunboats, 7 destroyers, 8 torpedo boats, and some training and miscellaneous craft. The two Dreadnoughts and a few destroyers and other small craft are the only modern units in the Argentine Fleet. The pre Dreadnoughts have little value. A programme was laid before the Argentine Senate proposing considerable additions to the Fleet, but it has received no effect, and only certain transports have been built.

Naval budget, 1920, 36,459,120 paper pesos.

The personnel of the navy includes 337 officers, 130 engineers, and 27 electrical engineers. The total personnel is about 9,100 men (these numbers include about 5,000 conscripts), who have to serve two years. There is a corps of coast artillery of 450 men, a naval school, a school of mechanics, a school for artillery, and a school for torpedo practice.

Production and Industry.

Argentina has an area of about 728,680,000 acres, of which about 401,000,000 acres may be used for agricultural or cattle industries, 994,000,000 forest, remainder being mountain, lake, river, or arid regions. Of the cultivable portion, about 10,000,000 acres require irrigation. In the territories the Federal Government has wide tracts of land amounting to

237,768,000 acres suitable in general for pastoral colonisation, and these lands are conditionally offered free, or for sale or on lease

The Argentine census of June 1, 1914, showed 1,074,964 real estate owners in the Republic, classified as follows — Argentiniains, 673,409, Italians, 203,500, Spaniards, 104,339, French, 22,105, Uruguayans, 13,973, Russians, 9,687, Austrians, 8,666, Ottomans, 7,709, Swiss, 4,730, Germans, 4,711, English, 4,344, others, 17,791

The total area under cultivation in 1918-19 was 59,716,550 acres The area and produce of principal crops are shown as follows —

	191- 9	1919-20	1920-21	1918-19	1919-20	1920-21

1918	45,072	17,483,482	44,645	17,334,850

Internal Communications.

Railways open, January 1, 1921, 22,590 miles, of which 3,816 miles (18 per cent) belong to the State. The capital invested in Argentine railways amounts to 1,254,795,500 gold dollars. In 1919 Argentine railways transported 68,547,200 passengers, and carried 38,973,050 tons of cargo. Gross receipts were 183,426,002 gold dollars, working expenses, 141,296,478 gold dollars.

The Post Offices, which numbered 3,576 at the end of 1918, dealt with 903,241,474 pieces of mail matter. The revenue of the Postal Department was 17,925,333 paper pesos for 1918. National telegraph lines, 25,167 miles in 1919, provincial railway and private lines bringing the total up to 52,070 miles with 152,644 miles of wire. Number of telegrams dispatched, 1917, 16,816,815. Number of telephones in Argentina on January 1, 1917, 92,785.

There are 12 stations for wireless telegraphy. All ships with a crew of over 50 and touching at Argentine ports are compelled by law to be equipped with wireless telegraph.

In 1912 a bill was passed for the canalization of the Upper Uruguay, the work was to be carried out by Argentina in conjunction with Brazil and Uruguay. A ferry boat service has also been established between Paraguay and Argentina at Posadas and Encarnacion.

Money and Credit.

The 'Banco de la Nación Argentina,' which was established in 1891 with a capital of 4,400,000, and which now has a capital of 11,000,000, has a limited authority to lend money to the National Government, the loans to which must not exceed 20 per cent of its capital. According to the latest census (1915) there are 143 banks within the Republic, 118 Argentine and 25 foreign. The deposits of the chief commercial banks on June 30, 1920, totalled 9,272,646 gold pesos and 3,465,459,275 pesos currency.

In 1899 a conversion law was approved by Congress fixing the value of the paper dollar at 44 cents gold. On June 30, 1920, the Conversion Office, the Bank of the Argentine Nation, and the Argentine Legations abroad had a stock of 584,612,456 dollars gold. At the same date there were in circulation notes to the value of 1,362,559,524 paper pesos.

On April 5, 1915, a national postal savings bank (Caja Nacional de Ahorro Postal) was incorporated. On October 31, 1919, it had 312,383 depositors with total deposits amounting to 18,563,727 paper dollars.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary system of the Republic is theoretically on a gold standard the unit being the peso oro (gold dollar) which weighs 1.6129 grammes of gold  $\frac{9}{10}$  fine. The Peso which is divided into 100 centavos, is of the value of  $4\frac{1}{3}$  s. According to the monetary law of November 5, 1881, five and two-and-a-half gold peso pieces are coined. The 5 dollar gold piece (the Argentino) weighs 8.0645 grammes, 900 fine, and therefore contains 7.25805 grammes of fine gold. One pound sterling = 5.04 gold dollars.

Gold is not in circulation. The money in circulation is chiefly paper (peso papel). The paper dollar, being convertible at 44 gold dollar, is worth 1s.  $8\frac{1}{3}$  d. (11.45 to the £).

Since January 1, 1887, the use of the French metric system is compulsory.

AUSTRIA.

(DIE REPUBLIK ÖSTERREICH)

Constitution and Government.

The Republic of Austria was proclaimed on November 12, 1918. The Government was taken in hand by a National Assembly which appointed a temporary cabinet and proceeded to pass laws. On February 16, 1919, the National Constitutional Assembly, consisting of only one Chamber, was duly elected on the basis of universal and proportional suffrage, where every Austrian subject, male and female, has a vote if 20 years of age, and is eligible if 24 years of age. On the same basis the elections for the first Parliament were held (October, 1920), and these resulted in the following parties being returned — Christian Socialists, 78, Social Democrats, 63, German Nationalists, 14, Peasants' Party, 4, Workers' Party, 1.

The Constitution, which was adopted October 1, 1920, and came into force on November 10, 1920, provides for a President, chosen by the two Houses assembled for a joint session, his term is for 4 years, and he may be re-elected once only, for an Assembly (Nationalrat), elected by popular vote for 4 years, and for a First Chamber (Bundesrat), chosen by the Provincial Diets in proportion to their population (at present the members number 46). The powers of the Bundesrat are advisory. Austria is declared to be a Democratic Republic composed of the seven provinces and the city of Vienna. All special privileges are abolished, and equal rights granted to all citizens.

The Ministry, constituted on November 21, 1920, is as follows —

State Chancellor and Minister of Foreign Affairs — Dr Michael Mayr (Christian Socialist)

Vice Chancellor and Minister of Education — Walter Breisky (Administrative Official)

Minister of Commerce — Edouard Heisl (Christian Socialist)

Minister of Social Insurance — Dr Joseph Resch (Administrative Official)

Minister of Agriculture — Alois Hauer (Christian Socialist)

Minister of Finance — Dr Ferdinand Grimm (Administrative Official)

Minister of Justice — Dr Rudolf Pallautz (Administrative Official)

Food Controller — Dr Alfred Grünberger (Christian Socialist)

Minister of the Interior and of War — Walter Breisky

Minister of Railways — Dr Karl Pöta (Administrative Official)

The national flag consists of three horizontal stripes, the top and bottom being red and the centre white.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The Republic of Austria comprises 7 provinces, viz, Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Tyrol, and Vorarlberg, and the City of Vienna, which holds a special position in regard to local Government. Moreover the Burgenland (German Western Hungary) is to fall to the Austrian Republic according to the Treaty of St Germain. There is in every province a Provincial Assembly (Landessammlung), consisting likewise of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the Constitutional National Assembly. The cultivation of the soil, the educational, ecclesiastical, and charitable institutions, as also public works, chiefly fall within the competence of the provinces. At the head of the Provincial Assembly is the Provincial Committee (Landesausschuss) elected by the Provincial Assembly.

Every commune has a council to deliberate and decide its affairs, of which the members are mostly elected for 5 years. The council elects from its midst the head of the commune (burgomaster) and a committee for the administration of the affairs and execution of its resolutions. All who are 20 years of age have a vote, while for the passive suffrage the attained age of 24-29 years is required.

Area and Population

For the boundaries of Austria according to the Treaty of St Germain, signed on September 10, 1919, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1920, pp 674-5

The area and population (census taken on January 31, 1920) of Austria are shown as follows —

Provinces	Area, English square miles	Population (Census 1920)			Percentage of population 1920	Population per square mile 1920
Vienna	107	851,302	990,024	1,841,326	29.99	17.209

The area of Western Hungary is 1,684 square miles, with an estimated population of some 345,082

Compared with the total population in 1910, the total for 1920 shows a loss of 227,209, or 3.6 per cent. The male population has decreased by 205,644 or 6.61 per cent as compared with 1910

PRINCIPAL TOWNS

The population of the principal towns of Austria on January 31, 1920, was as follows — Vienna, 1,842,005, Graz, 157,032, Linz, 93,473, Innsbruck, 55,659, Salzburg, 36,450, Wiener Neustadt, 35,023, Klagenfurt, 26,111, St. Pölten, 23,061, Villach, 21,896, Baden, 21,095, and Steyr, 20,234

In 1918, births, 87,594, marriages, 40,738, deaths, 166,378, divorces, 1779

Religion.

Religious liberty is one of the fundamental laws of the Republic, and the principle is embodied in the Treaty of St Germain (article 63). In 1920 there were 5,979,667 Catholics (94.11 per cent), 165,007 Protestants (2.60 per cent), 189,758 Jews (2.99 per cent), and 19,021 'others' (0.30 per cent). The Catholic Church has 2 archbishops and 4 bishops.

Instruction.

The educational organisation of Austria comprises (1) Elementary schools, (2) middle schools; (3) high schools, (4) schools for special subjects, and (5) universities and colleges.

Attendance is compulsory at the elementary schools from 6 to 14 in Austria generally, but there are far reaching facilities for exemption for pupils of 12 years and upwards The cost of elementary education is borne in the first instance by the communes and provinces In 1918 there were in the Republic 4,763 public and private elementary schools, with 30,667 teachers and 914,258 pupils

Secondary education is provided in the Gymnasien and Realschulen These institutions are maintained by the State, the provinces, the towns, or private individuals Of the former there were (1917-18) 73 with 20,955 pupils, of the latter 38 with 14,632 pupils, and for girls, 26 with 4,896 pupils

Austria has four universities maintained by the State, viz., Vienna (in 1917-18, 810 teachers and 5,510 students), Graz (232 teachers and 1,142 students), Innsbruck (164 teachers and 982 students), and Salzburg, and there are also two technical high schools at Vienna (212 teachers and 1,292 students) and Graz (72 teachers and 186 students)

There are also 18 theological colleges, of which 15 are Roman Catholic, 1 Armenian Catholic, 1 Protestant, and 1 Jewish, with a total of 503 students In 1918 there were also 37 training colleges for teachers, with 736 lecturers and 5,043 students

Justice and Crime

The Supreme Court of Justice and Court of Cassation (Oberste Gerichts- und Kassationshof) in Vienna is the highest court in the land Besides there are 3 higher provincial courts (Oberlandesgerichte), 17 provincial and district courts (Landes und Kreisgerichte), and, in connection with these, the jury courts (Geschworenengerichte) There are likewise 269 county courts (Bezirksgerichte), and 2 special courts for commercial affairs, 4 for industry, 1 constitutional court, 1 administrative court, and 1 electoral court

Pauperism.

Funds for poor relief are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, the third of the property left by intestate secular priests, and certain percentages on the proceeds of voluntary sales In some provinces the poor funds are augmented from other sources, e.g. theatre money (Spectakelgelder), hunting licences, dog certificates, and in some large towns percentages on legacies over a fixed amount Those who are wholly or partially unfit for work may be provided for in such manner as the commune judges propose Besides poor houses and money relief, there exists in many provinces the practice of assigning the poor—in respect of board and lodging—to each of the resident householders in fixed succession (Einlegesystem)

The law for unemployment insurance bears date March 24, 1920 Under the Act one third of the cost of unemployment insurance is to be borne by the State, and two thirds by employers and workers Benefits under the scheme are not granted for more than 12 weeks

Finance.

The budgets for 1919-20 and 1920-21 provided revenue and expenditure as follows in kronen —

	1919-20	1920-21
Revenue	6,294,000,000	28,953,812,300
Expenditure	16,873,000,000	71,132,733,900
Deficit	10,579,000,000	42,179,421,600

The following are some of the details of the budget for 1920-21 in millions of kronen —

Revenue	Millions of kronen	Expenditure	Millions of kronen
Various revenues	9,914	Interest on debt	9,067
Railways	5,521	Interior	1,138
Monopolies	5,490	Army	2,077
		Railways	11,008
		Subventions for food	21,260
		Bonuses to Civil servants	5,388
		For unemployment grants	125
		Military pensions	266

The share of the Republic of the old debt of Austria Hungary is not yet definitely fixed. On September 30, 1920, it was estimated at 44,958 million kronen, with an annual interest of 1,554 million kronen. The debt of the new Republic on that date amounted to 14,904 million kronen, with an annual charge of 731 million kronen. Foreign credits for food, &c., are not included in the last figure. They have been estimated at 17,500 million kronen, with an annual charge of 886 million kronen.

Defence.

1 ARMY

The break up of the Austro Hungarian Empire at the end of the war brought with it the collapse of the military system of that country. At the end of 1918 all was in confusion, but towards the end of January, 1919, the Austrian Government created a Defence Force (Volkswehr). By August, 1920, the approximate strength of the Volkswehr was 34,000 men.

By the terms of the Treaty of St. Germain, universal compulsory military service is abolished in Austria, and the total number of military forces in the Austrian Army is limited to 30,000 men, including officers and depot troops.

Austria is permitted at her own discretion to organise this number of troops either in divisions or in mixed brigades. If the divisional organisation is chosen, the maximum strength of an infantry division is to be 414 officers and 10,780 men, the minimum strength 300 officers and 8,000 men. The maximum strength of a cavalry division is to be 259 officers and 5,380 men and the minimum 180 officers and 3,650 men.

If the mixed brigade organisation is chosen, the maximum strength of a brigade is to be 198 officers and 5,350 men, and the minimum 140 officers and 4,250 men. The future Austrian Army may therefore be organised into two infantry divisions and one cavalry division at the higher establishment or three infantry divisions and one cavalry at the lower establishment, or into six mixed brigades. The latter organisation has been chosen. The maximum authorised armaments and stocks of munitions are per 1,000 men —

Rifles or carbines	1,150	500 rounds of ammunition per arm
Machine guns	15	10,000
Trench mortars, light	2	{ 1,000
„ „ medium		{ 500
Guns	{ field or	1,000
Howitzers	{ mountain

All officers must be regulars. Officers now serving retained in the army must serve to the age of 40. Officers newly appointed must serve on the active list for 20 consecutive years.

The period of enlistment for non-commissioned officers and privates must be for a total period of not less than 12 consecutive years, including at least six years with the colours. The proportion of officers and men discharged for any reason before the expiration of their term of enlistment must not exceed one twentieth of the total strength. All measures of mobilisation are for bidden.

The number of gendarmes, customs officers, foresters, and members of police forces must not exceed the number employed in a similar capacity in 1913. Educational establishments and all sporting and other clubs are for bidden to occupy themselves with any military matters. Within two months of the final ratification of the Treaty the air forces of Austria are to be demobilised. The armed forces of Austria must not include any military or naval air forces, and no dirigibles are to be kept. All naval and military aeronautical material, including aeroplanes, seaplanes, dirigibles, and parts of these, is to be handed over to the Allies. During the six months which follow the final ratification of the Treaty, the manufacture, importation, and exportation of aircraft, and parts of aircraft, are forbidden.

In the new army the Government has organised six infantry regiments for Vienna and Lower Austria, six Alpenjager regiments for Upper Austria, Styria, Carinthia, Salzburg, and Tyrol, two infantry battalions for Burgen land, one jager battalion for Salzburg, and one jager battalion for Vorarlberg. There are besides six cycle battalions, six squadrons of cavalry, seven artillery and six technical units.

2 NAVY

As Austria now has no seaboard, the former Austro Hungarian fleet has ceased to exist. Under the Armistice terms, 3 battleships, 3 light cruisers, 9 destroyers, 12 torpedo boats, a minelayer, and 6 Danube monitors, were to be surrendered to the Allies. The battleship Franz Ferdinand and the 'Dreadnought' battleship Tegetthoff were brought by the Italians to Venice, with some other vessels. In January, 1920, the Inter Allied Naval Commission allotted to France the ships lying at Cattaro, being 1 battleship, 3 cruisers, 4 torpedo cruisers, 12 torpedo boats, and smaller craft. They had been seriously injured and partially dismantled by Czecho Jugo Slav officers and men, but were to be patched up and taken to Bizerta, Toulon, and Marseilles by Allied officers and crews. The light cruiser Novara, while en route, sprang a leak and was towed into Brindisi, where she sank but has been refloated. The only war vessels now remaining to Austria are certain small monitors and other vessels in the Danube.

Production and Industry

Agriculture forms the main occupation of the country. In 1919 the total acreage sown amounted to 4,084,121 acres (4,165,214 acres in 1918). Of the total in 1919, 2,123,175 acres were in Lower Austria and 929,988 acres in Upper Austria. The chief products are shown as follows for 2 years —

Crop	1919		1920
	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)
Wheat	875,128	189,171	874,082	149,515
Rye	725,090	229,508	698,687	251,410

The foodstuffs produced do not suffice for the population. Forests abound and timber forms an appreciable asset of Austria. The number of animals in 1918 were horses, 270,000, cows, 858,000, oxen, 223,000, bulls, 43,000, and calves, 499,000.

The country has not been deprived of all her minerals, in 1920 the production of lignite was 2,387,996 tons, and of anthracite, 133,173 tons. There were 11 anthracite mines worked in 1920, and 61 lignite mines. The output of iron ore is also placed at two million tons per annum, and of pig iron at about half a million tons. Some copper, zinc, silver and gold ore, lead, and salt are also produced.

Of important industries, piano making, the manufacture of motor cars, and textiles still remain in Austria to a certain extent.

Commerce

The only recent British statistics of commerce available are those (published by the Board of Trade) showing the trade between Great Britain and Austria Hungary, in which the imports for 1920 amounted to 2,622,805*l*, and the exports to 3,969,064*l*. For Austrian figures see "Additions and Corrections" in this volume.

Internal Communications.

The following are railway statistics of Austria in 1919. State lines and private companies' lines worked by the State, 2,659 miles, private companies' lines worked by themselves, 1,222 miles, state lines worked by private companies, 13 miles, making a total of 3,882 miles.

There were, in 1915, 10,126 post offices.

In 1914 there were in Austria 1,475 urban telephone systems with 314,792 miles of wire and 950 inter urban circuits with 10,331 miles of line and 54,098 miles of wire. 396,888,039 conversations were held.

Banking and Credit

According to the Treaty of St Germain the Austro Hungarian Bank is to be liquidated. The condition of the Bank as on December 31, 1920, showed that its notes in circulation amounted to 30,645,658,090 kronen, against which it held bullion to the value of 8,807,266 kronen.

Money, Weights and Measures.

The Austrian standard coin (gold) is the krone, which has been coined in denominations of 100, 20, and 10. Of silver coins there were 5, 2, and 1 krone pieces. The krone = 100 heller. Hardly any coins are, however, at present in use, the currency is for the most part paper, including even 20-heller pieces.

King Albert has a civil list of 3,300,000 francs

The Kingdom of Belgium formed itself into an independent State in 1830, having from 1815 been a part of the Netherlands. The secession was decreed on October 4, 1830, by a Provisional Government, established in consequence of a revolution which broke out at Brussels, on August 25, 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe Coburg King of the Belgians on June 4, 1831, he ascended the throne July 21, 1831. On his death in 1865 he was succeeded by his son, Leopold II, who reigned until 1909

By the Treaty of London, Nov 15, 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which established peace between King Leopold I and the King of the Netherlands, that all the States of Europe recognised the kingdom of Belgium. In the Treaty of Versailles it is stated that as the treaties of 1839 'no longer conform to the requirements of the situation,' these are abrogated and will be replaced by other treaties

Constitution and Government.

According to the Constitution of 1831 Belgium is 'a constitutional, representative, and hereditary monarchy'. The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture. By marriage without the King's consent, however, the right of succession is forfeited, but may be restored by the King with the consent of the two Chambers. No act of the King can have effect unless countersigned by one of his Ministers, who thus becomes responsible for it. The King convokes, prorogues, and dissolves the Chambers. In default of male heirs, the King may nominate his successor with the consent of the Chambers. If the successor be under eighteen years of age, the two Chambers meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

Those sections of the Belgian Constitution which regulate the organisation of the legislative power are now under revision (May, 1921), the information which follows therefore refers to a system which both in regard to the electorate and eligibility for the Senate is about to be completely modified. For both Senate and Chamber the elections of November 16, 1919, were held on the principle of universal suffrage.

The Senate consists of members elected for eight years, partly directly and partly indirectly. Their total number is 120, of whom 27 are elected by the Provincial Councils. The number elected directly is equal to half the number of members of the Chamber of Representatives, and is proportioned to the population of each province. The constituent body is similar to that which elects deputies to the Chamber, except that the minimum age of electors is fixed at thirty years. In the election of members both of the Senate and Chamber of Representatives directly, the principle of proportional representation of parties was introduced by Law of December 29, 1899. Senators elected indirectly are chosen by the provincial councils, two for each province with less than 500,000 inhabitants, three for each with a population up to 1,000,000, and four for each with over 1,000,000. No one, during two years preceding the election, must have been a member of the council appointing him. All senators must be at least forty years of age, and those elected directly must pay not less than 1,200 francs in direct taxes, or own immovable property in Belgium yielding an income of 12,000 francs. In provinces, however, where the number eligible for the Senate would be less than one in 5,000 of population, the list is extended to this proportion by admission of the most highly taxed Sons of the King, or failing these, Belgian princes of the reigning branch of the Royal Family are by right Senators at the age of eighteen, but have no voice in the deliberations till the age of twenty five years.

The members of the Chamber of Representatives are all elected directly by the electoral body. Their number at present, 186 (law of May 2, 1912), is proportioned to the population, and cannot exceed one for every 40,000 inhabitants. They sit for four years, one half retiring every two years, except that after a dissolution a general election takes place. It is intended to establish the principle of universal suffrage in Belgium, but the actual completion of the process has yet to be adopted. Deputies must be not less than twenty five years of age, and resident in Belgium. Each deputy has an annual indemnity of 12,000 francs, and a free pass all the year over Government and Companies' railways between his residence and the place of Session.

The Senate and Chamber meet annually in the month of November, and must sit for at least forty days, but the King has the power of convoking them on extraordinary occasions, and of dissolving them either simultaneously or separately. In the latter case a new election must take place within forty days, and a meeting of the Chambers within two months. An adjournment cannot be made for a period exceeding one month without the consent of the Chambers. Money bills and bills relating to the contingent for the army originate in the Chamber of Representatives.

The Executive Government consists of 12 departments, under the following Ministers (appointed November 20, 1920) —

Prime Minister and Minister of Interior — Henry Carton de Wiart (Catholic)

• Minister of Finance — Georges Theunis

Minister of Economic Affairs — Aloys Van de Vyvere (Catholic)

Minister of Foreign Affairs — Henri Jaspar (Catholic)

Minister of Education — Jules Destrée (Socialist)

Minister of Agriculture — Baron A. Ruzette (Catholic)

Minister of National Defence — Albert Devezé (Liberal).

Minister of Justice — Emile Vandervelde (Socialist)

Minister of the Colonies — Louis Franck (Liberal)

Minister of Industry, Food Supply, and Labour — Joseph Wauters (Socialist)

Minister of Railways, Marine, Posts and Telegraphs — Xavier Neujean (Liberal)

Minister of Public Works — Edouard Anseele (Socialist)

Besides the above responsible heads of departments, there are a number of 'Ministres d'Etat,' without portfolio, called on special occasions by the sovereign

Local Government

The provinces and communes (2,633 in 1913) of Belgium have a large amount of autonomous government. The laws governing provincial and communal elections are being altered at present (May, 1921)

In regard to the communal electorate, the law of April 15, 1920, definitely lays it down that all Belgians over 21 years of age without distinction of sex, who have been domiciled for at least six months, have the right to vote. Proportional representation is applied to the communal elections, and communal councils are to be renewed every six years. In each commune there is a college composed of the burgomaster, president, and a certain number of aldermen, corresponding almost to the permanent deputation of the Provincial Council, and both are the organs of the central administration.

Area and Population

Belgium has an area of 29,451 square kilometres, or 11,373 English square miles. The following table shows the population at various dates —

Religion.

Of the inhabitants professing a religion the majority is Roman Catholic. But no inquisition on the profession or faith is now made at the censuses, and therefore, the last available figures, those of 1891, are the only clue to the numbers of the three dominant faiths. According to these there were — Protestants and Anglicans 27,900, Jews, 13,200. There are, however, statistics concerning the clergy, and according to these there were in 1920 — Roman Catholic higher clergy 85, inferior clergy, 5,946, Protestant pastors, 21, Jews (rabbis and ministers) 15. The State does not interfere in any way with the internal affairs of either Catholic or Protestant Churches. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid from the national treasury.

In 1920 there were six Roman Catholic dioceses, 204 deaneries, 3,679 Catholic churches and chapels, 6 large and 11 small seminaries.

The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod.

Instruction.

Of the four universities Ghent and Liège are State institutions, Brussels and Louvain free. In 1919-20 Brussels had 1,644 students, Ghent, 1,006, Liège, 2,656, and Louvain, 2,783.

Attached to the universities were various special technical schools, with 3,034 students in 1919-20. There were also 6 commercial high schools, the Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Antwerp, a polytechnic at Mons, a state agricultural institute at Gembloux, and a state veterinary school at Cureghem, schools of design, and four royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, and Antwerp. Public schools, (Dec 31) 1920—23 Royal Athénæums and colleges, with 7,962 pupils, 1 provincial college, with 328 pupils, 4 municipal colleges, with 1,364 pupils, 8 private colleges, with 1,462 pupils. The next grades of schools are the middle class schools, of which there were 97 with 25,903 male pupils, and 48 with 13,638 female pupils. For elementary education there were 7,959 primary schools, with 960,819 pupils, 3,366 infant schools with 205,418 pupils, and 4,193 adult schools with 174,044 pupils. Of normal schools there are 24 for training secondary teachers and 75 for training elementary teachers.

There are many private or free schools—infant, primary, and adult schools mostly under ecclesiastical care. No statistics are available for these. They are all subject to inspection by the State.

Each commune must have at least one primary school. The cost of primary instruction devolves on the communes, with subsidies from the State and provinces.

The proportion of the population (deduction made of children of less than 8 years), who could not read or write at the census of 1910 was 13.1 per cent, in 1900 was 19.1 per cent, in 1890, 25.0 per cent, in 1880, 30.26 per cent. In 1913, of the 67,396 young men called out for military service, 4,207, or 9.24 per cent, could neither read nor write, in 1900 the corresponding percentage was 10.10, and in 1890, 15.92.

Justice and Crime.

Judges are appointed for life. There is one Court of Cassation, three Courts of Appeal, and Assize Courts for criminal cases. There are 26 judicial districts, each with a Court of first instance. In each of the 227 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are, besides, various special tribunals. There is trial by jury.

Pauperism.

Apart from private charity, the poor are assisted by the communes through the agency of the bureaux de bienfaisance whose duty it is to provide outdoor relief, and by the governing bodies of the hospices civils. Provisions of a national character have been made for looking after war orphans and men disabled in the war. Certain other establishments, either State or provincial, provide for the needs of deaf mutes and the blind, and of children who are placed under the control of the courts. Provision is also made for repressing begging and providing shelter for the homeless.

Defence.

According to the Military Law passed in 1913, the Belgian Army is recruited by means of annual calls to the Colours and by voluntary enlistments. Military service is compulsory for those called to the Colours.

The occupation of Belgium by the Germans having prevented the normal recruitment of the classes of 1914-1919, a special 1919 class has been formed composed of the young men of those classes, with liberal exemptions for the families of those who have suffered heavily during the war.

The young men of the contingent serve for 15 months in the infantry, fortress artillery and engineers, for 21 months in the field artillery, and for 24 months in the cavalry. With the calling up of the 1920 class a return was made to normal process of recruitment. Service in the reserve, which follows on service in the active army, is for 5 years.

The Law provides for the calling out of the reserve only in the event of war or if the country is threatened. The 11th, 12th and 13th Classes are not to be mobilised except in case of absolute necessity and are to be employed in the defence of fortified places and in the non-combatant services. Reservists of the active army are subject to recalls to the Colours.

of 4, 6, or 8 weeks, according to the branch of the service to which they belong. These recalls take place during the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th year of service.

The strength of the army with the Colours at the end of 1920, was 100,000. Of these 1 infantry division and 1 cavalry regiment formed part of the Allied Army of Occupation on the Rhine.

The field army consists of 6 divisions and of 1 cavalry division. The divisions are composed each of 3 regiments of infantry of 3 battalions, and 4 groups of 3 batteries of field artillery, of 1 regiment of cavalry, divisional cyclists, field telegraph and searchlight units, engineer companies, and a divisional transport corps.

The cavalry division normally consists of 3 brigades of 2 regiments, 2 battalions cyclists, machine gun sections, 1 group horse artillery, field telegraph units, pioneer pontoon cyclists, and a divisional transport corps.

The Grand General Staff, in addition, has at its disposal 1 brigade of 3 regiments of heavy artillery, trench mortars, aviation, aerostation, telegraph bridging equipment, railway and engineer units.

Belgium has no navy.

BELGIAN CONGO

(CONGO BELGE)

Constitution and Government.—The Congo Independent State was founded in 1885 by Leopold II, King of the Belgians, and the State was placed under his sovereignty.

The annexation of the State to Belgium was provided for by treaty of November 28, 1907, which was approved by the chambers of the Belgian Legislature in August and by the King on October 18, 1908. The Minister for the Colonies is appointed by the King, and is a member of the Council of Ministers. He is President of the Colonial Council, consisting of 15 members, 8 of whom are appointed by the King, and 3 chosen by the Senate and 3 by the Chamber of Representatives. One of those appointed by the King, and one chosen by the Legislative Chambers, retire annually, but may be re-appointed. The King is represented in the Colony by a Governor-General, assisted by several vice Governors General. The budget is presented annually to the Chambers, and voted by them, the financial accounts have to be verified by the Court of Accounts. An annual report on the Congo Administration has to be presented to the Chambers along with the budget.

The Annexation has been recognised by all the Powers.

The precise boundaries of the Congo Colony were defined by the neutrality declarations of August, 1885, and December, 1894, and by treaties with Germany, Great Britain, France, and Portugal.

The territory is divided into twenty-two administrative districts (March 28, 1912) —Lower Congo, Middle Congo, Kwango, Sankuru, Kasai, Lake Leopold II, Equator, Lulonga, Bangala, Ubangi, Lower Uele, Upper Uele, Ituri, Stanleyville, Aruwimi, Lova, Kivu, Maniema, Lomami, Tanganika—Moero, Lulua, and Upper Luapula. The last four districts form the Province of Katanga, with its capital at Elisabethville, the first five districts form the Province of Congo Kasai, with Leopoldville as its capital, the five next districts form the Province of Equator, with its capital at Coquilhatville, and the remaining eight districts form the Eastern Province, with its capital at Stanleyville. The capital of the Colony is Boma. At the head of each Province there is a vice governor, and at the head of each district a commissioner. Each district is divided into territories of which there are 179 in the whole country. In 1920 there were altogether more than 225 posts and stations at which 2,038 European officials were employed.

The districts of Ruanda and Urundi, together with the territory round lake Kivu (formerly in German East Africa), have been ceded to Belgium as mandatory of the League of Nations. Area about 19,000 square miles. Ruanda is populated by two races—the Watusi and the Wahutu. Both districts are rich in cattle. In order to obtain a practicable route for a railway which shall join the Tanganyika Territory to Uganda, the eastern strip of the Province of Ruanda and a small part of Urundi are transferred to Great Britain. The projected line will form a link on the Cape to Cairo railway.

Area and Population —The area of the Colony is estimated at 909,654 square miles, with a population of Bantu origin officially estimated at 11 millions. The European population in January, 1920, numbered 6,971. Of these, 3,588 were Belgians, 818 English, 239 Americans, 657 Portuguese, 298 Italians, 53 Russians, 87 Swedish, 153 French, 183 Dutch, 75 Swiss, 308 Greeks, 22 Luxemburgers, 21 Danish, 14 Norwegians and 11 Spaniards.

The native languages comprise many dialects, every tribe having its own. Kiswahili is the language spoken by the natives who have been under Arab influence. Bangala is the commercial language on the upper Congo, Fiole is used on the lower Congo.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the natives consists of a gross fetishism, but mission work is actively carried on. There are 149 mission stations, with 1,150 missionaries, of whom 650 are Catholic and 500 Protestant. In education they co-operate with the Government, which has formed colonies where children are collected and taught. In 1920 the Government grant for education to the missionaries amounted to 887,100 francs, while the total expenditure on education was 1,297,880 francs.

Justice.—There are 7 courts of first instance, 15 county courts, and 2 courts of appeal (one at Boma and the other at Elisabethville). There are altogether 75 magistrates in the Congo. Moreover, every administrator of a territory is invested with judicial powers comparable to those of a justice of the peace

—	1917	1918	1919	1920	1921
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	1,783,907	1,892,180	1,953,534	2,227,466	2,541,000
Expenditure	2,382,829	1,974,219	2,081,950	2,422,154	2,781,000

For 1920 the receipts and expenditure were estimated as follows —

Receipts	Francs	Expenditure	Francs
Customs	13,000,000	Administration	8,780,000
Direct taxes	16,000,000	Public debt	5,556,159
Portfolio	3,199,000	Army	8,767,390
Taxes on ivory	1,778,000	Navy	1,088,320
Mines	10,292,400	Religion and Education	1,297,880
Agricultural receipts	1,530,000
Total (including all items)	55,686,674 (2,227,466 l )	Total (including all items)	60,553,874 (2,422,154 l )

Debt 1919, 349,847,446 francs

Defence —The Colony possesses a force of native troops amounting to about 16,000 men. They are all infantry and are organised in 30 independent companies. The force is recruited by voluntary enlistment. The officers and non commissioned officers (365) are Europeans, for the most part Belgians. The term of service is seven years, and the recruits are trained in five camps of instruction before being drafted to their companies. The Territorial police number about 6,000 men.

Production.—The chief products in the order of their importance are rubber, palm nuts and palm oil, white copal and cocoa. Ivory is also abundant. Coffee grows freely, and the cultivation of cocoa is successful. Rice, cotton, and tobacco are grown in a great number of the native villages. Plantations of rubber, cacao, and coffee have been established by the Government and by private enterprise. Cattle thrive satisfactorily in all districts where there is no tsetse fly, notably in the highlands of Katanga and Kivu. Mining flourishes, the chief minerals being gold, diamonds, and copper. Other minerals are known to exist—coal, iron, tin and manganese—but as yet these have not been obtained in paying quantities. The gold mines in 1919 employed some 8,000 natives, the output was 3,356 kilos. The most important mines in the Congo are the copper mines near Kambove, operated by the Union Minière. The total output in 1919 was 22,130 tons of copper. The exportation of diamonds in 1919 amounted to 215,532 carats.

Commerce and Shipping.—The value of the commerce for five years was as follows —

Years	Imports		Exports
	Special	General	Special	General
	£	£	£	£
1914	1,779,685	2,064,158	2,114,991	2,448,442
1915	934,128	1,184,823	879,788	8,299,524
1916	2,150,693	2,749,591	5,197,264	5,897,708
1917	1,412,054	1,793,555	6,573,108	7,397,926
1918	1,504,190	2,014,301	4,478,764	4,934,461

The chief imports for 1917 and 1918 and exports for 1918 and 1919 were —

—	Imports		—	Exports
	1917	1918		1918	1919
	Francs	Francs		Kilogs	Kilogs
Arms, ammunition, &c	16,175	15,113	Rubber	1,755,609	3,797,440

Cottons	12,095,806	10,223,131	Gold, crude	2,433	4,410
			Copper, ore and crude	19,419,423	23,028,000

Of the special imports (1918) the value of 28,712,502 francs came from Great Britain, 1,223,856 francs from France, 2,056,017 francs from Angola, 1,824,238 francs from the United States. Of the special exports 40,095 tons went to Great Britain, 653 tons to the United States, and 13,619 tons to France.

According to the Board of Trade Returns the imports into the United Kingdom from the Belgian Congo in 1920 amounted to the value of 725,111£, and the exports of British produce and manufactures to the Belgian Congo to 981,070£.

At the port of Boma in 1918 of sea going vessels there entered 23 of 66,489 tons, and cleared 23 vessels of 66,489 tons. The other two ports are Banana and Matadi. In the coasting trade there entered 150 vessels of 8,041 tons, and cleared 147 vessels of 7,957 tons.

The administration possesses 17 steamers on the Lower Congo, and 46 on the Upper Congo. There are also about 51 private steamers on the Upper Congo.

Internal Communications—The Congo is navigable for 93 miles from its mouth to Matadi, and on this section 15 steamers belonging to the State ply. Above this, for over 200 miles, are numerous rapids, which render the river unnavigable as far as Stanley Pool (Léopoldville). Above the Pool there are about 1,068 miles of navigable water, as far as Stanley Falls, while several of the great tributaries are navigable over a considerable extent of their course. Above the Stanley Falls the Congo is called Lualaba and is navigable for 585 miles, from Ponthierville to Kinshasa and from Kongolo to Bukama (Katanga).

There are 5,609 miles of road partly suitable for motors. The total length of railways on January 1, 1920, was 1,267 miles. Principal lines —The Matadi Léopoldville line, 248 miles, the Mayumbe railway (Boma to Tshela), 90 miles, the Stanleyville Ponthierville line, 78 miles, the Kindu Kongolo line, 220 miles; the Rabalo Albertville line, 170 miles, the Bukama to the Rhodesian frontier via Elisabethville, 451 miles, the Katanga branch line to Lubumbashi, 1 mile, to Mikola, 9 miles. Two sections of the Cape to Cairo railway are included in the system. The distance from Elisabethville, Katanga, on the Cape to Cairo Railway, to Cape Town is about 2,800 miles.

An important development in 1911 was the construction of a pipe line from Matadi to Léopoldville, 248 miles long, for the purpose of transporting crude oil for the use of river steamers. It has a diameter of 4 inches, with 8 pumping stations capable of delivering 50,000 tons of oil at Leopoldville the terminus. The concession is for 50 years, at the expiration of which period all the pipe lines, with the material, except the vessels and stores of petroleum, will pass into the hands of the Congo Government.

The length of the Congo Tanganyika Lake Railway is 169 miles. It was completed in March, 1915, and links up the whole of the Upper Congo with the railway from Dar-es Salaam to Ujiji.

From Léopoldville a public transport service on the Upper Congo and its tributaries has been organised by the Government and several companies, 59 steamers and barges being employed for this purpose.

In 1919 there were 50 post, telegraph and telephone offices. There are in addition 23 special telegraph offices, and there are 24 centres where there is a telephone wire. In 1919 in the internal service 917,997 letters, papers, &c., were transmitted, and in the external, 1,816,571 were handled. The Congo is included in the Postal Union. Telegraph lines connect Banana with Coquilhatville, 800 miles, Boma with Tshela, 85 miles, Stanleyville and Ponthierville, 79 miles, Kasongo and Uvira (Lake Tanganyika), 265 miles, Kindu and Kongolo 219 miles, Kabalo and Lake Tanganyika, 169 miles, and Sakania and Bukama 448 miles. Total length, 2,065 miles. There are at present 15 stations of wireless telegraphy in the Belgian Congo—at Banana, Boma, Kinshasa, Coquilhatville, Basankusu, Umangi, Basoko, Stanleyville, Kindu, Kongolo, Albertville, Kikondja, Elisabethville, Lusambo, and Kilo. All these posts communicate with each other. It is hoped to establish a direct communication between Brussels and Boma.

Four banks are in existence, the 'Banque du Congo Belge,' and the 'Banque Commerciale du Congo,' both with branches in all the commercial centres, the Banco Nacional Ultra marino, and the Standard Bank.

The currency of the Congo is that of Belgium and is now generally used, even by the natives. It consists of 20 and 10 franc pieces in gold, 5, 2 and 1 franc pieces and 50 cent pieces in silver, 20, 10 and 5 cent pieces (perforated) in nickel, and 2 and 1 cent pieces (perforated) in copper. Banknotes of 20, 100 and 1,000 francs issued by the Banque du Congo Belge were put in circulation during the year 1912. Gold disappeared from circulation almost immediately upon the outbreak of war, and silver was hoarded to such an extent that it became necessary for the Banque du Congo Belge to issue bank notes for nominal values of 1 and 5 francs, a large emission of which was made on October 15, 1914.

The Metric System was introduced by law on August 17, 1910.

British Consul.—A. J. Wallach (at Boma).

There is a British Vice Consul at Elisabethville.

BHUTÁN.

A STATE in the Eastern Himalayas, between 26° 45' and 28° N latitude, and between 89° and 92° E longitude, bordered on the north and east by Tibet, on the west by the Tibetan district of Chumbí and by Sikkim, and on the south by British India. Extreme length from east to west 190 miles, extreme breadth 90 miles. Area about 20,000 square miles, population estimated at 250,000.

The original inhabitants of Bhutan, the Tephus, were subjugated about two centuries ago by a band of military colonists from Tibet. In 1774 the East India Company concluded a treaty with the ruler of Bhutan, but since then repeated outrages on British subjects committed by the Bhutan hill men have led from time to time to punitive measures, usually ending in the temporary or permanent annexation of various duars or submontane tracts with passes leading to the hills. In November 1864 the eleven western or Bengal duars were thus annexed. Under a treaty signed in November, 1865, the Bhutan Government was granted a subsidy of Rs. 50,000 a year on condition of good behaviour. By an amending treaty concluded in January, 1910, the British Government undertook to exercise no interference in the internal administration of Bhutan. On its part the Bhutanese Government agreed to be guided by the advice of the British Government in regard to its external relations. The treaty also provided for the increase of the subsidy to Rs. 1,00,000.

The form of Government in Bhutan, which existed from the middle of the sixteenth century until 1907, consisted of a dual control by the clergy and the laity as represented by Dharma and Deb Rájás. In 1907 the Deb Rája, who was also Dharma Rája, resigned his position, and the Tongsa Penlop, Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhutan.

Chief fortresses or castles. Punakhá, the winter capital, a place of great natural strength. Tásichozong (Tashichodrong), the summer capital, Paro, Angduphorang (Wangdupotang), Tongsa, Taka, and Biagha.

The people are nominally Buddhists, but their religious exercises consist chiefly in the propitiation of evil spirits and the recitation of sentences from the Tibetan Scriptures. Tásichozong (Tashichodrong), the chief monastery in Bhutan, contains 300 priests.

Beyond the guards for the defence of the various castles, there is nothing like a standing army.

The chief productions are rice, Indian corn, millet, lac, wax, different kinds of cloth, musk, ponies, chowries, and silk. The State is now beginning to realise the necessity of encouraging foreign capital for industrial enterprises such as mines, tea gardens, and the working of its extensive and valuable forests. Muzzle-loading guns and swords of highly-tempered steel are manufactured.

BOLIVIA

(REPÚBLICA BOLIVIANA)

Constitution and Government

THE Constitution of the Republic of Bolivia (so named in 1825) bears date October 28, 1880. By its provisions the executive power is vested in a President, elected for a term of four years by direct popular vote, and not eligible for re-election; there is a Congress of two chambers, called the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The suffrage is possessed by all who can read and write. There are 16 Senators (2 for each Department) elected for six years and 70 Deputies elected for four years. Both Senators and Deputies are elected by direct vote of the people. Of the Senators one third retire every two years, of the Deputies one half retire every two years. Senators receive a salary of 750 bolivianos (60*l*.) per month during the sittings, which, as a rule, last for 60 days, but may be extended to 90 days, and Deputies receive £3 for each day they attend. Extraordinary sessions may be held for special purposes. There are a President, two Vice-Presidents and a ministry, divided into six departments—of Foreign Relations and Worship, Finance, Government and Justice, Public Works and Industry, War and Colonisation, and Education and Agriculture.

The supreme political, administrative, and military authority in each department is vested in a prefect. The Republic is divided into 8 departments, 3 territories, 72 provinces, 681 cantons administered respectively by prefects, sub-prefects, and corregidores. Prefects and sub-prefects are appointed by the President of the Republic, corregidores and alcaldes are appointed annually by the prefects of the provinces. The capital of each department has its municipal council, the subdivisions have municipal boards, and the still smaller subdivisions have municipal agents. The territories in the north west of the Republic and in the Chaco and Oriente are governed by three officials, called delegados nacionales.

The following table shows area and population of the different political divisions (the capitals of each are given in brackets) —

Departments and Territories	Area square miles	Census 1900	Estimated 1915	Per square mile 1915
La Paz (La Paz)	40,686	445,616	726,357	9 60
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	25,288	328,163	534,901	19 83
Potosí (Potosí)	45,031	325,615	530,748	7 70
Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)	144,941	209,592	341,640	1 70
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	86,182	204,484	333,226	1 03
Tarija (Tarija)	81,567	102,887	164,704	1 68

The Indian population in 1900 was 920,864, or 50.9 per cent of the whole; the mixed was 486,018, or 26.7 per cent, the white was 231,088, or 12.7 per cent, the negro, 3,945, or 0.21 per cent, and the unclassified, 170,936, or 9.4 per cent. Of the population not under 7 years of age, 564,000 were engaged in agriculture, 399,037 in the industries, 55,521 in commerce, 49,647 in the liberal professions, 36,285 in domestic service, 12,625 in mining, and 3,106 in artistic professions. The foreign population numbered 7,425, of whom 2,072 were Peruvian. The admission and settlement of immigrants are facilitated under the regulations published in March, 1906.

The boundary disputes of Bolivia with Brazil and with Chile were settled by treaties of November, 1903 and October, 1904. That with Peru was settled by direct negotiations between Bolivia and Peru (1911-12), that with Paraguay, which has been the subject of long negotiations, is as yet without result.

The estimated population (1918) of La Paz (the actual seat of Government) is 107,252, Cochabamba, 31,014, Potosí, 29,795, Sucre (the capital), 29,636, Tarija, 11,644, Oruro, 31,360, Santa Cruz, 25,807, Trinidad, 6,096, Ríberalta, 3,200, Villa Montes, 1,000.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic is the recognised religion of the State, the exercise of other forms of worship is permitted. The religious orders have 17 convents (9 for males and 8 for females), the male members number about 230, the female 280, there are about 567 secular clergy. In 1900 the non-Catholic population numbered 24,245. The Church is under an archbishop (resident in Sucre) and 3 bishops (La Paz, Cochabamba, and Santa Cruz). The maintenance of the Church costs the State 121,108 bolivianos a year, 23,820 bolivianos being devoted to the propagation of the faith among the Indians. By a law of March 19, 1912, all marriages must be celebrated by the civil authorities.

Primary instruction, free and obligatory, is under the care of the municipalities and the State. In 1918 (including industrial, parish, and private schools) there were 450 elementary schools with 2,960 teachers and 54,192 pupils For secondary instruction there were 21 colleges (14 national), 5 clerical institutions, and 5 private lyceos with, in all, 180 teachers and 2,598 pupils. For superior instruction there are 19 establishments with 78 professors and 1,291 students. At Sucre and La Paz are the only two universities which possess more than one faculty, at both degrees may be obtained in law, medicine, and theology, at La Paz there is also a faculty of commerce. In some departmental capitals are schools of commerce, at La Paz the national conservatory, the school of applied arts, the military college, and the school of war for officers, the latter founded in 1917, at Cochabamba the school of arts and offices and another of commerce and of surveying land, at Potosí the institute of languages, at Oruro the national school of mining and engineering. At some places are rural schools for natives, and a normal college for training teachers of Indians at La Paz, and the superior normal institute for teachers in secondary schools. There is a normal school for training teachers generally at Sucre, and had 157 students in 1915. In all departmental capitals there are public libraries, at La Paz there is a museum, and at La Paz, Oruro and Potosí are mineralogical museums. The State spent 3,020,672 bolivianos in 1918 for educational purposes.

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court, in superior district courts, and in the courts of local justices. The Supreme Court sitting in the Capital of the Republic has 7 judges, the district courts (one in each department except El Beni, which has a 'Inez superior') have each 5 judges, local tribunals have judges of party, of instruction and parish alcaldes. Public justice is directed by an Attorney General and by district and local attorneys. The administration of justice is free.

Finance.

The revenue of Bolivia is derived mainly from customs duties, spirit duties, tin, silver, gold, wolfram, antimony and other minerals, rubber export, patents, and stamps. From Jan 1, 1912, onward, a tax of 3 per cent is imposed on the liquidated profits of all mineral enterprises the gross value of whose 'production and exportation' exceeds 8,000*l* yearly. The chief branches of expenditure are finance, war, and public works. The ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years (budget estimates) were as follows (12½ bolivianos = 1*l*) —

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914	1,840,000	1,840,000	1918	2,606,950	2,891,620
1915	1,358,864	1,716,315	1919	2,606,301	3,077,748
1916	1,282,760	1,805,867	1920	3,957,638	4,280,887

The public debt of Bolivia on June 30, 1919, amounted to 68,869,161 bolivianos, of which 38,933,525 bolivianos were external debt, 19,456,165 bolivianos internal debt, and 10,477,471 bolivianos floating debt. The foreign debt included the following items — Morgan loan outstanding, 378,730*l*, French loan of 1910, 1,354,840*l*, French loan of 1913, 946,280*l*.

Defence.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 3 military districts, the Northern, the Central, and the Southern, and 3 'military commands' formed of the departments Santa Cruz, El Beni, Tarija, and the Territories.

The law of December 15, 1915, provides for a permanent force of 3,577 men.

Military service is compulsory for all males from the 19th to the 50th year. The army is a militia, with a total service in the first line of 6 years, of which about 1 year is spent in the ranks. For the next 6 years (from the age of 25 to 30) the Bolivian soldier belongs to the 'ordinary reserve'. After this the men pass to the 'extraordinary reserve' for 10 years, and finally complete their service by 10 years in the Territorial Guard.

The permanent army consists of 4 infantry regiments, two of 500 men each, and two of 800 men, a cavalry regiment 500 strong, a mountain artillery regiment of 300 men, a field artillery regiment of the same strength one with 4 batteries of the Schneider Canet system, making a total of 4,187, including officers, officials and men.

In addition to the above troops there are small bodies of infantry of from 100 to 200 men (called columnas) at the chief towns of departments, which can be expanded to battalions, if necessary. There also exist other units, for garrisoning the North, the North West, the South West, and the East, consisting of 800 men each.

The infantry armament is the Mauser (Bolivian Model) rifle of 1898.

Production and Industry.

It is estimated that about 4,940,000 acres are under cultivation, but agriculture is in a backward condition. Irrigation by means of artesian wells is being attempted in some regions. Wheat, maize, barley, beans, potatoes, are produced mostly for local consumption, and coffee, coca, quina, &c., are exported to Chile and Argentina. Cocoa and coffee are grown on the slopes of La Paz and Cochabamba, coffee and other products are grown in El Beni and Santa Cruz. Rubber is produced on 40,642,000 acres in the National Territories, and in the Departments of El Beni and Santa Cruz, and parts of La Paz and Cochabamba. Bolivia ranks as the second rubber exporting country of South America, coming next to Brazil. The quantity exported in 1918 was 4,287 metric tons. The public lands of the State have an area of about 245,000 square miles, of which 104,000 square miles are reserved for special colonisation.

The mineral wealth of Bolivia includes silver, copper, tin, lead, zinc, antimony, bismuth, wolfram, gold, and borate of lime. Bolivia produces one quarter of the total tin output of the world, standing next to the Malay Peninsula in the production of this metal. Large deposits of common salt are found near Lake Poopó and in the South of Bolivia. In 1911 large tracts of land were taken up for the production of petroleum, especially near Calacoto, on the Arica La Paz railway. In the east of the Republic there is said to be a part of an immense oilfield, stretching from near the Orinoco to the Argentine Republic, portions of which are now being prospected.

Commerce.

Bolivia having no seaport, imports and exports pass chiefly through Arica, Mollendo, Antofagasta, and the river ports of Suarez on the Paraguay, Montes on the Iténez, Villa Bella on the Madera, and Bahía or Cobija on the Upper Acre. The Argentine route through Salta is now little used, the route now runs from La Quiraca, traversing the province of Tucumán and Rosario. The chief imports are provisions, hardware, wines, and spirits, cotton, woollen, linen and silk goods, and ready-made clothes. The chief exports are silver, tin, and rubber. There is scarcely any food export.

The value of imports and exports for five years are given as follows (12 5 bolivianos = 1 £) —

—	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	1,805,965	2,487,857	2,678,466	2,723,744	4,824,671
Exports	7,616,828	8,118,684	12,619,844	14,211,116	11,225,799

The values of imports (dutiable and duty free) are determined according to the appraisement in force, those of exports, by declarations of the exporters, based on current prices at the place and time Customs receipts in 1918 16,151,025 bolivianos

Of the exports the United Kingdom took 49 per cent in 1919, the United States 41 per cent, and the remaining 10 per cent was distributed between France, Chile, and other countries The United Kingdom took 70 per cent of the tin exports

—	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Bolivia to U K	1,129,751	2,382,749	3,596,887	3,442,491	1,931,203
Exports to Bolivia from U K	293,431	461,264	882,039	550,665	747,296

In July, 1912, a Commercial Treaty was ratified between Great Britain and Bolivia (Signed August, 1911)

Communications

In 1918 the total length of line open in Bolivia was 1,354 miles, including the new line, opened in July, 1917, from Oruro to Cochabamba Under construction 354 miles The principal line is the Antofagasta and Bolivian Railway, from Antofagasta, on the Pacific coast, to Ollague, thence to Oruro, thence to Viacha, thence to La Paz (735 miles) Under the Bolivian-Chilian treaty of October 24, 1904, the Arica-La Paz line (271 miles, of which 143 miles are in Bolivia) was built from La Paz via Litu with Taregra and to Corocoro The Bolivian section was handed over to the government of Bolivia on May 3, 1913 The Pan American Railroad follows the shore line of Lake Titicaca from Guaqui to Viacha, and thence to the Argentine border by way of Uyuni, Tupiza, and La Quiaca, a total distance in Bolivia of 529 miles, of which 361 are already in operation

Traffic on Lake Titicaca and on the Bolivian rivers is carried on by steamers, which belong to private owners

There are about 2,304 miles of cart roads connecting the more important towns

In Bolivia there were 427 post offices in 1919, number of pieces of mail handled, 6,649,967 The postal expenses amounted to 595,942 and the receipts to 280,593 bolivianos.

There are about 4,000 miles of telegraph lines All the departmental capitals are connected by telegraph There is telegraphic communication with foreign countries by the lines of the Central and South American Telegraph Company, the Southern railway telegraph lines of Peru, the West Coast of America Telegraph Company, and also by way of Tupiza and Buenos Aires. Wireless telegraphic stations are being erected at La Paz, Villa Bella, Cobiya, Trinidad, Santa Cruz, Puerto Suarez, Guayaramerin, Cachuela Esperanza. Cost of administration, 803,678 bolivianos, receipts, 363,585.

On January 1, 1916, Bolivia had 21,747 telephones.

Money, Weights, and Measures

The net earnings of the Banco de la Nacion (State bank) in 1919 were 2,944,749 bolivianos. After its fusion with the Industrial Bank, the capital of the National Bank is 17,631,225 bolivianos.

On September 14, 1906, a monetary law was passed providing for the adoption of a gold standard. The unit of account is the gold peso of one fifth of a pound sterling weighing 1.5976 grams, 916 fine, thus containing 1.464166 grams of fine gold. There are two gold coins struck, British and Peruvian pounds and half pounds, there is no Bolivian gold yet in circulation. Silver coins, 900 fine, are pieces of 50 and 20 centavos. Nickel coins, pieces of 10 and 5 centavos. Gold is legal tender to any amount and English and Peruvian gold coins of corresponding value have legal currency, the rate of exchange being fixed at 12.5 bolivianos = 1 £. Silver is legal tender up to 10 pesos, and nickel up to 1 peso. Silver and nickel coins are being minted. In 1909 silver coin to the value of 1,000,000 bolivianos (50 and 20 centavo pieces) were coined for Bolivia at Birmingham. There are also paper notes of 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 Bolivianos. By a new law the banknote issue is confided to the Banco de la Nacion Boliviana. The bank named is by the same law authorised to raise its capital to 4,000,000 £, and may issue notes up to 150 per cent of its capital. 30 per cent of the note issue must be covered in gold, and, after 1918, the percentage is to rise 2 per cent annually up to 50 per cent. On December 31, 1919, the notes in circulation of all the banks were to the value of 26,942,094 bolivianos, the gold reserve against this being 60.7 per cent of the total.

The metric system of weights and measures is used by the administration and prescribed by law, but the old Spanish system is also employed. The quintal is equal to 101½ lbs.

BRAZIL.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DO BRAZIL)

Constitution and Government

BRAZIL became a Portuguese settlement in 1500. On the French invasion of Portugal, in 1807, the Portuguese Royal family fled to Brazil, on December 16, 1815, the colony was declared 'a kingdom'. The Portuguese Court having returned to Europe in 1821, a national congress assembled at Rio de Janeiro, and on May 13, 1822, Dom Pedro, eldest surviving son of King João VI of Portugal, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil. He proclaimed the independence of the country on September 7, 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on October 12 following. In 1831 he abdicated the crown in favour of his only son, Dom Pedro II (born 1825, died 1891), who reigned as Emperor until November 15, 1889, when by a revolution he was dethroned, and he and his family exiled, and Brazil declared a Republic under the title of the United States of Brazil. The decree of banishment against the ex Imperial family was repealed on August 6, 1920.

According to the constitution adopted by the National Congress on February 24, 1891, the Brazilian nation is constituted as the United States of Brazil. At present the Union consists of twenty States, one National Territory (purchased in 1902), and one Federal District. Each of the old Provinces forms a State, administered at its own expense without interference from the Federal Government save for defence, for the maintenance of order, and for the execution of the Federal laws. Fiscal arrangements in such matters as import duties, stamps, rates of postage, and bank-note circulation belong to the Union, but export duties are the property of the various States.

The legislative authority is exercised by the National Congress with the sanction of the President of the Republic. Congress consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. It meets annually on the 3rd of May, without being convoked, unless another day be fixed by law, and sits four months, but may be prorogued or convoked extraordinarily. No member of Congress, after his election, can contract with the executive power or accept any commission or paid office, except such as are diplomatic or military or imposed by law. If, in ordinary circumstances, the acceptance of diplomatic or military office would cause the loss of the legislative services of a member, the permission of the Chamber is required. Nor can any member of Congress take part in the administration of any company which receives a subsidy from the Federal Government. Deputies and Senators are paid, and neither can be Ministers of State, and retain at the same time their seats in Congress. Deputies must have been Brazilian citizens for four years. Senators must be over thirty five years of age and must have been citizens for six years.

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 212 members elected for three years by direct vote (providing for the representation of the minority), in a proportion not greater than one to every 70,000 of population as shown by a decennial census, but so that no State will have less than four representatives. It has the initiative in legislation relating to taxation, and in proceedings against the President of the Republic and Secretaries of State

Senators, 63 in number, are chosen by direct vote, three for each State, and for the Federal district, for nine years, and the Senate is renewed to the extent of one third every three years. The Vice President of the Republic is President of the Senate.

The executive authority is exercised by the President of the Republic. He must be a native of Brazil, over thirty-five years of age. His term of office is four years, and he is not eligible for the succeeding term. The President and the Vice President are elected by the people directly, by an absolute majority of votes. The election is held on the 1st of March in the last year of each presidential period in accordance with forms prescribed by law. No candidate must be related by blood or marriage, in the first or second degree, to the actual president or vice president, or to either who has ceased to be so within six months.

The President appoints and dismisses ministers, is in supreme command of the army and navy, and, within certain limits, has the power to declare war and make peace. He (with the consent of Congress) appoints the members of the Supreme Federal Tribunal and the diplomatic ministers. No minister can appear in Congress, but must communicate by letter, or in conference with commissions of the Chambers. Ministers are not responsible to Congress or the Courts for advice given to the President of the Republic.

The franchise extends to all citizens not under twenty-one years of age, duly enrolled, except beggars, 'illiterates,' soldiers actually serving, and members of monastic orders, &c., under vows of obedience.

President of the Republic — Dr. Epitácio da Silva Pessoa, born in 1865, elected April 13, 1919. Term of office expires November 15, 1922.

Vice President — Francisco Alvaro Bueno de Paiva, born in 1862, elected July, 1920.

There are 7 Secretaries of State at the head of the following Departments —

1. Finance, 2. Justice, Interior and Public Instruction, 3. War, 4. Marine, 5. Foreign Affairs, 6. Communications and Public Works, 7. Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce.

I LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Each State must be organised under the republican form of government, and must have its administrative, legislative, and judicial authorities distinct and independent. The governors and members of the legislatures must be elective, the magistrates must not be elective nor removable from office save by judicial sentence. The Federal executive cannot intervene directly in the local government of the States. Each State is governed by its own Constitution and laws which must agree with the constitutional principles of the Union. In cases of the infringement of the principles of the Federal constitution by the constitutions, laws or authorities of any State, the Federal Government, after due process of Federal law, has the power to interfere even by force of arms, if necessary. The Federal District is administered by a council elected by the citizens of the District, the municipal executive authority being exercised by a Prefect appointed for four years by the President of the Republic. In 1912 there were in Brazil 1,233 municipalities, 705 townships (ciudades), 528 villages (villas), and 3,620 districts.

Area and Population.

Following are the census returns of 1900 and the preliminary returns of the census held in September, 1920 (capitals of States in brackets) —

In 1900 the population consisted of 8,831,002 males and 8,487,554 females. Some 600,000 Indians are to be found in the Amazon area.

The Acre Territory has an area of 58,672 sq miles. For this territory Brazil paid to Bolivia 2,000,000*l* in 1902. In 1909 the Territory petitioned to be received into the Brazilian Union as a State.

In 1913 the population of Rio de Janeiro was estimated at 975,818, (1,157,873 census 1920), São Paulo, 450,000 (504,300 in 1919), Bahia, 348,130, Pernambuco, 216,484, Belem, 275,167, Porto Alegre, 150,343, Manáos, 80,931, Niotheroy, 86,726, Fortaleza, 70,000, Maceió, 68,000, São Luiz, 57,709; Parahyba, 32,000.

The site for the Federal Capital has been selected in the State of Goyaz, on a table land between Pyrenopolis, Santa Luzia, and Formosa.

The number of immigrants between 1820 and 1919 was 3,576,275. The number of immigrants into Brazil from 1908 to 1919 was 1,015,873, of which 386,696 were Portuguese; 212,732 Spaniards; 165,709 Italians, 36,246 Germans, 10 498 French, 7,736 British, and 1,573 Belgians. In 1919 there were 5,701 immigrants.

A boundary treaty with Colombia was signed on April 24, 1907, with Peru on September 8, 1909, and with Uruguay on May 7, 1913.

Religion.

The connection between Church and State has been abolished, and absolute equality declared among all forms of religion. The Government left to the Church all religious buildings and their properties and income. All churches are perfectly free, religious orders are allowed and are prosperous. All but about 100,000 of the population are Catholics.

There is a Cardinal whose seat is at Rio de Janeiro and who acts as an Archbishop, an archbishop at Bahia, one at Rio de Janeiro, one at São Paulo, one at Pará, and one at Mariana (Minas). There are 25 suffragan bishops. For instruction of the clergy there are 13 seminaries.

Instruction.

Education is free but not compulsory, except in several municipalities in São Paulo, which insist on compulsory education (e g Ribeirão Preto). The Union Government undertakes to provide, in part, for higher or university instruction within the Union, but there are institutions of this nature maintained, some by the States, and some by private associations, while primary and training schools are maintained and supervised, either by the States or by the municipalities. There is one university in Brazil, the University of Rio de Janeiro, founded on September 7, 1920, and there are 25 faculties which confer degrees. In Rio de Janeiro are also the military college, the preparatory school of tactics, and the naval school. In Porto Alegre and Barbacena there are also preparatory military colleges. At the Capital are maintained by the Federal Government a school for the blind and another for the deaf and dumb. The Federal Government maintains also a School of Arts and a National Institute of Music in the Capital, there being similar academies of music in the States of Maranhão, Pará, São Paulo, and several in the State of Rio de Janeiro. In Manaus, Bahia, and Curitiba there are schools of Fine Arts. There are engineering polytechnics at Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, and Porto Alegre, and one mining school at Ouro Preto. There are, besides, 28 industrial schools, 11 agricultural and 9 commercial institutions for tuition. There are faculties of law at Recife, São Paulo, Ceará, Govaz, Pará, Bahia, Bello Horizonte, Porto Alegre, and Rio de Janeiro (2), faculties of medicine at Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, Curitiba, Bahia, and Porto Alegre, colleges of pharmacy at Ouro Preto, Belém, Juiz de Fora, Porto Alegre, and São Paulo, schools of odontology at Rio de Janeiro, Bello Horizonte, Porto Alegre and also attached to the colleges of medicine and pharmacy, engineering colleges at Rio, Ouro Preto, Bahia, Recife, Porto Alegre, and São Paulo, and since 1916 a school of Economics and Politics (Escola de Altos Estudos) in Rio de Janeiro.

There were in 1914 in the various States, 12,744 primary schools with 700,120 pupils and 20,590 teachers. Of the total number 85 were Federal government schools, 6,985 State Government schools, and 2,647 municipal schools. There were also 327 secondary schools with 30,258 pupils, and 151 professional schools with 19,294 pupils. For teachers' diplomas there are 29 colleges. In recent years public instruction has made great progress.

Brazil has many public libraries. The National Library in Rio contains more than 400,000 books and manuscripts. There is also a National Museum, an Academy of Fine Art, and a Botanical Garden.

Justice and Crime.

There is a supreme Federal court of Justice at Rio de Janeiro, and Federal judges in each State. Justice is administered in the States in accordance with State law, by State courts, but in Rio de Janeiro Federal Justice is administered. Judges are appointed for life. There are also municipal magistrates and justices of the peace, who are elected for four years, and whose chief function is to settle cases up to a certain amount.

A new Civil Code came into force on January 1, 1917. Among the most important subjects covered by the code are those referring to legal capacity, the registration of births, marriages, and deaths, juristic persons and organisations, domicile, real and personal property, homestead (a new institution in Brazilian law), legal acts, domestic relations, copyright (which was formerly very deficient), mortgages, contracts, wills and the administration of estates. Extensive commentaries are being prepared by eminent jurists on this important piece of legislation.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure (gold milreis=2s 3d, paper milreis = 1s 4d)
Import duties form the principal source of revenue

The consolidated foreign debt of Brazil on December 31, 1919, amounted to 103,292,034l. and 322,249,500 francs. The former sum is made up of the outstanding loans, as follows — loan of 1883 (4,590,600*l*), 2,713,100*l*, loan of 1888 (6,297,300*l*), 4,173,100*l*, loan of 1889 (19,837,500*l*), 17,466,800*l*, loan of 1895 (7,442,000*l*), 6,925,000*l*, funding loan of 1898 (8,613,717*l*), 8,605,937*l*, loan of 1901 (16,619,320*l*), 12,261,540*l*, loan of 1903 (8,500,000*l*), 7,698,000*l*, loan of 1908 (4,000,000*l*), 1,839,400*l*, loan of 1910 (10,000,000*l*), 9,767,500*l*, loan of 1911 (4,500,000*l*), 4,042,900*l*, Para railway loan, 1911 (2,400,000*l*), 2,400,000*l*, Braschan Lloyd, 1906-10 (2,100,000*l*), 1,210,500*l*, loan of 1913 (11,000,000*l*), 11,000,000*l*, funding loan of 1914 (13,785,756*l*), 13,785,756*l*. The consolidated internal debt amounted (December 31, 1919) to 1,042,250,600 milreis. The currency in circulation amounted to 1,729,061,000 milreis, the conversion fund to 20,922,410 milreis gold, the guarantee fund to 48,891,020 milreis gold, and unredeemed bills and notes to 14,632,500 milreis gold and paper. On December 31, 1919, the total currency was 1,749,974,000 milreis.

The internal and foreign debt of each of the States of Brazil for 1919 was as follows —

To this must be added the debts of the municipalities amounting to 11,229,573*l*. The total indebtedness of Brazil is thus 276,575,178*l*, made up as follows — Federal foreign debt, 116,169,571*l*, Federal internal debt, 60,803,785*l*, foreign debts of States, 61,201,540*l*, internal debts of States, 27,170,709*l*, debts of municipalities, 11,229,573*l*.

On July 24, 1912, a bill was introduced into the Senate, making it necessary for the States to obtain the Federal authorization before contracting any loans.

Defence.

Under the military law of January, 1908, reformed in 1915, military service is obligatory on every Brazilian from 21 years of age to 44. The terms of service are 9 years in the army 'first line' (1 or 2 in the ranks, the rest in the reserve), and 14 years in the 'army second line' (7 in the National Guard and 7 in the reserve of the same). The reservists are called up for training annually for 4 weeks, besides which there is rifle practice once a month. The men in the territorial army also have an annual training of 2 to 4 weeks. The army consists of 13 regiments of infantry each of 3 battalions, and 21 battalions of rifles, of 15 regiments of cavalry of 4 squadrons, 10 regiments of field artillery of 6 batteries each with 4 guns, 6 horse artillery batteries, 5 howitzer groups of 2 batteries, 6 mountain batteries, 5 battalions of engineers, 1 railway battery, 27 batteries coast artillery, 3 companies of independent infantry, and 10 companies of machine guns The country is divided into 7 military regions, the active army into 5 divisions, each of 2 brigades infantry, 1 brigade artillery, 1 regiment cavalry, 1 battalion engineers, 1 battalion transport, etc There are also 3 cavalry brigades, all stationed in the south near the frontiers of the three southern republics A cavalry brigade consists of from 2 to 3 regiments The total peace strength is at present 54,000 (3,627 officers) Mobilisation would yield about 120,000 The gendarmerie is 26,000 strong, capable of expansion to 130,000 Infantry are armed with the Mauser rifle, the field and horse artillery have a Krupp 12 pr, which is being replaced by French guns

There are 2 river monitors (Maranhão and Pernambuco), 4 river gun boats, 10 Yarrow destroyers, 1 first class torpedo boat, a mine layer, 3 sub marines, and a submarine salvage vessel Five destroyers and three large submarines are preparing Six ex German destroyers were allotted to Brazil to be disarmed and used for police purposes

There are three naval arsenals—at Rio de Janeiro, Pará, and Ladarno de Matto Grosso (this latter a river arsenal) The navy numbered in 1918, 693 officers, 1,009 petty officers, and 8,445 seamen

Production and Industry

Brazil is an agricultural country, though only a small fraction of its soil has been brought under culture Agricultural industries are encouraged by the State governments Coffee is the chief product cultivated, and after that sugar, tobacco, and cotton, mate (Paraguay tea), indiarubber, timber, cocoa, and nuts The four states of São Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo, and Minas Geraes, the combined areas of which cover about one-eighth of the entire area of the Republic, are the principal districts for coffee growing Four fifths of the coffee of the world comes from these parts, more than half of the world's supply from São Paulo alone The average annual crop of Brazil may be estimated at about 12 million sacks (1 sack = 132 pounds) For 1920 21 the estimated produce was 7,143,000 bags. Indiarubber is the other great natural product of the country About one half of the world's supply comes from Brazil, the principal rubber-growing districts being Ceara, Manaos, and Pará In 1917, the rubber crop was 41,500 tons (36,500 tons in 1916) In 1917 the production of cotton was 75,000 tons, and in 1919 it was estimated at 119,500 tons Cocoa is produced in many States (60,000 tons in 1918), but chiefly in Espírito Santo, and Bahia, where also the tobacco industry flourishes The annual production of tobacco is 50,000,000 kilos The average annual production of sugar may be taken as 300,000 tons (399,600 tons for 1919-20) In 1918 the production of maize was 5,000,000 metric tons

The census of cattle for 1917 showed that there were in Brazil 30,705,400 cattle, 18,400,530 swine 10,949,930 sheep, 10,048,570 goats, 7,289,690 horses, 3,207,940 mules On December 31, 1918, the estimated number of cattle was 37,500,000

Both the forests and mines of Brazil are important There has been a lumber development in the last few years, and pine has become an important export (152,000 metric tons in 1918) The mines, with certain reservations, belong to the proprietors of the soil Coal deposits exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catharina, Parana, and São Paulo, much of the coal being of inferior quality Gold is found, diamond districts are Diamantina, Grão Mogol, Chapada Diamantina, Bagagem, Goyaz, Matto Grosso, and other States Petroleum also exists in workable quantities Manganese ores are worked in Rio de Janeiro and Minas Geraes (export in 1917 532,855 metric tons) The greater part of the world's supply of monazite comes from Brazil Other mineral exports are mica and talc, copper ore, platinum, rock crystal, agate, but all of these are found in small quantities

The most important manufacturing industry in Brazil is cotton weaving, which in the past 25 years has developed to such an extent that all but the finer grades are made in this country, and the importation of cotton goods from Europe is decreasing There were in 1918 202 cotton factories with 1,500,722 spindles and 78,186 workmen, having a capital invested in them of 267,934 milreis, and an output valued at 261,183 milreis The manufacture of silk is also being encouraged, the Federal Government grants premiums to silk cocoon producers There are 2 silk mills at Petropolis near Rio There were 2,036 tobacco factories in Brazil in 1916 In Pernambuco there are 47 sugar factories, in Campos (Rio de Janeiro) 40, in Bahia 12, and in other parts of Brazil 15 In Rio de Janeiro flour milling is important, wheat being imported chiefly from the Argentine and Uruguayan Republics, but the imports of wheat flour are very large, mostly from the Argentine Republic and the United States Brewing, being protected, is prosperous Altogether there are 11,335 factories in Brazil, with a capital of 665,676,000 milreis, an annual output of 741,536,000 milreis, and 151,841 employees Efforts are being made to establish a fishing industry

In the southern States of Brazil there are prosperous German, Russian, and Italian colonies The colonies maintained by the Union are the nineteen following — Affonso Penna (founded in 1908), in the State of Espírito Santo, Visconde de Maua (1908) and Itataya (1908) in the State of Rio de Janeiro, João Pinheiro (1910) and Inconfidentes (1910) in that of Minas Geraes, Banderantes (1908) and Monção (1910) in that of São Paulo, Ivahy (1907), Tayo (1908), Iraty (1908), Vera Guarany (1909), Senador Correia (1907), Jesuino Marcondes (1907), Cruz Machado (1910), Apucarana (1912), and Yapo (1913), in Paraná, Anitapolis (1908), Senador Esteves Junior (1910) and Rio Branco (1913), in Santa Catharina On December 31, 1918, the population of the Federal Colonies was 37,535, including 3,172 Germans, 12,209 Brazilians, and 22,154 of other nationalities

Commerce.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1919 there entered the ports of Brazil 23,126 steam and sailing vessels of 17,954,320 tons, and cleared 23,170 steam and sailing vessels of 17,946,010 tons

The merchant navy in 1919 consisted of 588 steamers of 433,000 tons net, and 55 sailing vessels of 17,920 tons net. All coasting and river vessels must be Brazilian. The coast has a length of 4,106 miles. The Brazilian Lloyd, for coasting trade, maintains a monthly service between Rio de Janeiro and New York, and has also inaugurated a service between Liverpool, Portugal and Brazil.

Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 40,300 miles. By means of its waterways Brazil is connected with the neighbouring States.

Internal Communications.

Brazil possessed on March 31, 1919, railways of a total length of 18,708 miles open for traffic. Of this total 9,455 miles of railway were the property of the Union (3,980 miles are administered directly and the rest are farmed out), 6,231 miles were privately owned, and 1,527 miles belonged to the States. The individual States which possess the greatest railway mileage are São Paulo, with 4,157 miles, Minas Geraes with 4,046 miles, Rio de Janeiro and Federal District with 2,057 miles, Rio Grande do Sul with 1,708 miles, and Pernambuco with 1,300 miles. The Central Brazil Railway (1,563 miles) is the principal railway in Brazil, and is owned by the State. The entire system joins up the railways of Brazil with those of Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay.

The telegraph system of the country is under control of the Government. In 1919 there were 54,536 miles of line, including 26,100 miles of Government property, 17,159 miles of railway property and 11,267 miles of submarine cables. There were 850 telegraph offices. The number of messages was 5,850,606. Receipts in 1917, 864,917; expenditure, 963,363.

The Post Office carried (1917) a total of 31,577,090 letters, and 77,344,613 pieces of printed matter. Altogether the post office in 1917 despatched 4,586,187 sacks of mail, received 3,825,710, and handled in transit 2,754,987. There were 3,696 post-offices in 1920. Receipts in 1917, 12,800 contos, expenditure, 21,132 contos.

There were 56,760 telephones in the country in 1917, total length of wires, 252,318 miles in 1918. A wireless system is now in process of completion. Fifteen new stations were erected along the Amazon and Paraguay rivers, and 5 on the coast.

A decree was issued in 1918 adopting the standard time and longitude of Greenwich (instead of that of Rio de Janeiro) as from January 1, 1914.

Money and Credit.

The Caixa de Conversão was founded in 1906, and up to May, 1910, it received gold in exchange for notes at the rate of 1s 3d per milreis. It then suspended operations, having in deposit at that date 20,000,000l, the maximum fixed by law. On January 23, 1911, it recommenced operations, Congress having fixed the maximum deposit at 60,000,000l at the exchange of 1s 4d per milreis. On December 31, 1918, it had gold to the value of 20,922,410 milreis. On July 31, 1919, the paper money in circulation amounted to 1,720,083,318 milreis.

At the end of December, 1919, the activities of the banks of Brazil totalled at 8,109,558 milreis (end of 1918, 5,912,136 milreis).

Money, Weights, and Measures

MONEY

The unit is 1 real (pl reis), bronze coins, 20 and 40 reis (100 reis = 1gd), nickel coins, 100, 200, and 400 reis (400 reis = 6gd), silver, 500, 1,000, and 2,000 reis. The Milreis (1,000 Reis) is of the par value of 2s 2 934d (practically 27d). 1,000,000 reis is called A conto of reis.

The paper currency is of the following denominations: 1,000 reis, 2,000 reis, 5,000 reis, 10,000 reis, 20,000 reis, 50,000 reis, 100,000 reis, 200,000 reis, 500,000 reis, and 1,000,000 reis.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The French metric system, which became compulsory in 1872, was adopted in 1862, and has been used since in all official departments. But the ancient measures are still partly employed in certain rural districts of the interior. They are —

The Libra	=	1 012 lbs	avoirdupois
„ Arroba	=	32 38	„ „
„ Quintal	=	129 54	„ „
„ Alqueire (of Rio)	=	1	imperial bushel
„ Oitava	=	55 34	grains

BULGARIA.

(BLGARIYA)

Reigning King (Czar)

Boris III, eldest son of Ferdinand of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, and the late Marie Louise (died January 31, 1899), eldest daughter of Duke Robert of Parma, born January 30, 1894, succeeded to the throne on the abdication of his father, October 3, 1918

Brother and Sisters of the King—(1) Prince Cyril, born November 17, 1895, (2) Princess Eudoxia, born January 17, 1898, and (3) Princess Nadejda, born January 30, 1899

According to the Constitution the Sovereign must profess the Orthodox religion, and must reside permanently in the country The royal title is hereditary

The civil list is fixed at 1,250,000 leva (francs), besides 830,000 leva for the maintenance of palaces, &c

Constitution and Government.

The Principality of Bulgaria was created by the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878 It was ordered by the Treaty that Bulgaria should be constituted an autonomous and tributary Principality under the suzerainty of His Imperial Majesty the Sultan with a Christian Government and a national militia The Prince of Bulgaria should be freely elected by the population and confirmed by the Sublime Porte, with the consent of the Powers On October 5, 1908, Bulgaria declared her independence The difficulty as to compensation to the Turkish Government in respect of railway claims was arranged by an understanding between the Turkish Government and the Oriental Railways Company, and the Powers recognised Bulgarian independence, and the title of 'King of the Bulgarians' assumed by Prince Ferdinand

Eastern Rumelia (since its union with Bulgaria also known as Southern Bulgaria) was created by the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878 It was to remain under the direct political and military authority of the Sultan, under conditions of administrative autonomy, with a Governor-General nominated by the Porte On September 18, 1885, the Government was overthrown by a revolution, and the union of the province with Bulgaria proclaimed On April 6, 1886, the Sultan agreed that the government of Eastern Rumelia should be confided to the (then) Prince of Bulgaria as Governor General

On September 30, 1912, Bulgaria allied with Serbia, Greece and Montenegro commenced war on Turkey (First Balkan war), which was ended by the Treaty of London on May 30, 1913, by which Turkey ceded to the Allies all its European territory west of a line drawn from Midia on the Black Sea to Enos on the Aegean, and also Crete

The Balkan League broke up almost immediately after the signing of the Treaty of London, owing to disagreements among the allies as to the division of the territory ceded to them, and on June 29, 1913, war broke out among the allies (second Balkan War) On July 10, 1913, Rumania intervened to impose peace on the allies and to exact for herself from Bulgaria an extension of her frontier Peace came finally on August 10 (July 26 old style), 1913, by the Treaty of Bukarest, between Bulgaria on the one hand, and Rumania, Serbia, Greece and Montenegro on the other

For frontier arrangements agreed to by the Treaty of Bukarest and the Turko-Bulgarian Treaty, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1915, p. 759, and the maps in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1914

By the Constitution of 1879, amended May, 1893, and June, 1911, the legislative authority was vested in a single Chamber, called the Sobranye or National Assembly. The members of it are elected by universal manhood suffrage at the rate of one member to every 20,000 of the population. Every member receives 300 leva (about 25s) a day (including Sundays and holidays) during the session. All over 30 years of age who can read and write (except the clergy, soldiers on active service, persons deprived of civil rights, &c) are eligible as representatives. The duration of the Assembly is four years, but it may be dissolved at any time by the King, when new elections must take place within two months. Laws passed by the Sobranye require the assent of the King. Questions concerning the acquisition or cession of territory, changes in the constitution, a vacancy on the throne, or the appointment of a regent have to be decided by a Grand Sobranye, elected for the special purpose in a manner similar to that in which the ordinary Sobranye is elected, but with double the number of members. Proportional representation was adopted in 1909.

Parties in the Sobranye (elected March 31, 1920) —Agrarians, 112, Extreme Socialists, 50, Moderate Socialists, 9, Democrats, 29, Popular Party, 19, Radicals, 8, Progressives, 8, National Liberals, 1.

The executive power is vested in a Council of Ministers nominated by the King. The present cabinet, appointed October 14, 1919, and remodelled in April, 1920, is composed as follows —

Premier, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Minister of War —M Stambulski

Minister of the Interior —M Dimitroff

Minister of Justice —H Radoloff

Minister of Commerce —R Daskaloff

Minister of Finance —M Torlakoff

Minister of Public Works —Tz Bakaloff

Minister of Posts and Railways —N Athanasoff.

Minister of Education —M Martchevsky

Minister of Agriculture —M Oboff

For local administration the country is divided into a number of Departments, each under a Prefect assisted by a Departmental Council and aided by several sub prefects. Each community has its Kmet or mayor and its Council.

Area and Population.

The estimated area of Bulgaria (1920) is 42,000 English square miles, and the estimated population, 5,000,000. Of the new population (added after the treaty of Bukarest, 1913) 227,598 were Bulgarians, 75,337 Pomaks (Bulgarian Mahomedans), 275,498 Turks, and 58,709 Greeks, total, 637,142, but as about 273,000 in the Dobruja passed to Rumania the total gain was about 364,000. According to the Peace Treaty of Neuilly, signed on November 27, 1919, Bulgaria cedes Thrace to Greece and the Strumnitza line and a strip of territory on the north west frontier to Serbia. Bulgaria is deprived of its Aegean littoral, but an efficient economic outlet to the same sea is provided to her by the Treaty.

By a census taken on December 31, 1910, the population of the whole kingdom was ascertained to be 4,337,513 (2,206,685 males and 2,130,828 females), as against 4,035,575 (2,057,092 males and 1,978,483 females) in 1905. Bulgaria before 1913 was divided into 12 districts (including the 3 districts of Eastern Rumelia).

Area and population of districts, according to census of December 31, 1910

		Area	Popula- tion			Area	Popula- tion
		sq miles				sq miles
1	Burgas	5,409	351,500	8	Roussé (Ruschuk)	2,135	406,813

7	Pleven	1,851	365,868	Total (1912)		—	4,464,500

The population, divided according to nationality, was as follows in 1910 3,518,756 Bulgarians, 465,641 Turks, 79,429 Rumanians, 43,275 Greeks, 122,296 Gipsies, 40,133 Jews, 3,402 Germans, 2,505 Russians, and 62,076 of other nationalities. The present capital is the city of Sofia, with a population (census, 1910) of 102,812. The other principal towns with population in 1910, are Philippopolis 47,981, Ruschuk, 36,255, Varna, 41,419, Shumla, 22,225, Sliven (Sliven), 25,142, Pleвна (Pleven), 23,049.

The movement of population (the latest available) in the principality in four years has been

1912	24,734	184,705	1,375	91,278	93,427

Religion and Instruction.

The national faith is that of the Orthodox Greek Church, though, in 1870, in consequence of its demand for and acceptance of religious autonomy, the Bulgarian Church was declared by the Patriarch of Constantinople to be outside the Orthodox communion. The church is governed by the Synod of Bishops. There are 11 Eparchies or Bishoprics in addition to 4 in Macedonia and 1 in Thrace (suspended at present). The clergy, both Orthodox and of other religious bodies, are paid by the State and also receive fees for services at burials, marriages, &c. Of the population in 1910, 3,643,136 belonged to the Orthodox Church, 602,084 were Mahomedans, 40,070 were Jews, 32,149 were Catholics, 12,270 Gregorian Armenians, 6,254 Protestants. The Mahomedans are mostly in the northern and eastern provinces.

There is a university at Sofia, with four faculties—History and Philology, Physics and Mathematics, Medicine, Law, and Agriculture.

Elementary education is obligatory and free for children between the ages of 7 and 14.

The following are statistics of various classes of State schools in Bulgaria for 1918-19

Schools	Number	Male	Female	Attendance
				Male	Female
Elementary	3,592	4,172	5,896	271,205	203,037

Normal schools	437	1,828	2,367	82,216	44,789
Professional schools	78	551	156	7,551	4,221

There are besides three superior training colleges, with 19 instructors and an attendance of 98 males and 93 females, and an institute for abnormal children. There are also 1,199 private schools, with 1,671 male and 276 female instructors, and 35,948 male and 28,702 female pupils.

Private schools are supported by religious communities, societies, and by missionaries.

In 1910, of the population over 7 years of age, 42.6 per cent could neither read nor write, and in 1912, 3 per cent of the army recruits could neither read nor write.

Justice

The lowest Court is that of the Justices of the Peace, who possess jurisdiction in minor civil and criminal cases. The Departmental Court, or Court of First Instance, is competent to pronounce sentence of death and penal servitude, and also acts as a Court of Appeal. Above these are three Courts of Appeal, sitting at Sofia, Philippopolis and Ruschuk. The highest tribunal is the Court of Cassation, sitting at Sofia, and composed of 12 judges.

Finance

The estimated revenue and expenditure of Bulgaria for 6 years were as follows (25 leva = £1, the average rate during 1920 was about 280 levas) —

Defence.

Before the war (1914-18) service was universal and compulsory. Mahomedans were exempted (a privilege withdrawn during the war), but like all others exempted, paid a tax. Service in the ranks commenced at the age of 20, and was for 2 years in the infantry, and for 3 years in the other arms. Reserve service was for 18 years in the infantry, and 16 years in the other arms. The reservists were liable to be called out for 3 weeks training annually.

After completion of his reserve service, the Bulgarian soldier passed to the Opolchenie (Territorial Army), serving in the first ban for 4 years (infantry), or 5 years (all other arms). Finally the men of all arms passed for 2 years to the second ban, thus completing a total service of 26 years.

The pre war peace strength of the Bulgarian army was about 3,900 officers and 56,000 other ranks. Its war strength was approximately 500,000 men.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly of November 27, 1919, the total military forces of Bulgaria must not in the future exceed 20,000 men. All measures of mobilisation are prohibited and in order to prevent the formation of a reserve, service in the ranks is to be for a minimum period of 12 years. Officers serving at the time when the treaty was signed must undertake to serve at least till the age of 40 and newly appointed officers serve for at least 20 years.

A frontier guard of 3,000 men voluntarily enlisted is permitted, and in addition the number of armed gendarmes, police, customs officials and forest guards must not exceed 10,000.

The maximum authorised armaments and munition supplies are —

	Per 1000 men	Munitions per arm
Rifles or carbines	1,150	500 rounds
Machine guns	15	10,000 „
Trench mortars, light	2	1,000 „
„ „ heavy	2	500 „
Guns or howitzers	3	1,000 „

No military or naval aircraft are permitted.

The manufacture of arms, munitions and war material is only to be carried out at one factory under State control. The importation and exportation of arms, and munitions is prohibited.

Bulgaria is required to surrender all warships and submarines, but is permitted to maintain on the Danube and along her coast 4 torpedo boats and 6 motor boats, all without torpedoes and torpedo apparatus, for police and fishing duties.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people. Land is held in absolute freehold by the owners and there is a land tax. The communes hold pasture-land and wood-land in perpetuity and pay no rent, and over such lands the members of the communes have grazing and wood-cutting rights.

About five-sevenths of the population are engaged in agriculture, most of them being small proprietors holding from one to six acres. The methods of cultivation are primitive, but machinery is being gradually introduced.

The total area of Bulgaria is approximately 22,289,000 acres, 6,894,090 acres, or 31 per cent, of which are cultivated, and 4,892,580 acres, or 22 per cent, uncultivated, the remainder being forest land

The area and yield of cereals in 1919 is given as follows —

Cereals	Area under cultivation	Crop	Cereals	Area under cultivation	Crop
	Acres	Tons		Acres	Tons
Wheat	2,080,000	926,112	Millet	33,170	13,847
Rye	450,000	164,860	Maize	1,376,903	985,296
Meslin	273,000	94,541	Rice	43,600	2,396
Barley	475,000	225,809	Buckwheat	65	45
Oats	305,000	107,226
Spelt	17,800	7,523	Total	5,204,535	2,527,655

Fruit grows in abundance, especially in the neighbourhood of Kustendil, 100,945 acres are under vines, under tobacco were 63,000 acres, yielding 42,000,000 pounds. There is considerable silkworm culture, in 1919 416,000 pounds of cocoons were exported, valued at 680,000l.

In 1917 there were in Bulgaria 7,340,904 sheep, 924,554 goats, 1,885,620 head of cattle and buffaloes.

Mining development has been slow. Besides the coal mines at Pernik, worked by the Government, coal of good quality has also been found in Balkans near Trevna, and several working concessions have been granted. Coal production in 1919, 18,141 tons, valued at 43,450l, lignite, 523,145 tons. About 1,000,000 cubic metres of stone (mainly lime stone and marble, are quarried annually. Iron is found in large quantities, gold, silver, lead, manganese, and copper also exist in the country. The chief manufactures are flour (about 1,800 000l annually, 40 per cent sold abroad), woollen goods, cottons, cord, and cigarettes. There are 388 State-encouraged industrial institutions. Machinery is being gradually introduced.

CHILE.

(REPÚBLICA DE CHILE )

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Crown of Spain by the declaration of independence of September 18, 1810, finally freeing itself from Spanish rule in 1818. The Constitution voted by the representatives of the nation on May 25, 1833, with a few subsequent amendments, establishes three powers in the State—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. The legislative power is vested in the National Congress, consisting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The Senate is composed of 37 members popularly elected by provinces for the term of six years, in the proportion of one Senator for every three Deputies, while the Chamber of Deputies composed of 118 members chosen directly by departments for a period of three years, consists of one representative for every 30,000 of the population, or a fraction not less than 15,000, the present number of deputies was determined in 1910 on the basis of the census results of 1907. Both bodies are chosen by the same electors. Electors must be 21 years of age, and able to read and write. The executive is exercised by the President of the Republic elected for a term of five years, by indirect vote, the people nominating, by ballot, delegates who appoint the President. A retiring President is not re-eligible. In legislation the President has a modified veto, a bill returned to the chambers with the President's objections may, by a two thirds vote of the members present (a majority of the members being present), be sustained and become law. The day of a Presidential election is June 25 of the last of the five years of a Presidency.

The President is assisted in his executive functions by a Council of State of five members nominated by the President, and six members chosen by the Congress, and a Cabinet or Ministry divided into six departments, viz, Interior, Foreign Affairs, Justice and Public Instruction, Finance, Defence, Industry, Public Works and Railways.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

For the purposes of local government the Republic is divided into Provinces, presided over by Intendentes, and the Provinces into Departments, with Gobernadores as chief officers. The Departments constitute one or more municipal districts each with a council or municipality of 9 members, inhabitants popularly elected for three years. The police of Santiago and of the capitals of departments is organised and regulated by the President of the Republic at the charge of the national treasury.

Area and Population.

The Republic is divided into 23 provinces, subdivided into 82 departments, and 1 territory (Magallanes). Departments and territories are subdivided into 905 sub-delegations and 3,229 districts.

In 1884 the provinces of Tarapacá and Tacna were ceded to Chile by Peru. The cession of Tacna was originally for ten years, at the end of which period a plébiscite of the province would decide to which country it should belong. As the plébiscite has not yet been taken, the provinces are still occupied by Chile.

Area and population of the provinces on January 1, 1919 —

Many islands to the north, west, and south belong to Chile. The coast line is about 2,485 miles in length.

In 1885 the population numbered 2,527,320, in 1895, 2,712,145. In 1907 (last census), 3,249,279 (1,624,221 males and 1,625,058 females).

The estimated population of the principal towns in 1919 was — Santiago, 424,993, Valparaíso, 218,465, Concepción, 74,808, Iquique, 47,677, Talca, 43,044, Chillán, 40,278, Antofagasta, 69,175, Viña del Mar, 35,320, Curicó, 23,707, Temuco, 33,860, La Serena, 16,191, Talcahuano, 24,857, Valdivia, 27,513. The great majority of the population is of European origin. The indigenous inhabitants are of three branches, the Fuegians, mostly nomadic, living in or near Tierra del Fuego, the Araucans (101,118) in the valleys or on the western slopes of the Andes, the Changos, who inhabit the northern coast region and work as labourers.

Births, marriages, and deaths, exclusive of still births —

Year	Total Births	Illegitimate Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births

1919	144,980	55,706	21,471	137,538	7,442

Illegitimate births in 1919 were 384, and legitimate births 616 per thousand of the population. Immigration is small, but is encouraged by the Government.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic religion is maintained by the State, but according to the Constitution all religions are respected and protected. There is one archbishop (Santiago), three bishops, and four vicars apostolic. There were in 1919, 349 parishes in the Republic, 664 churches, and 729 chapels.

Instruction.

Education is gratuitous and at the cost of the State, and since August 26, 1920, compulsory. At the 1907 census, 40 per cent of the population were illiterate. Professional and secondary instruction is provided in the Universities (one belonging to the State, The University of Chile, the other The Catholic University) and the National Institute of Santiago, and in the lyceums and colleges established in the capitals of provinces, and in some departments. In the State University the branches included are theology, law, and political science, medicine and pharmacy, physical and mathematical sciences, philosophy, literature, and the fine arts. In 1919, in the State University there were 4,138 matriculated students and 358 teachers. In 1919, the Catholic University had 551 students. An Industrial University was opened at Valparaiso (Universidad Industrial de Valparaiso), and another at Concepcion (University of Concepcion) in 1920. There were in 1919, 3,061 public primary schools with 320,898 pupils, and 7,038 teachers, and 293 private primary schools with 1,012 teachers and 41,143 pupils, 15 public normal schools with 1,955 pupils and 409 teachers, 90 public and 136 private secondary schools with 32,598 and 22,295 pupils respectively, 11 public commercial schools with 179 teachers and 2,974 pupils. There are besides agricultural schools, schools of mines, and professional schools. Other educational institutions are the Paedagogic Institute, the National Conservatory of Music, the National Observatory School of Arts and Trades, Institute for Deaf Mutes, School for the Blind, and public museums. The cost of maintaining the public primary schools in 1919 was 715,138 $\frac{1}{2}$ , that of the national normal schools, 98,075 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and that of the Government secondary schools, 357,496 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The National Library contains 286,330 volumes.

There were in 1919, 740 newspapers and journals published in Chile, including 97 dailies and 260 weeklies.

Justice, Crime, Pauperism

There are, in addition to a High Court of Justice in the capital, seven Courts of Appeal distributed over the Republic, Tribunals of First Instance in the departmental capitals, and subordinate courts in the districts. On January 1, 1919, there were 2 central prisons with 1,169 inmates (all men), 20 penitentiaries with 780 (757 men and 23 women), 82 prisons, and 18 houses of correction for women with 7,098 inmates, and 3 reformatory schools, with 344 inmates (197 boys and 147 girls).

The police number 10,386 (854 officers).

At 110 hospitals in Chile in 1918 there were admitted 121,952 patients, there are also 2 lunatic asylums with 3,563 inmates.

Finance

In recent years the revenue and expenditure (ordinary and extraordinary) were as follows —

Defence.

The Chilean Army is a national militia in which all able bodied citizens are obliged to serve. Liability extends from the 18th to the 45th year, inclusive. Recruits are called up in their 20th year, and are trained for one year. Afterwards they serve for 9 years in the reserve of the active army, after which they belong till the completion of their 45th year to the second reserve. The latter is organised as a second-line army.

Chile is divided into 4 zones or military districts, each of which furnishes a complete division on mobilisation. There are 49 battalions of infantry, 1 regiment of railway workers, 1 battalion of telegraphers, 8 regiments of cavalry, 2 batteries of horse artillery, 32 batteries of field artillery, 8 batteries of mountain artillery, 2 battalions of fortress artillery, 8 battalions of engineers and 1 company for aerial service. The total strength of the active army in 1920 was 1,996 officers and 21,180 men.

The infantry are armed with the Chilean Mauser rifle (1895), calibre 7 mm, and the cavalry with a carbine of similar pattern and lance. The field artillery are armed with Q F Krupp guns.

In December, 1918, an Air Force was formed under British instruction, with a nucleus of 14 seaplanes and 80 aeroplanes purchased in Great Britain. Military budget for 1920 was 3,115,000.

The principal vessels of the Chilean fleet are as follows —

The Almirante Latorre served in the British Fleet during the war as the Canada. She has now been handed over to Chile, for which State she was constructed. Three powerful destroyers built for Chile, which were taken over for the British service, have also been incorporated in the Chilean navy. They were constructed at Cowes in 1914, 1,700 tons, 31 5 knots, 4 tubes, 2 4 7 in. and three smaller guns. Six submarines, H1 to H6 (450–520 tons, 800 h p., 15–18 knots, length 150 feet), were transferred from the British to the Chilean Navy in 1917.

Chile had (1919) 1 battleship, 4 cruisers, 2 armoured cruisers, 2 training ships, 2 gunboats, 9 destroyers, 5 old torpedo boats, and 6 submarines, also 2 transports and 8 modern patrol vessels. Personnel, 5,240 (306 officers).

Agriculture and Industry.

There are three zones in Chile—the arid zone in the north, the agricultural zone in the centre, and the forest zone in the south. Agriculture and mining are the principal occupations. Total area of agricultural land is 42,183,663 acres; of forest area, 9,495,483 acres, of fruit trees, 276,704 acres; of meadows, 18,393,252 acres. Number of farms in 1919, 96,794. Chile produces annually large quantities of cereals, besides excellent wine, fruit, and vegetables The principal crops of the harvest for 3 years are shown as follows —

For 1919-20 production (in tons) was given as follows — Wheat, 552,652, rye, 877, barley, 88,825, oats, 35,986, maize, 42,895, beans, 60,218, peas, 1,038

On December 31, 1919, the live stock of Chile comprised 391,718 horses, 36,439 asses, 51,411 mules, 2,163,141 cattle, 4,500,196 sheep, 459,606 goats, 42,019 alpacas, and 292,431 pigs

Dairy farms and the production of butter and cheese are on the increase In Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego large tracts of country are devoted to sheep-farming Extensive natural forests are found, the largest being found in the provinces of Valdivia (1,885,406 acres), Llanquihue (1,406,024 acres), and Chiloé (1,188,572 acres) The wealth of the country, however, consists chiefly in its minerals, especially in the northern provinces of Atacama and Tarapacá

The metals obtained were gold, silver, copper (Chile is the world's second largest producer of copper), cobalt, and manganese, the non metallic substances being coal, nitrate, borate, salt, sulphur, and guano Iron-ore deposits are found in the provinces of Atacama and of Coquimbo, estimated at over 1,000,000,000 tons All the coal mines of Chile are situated south of Valparaíso Production in 1918, 1,516,524 tons

Nitrate of soda, or 'salitre,' is not only Chile's most important article of export but the chief source of governmental revenue derived from export taxes It is found in the section of the desert of Atacama, known locally as the 'pampa salitrera,' a territory comprising an area of some 500 miles in length, lying between latitude 15° and 26° south, and situated at an elevation above sea level of from 2,000 to 6,000 feet This zone is divided into districts known as the pampas of Tarapacá, Tocopilla, Antofagasta, Aguas Blancas, and Taltal respectively Production and exportation of nitrate in recent years are stated as follows —

Years	Production	Exported	Years	Production	Exported
	Metric tons	Metric tons		Metric tons	Metric tons
1910	2,465,415	2,335,941	1918	2,869,303	2,919,177

Shipping and Navigation

The commercial navy of Chile consisted, in 1919, of 103 steamers of 45,283 tons net and 26 sailing vessels of 17,081 tons net. The shipping entered and cleared at the ports of Chile in 1918 was as follows — Entered, 12,954 vessels of 10,849,942 tons, cleared, 12,799 vessels of 10,447,146 tons. Of the total entered, 1093 steamers of 2,900,156 tons, and of those that cleared, 1,038 of 2,582,810 tons, were British.

Communications.

In 1919 there were in Chile 22,000 miles of public road, and 850 miles of navigable river, and 497 miles of navigable lakes.

The Longitudinal Railway of Chile, traversing the Republic from north to south over a distance of 2,854 miles, is (1919) a government owned line, embracing with its spurs and the Arica to La Paz Railway (271 miles) an extent of 3,125 miles. There are also 2,270 miles of privately owned lines, making a total of 5,395 miles.

The 953 post-offices in 1919 dispatched 96,493,096 postal packets, of which 4,107,666 were sent abroad. These included 2,027,777 letters for abroad, 30,904,074 home letters, and 1,267,313 parcels for abroad, and 962,300 home parcels.

The length of telegraph lines at the end of 1919 was 15,830 miles of line (9,859 miles of Government line) and 18,550 miles of wire (Government telegraphs alone). In 1919 there were 588 telegraph offices, 14,866,960 messages were sent. The length of telephone line was 40,138 miles, and of wire 71,400 miles (1919). Number of subscribers, 23,720.

Work has progressed on the several wireless stations now under construction along this coast, which with those now completed will form a chain composed of Arica, Antofagasta, Coquimbo, Valparaíso, Talcahuano, Valdivia, Puerto Montt, and Punta Arenas. A wireless station is also being erected on the Juan Fernandez Islands, about 400 miles west and south of Valparaíso. Total number of stations in 1919, 32.

Money and Credit.

In 1912 a law was promulgated establishing a Bank of Issue (Caja de Emisión). By means of this the banks can issue certain quantities of paper money in exchange for an equivalent gold deposit, at the rate of 12d per peso at first and 18d per peso subsequently.

There are a number of joint-stock banks of issue with agencies in Chile. Their joint capital amounted on December 31, 1919, to 220,078,466 paper pesos and 8,458,996 gold pesos, and their reserve funds to 82,218,240 paper pesos and 9,860,310 gold pesos. The largest of the banks is the Bank of Chile with a paid up capital of 60,000,000 pesos. The banks are required to guarantee their note issue by depositing gold, Government notes, or securities in the Treasury. There are also land banks which issue scrip payable to bearer and bearing interest, and lend money secured as a first charge on landed property and repayable at fixed periods. Two institutions specialise in savings accounts, the National Savings Bank of Chile, and the Savings

Bank of Santiago At the National Savings Bank of Chile (Caja Nacional de Ahorros) the number of deposit accounts on May 31, 1920, was 641,629 and the deposits amounted to 141,174,373 pesos. At the Savings Bank of Santiago there were 298,701 deposit accounts, and the deposits amounted to 51,899,009 pesos.

The currency is mostly paper, the time fixed for the conversion of legal tender paper money was deferred till December 31, 1921. On December 31, 1919, the conversion funds in hand amounted to 114,110,600 gold pesos, made up as follows —In England, 47,305,062 pesos, and Chilean gold in bars to the value of 66,805,533 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

According to the Act of 1895, the coinage of Chile is as follows —Gold coins are 20, 10, 5 peso pieces, called respectively Condor, Doblon, and Escudo. The 10 peso gold piece weighs 5.99103 grammes, 916 fine and therefore contains 5.49178 grammes of fine gold. Silver coins are the peso, weighing 9 grammes, 0.720 fine, and the fifth, tenth, and twentieth of a peso. Bronze coins (95 of copper to 4 of tin and 1 of zinc) are the centavo and 2½, 2-, and ½-centavo pieces. The monetary unit is the twentieth part of a condor or the (uncoined) gold peso, of the value of 1s 6d. Its use is obligatory in transactions with the Customs Department of the Government, it serves, too, as the basis of perhaps the larger half of the trade in imported merchandise, though the actual gold coin is not in these cases usually tendered. Coins minted in 1917 —15,058,200 pesos gold, and 3,033,327 pesos silver (No later mintage). A forced paper currency is in general use, the paper peso varying considerably in relative value, and representing (1919) about 10.622d. Total paper money issued and in circulation on December 31, 1920, 302,821,919 pesos.

The metric system has been legally established in Chile since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent.

On August 31, 1918, Greenwich time was adopted in Chile in place of Chilean time.

CHINA

(CHUNG HUA MIN KUO.)

Government

On February 12, 1912, China, the oldest of Monarchies, became a Republic. The Chinese Imperial family was of Manchu origin, dating from 1644, and was styled Ta Ch'ing Ch'ao ('Great Pure Dynasty'). The last Emperor, P'u-yi, was the tenth of the line, but the official genealogy is carried back six generations earlier than the real founder, and P'u-yi's will be the sixteenth name in the canonized series of Ta Ch'ing Emperors. He was born on February 11, 1906, succeeded his uncle the Emperor Kuang Hsu on November 14, 1908, and abdicated on February 12, 1912. He retains the title of Manchu Emperor, but with his death the title will cease. For account of the Revolution of 1911, see STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1912, pp. 699-701, and for later developments, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1919, pp. 740-41.

The Government is composed of a President, a Vice-President, and a bi-cameral legislature consisting of a Senate (Tsan Yi Yuan) of 264 members and a House of Representatives (Chung Yi Yuan) of 596 members.

But the Central Government is still unable to rule the country completely. As a matter of fact, powerful military governors (Tuchuns) have established themselves in several provinces and are practically independent of the Government in Peking.

President—Hsu Shih Ch'ang, born in Honan, 1853, elected President, August 10, 1918. Inaugurated October 10, 1918.

Executive authority is provisionally vested in a Premier nominated by the President and a Cabinet of nine Ministers nominated by the Premier. All appointments require the sanction of both Houses of Parliament.

The Cabinet, reorganised on August 11, 1920, is composed as follows—

Premier—Chin Yun Peng

Minister of the Interior—Chang Chih t'an

Minister of Foreign Affairs—W. W. Yen

Minister for War—Chin Yun P'êng

Minister of the Navy—Sa Chen Ping

Minister of Finance—Chow Tse-ch'i

Minister of Education—Fan Yuan hien

Minister of Justice—Tung K'ang

Minister of Communications—Yeh Kung-cho

Minister of Agriculture and Commerce—Wang Nai ping

A number of Foreign Advisers have been appointed to the Government. There are also many foreigners in the government employ in the various departments.

The Republic has adopted a new flag on which the old yellow dragon has been replaced by five stripes—crimson, yellow, blue, white and black—to denote the five races comprised in the Chinese people, Mongol, Chinese, Manchu, Turki (Mohammedan natives of Chinese Turkestan), and Tibetan.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Under the monarchy each of the 22 provinces was ruled by a Viceroy placed over one, two, or three provinces, or by a Governor over a single province, either under a Viceroy or depending directly on the central government. There were thus 9 Viceroys and 3 Governors equal in rank to Viceroys. Each Viceroy or Governor was assisted by various other high officials. Each province was subdivided into prefectures ruled by prefects and each prefecture into districts, each with a district magistrate. Two or more prefectures were united into a tao, or circuit, the official at the head of which being called a Taotai. Each town and village had also its unofficial governing body of 'gentry'. An Edict of July 22, 1908, instituted Provincial Assemblies, and the first meetings were held on October 14, 1909. The reforms of the late dynasty also instituted representative legislative assemblies in districts, towns and villages.

At the beginning of the Republic many of the Provinces under the rule of their Military Governors or Tutuhs, who in nearly every instance was a native of the province, were fast slipping from the control of the Central Government. Time, and the collapse of the rebellion in 1913, enabled Peking to regain and strengthen its authority. The President, on May 23, 1913, issued mandates fixing and promulgating the official systems of Province, Circuit, and District. In each Province there was to be a supreme Civil Governor appointed by the President, and controlling both the civil officials of the whole Province, as well as the police and militia. Thus an attempt was made to bring the whole provincial and local administration under control, and to make it responsible directly or indirectly to the Central Government. During the last few years the struggle between the "North" and the "South" again resulted in the loosening of all central control, but since the promulgation of the Unification Mandate on October 30, 1920, the country is gradually being reunited.

Area and Population.

The following table gives a statement of the area and population of the Chinese Republic according to figures published in the Government Gazette, February 27, 1911. In 1912, Mr. Rockhill, formerly American Minister at Peking—a recognised authority—after careful inquiry, came to the conclusion that "this document, though showing complete ignorance of the methods now nearly universally followed in vital statistical reports, throws considerable light on the question of China's population, and seems entitled to more confidence than the enumerations which have heretofore appeared." He believed that the population of China, Manchuria and Chinese Turkestan, i.e., the Chinese Republic exclusive of Tibet and Mongolia, appeared to be in round numbers 325,000,000, new information having confirmed the opinion reached by him in former studies of the same subject that the population of China "is much smaller than we have been led to believe, and that in the last century it has been increasing very slowly if at all."

The Island of Formosa was ceded to Japan in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Shimonoseki ratified and exchanged at Chefoo on the 8th of May, 1895. The formal transfer of the Island was effected on the 2nd of June, 1895.

In November, 1897, the Germans seized the coast of Kiaochow Bay in Shantung, and in March, 1898, compelled China to execute a 99 years' lease of the territory on both sides of the Bay together with a grant of railway, mining and other rights generally referred to as Germany's 'economic privileges' in Shantung. On the outbreak of war Japan delivered an ultimatum to Germany demanding the surrender of the leased territory of Kiaochow 'with a view to eventual restoration of the same to China.' Germany ignored this demand and Kiaochow was invaded by Japanese and British forces, and after a feeble resistance the German forces garrisoning the port of Tsingtao, which lies within the leased territory, capitulated on November 7, 1914. The Japanese assumed possession of all administrative authority previously exercised by the Germans in the leased territory, and, in spite of Chinese protest, seized the railway line connecting Tsingtao with Tsinan, the capital of the Province, guarded it with Japanese troops, and extended their authority to certain Chinese cities lying outside the leased territory. At the Peace Conference, Japan claimed to retain possession of the leased territory of Kiaochow and to succeed to all Germany's economic privileges in Shantung on the ground of conquest, whereas China asked the Conference for a settlement which would secure her the direct restitution of the leased territory and the cancellation of Germany's economic privileges. Japan, however, obtained recognition of her claim in Articles 156-5 of the Treaty of Versailles China has not signed this Treaty Chinese opposition is being expressed in a serious boycott of the Japanese On January 19, 1920, Japan declared her willingness to negotiate with China on the question But popular feeling in China was strongly opposed to this course owing to mistrust of Japan, and Peking refused on May 22, 1920, so to negotiate with Tokyo, preferring to refer the question to the League of Nations, or a conference of the Powers including the United States of America.

By agreement with the Chinese Government, dated March 27, 1898, Russia took possession of Port Arthur and Talienwan and their adjacent territories and waters, on lease for the term of 25 years, with option of extension by mutual agreement In 1900, in consequence of the 'Boxer' uprising, Russia occupied Manchuria Japan, after long and unsuccessful efforts to induce Russia to withdraw, broke off diplomatic relations, and on February 8, 1904, commenced hostilities The war, in the course of which Japan proved victorious both on land and at sea, was brought to an end by the Treaty of Portsmouth signed September 5, 1905 Under this Treaty Russia and Japan agreed to evacuate Manchuria, except the territory affected by the lease of Kwantung (or the Liao tung Peninsula), where Japan succeeds to the leasehold and other rights of Russia The exclusive administration of Manchuria (with the exception mentioned) was to be restored to China By treaty of December 22, 1905, China agreed to the transfer to Japan from Russia of the lease of the Liao tung Peninsula and the control of the railway from Port Arthur to Ch'ang chun (Kwan ch'engtzu), and conceded to Japan the right to construct a railway from Antung to Mukden, and agreed to open 16 Manchurian ports and cities to foreign commerce For the Japanese demands on China, made on January 18, 1915, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1920, p 738

In July, 1910, a convention was signed between Russia and Japan agreeing to co operate to maintain the 'status quo' in Manchuria in accordance with the treaties and conventions already made For such period as Russia should hold Port Arthur, Great Britain was, by agreement with China, April 2, 1898, to hold Wei Hai Wei in the province of Shan tung For defensive purposes Great Britain on June 9, 1898, obtained a 99 years' lease of territory on the mainland opposite the island of Hong Kong

The Chinese Government granted to the French in April, 1898, a 99 years' lease of the Bay of Kuang Chau Wan, on the coast of the peninsula, between Hong Kong and the Island of Hainan, and in November, 1899, the possession of the two islands commanding the entrance of the bay This territory has been placed under the authority of the Governor General of French Indo-China

Peking, the capital of China, has now a population of over one million, including about two thousand foreigners The population of the principal Chinese ports is given as follows for 1918 —Aigun, 18,546, Sansing, 15,465, Harbin, 28,600, Antung, 51,834; Dairen, 54,715, Newchwang, 58,061, Chinwangtao, 5,000, Tientsin, 800,000, Chefoo, 54,450, Taingtau, 50,175, Chungking, 437,600, Wanhsein, 70,000, Chang sha, 535,800, Ichang, 55,000, Shasi, 105,000, Hankow, 1,443,950, Kiukiang, 36,000, Wuhu, 99,584, Nanking, 376,291, Chinkiang, 168,309, Shanghai, 1,000,000, Soochow, 500,000, Hangchow, 684,137, Ningpo, 670,000; Wenchow, 212,699, Santuao, 8,000, Foochow, 624,000, Amoy, 114,000, Swatow, 85,000; Canton, 900,000, Kongmoon, 70,000, Samahui, 6,000, Kiungchow, 58,527, Pakhoi, 20,000, Wuchow, 40,000; Nanning, 50,000, Lungchow, 13,000, Mengtsz, 10,000, Szemao, 15,000, Tengyueh, 10,000.

According to the estimate of the Customs authorities, in 1919 the total number of foreigners resident in China was 350,991, made up as follows —

Austrian	27	German	1,335	Russian	148,170
Belgian	391	Hungarian	11	Spanish	272

Dutch	367	Norwegian	249
					Total

There are now 19 Treaty Powers in China, as follows Russia (1859), Great Britain (1842), United States (1844), France (1844), Belgium (1845), Sweden (1847), Portugal (1862), Denmark (1863), Netherlands (1863), Spain (1864), Italy (1866), Japan (1871), Peru (1874), Brazil (1881), Mexico (1899), Chile (1915), Switzerland (1918), Bolivia (1920), and Persia (1920) Austria Hungary (1869) and Germany (1861) were also included before the war

Religion

Three religions are acknowledged by the Chinese as indigenous and adopted, viz Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism

With the exception of the practice of ancestral worship, which is every where observed throughout the Republic, and was fully commended by Confucius, Confucianism has little outward ceremonial. The study and contemplation and attempted performance of the moral precepts of the ancients constitute the duties of a Confucianist. No ecclesiastical hierarchy is maintained at the public expense, nor any priesthood attached to the Confucian religion. A proposal to make Confucianism the State religion of China was negatived in both 1912 and 1917 by the Constitutional Committee who, however, agreed that Confucianism shall be the basis of the Ethical teaching in National Education.

Buddhism and Taoism present a very gorgeous and elaborate ritual in China, Taoism — originally a pure philosophy—having abjectly copied Buddhist ceremonial on the arrival of Buddhism 1,800 years ago. Probably all Chinese (not Mahometans or Christians) profess and practise all three religions. The bulk of the people, however, are Buddhist.

Mohammedans are found in every province of China, being most numerous in Kansu, Hsin Chiang, Chihli, and Yunnan. From evidence collected in 1909 Mr M Broomhall estimated that the Moslem population of China numbers between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. At the end of 1916 it numbered 50 Bishops (China proper 42), Manchuria 3, Mongolia 4, Tibet 1), 1,437 European priests, 828 Chinese priests, and 1,790,220 native Christians.

Protestant Missions date from 1807. In 1916 they were served by a foreign force numbering 5,517, including 383 missionary (106 being women) and 118 Chinese physicians, 1,092 ordained ministers, and 138 foreign nurses. Native Christians numbered 511,142. Attached to Protestant Missions in 1915 were 24 colleges of university standing, 120 normal and training schools, 29 theological schools, 216 middle schools, 464 higher elementary schools, 4,748 lower elementary schools. Under Christian instruction were 169,797 pupils. Foreign Protestant Medical Missionaries at 330 hospitals and 223 dispensaries attended during the year 104,418 in-patients and 1,535,834 out-patients.

The Russian Orthodox Mission dates from 1685, when the Chinese conquered Albazin fortress on the river Amur, taking 45 Russians prisoners and bringing them to Peking. One was a priest, Father Maximus Leontieff. Until 1860 the members of the Mission acted as the official representatives of the Russian Government. At the end of 1918 the Mission, which is under a Bishop resident in Peking, consisted of a monastery, a hermitage, a nunnery, 5 convents, and 32 churches, and numbered 5,587 baptised Chinese adherents.

Most of the aboriginal hill tribes are still nature worshippers, and ethnically are distinct from the prevailing Mongoloid population. There is also a poverty stricken group of a few families of Chinese Jews in K'ai-feng, capital of Honan.

Instruction.

For many centuries education of a purely Chinese type was general, and led through an intricate system of public examinations to all classes of employment under the State. Being confined in its scope to the study of Chinese classical literature, this form of education was gradually undermined by the influence of increasing intercourse with other countries, until it was completely swept away by a Decree of September 3, 1905, abolishing the historic system of examinations.

Since that date an enormous impetus has been given to the new educational movement, schools for the teaching of 'western learning' springing up in every town throughout large portions of the Republic.

The education policy of the government divides the education of the country into secondary and primary, the former being directly under the central government, the latter under the provincial. Universities with their preparatory colleges, technical colleges, and higher normal schools come directly under the Board of Education of the Central Government, middle schools, lower normal schools, and primary schools, while conforming to the general plan of the Central Government are managed and financed by the provincial governments. There are to be four universities, one each in the north, centre, west and south with a preparatory college attached, capital cities of provinces will have technical colleges in law, industry, and medicine, and higher normal schools. Each district city will have its middle school and lower normal school, while primary schools will be established throughout the country. Primary education is to be compulsory. Under the new plan there are already 34 technical colleges (law, industry, &c.) operating in various capital cities, and 6 higher normal schools have been established. In Peking there is a Higher Normal School for girls. Financial stringency has hitherto delayed the carrying out of the entire plan of primary education.

The Peking Government University was established in 1898, and completely reorganised in 1917. In addition to its general courses it has a post graduate department for further research in the various sciences. The combined institution has 1,500 students and a staff of ninety professors and teachers. Foreign professors and western educated Chinese are employed in this institution and its preparatory departments. In February, 1920, five women students were for the first time admitted to the university.

By the energy of a British medical missionary, an important medical school was founded in Peking in 1906, for the training of Chinese medical students. The Government has undertaken to recognise the diplomas to be issued by this school of medicine, which is known as the Union Medical College, and has given an annual grant towards its expenses. This grant ceased in 1915 when the work of the College was taken over by the China

Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation which had been established in November, 1914, 'to undertake a systematic work for the improvement of medical conditions in China' Large grants have been made by the Rockefeller Foundation to the Shantung Christian University at Tainanfu, to the Hunan-Yale Medical College at Changsha, and to the Harvard Medical School of China at Shanghai Cooperating in every way with the Missionary Societies the foundation is designed to render far reaching service to the extension of western medical science in China At Tientsin there are a Chinese Pei-yang University and preparatory department with 12 foreign and 7 Chinese professors, an Anglo Chinese College, an industrial school under Japanese tuition, general medical colleges, and various private and mission schools

There are numerous Protestant and Catholic mission schools and colleges at Shanghai and other ports, where the English and French languages and lower branches of western science are taught It is estimated that altogether some 58,000 educational institutions of all grades (military and naval schools included), are to be found in China, with an aggregate enrolment of 1,600,000 students

The engagement of America to return to China the surplus of her indemnity of 1900, amounting to 1,756,900<sup>1</sup>, produced an undertaking from China to spend this amount in preparing and sending students to the United States there to receive their education More than four hundred students, including thirty women, have already been sent A special institution, Tsing Hua College, has been established in Peking to train students for this purpose A modern university for Chinese with British professors has been successfully established in Hongkong, and attracts students from many parts of China In Japan, on January 1, 1920, there were 1,241 Chinese students receiving support from the Chinese Government, 168 in Europe, and 175 in the United States Of other Chinese students there are 190 in the United Kingdom and 1,600 in the United States

The development of modern education in China is indicated by the following figures —

	Schools	Scholars
1913-14	109,448	3,643,206
1914-15	122,286	4,075,338
1915-16	129,789	4,294,251
1918-19	134,000	5,500,000

Experiments have been made in universal education In the capital city of the province of Kirin compulsory education has been in operation during the last few years, and the same has been successfully maintained especially in Tai-yuan, the capital of Shansi, the 'Model Province'

Chinese education received a remarkable fillip by the invention of a phonetic script system, which was adopted by the Conference for the Standardization of Pronunciation held in 1913, and which has since received official recognition This script has three functions, as an instrument to unify the spoken dialects, to help the study of Chinese characters, and to educate the illiterate.

Fifty Chinese newspapers are published in Shanghai, more than 60 in Peking and Tientsin, while every capital city in the interior has several daily journals The influence wielded by the Press is growing daily Altogether there are over 1,000 daily, weekly, or monthly journals in China Since 1917 intellectual China has been swept by a new "Literary Revolution," and literature is now being published in the simpler spoken language in preference to the erudite, classical medium

Foreign residents in China are served by a number of excellent papers in English, published in Peking, Tientsin, Shanghai and Hankow. There are three French and several Japanese daily papers. Peking has three English daily papers and one French

Justice.

Under the old system justice was badly administered. Extraction of confession by torture, bribery, and extortion, were essential features of judicial administration. All Treaty Powers therefore claimed the right of extra-territorial jurisdiction over their own nationals in China. All Treaty Powers still retain this right, and will only relinquish it "when they are satisfied that the state of the Chinese laws, their method of administration, and other considerations warrant them in so doing."

In consequence of the non recognition of the Soviet Government the consular and diplomatic privileges have since September, 1920, been withheld from the diplomatic and consular representatives of the former Russian government, and Russians made amenable to Chinese jurisdiction. These treaty rights, it is understood, will be rediscussed as soon as there is a stable government in Russia recognised by the Powers.

The provisional Criminal Code now in force was drawn up in the closing year of the Tsing dynasty, and proclaimed on March 10, 1912, the first year of the Republic. The code was framed after the Continental system, and adopts the most modern legislation in regard to conditional release and postponement of punishments. There are special provisions for the treatment of youthful offenders and insane persons. As regards the power of inflicting penalties, the arbitrary use of power by the court is guarded against by fixing a maximum and minimum, and sentence for each case. A second draft of this code, which awaits the formal sanction of Parliament, was completed in 1919. Texts in both English and French have also been published.

In regard to Civil Law, and Commercial Law, there is not yet a revised code, and therefore, the decisions of the courts derive their sources from the Unwritten Law and the Written Law, i.e., these parts relating to the Civil Law in the old code, and the special laws enforced since the Republic, such as the Mining Ordinance, the Copyright Ordinance, the Commercial Association Ordinance, the Traders Ordinance, and various laws relating to properties. Notable progress, however, is being recorded by the Law Codification Commission, assisted by an eminent French jurist, along these lines.

Progress in the matter of prisons has likewise been rapid. There are 39 model prisons, the administration of which follows the lines adopted in all foreign prisons.

There are at present 44 high courts and procuratorates, 38 branch high courts and procuratorates, and 102 district courts and procuratorates, with the Supreme Court and the Procurator-General at the head of all. The present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in Peking is Dr. Wang Chung-hui, a graduate of both America and England.

Great Britain and the United States have special courts in China, the one, His Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai (established 1865), and the other, the United States Court for China (established 1906).

The first trial by jury in the annals of China took place on March 23, 1912.

Finance.

The following budget statements represent official estimates

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Deficit
	Kuping Taels	Kuping Taels	Kuping Taels
1912	297 000,000	576,520,000	279,520,000
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1918	333 948,482	642,287,076	308,288,594
1918	490,419,786	495,762,888	5,343,102

The collection of the revenue on the Chinese foreign trade and the administration of the lights on the coast of China are under the management of the Chinese Maritime Customs, an institution, founded by Sir Robert Hart, which has a large staff of Foreign and Chinese subordinates, the various nationalities of the Foreign employees bearing approximate relation in number to the amount of trade of their respective countries. By agreement, dated February 13, 1898, China undertook that the post of Inspector General must be held by a British subject so long as British Foreign Trade predominates. By Decree of May 9, 1906, the customs service, hitherto supervised by the Board of Foreign Affairs, was placed under the control of two Chinese high officials, forming a new department known as the Shui Wu Ch'u, or Revenue Council. Since November, 1901, the Native Customs at the Treaty Ports, hypothecated for the service of the Boxer indemnity, have been under the Maritime Customs.

All Customs Revenue is paid into Foreign Banks designated for the purpose by the Bankers' Commission, who allot therefrom the payments for the service of Foreign loans secured on the Customs Revenue and the Boxer Indemnity, which is also secured on the Customs.

Following China's declaration of war against the Central European Powers, the Treaty States agreed to a revision of the tariff in order to bring it up to an effective five per cent ad valorem. A commission was appointed by the Chinese Government to meet with representatives of the Treaty States in Shanghai to agree to and fix Customs import duties. A decision was reached in the autumn of 1918, under which duties were fixed at specific rates calculated on a basis of five per cent of prices ruling during the period from 1912 to 1916 inclusive. In addition, the Entente Powers agreed to postpone payment of "Boxer indemnities" for five years, dating from Dec. 1, 1917.

On November 22, 1912, an Audit Bureau was established, charged with auditing the expenditures and revenues of the Central and Provincial Governments. The Maritime Customs and the Salt Gabelle are the only two sources of revenue for which exact figures are so far available. By the terms of the Re-organisation Loan Agreement of 1913, the Chinese Government agreed to take immediate steps for the re-organisation, with the assistance of foreigners, of the system of collection of the salt revenues. A Central Salt Administration was established in Peking under the control of the Minister of Finance, with a Chief Inspectorate under a Chinese Chief Inspector and a foreign Associate Chief Inspector, who exercise the chief authority for the superintendence of the issue of licence and the compilation of reports and returns of revenue.

The Salt Revenue for three years was:—1917, 70,627,249 dollars; 1918, 71,539,608 dollars; and 1919, 80,636,503 dollars.

The customs receipts for 4 years were (in Haikwan taels) —

Year	Foreign Trade	Home Trade	Total	Total	Exchange
	Taels	Taels	Taels	£	Pence
1917	51,135,409	7,054,020	58,189,429	8,244,541	51½
1918	29,599,509	6,745,536	36,345,045	9,006,828	63½
1919	33,262,983	7,746,177	46,009,160	14,569,567	76
1920	—	—	49,500,000	16,800,000	81½

In the Budget for 1918 19 the whole public debt is estimated at 1,886,641,457 dollars, of which 1,644,931,600 dollars is foreign indebtedness.

Defence

ARMY

The task of creating an army on modern lines was inaugurated by Imperial decree in January, 1905, and in October, 1907, an edict was issued ordering the formation of 36 divisions in the various provinces of the Empire by 1912. Recruiting for this new army, which is called the Lu Chun, was on a principle of modified conscription. The terms of service were 3 years with the colours, 3 in the first reserve, and 4 in the second reserve, or 10 years in all. On January 1, 1916, a modified form of conscription came into force.

These 36 divisions were to have an establishment of about 10,000 combatants each. A division consisted of 2 brigades of infantry, one regiment of cavalry, one regiment of artillery and 9 batteries, 1 Sapper battalion and 1 transport battalion, besides medical and other units, &c. In all the number was nominally about 250,000, actually it was about 150,000. Northern troops have so far shown superiority over the southern troops both in training and armament. No organisation is as yet complete for the second reserve. Besides the Lu Chun, provincial militia were still in existence. They were the remains of a force which the Lu Chun had superseded and were being organised to form a civil police under the control of the Provincial Viceroys. They consisted only of mounted troops and infantry and some old fashioned artillery.

Theoretically all military forces are under the control of the Ministry of War and are paid by the Central Government, the authority of the Ministry being delegated in each province to specially appointed Military Commissioners. Provincial Civil Governors have no authority over the military Lu Chun, but can call for their services when needed. They have control of the police and of the provincial militia, both of which bodies are paid from the provincial revenues.

Since the demise of Yuan Shih kai the military governors have been practically independent of Peking, and have recruited as they saw fit. The result has been a very large increase in the Chinese military forces, which are estimated to have reached a total of 1,500,000 in 1920. The present state of the exchequer does not admit of the paying off of surplus troops without assistance from foreign funds, and it is realised that if the demobilised men are not to become bandits a well considered scheme of disbandment is necessary. During 1920 considerable reductions have been made, and there is some promise of the introduction of a more definite and ordered military establishment.

NAVY

The largest vessel is the protected cruiser Hai Chi, of 4,300 tons displacement and 24 knots, carrying a main armament of 28 in. guns, 10 4 7 in. guns and 5 above-water torpedo tubes. There are also three 3,000-ton cruisers, Hai

Yung, Hai Sheu, and Hai Chen, each of 19.5 knots speed, carrying armaments of 3.6-in and 8.4 1-in guns, together with 3 torpedo tubes. All the above vessels were acquired during the years 1897 and 1898. In addition are 4 modern Yangtze gunboats, built in Japan, 16 smaller river and other gunboats, and 3 modern and about 20 old torpedo boats.

The following cruisers, especially adapted for the training of cadets, were added to the fleet—The Ying Swei and the Chao Ho, both built in England (1912), each having a displacement of about 2,600 tons and a contract speed of 20 knots. The main armaments consist of 2.6-in and 4.4-in guns. There are, in addition, 10 first class torpedo boats and several light draught river gun boats.

There are no naval bases of any importance. Existing dockyards are inadequate, and their plant is obsolete, but the Kiangnan Dock Co and the Yang-tse yard at Hankow have building and repairing facilities. The revolution checked an intended reorganisation of the navy, and its present situation is doubtful. It has very little fighting value, but experience proves that the Chinese bluejacket with training and discipline can rank with any bluejacket in the world.

Production and Industry

Agriculture—China is essentially an agricultural country, and the land is all freehold held by families on the payment of an annual tax. The holdings are in general small, the implements used are primitive, irrigation is common. Chinese agriculture is intensive rather than extensive. Rotation of crops is practised. Horticulture is a favourite pursuit, and fruit trees are grown in great variety. Indeed the Chinese are gardeners rather than farmers. Vegetable culture has reached a high state of perfection. Wheat, barley, maize, and millet and other cereals, with pease and beans, are chiefly cultivated in the north, rice, sugar, and indigo in the south. Treaties forbid the export of grain with the exception of the Soya Bean, the chief product of Manchuria.

Cotton is grown widely even as far north as the southern part of Chihli, the chief area of production being the Yangtze valley. According to the Customs Trade Reports for 1919, next to India and the United States China is already the third largest cotton producer in the world.

Tea is cultivated exclusively in the west and south, in Fukien, Hupeh, Hunan, Kiangsi, Chekiang, Anhui, Kwangtung, and Szechuen. The exportation of tea (especially black leaf), owing to the competition of Ceylon and Indian teas, has steadily declined during recent years, falling from 1,576,136 piculs in 1908 to 1,125,536 piculs in 1917.

Silk culture is one of the most successful industries of China, about 27 per cent. of the world's supply of raw silk is from China, the most serious rivals being Japan with 28 and Italy with 25 per cent.

Pigs are raised everywhere in China, and pig's bristles have become an important article of export. China abounds in wild game.

Manufacture—An important feature in the development of the Chinese industries is the erection of cotton and wool mills, and of silk filatures in Shanghai, Canton and elsewhere, while native looms are found in most dwellings. At present there are over 60 mills operating in China. At the large centres flour and rice mills are beginning to supersede native methods of treating wheat and rice. At Hanyang, near Hankow, are large Chinese iron-works, supplied with ore from mines at Ta-yeh, about 60 miles distant. These works are able to turn out about 300 steel rails a day.

Mining — Most of the 18 provinces and the 3 provinces of Manchuria contain coal, and China may be regarded as one of the first coal countries of the world. The coal fields cover an area of 133,513 acres and the average annual coal output is estimated at 19,000,000 tons. Iron ores are abundant in the anthracite field of Shansi, where the iron industry is ancient, in Chihli, in Shantung and other provinces, and iron (found in conjunction with coal) is worked in Manchuria. The annual production of iron ore is about 468,638 tons. The Tayeh iron deposits, near Hankow, are among the richest in the world. On the Upper Yangtse and in Shensi province petroleum is being worked. Copper ore is plentiful in Yunnan where the copper-mining industry has long existed, Yunnan Province is one of the richest copper districts in the world. Iron is the most important mineral export. It is mined in Yunnan, and through Mengtsz it reaches Hong Kong, whence it is shipped to foreign countries. Antimony ore is exported from Hunan, the annual output is about 28,316 tons. The annual output of gold is 71,582 ounces, of silver, 107,155 ounces, of lead, 13,527 tons, of copper, 10,963 tons. Mining for wolfram is being carried on at Swatow, and in the north western part of Chihli Province.

The imports into China from Hong Kong come originally from, and the exports from China to that colony are further carried on to, Great Britain, France, America, Australia, India, the Straits, and other countries.

The share of the British Empire in the foreign trade of China in 1918 was 23.25 per cent., of Japan 52.31 per cent., and of the United States 4.53 per cent.

The chief imports and exports for 2 years were as follows in HK Taels —

	HK Taels	HK Taels	HK Taels	HK Taels		HK Taels	HK Taels	HK Taels	HK Taels

Of the tea in 1919, 12,970,400 lbs were exported to Hong Kong, 28,451,733 lbs to the United Kingdom, 17,065,996 lbs to Russia Pacific Ports, and 11,155,266 lbs to the United States. The total export of tea to foreign countries has been as follows — 1895, 248,757,333, 1905, 182,573,064, 1915, 237,647,066, 1918, 53,895,600 lbs, 1919, 92,020,666 lbs.

In addition to her overseas trade China has an extensive coast and river trade, in which under "Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations," steamers under foreign flag are allowed to participate. In 1919 1,613 vessels were registered, of which 339 were foreign, and 1,274 Chinese.

All treaties with China contain provision for most-favoured nation treatment. Dairen is the customs port for all the leased territory and has out stations at Kinchow, Pulantien, Pitzewo, and Port Arthur.

In recent years the quantities and value of the imports of tea into the United Kingdom from China, including Hong Kong and Macao, were (according to the Board of Trade returns) —

Year	Quantities		Value	Year	Quantities		Value
	lbs	£			lbs	£

Shipping and Navigation.

During 1919, 209,754 vessels of 95,725,985 tons entered and cleared Chinese ports. Of these 4,433 of 2,569,887 tons, were American, 36,074 of 36,284,312 tons, British, 471 of 414,161 tons, French, 298 of 53,142 tons, Italian, 27,182 of 27,532,449 tons, Japanese, 2,803 of 708,474 tons, Russian, and 128,575 of 27,089,762 tons, Chinese. Of the total tonnage in 1919, 112,564 were steamers with a tonnage of 89,844,371, and 97,190 were sailing vessels with a tonnage of 5,881,564.

Internal Communications

China is traversed in all directions by numerous roads, and, though few are paved or metalled, and all are badly kept, a vast internal trade is carried on partly over them but chiefly by means of numerous canals and navigable rivers. In February, 1898, the Chinese Government agreed that all internal waterways should be open both to foreign and native steamers "under Regulations to be subsequently drawn up," which regulations materially restricted the advantages sought for. A contract has been signed between the Chinese Government and the Siemens-Carey Co. (American) for dredging the Grand Canal, in order to make this ancient waterway navigable for modern uses.

Chinese railway history began in 1876 when the Woosung line, built by foreign enterprise, was opened. In 1911 an Edict was issued commanding that all trunk lines of railway should revert to Government and that provincial control should cease. At present there are over 6,800 miles of railway open to traffic in China (including 1,857 miles in Manchuria), of which about 1,300 miles have been constructed by British enterprise and British capital. There are 2,000 miles under construction. The surplus for the year 1919 of the Chinese railways was 45,000,000 dollars.

The principal railways in China, beginning with the north, are — (1) South Manchurian Railway, from Changchun to Dairen, 814 miles [see also under Manchuria], (2) Peking Mukden line, from Mukden to Peking, 632 miles, (3) Peking Siuyuan Railway, from Peking to Kalgan, Tatung Fu, and Fengchen; (4) Peking Hankow Railway, Peking to Hankow, 755 miles, (5) Bien Loh Railway (in Honan province), from Kai-fung Fu to Lo-h Yang, 125 miles, (6) Shanghai Nanking Railway, from Shanghai to Nanking, 200 miles; (7) Tientsin-Pukow Railway from Tientsin to Pukow, on the Yangtze river, opposite Nanking, 627 miles, (8) Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo Railway, from Shanghai to Hangchow, 160 miles, (9)

Canton-Hankow Railway, from Hankow to Canton, 700 miles, and (10) the Chinese Eastern Railway, also known as the Siberian Railway, and running westward from Vladivostok through Eastern Manchuria, Siberia and Russia proper. This line was built and is operated by the Russians, and runs for 1,100 miles in nominal Chinese territory. The gauge is the Russian standard of 5 feet. The gauges of all the other railways is 4 feet 8½ inches.

China has a fairly well developed telegraph service. Telegraphs connect all the principal cities of the Empire, and there are lines to all the neighbouring countries. The telegraph lines have a length of nearly 40,000 miles. The administration is now completely under government control. Five foreigners (Danes) are employed in the Telegraphs. There is also a Danish Telegraph Adviser in the Ministry of Communications and a Danish Expert in Wireless Telegraphy. Wireless Telegraph Stations have been installed at Kalgan, Peking, Hankow, Nanking, and Shanghai and Canton. In August, 1918, the Chinese Government contracted with the Marconi Wireless Co. for the purchase of 200 wireless telephones for the use of the Chinese army, each to have a radius of 40 miles. In October the Government again contracted with the Marconi Co. for the erection of three powerful wireless stations at Kashgar, Urumchi, and Lanchowfu to connect with a smaller station at Sianfu which will act as auxiliary to the land lines. Since 1912 uniform telegraph charges have been introduced.

The postal work of China, formerly carried on by the Government Courier service and the native posting agencies, was gradually taken in hand by the Chinese Imperial Post Office, begun in 1897 under the management of the Maritime Customs. By Edict of November 6, 1906, the control of the Postal Service was transferred to the Ministry of Communications, and the transfer was actually effected in July, 1911. The work of the Post Office extends over the 18 Provinces of China proper, the New Dominion and Manchuria, which have been divided into postal districts, or sub districts. The Postal Service with Tibet has been suspended. In 1919 there were 9,762 post offices open, and the number of letters posted was 229,410,722, of postcards 34,987,900, of newspapers and printed matter, 67,896,680, of commercial papers, 499,450, of samples of merchandise, 853,380, and of official correspondence, 6,774,860, grand total of 339,922,992. The number of parcels posted in 1919 was 3,551,105. The revenue of the post office in 1919 was approximately 11,230,000 dollars, and the expenditure 8,290,000 dollars, having a surplus of 2,940,000 dollars. On December 31, 1919, the postal staff numbered about 111 foreigners and 28,298 Chinese. China in 1914 joined the postal union.

Money and Credit.

There are four varieties of banking institutions in China. The first are the large foreign banks in the open ports, some of which are among the most powerful banking institutions in the world. The second are the national banks established directly or indirectly by the Chinese Government for its own fiscal purposes and serving as an adjunct in some ways to the Chinese treasury on the one hand and foreign banking and financial interests on the other, the chief of such institutions now being the Bank of China, which was established by presidential mandate in 1913. Besides these there are two further classes of banks, one embracing the larger institutions, which do a proper banking business, i. e., deal in loans and discounts and handle exchange as a more or less secondary matter; and the smaller native banks doing some business in loans, and dealing in dollars, silver and subsidiary coins, and buying and selling exchange in small amounts on interior points.

The Bank of China has an authorised capital of 80,000,000 dollars and a paid up capital of 10,000,000 dollars partly subscribed by the Chinese Government, and partly by the merchant classes. In Peking there are two departments—the head offices for the whole of China and the Peking branch, in all, there are about 200 branches and sub branches. The Bank of Communications (established in 1905) has an authorised capital of 10,000,000 taels, about half of which is paid up. It acts as the agent for the Ministry of Communications in the collection of railway, telegraph, and postal funds. This Bank has in all about 80 branches and sub branches. The head office is in Peking. It was created a National Bank in October, 1915, with power to issue notes. In 1916 the Min Kuo Industrial Bank was established with a capital of 20,000,000 dollars. In 1918 the Exchange Bank of China (with Sino Japanese capital) was established in Peking.

Post savings banks at 11 district head offices were opened on July 1, 1919, and by December 31, 1919, the number had increased to 81. During these 6 months 154,051 dollars were deposited by 5,441 depositors, and 46,535 dollars were withdrawn.

MONEY

The currency of China is on a silver basis, and consists of taels, dollars, copper cash, and bank notes. The tael is really a weight of silver (about an ounce) of a certain degree of fineness. It is divided into 10 mace, 1 mace = 10 candareens, and 1 candareen = 10 cash. The tael varies in different parts of the country, the principal taels being (1) the haikwan or customs tael (in 1919 it was equal in value to 76d), (2) the K'up'ing or treasury tael, and (3) the Shanghai or Tsao ping tael.

The dollar (of the same weight and touch as the Mexican dollar) is the official currency unit, and is current in all the provinces, even in out-of-the-way districts. Notes for cash are also much in vogue. But there is unparalleled currency confusion. It is recognised by the Chinese Government that currency reform is the most pressing need of the country.

In the treaty of September 5, 1902, China agreed with Great Britain to take the necessary steps to provide a uniform national coinage which should be legal tender for all purposes throughout the Empire, and an Imperial Decree was issued in October 1908, commanding the introduction of a uniform tael currency, of which the unit must be a silver tael coin of 98 touch weighing 1 K'up'ing or Treasury-scale tael or ounce. This decree was cancelled by a further decree of May 25, 1910, establishing the silver dollar (yuan) of 90 touch and weighing 72 Treasury weight tael as the unit of currency. The touch and weight of the silver subsidiary coins (50c, 20c, 25c, and 10c) was also definitely specified, while provision was made for further subsidiary coins (5c nickel, 2c, 1c,  $\frac{1}{2}$ c, and  $\frac{1}{4}$ c copper) of touch and weight to be laid down later. The minting of these silver coins has begun, but very few are as yet in circulation. By the law of May, 1910, the several mints have been brought under the Central Government, and are no longer practically private ventures of provincial governors. A new central mint is being put up at Shanghai. All coins are now minted at the Mint in Tientsin and at branch mints in Hankow, Chengtu, Nanking, Shanghai, and Mukden. The K'up'ing tael weighs 575.642039 grains, somewhat less than the Haikwan tael, which weighs 581.47 grains. A decree for uniform weights and measures was issued Oct. 9, 1907, whereby the K'up'ing or Treasury scale was made the standard weight.

WEIGHT

10 Sü	= 1 Hu
10 Hu	= 1 Hao
10 Hao	= 1 Li (nominal cash)
10 Li	= 1 Fên (Candareen)
10 Fên	= 1 Ch'ien (Mace)
10 Ch'ien	= 1 Liang (Tael) = 1½ oz avoirdupois by treaty
16 Liang	= 1 Chin (Catty) = 1½ lbs       "       "
100 Chin	= 1 Tan (Picul) = 133½ lbs       "       "

CAPACITY

10 Ko	= 1 Sheng
10 Sheng	= 1 Tou (holding from 6½ to 10 Kin of rice and measuring from 1 13 to 1 63 gallon) Commodities, even liquids, such as oil, spirits, &c, are commonly bought and sold by weight

LENGTH

10 Fen	= 1 Ts'un (inch)
10 Ts'un	= 1 Ch'ih (foot) = 14 1 English inches by treaty
10 Ch'ih	= 1 Chang = 2 fathoms
1 Li	= approximately one third of a mile

In the tariff settled by treaty between Great Britain and China, the Ch'ih of 14½ English inches has been adopted as the legal standard. The standards of weight and length vary all over the Republic, the Ch'ih, for example, ranging from 9 to 16 English inches, and the Chang (= 10 Ch'ih) in proportion, but at the treaty ports the use of the foreign treaty standard of Ch'ih and Chang is becoming common.

Chinese Outer Territories

Manchuria, lying between the province of Chihli and the Amur river, and extending from the Hingan mountains eastwards to Korea and the Ussuri river, has an area of about 363,610 square miles and a population probably of about 20,000,000, but variously estimated at from 5,750 000 to 29,400,000. It consists of 3 provinces, Sheng-King or Feng-tien (area, 56,000 sq miles, pop 10,312,241), capital Mukden, Kirin (105,000 sq miles, pop 6,000,000), capital Kirin, and Heilung-chiang or the Amur province (203,000 sq miles pop 1,500,000) with Heilung Hsien (Tsitsihar) (population 30,000) for its capital. The population given above for Fengtien provinces is from an official Chinese statement of November, 1908, which also gives the agricultural population as 2,520,145, and the cultivated area as 4,333,333 acres, but these figures must be taken with reserve. The chief towns are Mukden, the capital, with about 168,132 inhabitants, Newchwang (50,000) standing about 30 miles up the Liao river, at the mouth of which is the port of Ying k'ou (60,000) often called Newchwang. Besides Newchwang, Mukden, An-tung, Tatung kou, Tiehling, (28,492) Tungchiangtzu, (7,299) and Fakumen, (19,432) are open to commerce. Other important towns are Hsin min fu (20,000), Liao yang (40,000), Feng-hwang cheng (25,000), and Taonanfu, a town rapidly risen to importance, on the border of Eastern Mongolia. In Kirin province is the town of Chang-chun (Kwangchengtze), with 80,000 inhabitants. It is proposed to establish a university in Manchuria.

There is no longer a Manchu population in Manchuria. A few scattered communities alone remain. Within quite recent years Manchuria has been colonised by Chinese from the Northern Provinces of China and the immigration still continues by road and sea. Owing to the development of the Soya Bean industry (cultivated on some 5,000,000 acres) and the improved railway facilities, Manchuria has grown more rapidly in wealth than any other part of China. Manchuria is primarily an agricultural country, its soil is one of the richest in the world. In 1915 it was estimated that 21,757,923 acres of land were cultivated by 18,767,159 people. Millet, beans, wheat, and rice are the principal crops. Industry is also developing, in 1917 there were 1,899 factories employing 49,601 workpeople. Manchuria is rich in minerals.

The Russian lease of Port Arthur and Talien-wan, and the southern extremity of the Liao-tung peninsula and the South Manchurian Railway were transferred to Japan by the Portsmouth Peace Conference, September 5, 1905. On December 22, 1905, China gave official recognition to this transfer and granted Japan the right to extend the railway from Mukden to Antung at the mouth of the Yalu river, where it connects with the Korean railway. In 1912 a branch line (78 miles) from Changchun, the northern terminus of the Japanese South Manchurian Railway to Kirin, constructed by joint Japanese and Chinese enterprise, was opened to traffic. The total length of the South Manchurian Railway is 684 miles (Dairen to Changchun, main line, 487 miles, branch to Port Arthur, 81 miles; branch to Newchwang, 18 miles; Fushun coal mines, 30 miles; and Mukden to Antung, 170 miles) On August 1, 1917, the whole of the railway system of Korea (some 1000 miles in length) passed under the management of the South Manchurian Railway giving the latter a through line under its own management from Fusan, the Korean port nearest Japan, to Changchun, where connection with the railway system to Harbin and thence to Petrograd is effected Besides the South Manchurian Railway, Manchuria is traversed by the Chinese Eastern Railway and the Chinese Government Railways The Japanese have 198 post offices and the Chinese 335 Telegraph and telephone systems extend to over 2,400 miles

Tibet, extending from the Pamir region eastwards between the Himalaya, and Kwen-lun mountains to the frontiers of China, has an area of 463,200 square miles with a population estimated at between 1,500,000 and 6,000,000 Probably 2,000,000 is near the mark The only census ever taken was by the Chinese in 1737 and showed a population of 316,300 lamas (monks) and 635,950 laity Lhasa, the capital, has from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants The country being bleak and mountainous and strangers having been jealously excluded, wide regions are still unexplored

Chinese authority was in the past represented by two Ambans who had charge, respectively, of foreign and military affairs There were three Chinese commandants of troops at Lhasa, Shigatse and Dingri where the permanent military force of about 4,600, provided by China, were mostly quartered There were a few other Chinese officials, but the civil and religious administration of the country was left almost entirely to Tibetans The head of the government is the Dala Lama, who resides at the Po-ta-la (or palace) near Lhasa He acts through a minister or regent appointed from among the chief Tibetan Lamas and assisted by five ministers Early in 1908 the territory of Western Szechuen and the adjoining territory of Eastern Tibet were united into a new province, Hsi-Kan, with Batang, re-named Baanfu, as capital

The prevailing religion is Lamaism, a corrupt form of Buddhism, but along with it there exists the Bon, or Shamanistic, faith In some places agriculture is carried on, barley and other cereals as well as pulse and vegetables being grown In some favoured regions fruits, including peaches and even grapes, are produced In other places the pursuits are pastoral, the domestic animals being sheep and yak (often crossed with Indian cattle), while in some regions there are buffaloes, pigs, and camels Wool spinning, weaving, and knitting are common, and there are many hands skilful in making images and other decorations for religious edifices The chief minerals worked are gold, borax, and salt There is a large trade with China and considerable traffic across the Indian frontier

The trade between India and Tibet has to be carried through lofty passes between 14,000 and 18,000 feet high, most of which are practically impassable during seasons of heavy rain and snow Sheep and also crosses between yaks and ordinary cattle are used as beasts of burden The most important route into Tibet from India is from Siliguri, near Darjeeling in northern Bengal, and across the small Frontier State of Sikkim to Gyantse and Yatung in Tibet, the two leading trade marts authorised by the existing Convention. The other chief means of access to Tibet are from Almora in the northern part of the United Provinces, and from Simla over the Simla-Tibet road to Gartok in western Tibet, which is at about 14,200 feet elevation above the sea. From Almora to Gartok the direction is almost due north,

	£	£	£	£
Imports into India <sup>1</sup>	331,079	430,000	460,000	438,000

For the removal of hindrances to the Indian trade a treaty was made with China (as suzerain of Tibet) in 1890, supplemented by a second treaty in 1893, but the hindrances still remained. Consequently, in 1904, the Indian Government sent a mission with an escort to arrange matters directly with the Tibetan Government. The mission met with a good deal of armed opposition, but at length, on September 7, a convention was executed at Lhasa. The convention provides for the re-erection of boundary stones (alluding to former pastoral disputes) on the Sikkim frontier, for marts at Yatung, Gyangtze and Gartok for Tibetan and British merchants for the demolition of forts on the trade routes, for a Tibetan commissioner to confer with British officials for the alteration of the objectionable features of the treaty of 1893, for the settlement of an equitable customs tariff, for the repair of the passes and the appointment of Tibetan and British officials at the trade marts. China, as the suzerain power of Tibet, paid an indemnity of 2,500,000 rupees (166,666 $\frac{1}{2}$ ), and the evacuation of the Chumbi valley by the British began in February, 1908. Further, no Tibetan territory may be sold, leased or mortgaged to any foreign Power, nor may Tibetan affairs, or Tibetan public works, be subject to foreign management or interference without the consent of the British. The adhesion of China to this convention was secured by an agreement signed at Peking on April 27, 1906. Under the Convention of August 31, 1907, Great Britain and Russia agree not to enter into negotiation with Tibet except through the Chinese Government, nor to send representatives to Lhasa. But this engagement does not affect the provisions of the British Tibetan convention of September 7, 1904, ratified by China in 1906. Negotiations were begun at Simla in Sept 1907, for the conclusion of Trade Regulations between India and Tibet, and were brought to a satisfactory conclusion in April 1908.

The Revolution in China in 1911 was not without its effect on the Tibetans, who expelled the Chinese garrison. Subsequently an expedition was dispatched from Szechuan and Yunnan, but Great Britain protested and caused its withdrawal. In August, 1912, the British Minister in Peking presented a memorandum to the Chinese Government outlining the attitude of the British Government towards the Tibetan question. It held that the re-establishment of Chinese authority would constitute a violation of the Anglo Chinese Treaty of 1906. Chinese suzerainty in regard to Tibet was recognised, but Great Britain could not consent to the assertion of Chinese sovereignty over a state enjoying independent treaty relations with her. Ultimately a Tripartite Conference was opened at Simla in October, 1913. The Tibetan proposals included the independence of Tibet, the repudiation of the Anglo Chinese Convention of 1906, and boundary rectifications. China insisted upon Tibet being an integral of Chinese territory, China engaging not to convert Tibet into a province, and asking Britain to give an undertaking not to annex Tibet, nor any portion of it. Britain suggested the creation of an Inner and Outer Tibet, the former being autonomous, and the latter under Chinese control. China declined to accept this arrangement.

and the Conference was dissolved without accomplishing anything. Since then the Chinese Government has more than once offered to renew negotiations with the British Government, but the latter has up to the present declined to do so.

Sin-Kiang, or the New Dominion, consists of Chinese Turkestan, Kulja, and Kashgaria, and comprises all Chinese dependencies lying between Mongolia on the north and Tibet on the south. It is now regarded as a separate province, its Civil Governor residing at Ili, the capital. Its area is estimated at about 550,340 square miles and population at about 1,200,000. The inhabitants are of various races, known as Turki (Kashgari, Kalmuk, Khirghiz, Taranchi, etc.), mostly Mohammedan and Chinese, who have of recent years greatly increased in numbers. The chief towns are Ili, Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan, and Aksu. The country is administered under Chinese officials, residing at Ili, the subordinates being usually natives of the country. In regions about the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers the soil is fertile, irrigation is practised, and cereals, fruits and vegetables are grown. Other productions of the country are wool, cotton, and silk. Jade is worked, and in some districts gold is found. The whole territory is yearly increasing in population and prosperity.

Mongolia.

The vast and indefinite tract of country called Mongolia stretches from the Kinghan mountains on the east to the Tarbagatai mountains on the west, being intersected towards its western end by the Altai mountains and the Irtysh river. On the north it is bounded by Siberia and on the south by the outer Kan su and other regions which are united into Sin-Kiang. The area of Mongolia is about 1,367,600 square miles, and its population about 2,600,000. A wide tract in the heart of this region is occupied by the Desert of Gobi which extends south-westwards into Chinese Turkestan. The inhabitants are nomadic Mongols and Kalmucks who range the desert with camels, horses, and sheep. Even in fertile districts they are little given to agriculture. But of recent years there has been a great extension of Chinese immigration, and a large area of what was known as Mongolia, extending from China proper and Manchuria to the Gobi Desert, is now indistinguishable from Chinese territory. Chinese settlers are gradually invading the Gobi Desert. Irrigation alone is needed. The chief town or centre of population is Urga, 170 miles due south of Khiakta, a frontier emporium for the caravan trade carried on with China across the Gobi Desert, goods being easily transported to the Siberian frontier town of Kiakhta, which stands about 100 miles from the south end of Lake Baikal. Chief exports were wool, skins and hides, furs, horns, &c. During the summer months a motor car service for freight purposes crosses the Gobi desert, the journey between Kalgan and Urga occupying four days. It was inaugurated in 1917.

Shortly after the outbreak of the Chinese Revolution, Outer Mongolia declared its independence and proclaimed the Hutuktu (Living Buddha) as Emperor. Its autonomy was recognised by the Russian Government, and on November 3, 1912, a Convention and a Protocol were signed at Urga by the Russian Envoy and the Cabinet of the Hutuktu. By this Convention the Russian Government undertook to assist Mongolia to maintain the autonomous régime she had established, to support her right to have a national army, and to admit neither the presence of Chinese troops on her soil nor the colonization by the Chinese of her territory. The Mongolians Sovereign and Government will assure to Russian subjects and Russian commerce as in the past the full enjoyment of their rights and privileges as enumerated in the Protocol, and it is clearly understood that no other foreign subjects in Mongolia shall be granted fuller rights than those accorded to Russian subjects.

On November 5, 1913, after prolonged negotiations, an agreement was reached in Peking between Russia and China, whereby Russia recognised Outer Mongolia as part of Chinese Territory under Chinese suzerainty, and China recognised the autonomy of Outer Mongolia. Both countries agreed not to send troops to Outer Mongolia other than as consular or official guards, and not to colonise its territory. Autonomous Outer Mongolia is defined as the territory formerly under the jurisdiction of the Chinese authorities at Kobdo, Uliasutai and Urga. Frontiers and other questions were settled at a tripartite conference between Mongolians, Chinese, and Russians, which were concluded in June, 1915.

In October, 1913, a war loan of 2,000,000 roubles was granted to the Mongolian Government by Russia. The advance was secured on certain revenues from districts near Kobdo, where Russian tax collectors had already begun operations. In December, 1914, a Mongolian Bank was established. The capital has been fixed at 1,000,000 roubles, and the directorate of the bank is to be in Petrograd, with branches at Urga, Uliasutai, and Kobdo. The Mongolian Government is to receive 15 per cent of the net annual profits, and will possess the right to purchase the bank upon the expiry of 50 years from the date of the commencement of operations.

In September, 1914, an agreement between Russia and the Urga Government was signed at Kiakhta with regard to railways in Mongolia. By the terms of the agreement Russia recognises the right of Mongolia to construct its own territorial railways, the plans for which are to be determined jointly by Russia and Mongolia. Russia is to lend its co-operation in finding capital for the railways. Mongolia engages to consult the Russian Government before granting any concession for domestic railways, so that the projected railways may not be "prejudicial to Russian economic and strategic interests." On the same date a concession was granted by Mongolia to the Russian Administration of Posts and Telegraphs for the construction of a telegraph line from the boundary of Moudi in the Irkutsk district to the Mongolian town of Uliasutai.

With the overthrow of the Romanoffs and the spread of Bolshevism the autonomy of Outer Mongolia availed little to protect the territory from the incursions of the Red forces. In November, 1919, the Urga Government petitioned Peking for the cancellation of its independence, and on 22nd of that month the Chinese Government formally declared null and void the Russo-Chinese and Russo-Mongolian agreements, as 'it was impossible to continue arrangements which had obviously lapsed owing to the dissolution of the Russian Empire, and which were a constant invitation to unrest.' But on February 25, 1921, the Hutuktu was crowned King of Mongolia, and the independence of the country proclaimed.

From March, 1915, Mongolia has a legal currency of its own. The Russian Government has granted to the Siberian Trading Bank the right to issue in Mongolia money coined in the Russian mint. On one side of the coins the value is impressed in the Russian language and a corresponding impression in Mongolian is on the reverse side. For exchange purposes the money will be equal to the Russian rouble (par value, 2s 1½d).

Buddhist Lamaism is the prevalent form of religion, the Lamas having their residence at Urga and other centres.

COLOMBIA.

(LA REPÚBLICA DE COLOMBIA)

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Colombia, which in colonial days was called 'Viceroyalty of New Granada,' gained its independence of Spain in 1819, and was officially constituted December 27, 1819. Soon after it formed with Venezuela and Ecuador the State of 'Greater Colombia,' which continued for about ten years. It then split up into Venezuela, Ecuador, and the Republic of New Granada, on February 29, 1832. The Constitution of April 1, 1858, changed New Granada into a confederation of eight States, under the name of Confederation Granadina. On September 20, 1861, the convention of Bogotá brought out the confederation under the new name of United States of New Granada, with nine States. On May 8, 1863, an improved Constitution was formed, and the States took the name of the United States of Colombia. The revolution of 1885 brought about another change, and the National Council of Bogotá, composed of two delegates from each State, promulgated the Constitution of August 4, 1886. The sovereignty of the States was abolished, and they became simple departments, with governors appointed by the President of the Republic, though they have retained some of their old rights, such as the management of their own finances. At present there are 14 departments, 2 "Intendencias," and 7 commissaries.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two Houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate contains 34 Senators elected indirectly by electors specially chosen for the purpose. The House of Representatives consists of 92 members elected by the people in 17 electoral circumscriptions (one for every 50,000 of population). Senators are elected for 4 years, Representatives for 2 years.

The President is elected by direct vote of the people for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards, his salary is 18,000 gold dollars per annum. Congress elects, for a term of one year, two substitutes, one of whom, failing the President during a presidential term, fills the vacancy.

President of the Republic — Don Marco Fidel Suarez. Elected February 10, 1918. Holds office from August 7, 1918, to August 7, 1922.

The ministries are those of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, Treasury, War, Public Instruction, Commerce and Agriculture, and Public Works.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at about 440,846 square miles. It has a coast line of about 3,100 miles, about equally divided between the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean. The area and population of the 14

On December 4, 1903, Panama asserted its independence and was formed into a separate Republic. On April 6, 1914, Colombia signed a treaty with the United States, at Bogota, agreeing to recognise the independence of Panama and receiving in return 25 million dollars (5 millions sterling) and certain rights in the Panama Canal zone. This Treaty was ratified by the United States Senate on April 20, 1921 (See Introduction of THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1915). Most of the boundary line with Brazil is still undefined, and there are frontier difficulties with Peru. With Ecuador a boundary treaty was signed in 1917.

The capital, Bogota (census population on July 15, 1918, 143,994), lies 8,600 feet above the sea. The chief commercial towns are Barranquilla (66,107), connected with the coast at Puerto Colombia by 17 miles of railway; Manizales (39,643), Cartagena (51,382), Medellin (79,146), a mining centre; Cali (45,524), Bucaramanga (25,919), Cúcuta (29,179), the last two being coffee centres.

Religion and Instruction

The religion of the nation is Roman Catholicism. There are 4 Catholic archbishops, viz of Bogotá, Cartagena, Medellín, and Popayan, the first having 4 suffragans and the other three 2 a piece. One of the suffragan sees is Panamá, belonging to ecclesiastical province of Cartagena, and now also to the Republic of Panamá. Other forms of religion being permitted, so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals nor to the law.

There is a Ministry of Public Instruction which has the supreme direction of education throughout the Republic. Education is divided into primary, secondary, professional, artistic and industrial. In 1919 there were 5,236 primary schools with 321,696 pupils. Nearly all the schools for secondary education, maintained or assisted by the nation are entrusted to religious corporations of the Catholic Church. In 1919 there were 75 secondary schools with 6,716 pupils, 24 professional schools with 2,317 pupils, and 24 art and trade schools with 1,203 pupils. In 1920 there were altogether in Colombia 4,422 public and private elementary schools with 533,658 pupils. There were also 27 normal schools with 1,859 pupils. The oldest University is that of Bogotá (founded 1572). This and the School of Mines at Medellín are national institutions. The other Universities are departmental. They are the Universities at Medellín (founded 1822), of Cartagena, of Popayan, and of Pasto. In 1917 these together had 2,488 students. For the working class there are many schools of arts and trades directed by the Salesian Fathers. There are other schools or colleges open under religious orders, and the school of fine arts has been reopened. Primary education is gratuitous but not compulsory. In 1919 the State spent 1,096,810 pesos on education.

For the financial year ending February 28, 1921, the expenditure was put down at 16,000,000 pesos, which with the deficit of 6,000,000 pesos of the year 1919-20, makes a total of 22,000,000 pesos. To meet these liabilities the estimated resources are revenue, 14,000,000 pesos, bonds to be issued 1,700,000 pesos, loans from banks and individuals, 2,300,000 pesos, and Treasury certificates, 14,000,000 pesos.

The external debt on January 1, 1921, amounted to 3,887,109½, made up as follows—Consolidated external debt of 1896, 1,561,700½, five per cent Government bonds of 1906, specially secured on the Bogota Sabana Railway, six per cent external gold loan of 1911, six per cent external debt of 1913, Puerto Wilches Railway Bonds and Prior loan of 1913, 2,322,409½.

The consolidated internal debt on March 1, 1920, was 2,848,260 gold pesos, and the floating debt 10,840,651 pesos.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory, from 1 to 1½ years. The permanent army consists of 3 divisions of 2 brigades of 2 regiments of infantry, total 12 infantry regiments, 1 cavalry regiment of 4 squadrons, 1 artillery section, 1 engineer battalion, 1 transport battalion of 3 companies. The peace effective is about 6,000. In war time every fit Colombian is compelled to serve, and the war effective is about 50,000. The infantry are armed with rifles of the improved Remington pattern, with the French Gras rifle, and with the 88 pattern Mausei.

Colombia has no navy.

Production

Only a small section of the country is under cultivation. Much of the soil is fertile, but of no present value, from want of means of communication and transport. Coffee is the staple product. Tobacco is also grown, cotton is produced in Magdalena, Bolivar, Antioquia and Santander, and is beginning to be cultivated in Boyaca, Tolima, and Cundinamarca. Cotton area in 1918, 21,000 acres, production 2,750,000 lbs. Cocoa, sugar, vegetable ivory, ligna (or vegetable ivory nut), and dyewoods are produced, besides wheat, maize, plantains, &c. Banana cultivation is extending, and near Santa Marta a large amount of capital is invested in this industry. The rubber tree grows wild, and its cultivation has begun. Tolu balsam is cultivated, and copaiba trees are tapped but are not cultivated. Dye and cedar woods are abundant on the Magdalena river, but little or no wood of any sort is exported. The Panama hat industry is making great strides, some 86 per cent of the hats manufactured are sent to the United States. The total number of factories in Colombia in 1915 was 121, in which 12,406,000 dollars were invested. The principal manufacturing centres are Bogota, Medellin, Barranquilla, and Cartagena.

The country may be divided into five sections—(1) The Caribbean coast country is tropical, little agriculture is engaged in (except the raising of bananas in Santa Marta) but some cotton, sugar, and tobacco is grown. The region is good cattle country. (2) The Department of Antioquia is mountainous, the climate tropical and temperate, according to altitude. This is an important coffee and cattle country, and the centre of the gold-mining industry. (3) The central plateau (Bogota) has a temperate climate, the altitude being 8,000 feet. Agriculture and cattle raising are well suited to this region, and the coffee production is very large. (4) The Pacific coast section is mountainous, tropical and temperate according to altitude. It includes the Cauca River valley, especially adapted to agriculture and cattle raising. Among the products of the region are cacao, cattle, coffee, gold, and platinum (5) The eastern section embraces the territory between the Magdalena River and the Venezuelan border and north of the Bogota Plateau, it is mountainous, tropical, and heavily wooded. Its principal product is coffee.

Colombia is rich in minerals, and gold is found in all the departments. The mines are in Antioquia, Cauca, Bolivar, Tolima, and Narino. The number of gold mines known in Colombia is as follows: Antioquia 12,181, Narino 2,452, Caldas 2,610, Tolima 502, Cauca 641. Other minerals, more or less worked, are copper, lead, mercury, cinnabar (14 mines), manganese (7 mines), emeralds (32 mines), and platinum (first discovered in Colombia in 1735), which is found in abundance in the alluvial deposits of the Choco River and in the basins of the San Juan and Condoto Rivers. The emerald mines of Muzo and Cosquez belong to the Government. No statistics of their output are published, but they are said to yield 1,000,000 pesos worth of stones per annum. Nearly all the emeralds mined to day come from Colombia. The Pradera iron works north east of Bogotá have a capacity of 30 tons of pig iron daily, and manufacture wrought iron, sugar mills, castings, &c. In the immediate neighbourhood of the works are coal, iron, limestone, sand, manganese, and fireclay deposits, which render the locality highly favourable for the development of metallurgical industries. The salt mines at Zipaquia, north of Bogotá, are a government monopoly and a great source of revenue, supplying most of the interior departments. The maritime departments use sea salt evaporated at the numerous natural salt pans along the coast. In several of the departments there are extensive deposits of coal and petroleum. On the coasts there are valuable pearl fisheries which the Government desires to concede for a term of years.

Shipping and Communications.

At Cartagena in 1918 there entered 263 vessels of 428,625 tons. Of these, 110 of 320,971 tons were American, and 26 of 66,242 tons British.

In Colombia there are 15 lines of railway (10 national, and 5 British companies) with a total length (1920) of 891 miles. Of the total, 466 miles have a gauge of 3 ft., the rest a metre gauge. The roads of Colombia are generally simple mule tracks, but the Government continues to improve the main roads, which can be used now by automobiles. There are many cart roads besides. Much of the inland traffic is by river, and the work of clearing and canalising the lower and upper Magdalena is being carried on. That river is navigable for 900 miles, steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla. Tributaries supply 215 miles more of navigable water, and on these rivers 41 steamers, with a total tonnage of 7,696, regularly ply.

Postal facilities between Barranquilla and foreign countries are stated to be excellent, but as to internal services there are no recent statistics. In 1915, in the internal service there were 3,417,564 letters and post cards transmitted, and 2,389,786 packets of printed matter, samples, and business papers. Number of offices, 843. A British river transport company has contracted with the Government to convey mails and passengers to and from the interior every three days. Other companies, British, German, and native, ply on the rivers.

There were 13,640 miles of Government telegraph lines in July, 1920, number of offices, 700, 46,709,066 telegrams were despatched in 1919.

Money, Weights, and Measures

Under the Law of June 12, 1907, the monetary unit is a gold dollar equal to one fifth of a pound sterling and of proportionate weight, the fineness being the same. Gold coins are 2½, 5, and 10 dollars. Silver coins are (900 fine) the half dollar, and 20 and 10 centavos. Nickel coins for 1, 2, and 5 pesos (centavos) are legal tender. There are also notes representing gold dollars of 1, 2, 5, and 10 dollars respectively. Colombia has a gold coinage, and minting has already begun at the Mints in Medellín and Bogotá. In December, 1916, a law was promulgated authorising the Government to coin gold pieces in the mints of Bogotá and Medellín free of charge. On June 30, 1920, the total currency of Colombia was given as follows — gold coinage, 23,948,492 pesos, paper money (gold certificates), 10,155,931 pesos, silver coinage, 6,555,293 pesos, nickel coinage, 1,308,088 pesos, and bills of old issues not presented for exchange, $14,606 pesos, making a total of 42,182,410 pesos. Besides this sum in legal tender, there were also in circulation on June 30, 1920—Treasury certificates, 3,536,337 pesos, bank certificates, 2,057,986 pesos, mortgage certificates, 4,728,600 pesos, certificates of the mint of Medellín, 2,354,725 pesos, and bonds and national notes, 7,465,253 pesos, or a total of 20,143,451 pesos, which, added to the legal specie, gives a general total of 62,325,862 pesos.

The metric system was introduced into the Republic in 1857. In custom-house business the kilogramme, equal to 2,204 avoirdupois pounds, is the standard. In ordinary commerce the arroba, of 25 Colombian pounds, or 12½ kilos, the quintal, of 100 Colombian pounds, or 50 kilos, and the carga, of 250 Colombian pounds, or 125 kilos, are generally used. The Colombian libra is equal to 1/102 pound avoirdupois. The Colombian vara or 80 cm, is still in some cases the measure of length used for retailing purposes, but in liquid measure the French litre is the legal standard.

COSTA RICA.

(REPUBLICA DE COSTA RICA )

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Costa Rica, an independent State since the year 1821, and forming part from 1824 to 1829 of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution promulgated on December 7, 1871, and modified very frequently since that date. Practically there was no constitution, but only dictatorships, between 1870 and 1882. The legislative power is vested in a Chamber of Representatives called the Constitutional Congress, and made up of 43 deputies, being one representative to every 8,000 inhabitants. By the Election Law of August 18, 1913, universal suffrage was adopted for all male citizens who are of age and able to support themselves, except those deprived of civil rights, criminals, bankrupts and the insane. Voting for President, Deputies and Municipal Councillors is public, direct and free. According to the election law of October 28, 1913, the election of President and Vice President of the Republic is made by an electoral college composed of those who at the time of the election are senators and deputies, and by those who, at any time within a period of six months may have been President of the Republic. The members of the Chamber are elected for the term of four years, one half retiring every two years. The executive authority is in the hands of a President, elected for the term of four years.

President of the Republic —Don Julio Acosta, elected on December 7, 1919, assumed office May 8, 1920, for a period of 4 years, under the Constitution of 1871.

The administration normally is carried on by six Secretaries of State, who are appointed by, and responsible to, the President. They are the Secretaries respectively of the Interior and Police, of Foreign Affairs, Justice, and Public Worship, of Public Instruction, of War and Marine, of Finance and Commerce, and a Secretary of Public Works under the control of Secretary of Finance and Commerce.

Area and Population

The area of the Republic is estimated at 23,000 English square miles, divided into seven provinces, San José, Alajuela, Heredia, Cartago, Guanacaste, Punta Arenas, and Limón. The last Census was taken in 1892. According to the estimate for December 31, 1918, the population was 459,423, made up as follows —

Province	Population	Province	Population
San José	138,193	Guanacaste	48,217
Alajuela	110,254	Punta Arenas	23,287
Heredia	72,786	Limón	23,706
Cartago	48,080	Total	459,423

There are about 3,500 aborigines (Indians)

The vital statistics for three years were as follows —

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Increase	Immigration	Emigration
1916	2,012	18,208	10,166	8,042	4,238	4,999
1917	1,803	19,004	10,249	8,755	3,085	3,098
1918	1,827	18,412	14,034	4,378	1,857	2,157

Of the total births in 1918, 51 per cent were males and 49 per cent females, and 75 per cent legitimate and 25 per cent illegitimate.

The population of European descent, many of them pure Spanish blood, dwell mostly around the capital, the city of San Jose (38,016, or with suburbs 51,658), and in the towns of Alajuela (9,177), Cartago (14,398), Heredia (9,325), Liberia (2,639), Punta Arenas (5,283), and Limon (7,790). There are some 18,000 colonized British West Indians, mostly in Limon Province, on the banana farms.

For the purpose of public health the country has been divided into 26 districts superintended by medical men paid by the national Treasury. The Rockefeller Institute has established a branch in Costa Rica to combat ankilostomiasis, and the Medical Officer in charge is giving most valuable advice and work to the Costa Rican authorities.

Religion and Instruction

The Roman Catholic is the religion of the State, but there is entirely religious liberty under the Constitution. The Bishop of San Jose is a suffragan of the Archbishop of Guatemala. Elementary instruction is compulsory and free. Elementary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 1918, there were open 315 elementary schools, the teachers numbered 950, and the enrolled pupils 25,857, the average attendance being 19,672. For secondary instruction there are at San Jose a lyceum for boys with 357 pupils in 1918, and a college for girls with 350 pupils. A normal school established in 1915 at Heredia has 220 pupils. The towns of Cartago, Alajuela and Heredia have each a college. For professional instruction there is a Medical Faculty and also schools of Law, Pharmacy, and Dentistry.

Spanish is the universal language of the country.

Justice

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, two Appeal Courts, and the Court of Cassation. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces, and local justices throughout the Republic. Capital punishment cannot be inflicted. In 1918 there were 5,813 convictions of misdemeanour, and 1,278 of crime.

Finance

The revenue and expenditure for five years have been (in colones, worth about 12*d* in 1919, £1 = Colones 20) as follows —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue	£ 700,812	£ 656,897	£ 700,943	£ 594,815	£ 683,550

The revenue is chiefly derived from direct taxation (land and sales taxes), customs (116,593/ in 1918), liquors, and railways, posts, and telegraphs. The largest items of expenditure are finance, public instruction, and internal development.

The foreign debt of the Republic outstanding on December 31, 1918, was 2,950,456/, made up of gold refunding bonds, 1911, of 2 000,000/ (1,586,660/ issued) and the French Loan of 1912, of 35,000,000 francs (34,100,000 francs outstanding). The internal debt on December 31, 1919, amounted to 1,784,204/.

Defence.

Costa Rica had an army, including reserve and national guard, of 52,208 officers and men. The active army numbered 38,946, and consisted of 3 brigades, 1 battalion, 3 companies, and 135 unclassified soldiers. The peace strength is 1,000 men, and the war strength is estimated at 50,000 militia, as every male between 18 and 50 may be required to serve. Owing to the fall of the Tinoco Administration and the consequent confusion in the War Office, no later statistics are available. The Republic has also 1 motor launch on the Atlantic side and 1 on the Pacific side for Revenue purposes.

Production and Industry

A considerable area of the country is high table land, with a temperate climate, but the land along the coast is low, with tropical vegetation and a tropical climate. Agriculture is the principal industry. There are thousands of square miles of public lands in Costa Rica that have never been cleared, on which can be found quantities of virgin rosewood, cedar, mahogany, and other cabinet woods. The principal agricultural products are coffee (24,000,000 pounds estimated production in 1920-21), and bananas, 95,400 acres (7,129,655 bunches valued at 682,263/ in 1918, 5,689,516 bunches valued at 868,951/ in 1917). There is a banana trade with New Orleans, New York, and Boston. Bee keeping has been commenced, it is estimated that there are 3,000 hives in the Republic. The second industry of importance is that of gold and silver mining on the Pacific slope. Several districts are auriferous, and mining is carried on in the Abanguez, Buitaca, and Aguacate districts. Deposits of manganese ore have been discovered in the Pacific province of Guanacaste. Muze, sugar cane, rice, and potatoes are commonly cultivated. Some 2,700 acres are under tobacco. The distillation of spirits is a government monopoly. The live stock, in 1915 consisted of 347,475 cattle, 64,717 horses, 76,198 pigs, besides mules, sheep, and goats.

There are officially enumerated 3,296 factories and industries in the Republic, including coffee-drying establishments, starch, broom and wood work factories. Electricity, derived from water power in the highlands, is widely used as motive power.

Commerce

The value of imports into and exports from Costa Rica in 5 years (including coin and bullion) was as follows (in sterling £ colon = 22 9d) —

—	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	928,890	1,420,199	1,203,277	768,641	1,464,792
Exports	2,052,082	2,391,649	2,447,777	1,980,526	3,288,112

For 1917 and 1918 the value of the chief imports and exports was as follows —

	£	£		£	£
Cotton goods	54,418	94,071	Bananas	808,951	682,263

Rice	30,981	9,278	Timber	62,135	94,420

Of the import value in 1918 145,008/ (57.90 per cent) was from the United States, 60,504/ (7.87 per cent) from the United Kingdom, 108,030/ (14.05 per cent) from Spanish America, 13,552/ (1.69 per cent) from France. Of the value exported, 1,791,590/ (90.46 per cent) went to the United States, 341/ (1.74 per cent) to the United Kingdom, 5,886/ (0.29 per cent) to Spain and 125,977/ (6.36 per cent) to Spanish America.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Costa Rica (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Costa Rica into U.K.	1,478,926	913,128	44,626	908,528	1,069,513
Exports to Costa Rica from U.K.	135,816	145,789	53,311	112,424	584,751

Shipping and Communications.

There are no official figures available as regards Costa Rica shipping. On the Atlantic coast there are several small sailing vessels and power launches and on the Pacific coast some motor launches.

In 1919 there entered the ports of the Republic 479 vessels of 486,131 tons, and cleared 421 vessels of 465,074 tons. Limon is visited regularly by steamers of 4 shipping companies (1 British, 1 American, 1 Dutch and 1 Italian) connecting it with ports of Europe and America. The American line are steamers of the United Fruit Company, formerly under British flag, now transferred to American flag. Three lines visit the Pacific port of Punta Arenas.

The railway system connects San José with the Atlantic port, and has been extended to connect the capital with the Pacific port. The length of railway is 402 miles: the Costa Rica Railway, 182 miles (main line and branches, San José to Limon, 103 miles), the Pacific Railway (state owned), 81 miles (San José to Punta Arenas, 73 miles), the Northern Railway, 65 miles, and the United Fruit Co. Railway, 67 miles. When the Railway system is completed, through rail communication will be established between Port Limon and the new port of Almirante in Panama. At San José there is an electric trainway of 84 miles. In 1916 a road for motor traffic was completed between San José and Heredia, a distance of 7 miles.

In 1918 there were 182 post offices. The number of postal packets despatched and received was 2,247,831.

There were (1918) 1,533 miles of telegraph lines and telegraph wires of a total length of 15,170 English miles with 122 telegraph offices. The number of messages in 1918 was 416,831. On December 31, 1918, there were 1,514 telephones, the telephone lines had a length of about 640 miles, and the length of wire was 2,291 miles. Wireless telegraphy is working from Limon to Bocas del Toro (Panama) 60 miles, and to Bluefields, in Nicaragua, and to Colon, in Republic of Panama. Limon has a radius of 300 miles. The Government has a small wireless station at Colorado (mouth of R. San Juan, near Nicaraguan border).

Money, Weights, and Measures

In October, 1914, the Banco Internacional de Costa Rica was established as a Government Bank of Issue. It is authorised to issue up to 19,000,000 colones in notes to bearer (guaranteed by Government 6 per cent Bonds, unissued balance of Costa Rica Gold Refunding Bonds of 1911, and other Government securities). There are three other banks of issue in Costa Rica: the Anglo Costa Rican Bank (founded 1863) and the Bank of Costa Rica (1877), with a capital of 1,200,000 and 2,000,000 colones respectively, and the Mercantile Bank of Costa Rica (1908) with a capital of 1,500,000 colones. A branch of the Royal Bank of Canada was opened in August 1915. Banks of issue must keep a reserve in gold equal to 40 per cent of their note circulation. The total notes in circulation on September 27, 1919, were 3,158,703 colones of the four banks of issue, of which 645,000 colones were of the Mercantile Bank (metallic reserve, 940,000 colones), 307,110 colones of the Bank of Costa Rica (metallic reserve, 814,936 colones), 519,210 colones of Anglo Costarican Bank (metallic reserve, 787,412 colones) and 10,527,353 colones of the Banco Internacional de Costa Rica (metallic reserve, 613,735 colones). The Mercantile Bank of the Americas of New York has purchased a controlling interest in the Mercantile Bank (October, 1919).

On October 26, 1896, an Act was passed for the adoption of a gold standard, the monetary unit to be the gold colon, weighing 778 grammes, .900 fine (value about 22 9d). The U.S. gold dollar is worth 2.15 colones and the English sovereign, 10.45 colones. The new silver coinage consists of fractions of the colon, viz., 50, 25, 10, and 5 cent pieces. 500 fine silver, which are legal tender up to 10 colons, copper being legal tender up to 1 colon. The copper coins are 10 and 5 cent pieces. There are also 50 and 25 cent and 1 and 2 colon notes (silver certificates). Gold and silver coins have practically disappeared from circulation, copper coins in circulation amount to 246,223 colones. Total note issue on September 27, 1919, estimated at 23,101,655 colones (including 3,426,729 colones of Government silver certificates of 2 and 1 colon and 50 and 25 cents).

The metric system is now in use, the following are the old weights and measures —

The Libra	= 1 014 lb avoirdupois
„ Quintal	= 101 40 lbs „
„ Arroba	= 25 35 „
„ Fanega	= 11 bushels (imperial bushel)

The old weights and measures of Spain are in use in the country districts but the introduction of the French metric system is legally established and in general use.

CUBA.

Constitution and Government

CUBA, except for a brief period of British occupancy in 1762, remained a Spanish possession from the date of its discovery by Columbus until December 10, 1898, when the sovereignty was relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris which ended the armed intervention of the United States in the struggle of the Cubans against Spanish rule. Cuba thus became an independent State. A convention which assembled on November 5, 1900, drew up a constitution which was adopted February 21, 1901, under which the Island assumed a republican form of government, with a President, Vice President, a Senate and a House of Representatives. A law was passed in Washington authorising the President of the United States to hand over the government to the Cuban people upon the undertaking that they should conclude no treaty with a foreign power that would endanger the independence of Cuba, that no debts should be contracted for which the current revenue would not suffice, that the United States should have certain rights of intervention, and be granted the use of Naval Stations. On June 12, 1901, these conditions were accepted. On February 24, 1902, the election of the President and Vice President took place, and the control of the Island was formally transferred to the national government on May 20. The coaling stations of Guantanamo Bay and Bahia Honda were leased to the United States for 2,000 dollars annually, on July 2, 1903. A reciprocal commercial treaty, December 27, 1903 further strengthened the ties between Cuba and the United States. After political disturbances, an American Commission formed a provisional government in August, 1906, which was continued until January 28, 1909, when the national government was resumed after the institution of electoral reforms.

President — Alfredo Zayas. Born February 21, 1861. Inaugurated May 20, 1921, term expires May 20, 1925.

There is a Cabinet consisting of the Secretaries of State, of Justice, of War and Marine, of the Interior, of Finance, of Agriculture, Commerce, and Labour, of Public Instruction, of Public Works, and of Sanitation and Charity.

The National Congress is made up of a Senate (24 members, 4 for each province) and a House of Representatives (118 members, 1 for every 25,000 of the inhabitants).

Area and Population

Cuba has an area of 44,215 square miles, with a population, according to the enumeration of November, 1919, of 2,898,905. The area, population, and density of population of each of the six provinces were as follows —

Province	Area	Population in 1919	Pop. per sq. mile
	Square miles
Havana	3,174	697,583	219.77
Pinar del Rio	5,212	268,198	51.07
Matanzas	3,260	312,104	95.09
Santa Clara	8,266	657,697	79.95
Camaguey	10,076	228,913	22.71
Oriente	14,227	735,810	51.81
Total	44,215	2,898,905	65.34

The population in 1919 has increased 261,369 over that of 1916. The whites formed 74.3 and the coloured 25.7 of the total population.

Instruction.

Since the development of the Education Act of 1899, when the present system of elementary and secondary schools was introduced, education in Cuba has made rapid strides. Each municipality has a Board of Education, and Government schools are established in all towns and rural districts. Education is compulsory. In the interior regular circuits for special teachers who conduct classes in the higher subjects, travelling from school to school in succession, maintain a high standard of instruction in the rural districts. In 1919 334,671 children were enrolled in the Government schools, which had 6 151 teachers. A wide system of kindergartens has been developed and night schools for adults. In 1919, 223 new schools were established. In each province the Government maintains a special Institute for advanced education. Annexed to these Institutes are the normal schools for training teachers. Near Havana there is a special school with a staff drawn from English public schools on which the school is modelled.

University instruction is given at the University of Havana (founded in 1721), which is divided into the three Faculties of Liberal Arts and Science, of Medicine and Pharmacy, and of Law.

Shipping and Communications

In 1919, 89,136 vessels of 203,975,959 tons net entered and 88,789 vessels of 203,136,106 tons net cleared the ports of the Republic in the foreign trade. In the coastwise trade 14,684 vessels of 2,582,829 tons net entered, and 14,712 vessels of 2,584,211 tons net cleared. In 1919-20, 2,899 vessels cleared the port of Havana.

In Cuba there were, in 1919, 3,200 miles of railway—the United Railways of Havana, 705 miles, Cuba Railroad, 589 miles, Cuban Central Railway, 389 miles, and Western Railway of Havana, 147 miles. The lines now connect the principal towns and seaports from Pinar del Rio in the west, to Santiago de Cuba in the east. The larger sugar estates have private lines connecting them with the main lines. Several important railway extensions are projected. The question of the nationalization of the railways is under consideration. There are 1,285 miles of cart roads open to traffic on April 1, 1919. There are (1915) 658 post offices, 226 telegraph offices, and nine wireless stations operated by the Government.

Currency and Banking.

On November 7, 1914, a law was published authorising a new coinage issue in Cuba with a gold peso of 1.6718 grammes (1.5046 grammes fine) as the monetary unit. The gold coins are the 20, 10, 5, 4, 2 and 1 peso pieces, the 20, 10 and 5 pesos pieces are of the same weight and value as the corresponding United States gold coins. Silver is coined in pieces of 1 peso, 40 cents, 20 cents, and 10 cents, while nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 cent pieces are also issued.

The coinage of gold is unlimited, but silver must not be minted to the value of more than 12,000,000 pesos. The extent of the nickel coinage is to be determined by the National Executive. The United States coinage will still remain legal tender.

The total amount minted since coinage was first commenced is as follows: gold, 5,200,000 dollars, silver, 6,237,000 dollars, and nickel, 648,120 dollars, making in all 12,085,120 dollars. The recoinage of Spanish and French gold amounted to 9,212,250 dollars. Cuba thus possesses a stock of national coin of all kind and denomination amounting to 21,297,380 dollars, of which 14,412,250 dollars is in gold.

The National Bank of Cuba, at Havana, had assets on January 31, 1920, amounting to 145,579,273 pesos

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

(ČESKOSLOVENSKÁ REPUBLIKA)

THE term Czecho slovak<sup>s</sup> comprises two branches of the same Slav nation the seven million Czechs (pronounced Tchechs) of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, and the three million Slovaks of Slovakia, who speak a dialect of Czech.

As early as the fifth century the Czecho slovak<sup>s</sup> inhabited, as an independent nation, the territories of the ancient Kingdom of Bohemia. Christianity was introduced very early in Slovakia and Bohemia by the Slav apostles, Cyril and Methodius, and the Czechs were among the early protagonists of Protestantism in Europe.

In 1526 the Czechs elected the Habsburgs to the throne of Bohemia, and the country thus became united through a common dynasty with Austria and Hungary. Soon after their accession to the throne the Habsburgs began to violate bohemia's religious and national liberties, and this action eventually led to the Czech revolution of 1618 and the beginning of the Thirty Years' War. The Czech revolution was crushed completely at the White Mountain, near Prague, in 1620.

The literary revival of the Czech language, which commenced after the French Revolution, developed into a political movement in the 'forties, and since 1818 the Czecho slovak<sup>s</sup> have claimed the restitution of their ancient rights as an independent nation. The Czecho slovak State came into existence on October 28, 1918. On that day the Narodní Vybor (National Council) took over the government of the Czecho slovak countries, including Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, and Slovakia, which had hitherto belonged to the former Austro Hungarian Monarchy. On November 14, 1918, the Czecho slovak National Assembly met in Prague, and formally declared the Czecho slovak State to be a Republic, with Professor T. G. Masaryk as its first President.

The Colours of the Republic are white, blue and red. The National Standard consists of an upper band of white and a lower band of red, between which a blue triangle is interposed.

The Coat of Arms of the Republic is for the present that of the former kingdom of Bohemia—a red shield on which is a double tailed silver lion rampant facing to the right. (Ordinance of the Czecho slovak Government of May 19, 1919.)

Constitution and Government—The Constitution of the Czecho slovak Republic was passed by the National Assembly on February 29, 1920.

According to the terms of the Constitution, the Czecho slovak State is a democratic Republic having an elected President at its head. The territory of the Republic forms a single and indivisible unity. The region of Carpathian Ruthenia will receive autonomy. The National Parliament, which constitutes the only legislative body for the whole of the Republic, is composed of a Chamber of Deputies elected for a period of six years and containing 300 members, and of a Senate comprising 150 members to be renewed every eight years. The two Chambers in joint congress will elect the President of the Republic for seven years, and the President, as head of the State, is supreme commander of the armed forces, and can declare war with the consent of Parliament. He appoints the higher officers and officials, exercises the right of reprieve, and is himself amenable to the laws only on a charge of high treason. He also appoints and recalls Ministers. The Constitution guarantees freedom of the press and of speech, and safeguards racial minorities, to whom it assures the maintenance of their schools.

The franchise is open to all citizens, without distinction of sex, who are over 21, while all citizens over 30 are eligible for election. The electoral system is based on proportional representation.

The Constitution regulates the parliamentary elections on a 'closed scrutiny' basis, the votes being in favour of parties, not of candidates. The allocation of electoral areas is as follows:—Bohemia, 5, Moravia, 2, Teschen District, 1, Slovakia, 7.

The number of administrative districts to be set up is as follows:—Bohemia, 10, Moravia, 5, Silesia, 1, Slovakia, 6.

At the elections held in April 1920, the following parties were returned to Parliament:—

President—Thomas G. Masaryk (born in 1850 in Hodonin, in Moravia). Elected May 28, 1920.

The Czecho-slovak Government, reconstituted on September 15, 1920, consists of the following Ministers:—

Prime Minister—Dr. Černý

Minister of Foreign Affairs—Dr. E. Beneš

Minister of the Interior—Dr. Černý

Minister of Finance—Dr. Hunošek

Minister of Commerce—(Vacant April, 1921)

Minister of Public Works—M. Kovařík

Minister of Food Supplies—L. Průša

Minister of Railways—Dr. Burger

Minister of Health—Dr. Procházka

Minister of Social Welfare—Dr. J. Gruber

Minister of Justice—Dr. A. Popelka

Minister of Agriculture—Dr. Vlad. Brožík

Minister of Education—Dr. J. Šusta

Minister of National Defence—O. Husák

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs—Dr. M. Fuška

Minister for the Unification of Laws—Dr. V. Fajnor

Area and Population—The Czecho-slovak Republic consists of Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia, Silesia, and autonomous Ruthenia. Its frontiers have been defined by the Peace Treaties with Germany, Austria, and Hungary, with the exception of a few districts, notably the Teschen coal area, in which plebiscite was to decide its allegiance. The intention of holding plebiscite was, however, abandoned, and the Ambassadors' Conference, on July 28, 1920, divided the Teschen district between Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. The area and population of the various provinces, according to the census of 1910, are as follows —

	Area in Square kilometres	Area in English sq miles	Population Dec 31, 1910	Population per square kilometre
Bohemia	51,947	20,065	6,768,548	130
Moravia	22,222	8,584	2,622,271	118
Silesia	4,134	1,596	608,128	147

	140,968	54,438	13,636,390	97

The census in Slovakia held in November 1919, showed a population of 2,940,374, including 2,141,000 Slovaks, 665,000 Magyars, and 140,322 Germans

The population of the principal towns in 1910 was —

Prague	223,741	Ostrava	37,000	Kladno	19,000
Brno	125,737	Liberec	36,000	Pardubice	20,000

Bratislava	73,469	Usti	39,000	Střanice	15,000
Kosice	40,476	Vitkovice	23,000	Nitra	16,000

Religion—The majority of the population is Catholic. In 1910 the division of the population according to religion was — Roman Catholics, 11,836,933, Greek Catholics, 592,115, Protestants, 976,567, Greek Orthodox, 3,060, Old Catholics, 17,136, Jews, 365,970

In January, 1920, the reformed clergy of Czecho Slovakia decided to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Pope and to found a National Church

Instruction—Instruction is compulsory between the age of 6 and 14. The schools may be divided as follows: (1) National Schools (Elementary and Advanced Public Schools), (2) Secondary Latin and Technical Schools (Gymnasiums and Real Schools), (3) Universities and Higher Technical Schools, and (4) Trade and Arts, Commercial, Mining and Agricultural, and other special schools. There are practically no illiterates except in Slovakia.

In the following table the figures for Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia are for 1914, those for Slovakia and Ruthenia are for 1902-8 —

	Elementary Public Schools			Advanced Public Schools
	No of Schools	No of Teachers	No of Pupils	No of Schools	No of Teachers	No of Pupils

	13,638	32,984	2,082,913	1,021	5,183	172,607

In 1918-19 there were in Slovakia 3,931 elementary schools with 4 953 teachers and 390,764 pupils. Of the total number of schools in Slovakia 756 are State institutions, the rest are denominational. In other parts of the Republic the elementary schools are all State schools.

Secondary education is provided in the gymnasia and modern schools, of which the country has 74 gymnasia, 71 real gymnasia, and 71 real schools, making a total of 216. Of the 178 secondary schools in Bohemia and Moravia, 114 were Czech and 64 German. In 1920 there were opened in Slovakia 2 gymnasia, 20 real gymnasia, 1 lyceum, 6 real schools and 8 teachers' institutes. All these are State institutions. Of denominational institutions there were opened 2 Protestant and 1 Catholic teachers institutes.

There are 4 universities in Czecho Slovakia, and 4 technical high schools, with teachers and students as follows —

Universities	Teachers	Students	Technical High Schools	Teachers	Students
Prague, Czech (1348)	124	5 770	Prague, Czech	61	6,268
Prague, German	118	3,048	Prague, German	31	1,174
Brno, Czech	15	190	Brno, Czech	24	1,000
Bratislava, Slovak	9	124	Brno German	28	1,592

Justice —The courts of the Republic are —The Supreme Court of Justice and Court of Cassation sitting in Brno, 33 provincial assizes and district courts, and 410 county and police courts.

There are also special courts for commercial, industrial, revenue and other matters.

A special Administrative High Court decides matters in dispute affecting the administration, e g, appeals against illegal decisions and regulations made by State authorities, in cases of conflict between the central State authorities and the organs of the provincial local government, in cases of claims made against the State or the local administration which have been vetoed by the administrative authorities.

The debts of the new Republic fall into five categories—(1) debts resulting from the war (2) Czecho-Slovakia's share of Austria-Hungary's pre-war debt, (3) tax of liberation, i.e., contribution to the war expenses of the Allies (4) internal debt, (5) loans of the new Republic

Some particulars of these loans are given as follows—I Debts resulting from the War—(a) To United States (1) For food supplies Interest at 5 per cent No fixed period of repayment 57,744,750 dollars (2) For supplies purchased from American Liquidation Commission Interest at 5 per cent Repayable in 1922, 5,000,000 dollars, repayable in 1923, 5,000,000 dollars repayable in 1924, 14,942,546 dollars (3) For Czecho-Slovak army in Siberia Interest at 5 per cent No fixed date of repayment Amount is yet not fixed Estimate of minimum, 19,000,000 dollars (4) For war materials purchased at Coblenz, 2,710,930 dollars (b) To France (1) For war materials Interest at 5 per cent Repayable July, 1921 110,000,000 francs (2) For maintenance of Czecho-Slovak legions in France, 200,000,000 francs (c) To Italy (1) For maintenance of Czecho-Slovak army in Italy, 180,000,000 lire (2) For raw materials Due to group of Italian bankers Interest at 6 per cent 20,000,000 lire (3) For credit managed for one year on April 1, 1920, 6,000,000 lire (d) To Great Britain For relief supplies Interest at 5 per cent 304,1062

II Share of Austria-Hungary's pre-war debt—1 200,000,000 gold francs and 4 800,000,000 crowns

III Tax of liberation—750,000,000 francs

IV Internal debt—4,800,000,000 crowns of the old Austro-Hungarian Rente, and 3,000,000,000 crowns of Austro-Hungarian bank notes circulating in the Republic, making a total of 12 800,000,000 crowns

V Loans of the Republic—(1) First liberty loan, 1,000,000,000 crowns, (2) second liberty loan (4 per cent State loan), payable 1923–24, 988,022,000 crowns, (3) Loan of Government from the banks, 1,081,500,000 crowns, (4) premium 4½ per cent loan, payable 1926–60, amount not stated

The total indebtedness of the State on December 31, 1920, is given as follows—3,500,000,000 francs of foreign debt and 25,000,000,000 crowns as internal debt

A Board of Audit and Control was constituted by an enactment of March 20, 1919 It is charged with the superintendence of State economy, the State property and the national debt This Board has an equal standing with the Ministries and is independent of them. Its president is nominated, at the request of the Government, by the President of the Republic.

Defence.—The organisation of the Czecho slovak Army is only provisional. The system prevailing in the Austro Hungarian army at the moment of the collapse of the Monarchy was temporarily adopted. Within this framework and with the aid of voluntary formations as well as the co-operation of the Czecho slovak army serving abroad, in France, Italy and Russia, units were formed for the defence of the frontiers against invasion and for the maintenance of internal order. On March 20, 1920, Parliament adopted a Bill to establish a militia and the setting up of an army of 150,000 men. In accordance with the decision of Parliament and the Statutes of the League of Nations the strength of the different categories of troops and arms will be laid down.

Production and Industry—The Czecho slovak territory is one of the richest in Europe, both as regards natural resources and industrial development. Agriculture is highly developed and intensive farming is carried on.

For the years 1914 and 1919 the area and for 1919 and 1920 the yield of the crops were as follows —

Crops	Area (in 1,000 hectares)		Yield (in quintals)
	1914	1919	1919	1920
Wheat	982	337	2,959,639	2,853,016
Rye	811	733	5,769,347	4,684,114
Barley	521	961	2,791,778	2,717,460
Oats	750	554	4,008,339	4,089,057
Potatoes	491	360	23,500	—

In 1920, 471,274 acres were sown with beets. The beetroot contains 17-20 per cent sugar and is the foundation of an enormous sugar industry. There are 196 sugar factories in the country, which in 1913 produced 1,215,100 metric tons of sugar, about half of which was exported. The exports for 1919-20 amounted, however, to 259,323 tons only. Hops of excellent quality are also grown, both for export and beer production (Pilsener). In 1914 Bohemia produced 14,432 tons of hops. The agricultural industries include also flourishing beer, spirit, malt and foodstuffs industries. In 1914 the country had 639 breweries producing 11,372,447 hectolitres of beer, 1505 distilleries with an output of 1,161,147 hectolitres of spirits. Before the war the production of malt amounted to 230,000 tons, of which 190,000 tons were exported.

The number of livestock, which has also been reduced by the war, was in 1910 —cattle, 4,793,247, horses, 740,462, pigs, 2,676,525, sheep, 1,640,372, and goats, 717,669.

Large quantities of fruit are being exported. In 1912 the fruit crop yielded 414,533 tons of apples and pears and 428,687 tons of stone fruit.

As regards forest wealth, Czecho Slovakia ranks among the most richly wooded countries in Europe. The forests comprise 32 per cent of the whole area (about 12,500,000 acres). In Bohemia there are 3,753,838 acres, in Moravia, 1,557,874 acres, in Silesia, 444,812 acres, in Slovakia, 4,942,000 acres, and in autonomous Ruthenia (Podkarpatska Rus) 1,630,860 acres. The annual yield is estimated at 565,024,000 cubic feet of timber.

The mineral production of the Czechoslovak Republic comprises both soft and hard coal (chief coalfields: Brux-komota, Teplitz and Falkenau), iron, graphite, garnets. Gold, silver, copper and lead are found in the Carpathians, and rock salt in eastern Slovakia and Ruthenia. Coal production in 1919, 16,980,000 tons of lignite and 10,405,000 tons of hard coal. In 1919 there were 366 coal mines, employing 110,233 persons.

The number of factories in 1920 was 8,833. Of these 2,000 were textile mills, 1,755 glass works and precious stone factories, 1,358 for food production, 674 for furniture and bent wood manufacture, 595 machine factories, 592 for metal manufacture, 297 paper mills, 458 chemical factories. Articles produced by Czechoslovak industries include glass of all kinds, agricultural machines, electro technical goods, paper, furniture, gloves and other leather goods, textiles, &c.

Commerce—For 1919 the imports amounted to 6,555,418,562 kronen and the exports to 5,323,621,196 kronen.

Communications —There are 8,297 miles of railway line in the Republic, of which 4,928 miles are owned by the State and the remaining 3,369 miles privately owned. Of the State railways 801 miles are double tracked, and of the privately owned lines 199 miles. The total number of stations (excluding Slovensko) is 1,655.

The Peace Treaty vested the Czecho Slovak State with the right to use certain wharves in the ports of Hamburg and Stettin. Of the waterways of the country, the Danube is the most important, its chief port is Bratislava (Pressburg). On the Elbe the two main ports are Usti (Aussig) and Decin (Teschen).

In 1916 there were 3,519 post offices and 2,886 telegraph offices, and 48,210 miles of telegraph wire, 6,993,626 telegrams were despatched. In 1916 there were 56,799 telephone stations and 87,780 miles of telephone wire.

Banking and Currency —The main limited liability credit establishments of the country are the Raiffeisen Banks, the district agricultural credit banks, the municipal saving banks, and the civil credit banks, which deal with the savings of all classes of the population and satisfy their credit requirements. The financial system is supplemented by the Postal Money Order Office, which acts as intermediary in the payment of accounts, and has at its disposal all the post offices and the Clearing House at Prague. The banking department attached to the Ministry of Finance is at present also acting as a joint stock bank pending the carrying out of the legislative measures already agreed upon. There are also several district joint stock banks, such as the District Bank of Bohemia, the Agrarian Bank of Moravia, the Land Credit Establishment of Silesia, the Mortgage Bank of Bohemia, the Mortgage Bank of Moravia, and the Communal Credit Establishment of Silesia. These banks have the right to issue bonds representing advances which have been made to the Government, to municipalities, or private individuals, the security for which is guaranteed in the form of a mortgage or other lien upon landed property.

At the beginning of 1919 there were 15 commercial banks in Czecho Slovakia, with a total paid up share capital of 745,000,000 Czecho slovak crowns. Their reserve funds amounted to 334,920,000 crowns, while the total deposits of all kinds, including current accounts, represented 190,630,000 crowns. The combined assets of these banks aggregated 11,282,000,000 crowns. To meet the requirements of the trade position the banks are constantly increasing their capital. The aggregate increase of 12 banks during the first quarter of 1920 amounted to approximately 360,000,000 crowns.

A Czecho slovak Joint Stock Bank is being organised with a capital of 75 million francs in gold, and 75 thousand shares of 1,000 francs each. Of these the State will take 25,000 shares. The Government will have no vote at the general meetings of the company. The name of the bank will be "Bank of the Czecho Slovak Republic". The shareholders will be represented by the Board of Directors to which the general meeting will send six members elected for six years, while the Government will be represented by three members. The president of the Board of Directors will be nominated by the President of the Republic for the duration of six years.

It is proposed to replace the present Czecho slovak krone currency by franc currency in the ratio of 3 kronen = 1 franc.

The note circulation on January 1, 1921, amounted to 11,070,000,000 kronen.

DANZIG

(DEI FRFISIAAI DANZIG)

By Article 102 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Principal Allied and Associated Powers undertook to establish the Town of Danzig with the surrounding territory as a Free City, to be placed under the protection of the League of Nations. The League of Nations also appoints a High Commissioner.

High Commissioner —General Sir Richard Haking. Assumed office January 24, 1921.

The Treaty further provides that a Constitution shall be drawn up, and this shall be placed under the guarantee of the League of Nations. Pending the elections to the Constituent Assembly, a State Council of three was appointed by the High Commissioner (March 5, 1920). This Council was increased to nine (March 25, 1920), to include representatives of the various political parties in the future Free City.

The elections for the Constituent Assembly took place on May 16, 1920, and resulted in the following strength of the political parties.—German National People's Party, 34, Social Democrats, 19, Independents, 21, Centre Party, 17, German Democratic Party, 10, Free Economic Association Party, 12; and Polish Party, 7. The elections were universal, direct, equal, and secret on the basis of proportional representation, suffrage being granted to all men and women belonging to the State of Danzig who had attained 20 years of age, and who had been domiciled within Danzig territory on or before January 10, 1920.

The proclamation of the Freedom of the City and adjacent territory, as well as the coming into force of the Danzig Polish Treaty, took place on November 15, 1920. According to this Treaty Danzig and Poland form a single customs territory.

The Constitution (approved by the League of Nations on November 17, 1920) provides for a Volkstag or Diet of 120 members elected for 4 years, and a Senate. This consists of a President, as Chairman, a Vice President, and 20 Senators, the President and 9 Senators in main office being elected by the Volkstag for 6 years, the Vice President and the other 11 Senators for the duration of the Volkstag. Election is by majority of votes. Any citizen over 25 years of age is eligible. Senators in main office may not accept any other public or professional appointment. They are also not allowed to become directors of any trading concern. The President of the Senate directs and supervises the whole routine of the Administration. The Senate is the highest State authority, and its meetings are not public. Plebiscites take place if demanded by a 20th of the voters. Any alteration of the Constitution by the Volkstag can only be effected by a two thirds majority, with at least two thirds of the Deputies present.

After the approval of the Constitution, the Constituent Assembly proclaimed itself the Parliament of the Free City of Danzig, with powers to enact legislation until 1923.

Area and Population.—The area of the Free City of Danzig is about 709 square miles, and population 351,380 on October 8, 1919, of which about 7 per cent are Poles.

The territory contains a total of 325 localities, of which 251 are rural communes, 69 estate districts, and 5 cities. In addition to Danzig, whose administrative district has a population of 194,953, the following localities are cities—Zoppot, 18,397 inhabitants, Marienburg Kalthof, 1,791, Neuteich, 2,395, and Tiegenhof, 2,834. Several centres classed as rural communes or otherwise are considerably larger than most of the 'cities,' as appears from the following list—Ohra, 12,347, Oliva, 11,706, Praust, 3,070, Emaus, 2,321, Bürgerwiesen, 2,324, Stutthof, 2,337, Brientau, Langenau, Steegen, Lichtenau, Liessau, and Schoneberg, between 1,000 and 2,000. The number of households in the territory is 82,798.

The Free City will have the following bathing resorts—Zoppot, Oliva, Glettkau, Briesen, Neufahrwasser, Westerplatte, Weichselmunde, Heubude, Bohnsack, and Steegen.

The Free City has a total boundary line of 147 miles, of which 35 miles are on the sea. To the west the nearest Polish territory is but 5 miles from Danzig, as the crow flies.

Instruction.—In 1919 Danzig had the following municipal schools—3 higher schools for boys, with 46 classes and 1,436 pupils, 2 higher schools for girls, with 35 classes and 1,028 pupils, 3 intermediate schools, with 44 classes, 46 teachers, and 1,858 pupils, and 38 common schools, with 517 classes, 322 male and 218 female teachers, and 24,288 pupils.

The Technical High School had in the summer term of 1920 65 teachers and 864 students.

Finance.—For 1919 the Budget of Danzig balanced at 42,850,000 marks.

Years	Entered			Cleared
	Number of vessels	Total register	Total cargo	Number of vessels	Total register	Total cargo

For centuries Danzig has been a well known grain market and shipping point. Its advantageous geographical situation at the mouth of the Vistula, its vicinity to the great German, Polish, and Russian grain districts, and its foreign shipping connections have placed it at times in the first rank.

The following figures show total amounts of grain (wheat, rye, barley, oats, leguminous plants, and corn, and oleaginous seeds) received at Danzig in recent years, as well as the total outgoing shipments by the sea route. The figures showing receipts include (except for 1916, 1917, and 1918) stocks held over from the preceding years.

Years	Incoming grain received at Danzig	Outgoing grain shipped by sea	Years	Incoming grain received at Danzig	Outgoing grain shipped by sea
1909	441,705	269,687	1914	421,346	250,009

1913	541,111	336,714	1918	72,719	6,125

Sugar is next in importance to grain, and lumber ranks third as the commodities dealt in at Danzig. For lumber Great Britain is Danzig's best customer.

Communications — Danzig is connected with Poland by three main lines — Danzig to Warsaw, 204 miles, Danzig to Lodz, 263 miles, and Danzig to Posen, 192 miles.

The metric system is the sole legal system of weights and measures in Danzig.

The crown of Denmark was elective from the earliest times. In 1448, after the death of the last male scion of the Princely House of Svend Estridsen the Danish Diet elected to the throne Christian I, Count of Oldenburg, in whose family the royal dignity remained for more than four centuries, although the crown was not rendered hereditary by right till the year 1660. The direct male line of the House of Oldenburg became extinct with the sixteenth king, Frederick VII, on November 15, 1863. In view of the death of the king without direct heirs, the Great Powers of Europe, 'taking into consideration that the maintenance of the integrity of the Danish Monarchy, as connected with the general interests of the balance of power in Europe, is of high importance to the preservation of peace,' signed a treaty at London on May 8, 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown of Denmark was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig Holstein Sonderburg Glucksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse Cassel, niece of King Christian VIII of Denmark. In accordance with this treaty, a law concerning the succession to the Danish crown was adopted by the Diet, and obtained the royal sanction July 31, 1853.

King Christian X has a civil list of 1,000,000 kroner. Annuities to other members of the royal house amount to 222,000 kroner.

The present Constitution of Denmark is founded upon the 'Grundlov' (charter) of June 5, 1915, as amended on September 10, 1920. This may in many respects be said to be a further development along the lines laid down in the 'Grundlov' of June 5, 1849, the charter which introduced the Constitution in Denmark. The amendments of September 10, 1920, are mostly of a formal character, necessitated by the incorporation of parts of Slesvig in 1920.

According to the present 'Grundlov,' the legislative power lies with the King and the 'Rigsdag' (Diet) jointly. The executive power is vested in the King, who exercises his authority through the ministers. The judicial power is with the courts. The King must be a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State. The King has not the right of declaring war or signing peace without the consent of the 'Rigsdag'. The 'Rigsdag' is composed of two bodies: the 'Folketing' (House of Commons) and the 'Landsting' (Senate). All men and women 25 years of age and with a fixed place of abode possess the franchise and are eligible for election. The 'Folketing' is at present composed of 149 members, 117 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 23 districts. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 31 'Tillægsmandater' (additional seats) are divided among such parties not having obtained sufficient returns at the district elections. One member is elected for the Faroe Islands by simple majority. The term of the Legislature is four years, but the King has power to dissolve the 'Folketing' before the end of the four years. The members of the 'Landsting' are elected indirectly by the 'Folketing's' voters of 35 years of age in the following way. In every 'Folketing's' district electors in a number corresponding to the population are elected by the method of Proportional Representation. The whole country is divided into six 'Landsting's' districts. In each of these the electors elect a number of members of the 'Landsting,' between 10-12. In this way 56 members are elected, one is elected in the Faroe Islands. Moreover, there are 19 members elected by the former 'Landsting,' according to the system of Proportional Representation. The members of the 'Landsting' sit for a term of eight years. There are elections every fourth year for the half of those elected by the electors, while those elected by the 'Landsting' go out all at once after an eight years' term.

The members of the 'Rigsdag' receive 6,000 kr. or 8,000 kr. a year, according to whether their homes are in or outside the capital.

The Rigsdag must meet every year on the first Tuesday in October. To the Folketing all money bills must in the first instance be submitted by the Government. The Landsting, besides its legislative functions, has the duty of appointing from its midst every four years judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Højesteret, form the Rigsret, a tribunal who can alone try parliamentary impeachments. The ministers have free access to both of the legislative assemblies, but can only vote in the chamber of which they are members.

The executive (appointed May 4, 1920), acting under the king as president, and called the State Council—Statsraadet—consists of the following ten departments:—

1 and 2 The Presidency of the Council and Ministry of Finance — M. Neergaard.

- 3 Ministry of Foreign Affairs —Hjalald Scavenius.
- 4 Ministry of the Interior —M Sigurd Berg
- 5 Ministry of Justice —M Svenning Rytter
- 6 Ministry of Defence —M Berntsen
- 7 Ministry of Public Instruction —M Jacob Appel
- 8 Ministry of Ecclesiastical Affairs —M Christensen
- 9 Ministry of Agriculture —M Madsen Mygdal
- 10 Ministry of Transport —M Slebsager
- 11 Ministry of Commerce and Navigation —M Tyge Rothe

The ministers are individually and collectively responsible for their acts, and if impeached, and found guilty, cannot be pardoned without the consent of the Folketing

Landsting, elected September, 1920 —32 Liberals, 22 Socialists, 13 Conservatives, and 8 Radicals

Folketing, elected September, 1920 —52 Liberals, 18 Radicals, 48 Socialists, 27 Conservatives, 3 Trade Party, and 1 Slesvig (German Party)

In the year 1920 there were incorporated into Denmark parts of Slesvig which voted for Denmark at the plebiscite held in accordance with the Versailles Treaty of June 28, 1919 (made effective Jan 10, 1920) The Northern Zone voted on Feb 10, 1920, and 75,431 votes were cast for Denmark, and 25,329 votes for Germany The Southern Zone voted on March 14, 1920, and 12,800 votes were given for Denmark, and 51,724 votes for Germany The new Slesvig territories were incorporated on July 9, 1920, being officially named 'Sønderjydske Landsdele' (South Jutland Provinces)

For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 18 counties (Amt), each of which is administered by a Governor (Amtmand) Moreover, the county is a municipal division with a county council superintending the rural municipalities (about 1,200) There are 78 urban municipalities with a mayor and a town council Rural as well as urban municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage and Proportional Representation Copenhagen forms a district by itself, and has its own form of administration

Area and Population.

According to the census held on Feb 1, 1921, the area of Denmark is 16,566 square miles (42,919 square kilometres), and the population 3,268,807, including 184,133 in North Slesvig

The following table gives the area and population of Denmark in 1916 —

Divisions	Area 1911 English sq m	Population 1916	Population 1916 per sq m
City of Copenhagen (Kjobenhavn) } without suburbs }	27	506,390	18,015
Islands in the Baltic	5,117	1,161,163	226
Peninsula of Jutland	9,898	1,253,809	186
Faeroe Islands	540	19,617	36
Total .	15,582	2,940,979	180

The population (excluding the Faeroes) consisted of 1,415,822 males and 1,505,540 females in 1916 The total population at the census of 1916 was 2,921,362, showing an increase during 1911—16 of 1 16 per cent per annum In Denmark proper the town population has increased from 1,109,726 in 1911 to 1,209,975 in 1916, while the rural population has increased from 1,647,350 in 1911 to 1,711,387 in 1916. The population is almost entirely Scandinavian, in 1911, of the inhabitants of Denmark proper, 96.66 per cent were born in Denmark, 0.07 per cent were born in the Colonies, 0.15 per cent in Norway, 1.45 per cent in Sweden, 0.97 per cent in Sleswig, 0.47 per cent in other parts of Germany, and 0.23 per cent in other foreign countries. The foreign born population was thus 3.27 per cent of the whole.

The population of the capital, Copenhagen (Kjøbenhavn), in 1916 was 506,390, or with suburbs, 605,772, Aarhus, 65,858, Odense, 45,303, Aalborg, 38,102, Horsens, 25,149, Randers, 24,428.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriage with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years —

Years	Total Births (living)	Still Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1917	70,290	1,782	20,810	39,238	31,052
1918	72,511	1,882	22,977	39,037	33,474
1919	68,714	1,723	25,073	39,589	29,125

Of the births in 1917, 11.52 per cent were illegitimate, in 1918, 11.36, in 1919, 10.43. In 1917 there were 1,012 divorces, in 1918, 1,098, in 1919, 1,290.

Emigrants, chiefly to the United States, in 1917, 1,614, in 1918, 793 and in 1919, 3,341.

Religion.

The established religion of Denmark is the Lutheran, which was introduced as early as 1536. The affairs of the National Church are under the superintendence of seven bishops, who have no political character. Complete religious toleration is extended to every sect, and no civil disabilities attach to Dissenters.

According to the census of 1911 there were 2,732,792 Protestants, 9,821 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident in Copenhagen), 256 Greek Catholics, 5,164 Jews, 9,043 other or of no confession.

Instruction.

Elementary education has been widely diffused in Denmark since the beginning of the last century, and in 1814 it was made compulsory. The school age is from 7 to 14. The public schools, maintained by communal rates, are, with the exception of a few middle-class schools, free. Of public elementary schools there are 3,474 (65 in the capital, 162 in other towns, and 3,247 in rural districts), with 406,000 pupils in the year 1919, 6 of these are grammar schools, 82 Mellemskoler (middle class schools), 13 grammar schools are Government schools. Of private schools there are 29 grammar schools and 121 Mellemskoler. These 13 Government schools and 150 private schools, together with other private schools, in 1919 had an attendance of 63,000 pupils. For higher instruction there are furthermore (1919) a veterinary and agricultural college at Copenhagen with 58 professors and teachers and about 600 pupils, 203 technical schools with 23,000 pupils, 21 training colleges for teachers with 1,600 pupils, 81 commercial schools with 12,500 pupils, 21 agricultural or horticultural schools and 58 folkehøjskoler or popular high schools (adult schools with about 9,000 pupils), a college of pharmacy (founded 1892) with 10 teachers and about 80 students, a school for dentists with 23 teachers and 100 pupils, a Royal academy of arts (founded 1754) with 22 teachers and about 300 pupils, a Polytechnic Institution (founded 1829) with 98 professors and teachers and about 1,000 students. The folkehøyskoler are all private, but to them and the agricultural schools the State annually makes a grant of about 706,000 kroner. To the grammar and Mellem-skoler grants are made amounting annually to about 4,000,000 kroner. The University of Copenhagen, founded in 1479, has 5 faculties, to all of which women are admitted on equal terms with men. It has about 100 professors and teachers, and about 3,200 students.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions

Ordinary poor relief is regulated by the law of April 9, 1891 (and its amendments) under which in 1917-18, 81,097 (2 7 per cent of the population) were relieved at a cost of 24 million kroner.

Another law of 1891 concerning Old Age Pensions has been extended by enactments of 1902 and 1908 so as to provide for, and to regulate assistance granted to the aged poor. Recipients must be over 60 years of age, of good character, and must have, for the preceding 5 years, had their domicile in the country without receiving public charity. The assistance granted may be in money, or in kind, or by abode in a hospital. It must be sufficient for maintenance and for medical attendance in case of illness. The estimate of the poverty of the recipient does not include private assistance unless amounting to over 100 kroner (about 51 13s) a year. The subvention is paid by the commune of domicile and half of it is refunded by the State. For the year ending March 31, 1919, 92,731 persons were relieved, of whom 70,604 were principals and 20,127 dependants. The total expenditure was 33,711,000 kroner, of which one half was expended by the State.

According to a law of 1913 assistance without the loss of civil rights is granted to children living with their widowed mothers. The expenditure (divided between the municipalities and the State) amounted in 1918-19 to 1,893,000 kroner.

Justice and Crime.

The lowest courts of justice in Denmark are those of the hundred or district magistrates (herredsfogder and birkedommere) and town judges (byfogder). From these courts an appeal lies to the superior court (Overret), or court of second instance (Vestre Landsret), in Viborg with 12 judges, and Ostre Landsret in Copenhagen with 17 judges. The supreme court (Højesteret) or court of final appeal, with a chief justice, and 12 puisne judges, sits in Copenhagen. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1917, 4,143 men and 600 women were convicted of crimes and delicts, 44,718 persons were convicted of minor offences. On March 31, 1918, 1,065 men and 67 women were in the penitentiaries of Denmark.

Finance

By the terms of the Constitution of Denmark the annual financial budget called the 'Finanslovsforslag,' must be laid on the table of the Folketing at the beginning of each session. As to the annual financial accounts called 'Statsregnskab,' the Constitutional Charter prescribes them to be examined by four paid revisers, two of whom are elected by the Folketing and two by the Landsting. Their report is submitted to both Chambers which, after due consideration, pass their resolution generally to the effect that they have no remarks to make on the balance-sheet.

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure for the four years ending March 31 and the estimates for 1920-21 (18 16 kroner = 1l) —

Year	Revenue		Expenditure

An important feature in the administration of the finances of the kingdom is the maintenance of a reserve fund of a comparatively large amount. On March 31, 1917, it was 636,521<sup>1</sup> l, 1918, 636,785<sup>1</sup> l; 1919, 623,189<sup>1</sup> l, 1920, 539,385<sup>1</sup> l. The object of the reserve fund is to provide means at the disposal of the Government in the event of sudden occurrences.

The public debt of Denmark has been incurred in part by large annual deficits in former years, before the establishment of parliamentary government, and in part by railway undertakings and the construction of harbours, lighthouses, and other works of public importance The following table gives the national liabilities for six years —

Year ending March 31	Capital of Debt	Year ending March 31	Capital of Debt
1915	21,813,118	1918	33,519,930
1916	25,608,619	1919	43,361,483
1917	32,726,974	1920	51,458,804

The debt is divided into an internal and a foreign The total foreign debt amounted in 1920 to 14,130,282 The debt is at 3, 3½, 4 and 5 per cent

The investments of the State on March 31, 1920, including the reserve fund, the State railways, and the domains, amounted to 79,285,842

The revenue and expenditure and the property and debt of Copenhagen and of the provincial towns and places and rural communes, were as follows (year ending March 31) —

—	Revenue	Expenditure	Property	Debt
Copenhagen (1920)	£1,000	£1,000	£1,000	£1,000
Provincial Towns and Places (1919)	10,448	9,363	25,582	24,742
Rural Communes (1919)	7,504	8,618	16,516	13,234
	5,777	5,525	7,323	5,092

Defence

The Danish army is a national militia, resembling in some respects the Swiss army Every able bodied Danish subject is liable to serve in the army or navy, except the inhabitants of Iceland, and the Faroe Islands Exemptions in Denmark are few, even clergymen having to serve

Service commences at the age of 20 and lasts for 16 years For the first 8 the men belong to the active army, and for the second 8 years to the extra, or territorial, reserve At the time of joining, the recruits are continuously trained for 165 days in the infantry, 280 days in the field artillery, 1 year in the garrison artillery, and 200 days in the cavalry The engineers have 7 months', and the train 2 months' continuous training In the case of about one fourth of the men, their initial training is prolonged by periods ranging from 2½ to 8½ months, according to the arm of the service to which they belong. Subsequent training for all arms only takes place once or twice in the remaining six or seven years of army service, and then only for 25 or 30 days on each occasion

The country is divided into two territorial commands, one including Copenhagen and the three Zealand divisions, the other comprising the troops in Funen and Jutland There are 15 regiments of infantry, each of 3 or 4 battalions, and 2 battalions of Life Guards, making 52 battalions altogether. 4 regiments of cavalry, 2 regiments and 1 section of field artillery, totalling 20 four-gun batteries. 2 regiments of garrison artillery, and 1 regiment of engineers The field army consists of 3 divisions and 5 independent regiments, with a strength of 53,000 rifles and 120 field guns. The total peace strength is 78,000 men, and the additional force available on mobilisation is 105,000 men.

There is a special corps of infantry, field and garrison artillery, for the island of Bornholm. The abolition of the Copenhagen defences on the land side and of several old coastal sea forts was recommended in January, 1920. Denmark is inaugurating a Flying Corps.

Infantry and mounted troops are armed with the Krag Jorgensen 8 mm rifle or carbine, field artillery with a Krupp gun, firing a 14 88 pound shell.

About 13,000 recruits are trained annually. The military budget for 1920-21 was 17,200,000 kroner.

The Danish fleet is maintained for purposes of coast defence. It consists of four monitors, Peder Skram, Olfert Fischer, Herluf Trolle, and Niels Juels, each carrying a pair of 9 4-inch and 4 6 inch guns, a smaller monitor, Skjold (launched 1896), with one 9 4 and three 4 7-inch guns, 2 old cruisers, Hejmdal and Geyser, used for training purposes, 5 mine-layers, one sloop (ex British Asphodel), 20 first class torpedo boats, 14 submarines.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Denmark is greatly subdivided, owing partly to the state of the law, which interdicts the union of small farms into larger estates, but encourages, in various ways, the parcelling out of landed property, and leaves the tenant entire control of his land so long as the rent is paid.

Of the total area of Denmark 80 per cent is productive, about one sixth of the unproductive area is peat bogs. Of the productive area 6 per cent is forest, and of the remainder less than one half is arable, and the remainder pasture and meadows. The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows —

Crops	Area		Production
	1919	1920	1919	1920
	Acres	Acres	Tons	Tons
Wheat	124,496	156,405	161,200	189,000
Rye	518,965	525,512	378,700	319,700
Barley	568,766	596,292	533,900	512,700
Oats	966,813	1,012,787	690,700	684,100
Mixed grain	581,642	—	379,000	349,100
Potatoes	225,597	—	1,444,800	—

On July 15, 1920, there were in Denmark proper 563,467 horses, 2,286,408 head of cattle, 504,241 sheep, 1,007,861 swine, and 13,997,015 hens.

According to statistics collected on May 26, 1914, there were 82,442 industrial factories and shops in Denmark, employing altogether 346,000 persons, of whom 229,000 were skilled labourers. Of the total establishments 15,400 factories used mechanical power. In 1919 there were in Denmark 12 distilleries (Copenhagen 5), whose output of brandy reduced to 100° amounted to 4,490,000 litres. In 1919 there were produced 1,283,000 litres of excisable beer, and 1,091,000 litres small beer, not excisable. In the same year 185,220 tons of beet sugar were produced at 9 sugar factories, and 39,640 tons of margarine were manufactured at 55 factories.

In the Danish fisheries the total value of the fish caught was, in 1916, 3,210,694<sup>l</sup>, 1917, 1,953,327<sup>l</sup>, 1918, 2,318,866<sup>l</sup>, 1919, 3,006,222<sup>l</sup>. The fleet in 1919 consisted of 15,422 boats.

Commerce.

The following table shows the value, according to official returns, of the imports and general exports (excluding precious metal) for six years (18 16 kroner = 1*l*) —

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1915	64,295,777	62,736,883	1918	52,500,000	41,277,000
1916	75,411,000	72,716,000	1919	139,980,000	51,042,000
1917	60,186,000	59,186,000	1920	168,833,000	87,500,000

The exports of home produce in six years were, in sterling — 1914, 43,345,888*l* ; 1915, 54,388,000*l* ; 1916, 65,407,111*l* ; 1917, 65,463,000*l* ; 1918, 38,666,000*l* ; 1919, 41,299,000*l*

In 1918 the general imports and exports, and the special imports and exports (imports for consumption and exports of Danish produce or manufacture) were as follows (18 16 kroner = 1*l*) —

1918	Imports (General)	Imports (Special)	Exports (General)	Exports (Special)
	1,000 kroner	1,000 kroner	1,000 kroner	1,000 kroner

The treaties of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and Denmark, made in 1661 and 1670 and confirmed in 1814, provide for the 'most favoured nation' treatment.

The quantities and the values of imports, whether subject to duty or duty free, and of exports, always duty-free, are verified by the Customs authorities. The countries where the goods have been bought and to which they are sold are recorded. The general trade comprehends all imports and exports; the special trade only imports for consumption, and exports of home produce. Usually the Customs authorities easily ascertain whether imports and exports belong to the general or the special trade, but sometimes the amount of imports for home consumption is determined merely by the excess of imports over exports.

The chief imports into and domestic exports from the United Kingdom from and to Denmark in two years (Board of Trade Returns) were —

Imports into U K	1918	1919	Exports to Denmark	1918	1919
	£	£		£	£
Butter	771,291	3,947,835	Coal	2,068,546	7,081,816
Eggs	2,592,033	2,776,116	Cottons	255,319	6,979,196
Bacon	189,853	65,803	Woollen Goods	207,283	6,360,977

Total trade (Board of Trade returns) between Denmark and the United Kingdom for 5 years —

Shipping and Navigation.

On December 31, 1919, Denmark (without colonies) possessed 3,563 vessels of 524,812 registered tons in her mercantile marine, of which 514 of 382,247 tons were steamers. In 1919, 24,322 vessels of 3,007,967 tons cargo entered the Danish ports from foreign countries, and 24,400 vessels of 700,060 tons cleared.

Internal Communications.

Denmark proper (exclusive of Copenhagen) has (end of 1919) 4,197 miles of road, besides 23,654 miles of by-ways. There are (1918) railways of a total length of 2,635 English miles open for traffic in the kingdom. Of this total, 1,283 English miles belong to the State. The total value of the State railways (road, buildings, cars, etc.) up to March 31, 1920, was 894,253,272 kroner. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft 8½ inches, except 128 miles of which the gauge is 3 ft 3½ inches.

The Post Office in the year 1919-20 carried 264,215,821 letters and post cards, and 214,737,936 samples and printed matter. There are 1,250 post-offices. The State telegraphs in 1919-20 carried 5,592,657 messages, of which 1,993,723 were internal, exclusive of 349,111 official telegrams. The length of State telegraph lines (March 31, 1920) was 2,256 English miles, number of offices 194. At the same date the railway telegraphs had 423 offices. On March 31, 1920, the length of telephonic wires of the State and the private companies was 493,379 English miles. In the year 1919-20 there were 448,038,451 telephonic conversations.

Money and Credit.

On July 31, 1920, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 711,102,998 kroner. The assets included 213,941,398 kroner in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 595,600,000 kroner note issue, 27,000,000 kroner of capital, and 11,241,337 kroner reserve fund. In Denmark there are about 180 other banks for commercial, agricultural, industrial, and other purposes. On March 31, 1919, there were 511 savings banks, with 1,611,554 depositors, and deposits amounting to 1,452,276,766 kroner, or about 901 kroner to each account.

The nominal value of the coin minted (including recoinage of worn pieces) in Denmark since 1873 is given as follows —

Years ending March 31	Gold	Silver	Bronze	Total
	Kroner	Kroner	Kroner	Kroner
1873-1919	149,246,050	34,817,006	2,852,709	186,915,765
1920	—	3,342,146	311,126	3,653,271
Total (1873-1920)	149,246,050	38,159,151	3,163,835	190,569,036

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary unit, the Krone of 100 ore, is of the value of 1s 1½d, or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling.

Gold coins are 20 and 10-kroner pieces. The 20-kroner piece weighs 8.870 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 8.0645 grammes of fine gold.

The 2-kroner silver piece weighs 15 grammes 800 fine, and thus contains 12 grammes of fine silver. There are also 1 and 2 ore pieces of iron.

The standard of value is gold. Silver is legal tender up to 20 kroner.

The use of the metric system of weights and measures, under the law of May 4, 1907, became obligatory in Denmark in public offices on April 1, 1910, and generally on April 1, 1912.

ICELAND.

(ISLAND)

Reigning King.

Iceland is united with Denmark by a personal bond of union under the government of King Christian X (see Denmark)

Between 930 and 1264 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1263 the country recognised the rule of the King of Norway. In 1381, Iceland, together with Norway, came under the rule of the Danish Kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained under the rule of Denmark. Since December 1, 1918, it has been acknowledged as a sovereign State, and is united with Denmark only through the identity of the Sovereign.

King Christian X. has as King of Iceland a civil list of 60,000 kroner

Constitution and Government—By the Act of Union of November 30, 1918, Iceland is temporarily united with Denmark in certain affairs beyond the King's person.

According to the Act of Union, Denmark and Iceland are free, sovereign States, united by one King and by the agreement comprised in the Union Act. The order of succession is not to be altered without the assent of both States. In Iceland, Danish citizens enjoy the same rights as Icelandic citizens and in Denmark the latter enjoy the same rights as Danish citizens. But citizens of either of the States are exempt from military service in the other. Danish goods and products in Iceland and Icelandic goods and products in Denmark treated no less favourably than those of any other country. Denmark takes charge of the foreign affairs of Iceland, and if Iceland so desires it, special Icelandic attachés or experts on Icelandic conditions may be appointed to Danish embassies and consulates, the expenses arising out of such appointments to be borne by Iceland.

An advisory Danish Icelandic committee of six members is to be appointed to review Bills of importance to both States, and also to prepare Bills aiming at co operation between the two States. After December 31, 1940, the Danish Parliament and the Icelandic Legislature may demand negotiations to be opened concerning the revision of the Union Act.

Denmark has informed the Powers that, in conformity with the Union Act, she recognises Iceland as a sovereign State.

The present constitution of Iceland is embodied in the Charter of May 18, 1920. By the terms of this Charter the executive power belongs to the King, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, while the legislative power rests conjointly with the King and the Parliament, which is called Althing. The Althing is composed of 42 members, of whom 36 are elected for the term of 4 years by universal suffrage in constituencies, each electing one or two representatives by simple majority, except the capital, where 4 members are elected by Proportional Representation. The remaining 6 members are elected for the term of 8 years by Proportional Representation for the whole country. The franchise is enjoyed by all Icelandic citizens (men and women) of good reputation (unless they are indebted for poor relief) who are over 25 years of age and have resided in the country during the previous 5 years. All voters are eligible as candidates, save only the superior judges.

The Althing is divided into two Houses, the Upper House and the Lower House. The former is composed of 14 members viz the 6 members elected by Proportional Representation together with 8 members elected by the whole Althing in common sitting out of the members elected by universal suffrage. The remaining 28 members form the Lower House. The members of the Althing receive payment for their services besides travelling expenses, members residing in the capital are allowed 8 krónur (8s 11d) per day, and members residing outside the capital 10 krónur (11s 1d) per day. This payment has temporarily been raised by 137 per cent.

The Althing must meet on February 15 in every year, unless it is convoked by the King at an earlier date. The Budget Bills must first be laid by the Government before the Lower House, but all other Bills can be introduced in either of the Houses. If the Houses do not agree they assemble in a common sitting, and the final decision is given by a majority of two thirds of the voters, with the exception of Budget Bills, where a simple majority is sufficient. The ministers have free access to both Houses, but can only vote in the House of which they are members.

The executive power is exercised under the King by a ministry divided into 3 departments. The ministry, appointed February 25, 1920, is as follows —

President of the Council and Minister of Justice and of Ecclesiastical Affairs—Jón Magnússon

Minister of Trade and Communications—Pjetur Jónsson

Minister of Finance—Magnús Guðmundsson

The ministers are responsible for their acts. They can be impeached by the Althingi, and in that case their cause will be decided by the Landsdómur, a special tribunal, which can only try parliamentary impeachments.

For administrative purposes Iceland is divided into 16 provinces (sýslur), each governed by a chief executive functionary (sýslumaður). Each province forms one or two municipal districts with a council superintending the rural municipalities (about 200). There are also 7 urban municipalities with a town council, independent of the provinces, and forming by themselves administrative districts co ordinate with the provinces. The municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage (men and women over 25 years of age), in urban municipalities by Proportional Representation, but in rural municipalities by simple majority.

Area and Population—The following table gives the area and population of Iceland in 1910 —

Divisions	Area, English sq m	Population, 1910	Population, 1910, Per sq m
The South-West	4,125	27,863	68
The Western peninsula	3,658	13,386	37
The North	13,695	20,971	15
The East	5,954	8,545	14
The South	12,277	14,378	12
Total	39,709	85,183	21

On December 31, 1919, the population was estimated at 92,818. The growth of the population has been as follows —

Year	Population	Increase per cent annually	Year	Population	Increase per cent annually
1880	72,445	—	1901	78,470	0.92
1890	70,927	0.21	1910	85,183	0.91

In 1910 there were 41,105 males and 44,078 females. The conjugal condition was as follows, —

	Unmarried	Married	Widowed	Divorced
Males	27,444	11,921	1,528	212
Females	28,309	11,859	3,688	222

In 1910, 57,719 were domiciled in rural districts, and 27,464 in towns and villages (of over 300 inhabitants). The population is almost entirely Icelandic. In 1910 the foreign born population numbered only 706, or 0.6 per cent of the whole, 360 were born in Denmark, 194 in Norway, and 152 in other countries.

According to occupation the population of Iceland in 1910 was classified as follows —

Immaterial production	2,602	Pensioners and capitalists	902
Agriculture	43,411	Relieved by public assistance	1,060
Fishing	15,890	Profession not stated	644
Industry	6,081
Commerce and transport	3,940
Day labourers and domestic servants	10,108	Total	85,183

The capital of Iceland, Reykjavik, had in 1919 a population of 16,154, other towns are Akureyri, 2,256, Vestmannaeyjar, 2,154, Hafnarfjörður, 2,052, Ísafjörður, 1,900.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages, with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years —

Years	Marriages	Total living Births	Stillborn	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1916	574	2,329	83	1,285	1,044
1917	547	2,420	55	1,087	1,333
1918	601	2,719	75	1,478	941

Of the births in 1918, 14.1 per cent were illegitimate (14.3 per cent in 1917)

Emigrants, chiefly to Canada, 215 in 1912, 294 in 1913, 141 in 1914, and 7 in 1915

Religion.—The national Church, and the only one endowed by the State, is Evangelical Lutheran. But there is complete religious liberty, and no civil disabilities are attached to those not of the national religion. The affairs of the national Church are under the superintendence of one bishop. At the census of 1910 only 288 were returned as Dissenters.

Instruction.—There is a University in Reykjavík, comprising 4 faculties (Theology, Medicine, Jurisprudence, and Philosophy). There is one grammar school, 3 public high schools, besides 2 ladies' schools, a school for elementary school teachers, 2 schools of agriculture, a school of navigation, a commercial high school, and several other special schools. The elementary instruction is compulsory for a period of 5 years, the school age being from 10 to 14 years. Before the age of 10 the children are usually privately educated, at any rate in the country. In 1916-17 there were 465 elementary schools, with 353 teachers and 6,920 pupils. There are also several continuation schools for young people.

Pauperism and Old-Age Pensions.—Ordinary poor relief is regulated by the law of November 10, 1905. Each community constitutes a poor district. In 1910 the number of paupers relieved was 2,149. The expenditure amounted to 7,500*l*.

There is in every community one Old Age Pension Fund, to which all men and women from 18 to 60 years of age, to whom pensions are not otherwise secured, are bound to contribute, unless they are considered too poor to do so. In addition the funds receive a subvention from the State. Grants are made to infirm poor persons over 60 years of age who for the preceding 5 years have not received poor relief. In 1915 these were granted subvention from the funds to an amount of 2,500*l*, and at the end of that year the total property of the funds amounted to 18,000*l*.

Justice and Crime.—The lower courts of justice in Iceland are those of the provincial magistrates (sýslumenn) and town judges (bæjarfógetar). From these there is an appeal to the Supreme Court (hæstiréttur) in Reykjavík, which has 5 judges. In 1918, 24 persons were convicted of crimes.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 6 years —

The State possesses a comparatively large reserve fund invested in different loans. On December 31, 1919, it amounted to 1,716,000 krónur (about 94,500*l* ).

The public debt of Iceland has been incurred partly by the establishment of telegraph lines and other important public works, partly by increasing the means of the National Bank, but mainly owing to the extraordinary expenses caused by the European War (buying of ships and providing of commodities). The public debt was on December 31, 1919, 16,064,521 krónur (992,245*l* ). It is in a great measure a foreign debt, due to Danish creditors. The foreign debt amounted to 9,630,364 krónur, and the internal debt 6,434,157 krónur.

The income of the communes in 1915 was 1,501,000 krónur, and the expenditure 1,462,000 krónur.

Defence.—Iceland possesses neither an army nor a navy, nor any fortifications, and according to the Act of Union of 1918 its permanent neutrality is established.

Production—Of the total area of Iceland, about six sevenths is unproductive, but only about one quarter per cent is under cultivation, which is confined to hay, potatoes, and turnips. In 1919 the total hay crop from cultivated and uncultivated land was about 2,600,000 cwt, the crop of potatoes 65,000 cwt, and of turnips 18,000 cwt. In the spring of 1919 the live stock was as follows—Horses 51,500, head of cattle 25,600, sheep 580,000, goats 1,900.

The total value of the fisheries in 1917 was estimated at 19,800,000 krónur (about 1,065,000*l* ), whereof the cod fishery was valued at 16,200,000 krónur, the herring fishery at 2,900,000 krónur, and the shark fishery at 200,000 krónur.

ECUADOR.

(REPÚBLICA DEL ECUADOR)

Constitution and Government

The Republic of Ecuador was constituted May 11, 1830, in consequence of a civil war which separated the members of the original Republic of Colombia, founded by Simon Bolivar, by uniting the Presidency of Quito to the Vice-Royalty of New Grenada, and the Captaincy-General of Venezuela, when they threw off the Spanish yoke. Under the present Constitution, promulgated December 28, 1906, the executive is vested in a President, elected for the term of four years, while the legislative power is given to a Congress of two Houses, the first consisting of thirty two senators, two for each province (chosen for four years), and the second of 48 deputies, on the basis of one deputy for every 30,000 inhabitants, chosen for two years, both elected by adults who can read and write. The Congress meets on the 10th of August of every year at Quito, the capital, without being summoned by the Government. The election of the President takes place in a direct manner by the people. Under the present constitution there is no election for Vice President. In case of death, or other cause of vacancy in the office of President, he is replaced (1) by the President of the Senate of the Last Congress, and (2) if he should also fail, by the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

President of the Republic —Dr Jose Luis Tamayo (September 1, 1920, to August 31, 1924)

The President, who receives a salary of 24,000 sucres a year, theoretically exercises his functions through a Cabinet of five ministers (Interior, Foreign Affairs, Public Instruction, Finance, and War) who, together with himself, may be impeached by Congress. Each minister receives a salary of 9,600 sucres a year. The President has the power of veto, but if Congress insist on a vetoed bill becoming law, he has no alternative but to give his assent to it. He may summon an Extraordinary Congress for a specified purpose, but he cannot dissolve the Chambers or shorten their sittings.

The Council of State is formed by the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, who presides over it, the President of the Court of Accounts, the five Secretaries of State who can report but not vote, two Senators, two Deputies, and three citizens elected annually by Congress and who, in order to be eligible, must have the qualifications necessary for being a Senator.

By the terms of the Constitution privileges of rank and race are not allowed to exist within the Republic. Until October 20, 1918, most of the Indians were virtually in bondage and peonage and debt servitude existed in its worst forms on the landed estates. But by a Legislative decree of that date peonage was abolished. By an edict of 1896 the Indians are exempted from paying tribute, and are admitted to citizenship.

The Provinces are administered by Governors, appointed by the Government; their subdivisions, or cantons, by political chiefs, and the parishes by political lieutenants. The Galapagos Archipelago is under the administration of a Territorial Chief, whose functions are the same as those of a Provincial Governor.

Area and Population:

The area of Ecuador is about 116,000 square miles, but the frontiers have not been settled, so that estimates of the area vary. Ecuador is said to have more boundaries than any other country, and there are maps of the Republic showing six different frontiers according to six different opinions. The country is divided into fifteen provinces, one territory—"El Oriente"—and the Archipelago of Galapagos—officially called "Colon." The bulk of the population is Indian, inhabitants of pure European blood are few, those of mixed blood are estimated at about 400,000. Included in the above statement are the Galapagos or Tortoise Islands, with an area of 2,400 square miles, and a population of about 400.

Ecuador still has a boundary dispute with Peru. That with Colombia was settled by Treaty in 1917.

The population of the Republic (1903) was distributed as follows among the provinces (capitals in brackets) —

Provinces	Population	Provinces	Population
Azuay (Cuenca)	132,400	Loja (Loja)	66,000
Bolívar (Guaranda)	43,000	Manabí (Puertoviejo)	64,100
Cañar (Azogues)	61,000	Oriente <sup>2</sup> (Archidona)	80,000
Carchi (Tulcán)	36,000	Oro (Machala)	32,600
Chimborazo (Riobamba)	122,000	Pichincha (Quito)	205,000
Esmeraldas (Esmeraldas)	14,600	Los Ríos (Babahoyo)	32,800
Colon <sup>1</sup> (San Cristóbal)	400	Tungurahua (Ambato)	103,000
Guayas (Guayaquil)	150,000
Imbabura (Ibarra)	68,000	Total	1,323,590
Leon (Latacunga)	109,600

Estimated population 1915 2,000,000

The chief towns are the capital, Quito (70,000), Guayaquil (93,851 in 1919), Cuenca (50,000), Riobamba (18,000), Ambato, Loja, and Latacunga (each about 10,000), Bahía (8,000), Esmeraldas (4,000).

In 1917 there were 74,386 births, 10,016 marriages and 41,531 deaths. Increase of births over deaths, 32,855.

Religion and Instruction.

According to the Constitution the State recognises no religion, but grants freedom of worship to all. The Catholic Church has one archbishop (Quito) and six suffragan bishops. Its income, in substitution for tithes, is annually provided for in the estimates. All members of the Episcopate are required to be Ecuadorian citizens. Civil marriages are obligatory in accordance with regulations prescribed by law of December, 1902.

Public instruction was organised in 1897 and improved in 1912. Primary education is gratuitous and obligatory. Higher education is carried on in the Central University at Quito (founded in the eighteenth century by the Dominicans), which has the faculties of medicine, pharmacy, science, and law; at the Guayas University, in Guayaquil, and at the Azuay University, in Cuenca. The two latter have faculties of medicine, pharmacy, and jurisprudence. Total number of students (1919-20), 744. There is also a law college at Loja. During the school year 1919-20 there were 1,664 schools in operation in the Republic, 1,359 of which were Government schools, 168 municipal, and 137 private schools. The total attendance at these schools in 1919-20 was 92,512 (50,502 males and 42,010 females). The Government schools had an attendance of 63,395 pupils (35,982 boys and 27,413 girls). The attendance in the municipal schools was 16,055 (8,610 boys and 7,445 girls). The attendance in the private schools was 13,062 (5,910 boys and 7,152 girls). These schools employed 2,307 teachers (1,002 males and 1,305 females). Total expenditure on elementary education, 1920, 200,401*l*, on secondary education, 90,817*l*, and for the universities, 72,435*l*, making a total of 313,707*l*.

Justice and Crime.

The appellate courts are the Supreme Court in Quito, which is the highest tribunal and consists of 5 justices elected by Congress for a term of 6 years. The six superior courts are located at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca, Riobamba, Loja and Portoviejo. The first two are composed of 6 judges, the remainder of 3 judges each, all elected by Congress for 6 years. The Court of Accounts is empowered to audit and investigate all public accounts. In the Republic there are 359 parochial justices.

Finance.

Of the total revenue about 70 per cent is derived from customs duties, 15 per cent from taxes on cocoa, real estate, white rum, and tobacco, 6 per cent from salt and the remainder mostly from excise, rents of State property, and the postal department. The revenue and expenditure for recent years are given as follows in sterling (1 sucre = 24*d*), but the figures are not to be taken as representing the exact state of affairs —

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	1,882,866	1,401,544	1,549,727	1,999,566	2,028,570
Expenditure	1,796,496	1,588,771	1,850,526	1,999,566	2,028,570

On December 31, 1919, the foreign debt amounted to 3,558,861*l* and the internal debt to 2,262,448*l*, making a total of 5,821,309*l*.

Defence.

The Ecuadorian regular army has an establishment of 597 officers and 4,855 men. This force is composed of 10 battalions of infantry, 1 regiment of cavalry, and 12 batteries of artillery which form the active army. Military service was made compulsory on May 24, 1921. The regular infantry have the Mauser rifle; the artillery have Vickers Maxim, old fashioned Krupps and new Ehrards. Military service is not obligatory. The country is divided into 6 military districts. Military schools are established at Quito.

The Navy consists of three vessels, the Libertador Bolivar, a torpedo gunboat, the Cotopaxi, an old destroyer, and the Tarqui y el Patria.

Production and Industry.

Ecuador is divided into two agricultural zones, the coast regions and the lower river valleys, where tropical farming is carried on; and the hill country, the foothills, and the high mountain valleys, adapted to grazing, dairying, and the production of hay, grain, and the fruits and vegetables to temperate climes. The staple produce of Ecuador is cocoa. The production of cocoa beans was in 1915, 769,750 cwts., in 1916, 1,079,250 cwts., in 1917, 68,359 cwts., in 1918, 37,507 cwts., and in 1919, 22,474 cwts. The largest cocoa estate in the country has been taken over by an English company. Coffee is also grown, the exports in 1919 were 3,729,451 lbs. Rubber plantations have been formed in the Balzar and Tenguel districts and in Manabí and Esmeraldas, with more than a million trees. The rubber exports in 1919 amounted to 886,373 lbs. But rubber is rapidly declining on account of the destructive methods employed in its collection. Other products are tagua (ivory nuts), tobacco, the annual yield of which is about 3,000 lbs., and sugar. Mangrove bark (for tanning), alligator skins, and kapok (silk cotton tree fibre, Bombax ceiba) are exported in small quantities.

Ecuador is auriferous. At Pillzhum in Cañar rich silver ore is found, but is not now worked. Petroleum is found, the oil-fields of Santa Elena are being worked by two British Companies. The country is known to be also rich in copper, iron, lead and coal, and sulphur exists in great quantities in the Chimborazo district and in the Galapagos Islands.

Excepting the inter Andean plateau and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. Roughly estimated, 10,000 square miles on the Pacific slope extending from the sea to an altitude of 5,000 feet on the Andes, and the Amazon Basin below the same level containing 80,000 square miles, nearly all virgin forest, are rich in dyewoods, cinchona trees, and other valuable timber.

Panama hats are made almost exclusively in Ecuador, the principal centres being Monticristi, Jipijapa and Cuenca. The Government of Ecuador attempted to monopolise the hat business for its own people by placing a heavy export duty on "paja toquilla," but large quantities of the material still go to Peru, and Payta, Peru, where little "toquilla" is grown, is a strong competitor of Ecuador in the manufacture of Panama hats. There are flour mills, 13 sugar works, breweries, and chocolate factories.

Commerce

The value of imports and exports for five years is given as follows in sterling (10 sucres = £1) —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919

In 1919 the chief exports were cocoa 2,949,104*l*, tagua, or ivory nuts, 431,855*l*, hats, 343,526*l*, coffee, 126,230*l*, hides, 119,531*l*, rubber, 45,246*l*. The chief imports in 1919 were woven goods, 582,223*l*, food stuffs, 438,339*l*; machinery, 220,207*l*; clothing, 51,923*l*. Of the imports in 1919, the value of 1,681,277*l* was from the United States, 378,126*l* from Great Britain; 65,776*l* from Peru, 63,914*l* from France.

The chief articles of import from Ecuador into Great Britain (according to Board of Trade returns) in 1919 consisted of cocoa of the value of 887,004*l*; hides, 97,573*l*, straw hats, 109,539*l*. The chief exports of British produce to Ecuador in 1919 were cotton goods, to the value of 147,341*l*, woollens, 31,556*l*, iron, wrought and unwrought, 16,956*l*.

Shipping and Internal Communications.

In 1918 there entered at Guayaquil 160 steam vessels of 195,958 tons (84 vessels of 117,341 tons British), and cleared 158 vessels of 181,537 tons (80 vessels of 102,719 tons British). Guayaquil is visited by the steamers of three European lines passing through Magellan's Straits, as well as by steamers plying only on the Pacific coast.

The roads of the country are mostly bridle-roads only, and often impassable for half the year. The one highway is from Quito towards Guayaquil, for a distance of 115 miles, but the work of thus connecting the capital and the port has long been discontinued. In 1917 it was decided to construct a road of 20 miles from Guayaquil to Pasquales on the Daule river. There is river communication throughout the principal agricultural districts on the low grounds to the west of the Cordillera by the rivers Guayas, Daule, and Vinces (navigable for 200 miles by river steamers in the rainy season), and other small affluents thereof. Navigation of these inland waters is carried on by about 17 American and Ecuadorian built side-wheel and screw steamers, 20 steam yachts or tow ferry boats, many small steam launches, and a large fleet of gasoline launches, canoes, and other small craft.

A railway is open from Duran (opposite Guayaquil) to Quito (280 miles). Total length of lines about 365 miles (1917). The journey from Guayaquil to Quito takes two days, with a stop at Riobamba where the passengers spend the night, 12 hours trip first day and 9 hours second day. Railways for the development of local trade have been undertaken by several local authorities.

The total length of telegraph line (1915) is about 4,360 miles, Quito being connected with Guayaquil and the coast, with the Republics of Colombia and Peru, and by cable with the rest of the world. There are 204 telegraph stations through which 400,000 messages were sent. In 1915 there were 2,926 telephone instruments in Ecuador (2,250 in Guayaquil) and 2,815 miles of wire. Wireless telegraphy has been installed. At present there are only in operation two stations one in Quito, and one in Guayaquil. Further stations are projected at Puna, Puerto Bolivar, and Bahia.

On January 1st, 1915, there were 194 post offices in the country, handling 5,480,951 pieces of postal matter.

Banking and Credit.

Ecuador having no mint, the coin of the country is minted in England, the United States, and Peru.

There is no national money in Ecuador, the circulating medium being issued wholly by the banks under government direction and control. Four banks are authorised to issue notes for circulation, viz., the Banco del Ecuador; capital 300,000L., the Banco Comercial y Agrícola, capital 500,000L., Banco del Azuay, capital 50,000L., and the Banco del Pichincha 200,000L. On December 31, 1918, there were in circulation in Ecuador Bank notes of the value of 1,862,321L.; gold coin, 538,128L.; and silver coin, 324,447L., making a total of 2,724,896L.

Money, Weights and Measures.

A law passed in 1898 provided for a gold standard, which was established on June 4, 1900. The new coinage consists of the gold condor of 10 sucres weighing 8 136 grams, and containing 7 3224 grams of fine gold (equivalent to the English sovereign), the silver sucre and its sub divisions, and nickel and copper pieces. The sucre, so called from the likeness of Marshal Sucre (a former President) imprinted on the coin, is legal tender only up to 10 sucres. In 1917 subsidiary nickel coins of 5 and 10 centavos were issued.

By a law of December 6, 1856, the French metrical system of weights and measures was made the legal standard of the Republic, but is not adopted by commerce. The quintal is equivalent to about 101 pounds.

ESTHONIA.

(EESTI VABARIIK)

Esthonia comprises the former Russian Government of Estland, the northern part of Livland, the north western portion of the Pskoff Government, and the Islands Saaremaa (Oesel), Hiiumaa (Dago), and Muhumaa in the Baltic Sea

After the Bolshevik coup d'état, Esthonia, on February 24, 1918, declared her independence, and was recognised in the same year as a de facto independent body by Great Britain (May 3), France (May 13), and Italy (May 29). The following year (1919) Esthonia was recognised de facto by Japan, Sweden and Poland, and in 1920 de jure by Russia and Finland. On January 26, 1921, the Supreme Council accorded de jure recognition to Esthonia.

Constitution and Government—Pending the elaboration of a permanent constitution, Esthonia was governed according to a Provisional Constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly on June 4, 1919. According to this the Supreme Power was vested in the Constituent Assembly, which was composed of 120 members.

The Constitution of the Esthonian Republic was passed by the Constituent Assembly on June 15, 1920, and has been in force since December 20, 1920.

The power of the State is in the hands of the people. The sovereign power is assured to the people by means of the elections to the Legislative Assembly (Riigikogu, State Assembly), the referendum, and the right of initiating legislation.

The State Assembly is composed of 100 members, elected for three years on the basis of proportional representation, and by universal, direct, equal, and secret suffrage. The Assembly forms the Government, and accepts its resignation, promulgates the laws, passes the budget, decides the financial policy generally, ratifies treaties, the mobilisation decree, and state of siege, &c.

The signatures of 25,000 citizens are necessary in demanding a referendum, proposing a new law, or amending the existing laws. The budget and measures affecting war, peace and foreign treaties cannot be submitted to a referendum.

The executive power consists of the State Head (Riigivanem, State Elder), and ministers, who form the Government. The Government directs the foreign and home policy of the Republic, appoints officials (except where special laws exist), and introduces legislation. It is chosen by the State Assembly, and is responsible to that body. The Government collectively and individually must possess the confidence of the Assembly, and must resign if a vote of no confidence is passed. The Government is the Commander in Chief of the Republican defence forces in peace time.

The members of local organs of self government are elected on a basis similar to that on which rests the elections to the State Assembly. If the law has not created special offices, the executive power of the Government is exercised through the local government institutions.

All Esthonian citizens are equal in the eyes of the law. There is no death penalty.

The national flag of Esthonia is blue, black and white in horizontal stripes.

The elections for the Esthonian Diet were held on November 28, 1920, and resulted in the return of the following parties —Reformist Labour, 22, Agrarians, 21, Populists, 10; Christian Party, 7, Social Democrats, 18, Independent Socialists, 11, Bolsheviks, 5, Balts, 4, Russian, 1, Economist Group, 1, making a total of 100

Area and Population —The boundary line between Esthonia and Russia is defined by the Peace Treaty of February 2, 1920. The boundaries between Esthonia and Latvia were settled on July 3, 1920. The extreme length is about 217 miles, and the breadth about 124 miles, the total area being about 23,160 square miles.

The population of 1,750,000 is composed as to 95 per cent of Esthonians, 2 per cent of Germans (Balts), 1 per cent of Russians, 0.9 per cent of Letts and Lithuanians, 0.8 per cent of Swedes, and 0.5 per cent of Jews, &c.

The Republic is divided into nine districts, as follows (the capitals are given in brackets, and when two are given the second mentioned is the German name) —Harju (Tallinn-Reval), Wiru (Rakvere-Wesenberg), Jarva (Laide-Weissenstein), Laane (Hapsal), Tartu (Taitu-Dorpat), Woru (Woru), Wiljandi (Wiljandi-Fellin), Parnu (Parnu), Saaremaa-Oesel (Kuresaare-Arensburg). The capital, Tallinn (Reval) was founded in 1219 at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, and in 1917 had 160,000 inhabitants. The university town of Tartu (Dorpat) had 60,000 inhabitants. The population of the port of Parnu, on the Gulf of Riga, was 23,000, and that of the manufacturing town of Naiva 35,000.

Religion and Instruction —There is no State religion in Esthonia. Five sixths of the population are Lutherans, the rest Orthodox, Catholics, &c.

Elementary education is obligatory and gratuitous. In 1897 the illiterates among the population above the age of 10 years numbered 3 per cent. In 1919 there were 1,257 elementary schools with a four years' course in the Esthonian Republic. Of this number 1,227 were supported by self government institutions, for example of communities, suburbs, towns or of the State, and 30 were private schools kept by private individuals. The number of higher schools with a seven years' course amounted to 211, seven of which are private. The number of middle schools for general education, gymnasiums, and so on, was 65, of which number 32 were private schools (mostly supported by the Government).

For special or professional education there are teachers' seminaries in Tallinn, Tartu, and Rakvere, navigation schools in Tallinn, Kaumu, Kuresaare, and Parnu, commercial schools with an eight years' course, agricultural schools with a four years' course, mercantile schools with a four years' course, and industrial and art schools with a six years' course.

The minority nationals (Germans, Russians, Swedes, and Letts) are guaranteed education in their mother tongue.

For higher education there are the Dorpat University (founded in 1632), which on December 1, 1919, was re opened as an Esthonian seat of learning maintained by the Government; number of students (1920) 2,127; the Technicum at Tallinn is a higher professional school with 500 students in 1920

Justice—The supreme judicial power is invested in the State Court of Justice, which is elected by the State Assembly and sits in Tartu (Dorpat)
The laws are being gradually revised by the State Assembly

Finance—The total State expenditure for the year 1919 was 1,500,000,000 marks (analogous to the Finnish marks and equal to 100 pence) For 1920 the revenue was estimated at 1,071,500,000 marks, and the expenditure at 979,450,000 marks

Particulars of the Budget estimates for 1920 are given as follows —

Revenue	1,000 Marks	Expenditure	1,000 Marks
Income Tax	180,000	Ministry of War	168,000
Other taxes	160,000	" " Communica-

Extraordinary	125,000	Other Ministries	311,450
Total	1,071,500	Total	979,450

Defence.—During the war with Soviet Russia all classes from 19 to 35 years were mobilised, and an army of more than 90,000 was created. The army is composed of three divisions. In peace times the army consists of 16,000 men. The Esthonian Fleet consists of two destroyers and two gunboats.

Production.—Agriculture is the chief occupation. Half the area of Esthonia was taken up by large landed properties of more than 2,000 hectares each. By the passing of the Agrarian Reform Bill these estates were parcelled out to the peasants. The arable land is divided as follows — Fields, 2,318,004 acres, meadows, 2,408,840 acres, pastures, 1,671,837 acres. Twenty per cent of the surface is forest land. The principal crops, with acreage and yield, are shown as follows —

	Acreage		Yield in Bushels
	1919	1920	1919	1920
Rye	325,886	376,004	4,908,402	6,485,488

FINLAND.

(SUOMEN TASAVALTA)

Finland is a Republic according to the Constitutional Law of June 14, 1919

From 1809 Finland was united to the Russian Empire as an autonomous Grand-Duchy. On December 6, 1917, the House of Representatives unanimously proclaimed Finland an independent and sovereign State, and she has been recognised as such by the Powers. According to the Constitutional Law of 1906, the House of Representatives consists of one Chamber of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election, in which all who are entitled to vote have an equal vote. The suffrage is possessed, with the usual exceptions, by every Finnish citizen (man or woman) who has reached his or her 24th year. There are 16 electoral districts with a representation proportioned to the population, a rearrangement being required every 10 years. Each district is divided into voting circuits. The voting system, devised with a view to proportional representation, provides for the formation of voters' associations which prepare three-name lists of candidates, the votes for whom are in a falling scale according to the order in which the voter has placed them. There may, within limits, be compacts between associations, and joint candidates may be entered in competing lists, while any voter may either support an association list or vote for any candidate he pleases. Every citizen entitled to vote is eligible to the House of Representatives, which is elected for 3 years. The President is elected for 6 years by the votes of the citizens. He receives a salary of 150,000 marks and 250,000 marks for allowances.

At the elections held in March, 1919, the following parties were returned—Social Democrats, 80, Finnish Coalition Party, 28, Finnish Progressive Party, 26, Agrarians, 42, Swedish Party, 22, and Christian Labour Party, 2.

President of Finland—Professor Kaarlo Juho Ståhlberg (elected July, 1919)

The Finnish Cabinet, appointed April, 1921, is composed as follows—

Prime Minister—Dr Juho Vennola

Minister for Foreign Affairs—Dr Eino Rudolf Woldemar Holsti

Minister of Finance—Risto Ryti

Minister of the Interior—Heikki Ritavuori

Minister of Justice—Dr Heimo Helminen

Minister of Education—Nilo Liakka

Minister of War—Lieutenant Colonel O. Hämdäinen.

Minister of Communications—Erkki Pullinen

Minister of Commerce and Industries—Erkki Makkonen

Minister of Agriculture—Kyösti Kallio.

Minister without Portfolio—Juho Nuukkanen

Area and Population.

Area, 125,689 square miles. Of the area, 10.83 per cent is under lakes.

By a peace treaty between the Soviet Government of Russia and the Finnish Government, ratified on December 31, 1920, the former agreed to make over to the latter the territory of Petschenga extending from the northern boundary of Finland, north east of the Arctic Ocean Finland took possession on February 13, 1921. The territory has been renamed Petsamo. The new territory has an area of 3,860 square miles, and a population of 1,700 (700 Finns, 300 Karelians, 400 Lapps, 300 Russians). The population is concentrated in village communities near Petchengafjord. Petsamo will constitute a separate province. The territory is in a very backward condition. Its formerly flourishing seal fishery, agriculture, and reindeer rearing are practically at a standstill. An administration is being established which will make the necessary arrangements for developing the resources of the country, railways (there is only one bad road), posts, telegraphs, education, and other departments that will place the country on a level with Finland. The total area of Finland is thus 129,549 square miles.

Years	In Towns	In Country	Total	Men	Women
1914	504,337	2,765,064	3,269,401	1,628,856	1,642,545
1915	512,226	2,788,424	3,300,650	1,643,207	1,657,443
1916	521,208	2,803,795	3,325,003	1,655,911	1,669,092
1917	528,515	2,818,338	3,346,853	1,667,210	1,679,643
1918	522,608	2,809,206	3,331,814	1,646,227	1,685,587

Of the total population there were at end of 1917 — Lutherans, 3,283,035, Greek Catholics and Raskolniks, 56,815, Roman Catholics, 606, Baptists, etc., 6,397.

The chief towns, with population, of Finland are (1919) — Helsinki (Helsingfors) (with Suomenlinna), 187,544, Turku (Åbo), 56,168, Tampere (Tammerfors), 46,353, Viipuri (Viborg), 29,753, Oulu (Uleåborg), 21,940, Porvoo (Björneborg), 17,603, Vaasa (Vasa), 24,776, Kuopio, 18,106.

The movement of the population for three years was as follows —

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Excess of Births
1916	19,297	79,653	54,577	25,076
1917	20,004	81,046	58,863	22,183
1918	15,008	79,494	95,102	- 15,608

The births and deaths are exclusive of still births, numbering, in 1918, 2,001 or 2.46 per cent of total births.

Emigration, 1914, 6,474, 1915, 4,041, 1916, 5,325, 1917, 2,773, 1918, 1,900; 1919, 1,085.

Instruction

In 1918 Finland had 1 university (at Helsingfors) (founded in 1640 at Åbo, and removed to Helsingfors after having been burned down in 1827), with 2,563 students (774 women), in 1919 a second university, entirely Swedish, was opened at Åbo. In 1918 there were also 1 technical high school, 609 students (19 women), 2 commercial high schools with 156 students. For secondary education there were in 1919 76 lyceums, with a curriculum of 8 or 9 years, 18,037 pupils (6,797 girls), 36 middle schools (the first five years of the curriculum), 3,401 pupils (1,803 girls), 24 girls' colleges (middle schools), 5,179 pupils, 17 extension classes (the last 3 years of the curriculum), 623 pupils. There were 8 training colleges for elementary school teachers, with 764 students (475 women), 6 for infant school teachers, 175 students. There were also 42 popular high schools, 1,836 pupils (1,259 girls). For elementary education there were in the country 3,528 higher elementary schools, 155,890 pupils (76,934 girls), 705 lower elementary schools, 21,000 pupils (1915), 1,543 infant schools under superintendence of the Church, 197,721 pupils. In the towns 1,231 classes of higher elementary schools, 36,615 pupils (18,379 girls), (1917) 35 preparatory schools for secondary education, 2,096 pupils. There are besides 5 navigation schools, with 43 pupils, 21 commercial schools with 1,671 pupils, 33 trade schools, with 2,182 pupils, 13 technical schools, with 741 pupils, 106 schools for arts and crafts ("sloyd"), with 3,379 pupils, 44 agricultural, 6 dairy schools, 37 cattle management schools, and 36 horticultural schools with 3,253 pupils, 5 forestry schools with 160 pupils. The school age in the primary schools is from 7 to 15 years. In 1919-20 there were altogether 2,754 men and 3,548 women teachers in Finland, and 215,995 pupils.

In 1919 there were published 231 newspapers and reviews in Finnish, 95 in Swedish, 12 in Swedish and Finnish, and 1 in German.

Pauperism and Crime

The number of paupers in 1918 supported by the towns and the village communities was 210,234 (6.3 per cent of the population), and the total cost was 52,992,316 marks.

At the end of 1917, the prison population numbered 4,022 men and 383 women, while the number of sentences pronounced at the end of 1918 was 18,631 for crimes, and 8,754 in civil cases.

Defence

Military service in Finland is compulsory and universal, with the usual exemptions. The Military Service Law at present in force was enacted in February, 1919, and somewhat altered in July, 1920.

The army consists of three divisions, one independent brigade of 'Jagers,' one brigade of cavalry, and troops directly subordinate to the army command. Each division, as well as the brigade of 'Jagers,' is composed of units representing all weapons. The troops directly subordinate to the army command consist of one technical division, composed of pioneers, radio field telegraphists, and other special troops, also heavy artillery, flying tank, and automobile troops.

In the case of mobilisation, the forces can be multiplied several times through filling the ranks of the forces on their peace footing to their war complement, and by creating additional formations. In such case the reserve, consisting of five classes, will primarily be called on. The Landwehr, comprising all able bodied men of 17-45 years of age, who do not belong to the standing army or the reserve, can also in case of need be called upon for the defence of the country. The regular army consists of about 36,600 men.

Besides the regular army, there exists in Finland an organisation of Civic Protective Guards, in which at present are enrolled about 100,000 men.

Some naval development is in progress. The ex Russian gunboat Gulyak, 875 tons, two 17 in. guns, has been transferred to the small existing force.

Production and Industry

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people in Finland, although the cultivated area covers only 8.5 per cent. of the land. The land was divided in 1910 into 284,188 farms, and the landed property was distributed as follows —Less than 3 hectares cultivated, number of farms, 143,933, 3-10 hectares, farms 88,398, 10-25 hectares, farms 37,749, 25-100 hectares, farms 13,209, over 100 hectares, farms 899.

The crop of 1918 was, in bushels —rye, 8,465,580, barley, 4,491,597, oats, 18,821,867, potatoes, 19,134,933, flax and hemp, 965 tons, hay, 2,031,520 tons. Butter production, 1917, was in 482 dairies, producing 10,323,803 kilos of butter.

Domestic animals in 1918 —Horses, 3 years of age, 262,380, horned cattle, 2 years of age, 1,076,271, sheep and goats, 827,791, pigs, 110,933.

More than half the country is covered with forests of pine and spruce. The forests form the chief natural wealth of the country, and the main industry is the lumber industry.

The Crown forests covered (January, 1918) 12,546,296 hectares (about 33 per cent. of the area of the country). Their maintenance cost (1919) 33,250,000 marks, and the income derived from them was 65,690,000 marks. The timber stock of the Crown forests numbered 195,336,353 tree trunks. In 1915 there were 139 saw mills with water motors and 510 steam and 317 motor mills. They give occupation to 17,661 workers.

The produce of pig iron in 1917 was 9,093 metric tons, of iron ore, 1,880 metric tons, and of bar iron, 40,541 metric tons. Copper and sulphur ores, 9,621 metric tons.

Finland had in 1917, 4,389 large factories, employing an aggregate of 178,987 workers, and yielding an aggregate product of 1,458,107,500 marks. The chief were —

The Finnish commercial navy numbered on December 31, 1919, 1,127 sailing vessels of 148,587 tons, 810 steamers, 150,770 tons, 110 motor vessels of 15,828 tons, and 3,311 prams, 394 605 tons, total, 5,358 vessels of 619,790 tons

Internal Communications

For internal communications Finland has a remarkable system of lakes connected with each other and with the Gulf of Finland by canals. The number of vessels which passed along the canals in 1918 was 45 985, the receipts from vessels, 1,174,399 marks, and expenditure, 1,303,129 marks.

On December 31, 1920, there were 19,000 miles of main roads and 12,500 miles of secondary roads.

On December 31, 1920, there were 2,685 miles of railways, all but 186 miles belonging to the State. The gauge is 1 524 metres (4 9 feet). The traffic upon the State's railways in 1919 was 13,078,200 passengers and 3,900,000 tons of goods. The total cost of the State railways to the end of 1919 was 650 million marks. The total revenue in 1919 was 294,856,000 marks, and the total expenditure 212,854,500 marks.

Finland had 2,518 post offices in 1919, and revenue and expenditure were respectively 27,906,052, and 32,058,112 marks, the number of letters and postcards, 59,251,527, samples and printed packets, 7,992,987, newspapers, 126,868,413, parcels, 1,485,810, money orders, 1,394,614, total, 196,993,351.

There are 8,720 miles of telegraph and 2,891 miles of telephone wires in Finland. The telegraph system and part of the telephone system is State property.

The 979 savings banks had on December 31, 1919, deposits amounting to 31,634,911 marks.

Banking, Money, Weights, &c

The Bank of Finland (founded in 1811) is the State Bank and the only bank of issue. Finland had in 1919, besides the State bank, 22 banks and 7 land mortgage banks. On October 5, 1920, the Svenska Finlands Andelsbank (Co-operative Bank of Swedish Finland) was established in Helsingfors. The paper currency of the Bank of Finland in 1919 was 1,123 9 million marks. The deposits of all private banks on August 31, 1920, were 3,332,456,000 marks.

The markka of 100 penni is of the value of a franc, 9½d. The standard is gold, and the markka, though not coined in gold, is the unit.

Gold coins are 20 and 10 markka pieces. They contain 2003225 grammes of fine gold to the markka.

Silver coins are 2, 1, ½, and ¼-markka pieces.

Copper coins are 10, 5, and 1 penni pieces.

The paper currency is exchangeable at par against gold
The metric system of weights and measures is universally employed in Finland

FIUME

Fiume is an independent State created by the Treaty of Rapallo, signed on November 12, 1920, between Italy and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. By Article 4 of the Treaty the contracting Powers recognise the independence of Fiume in perpetuity. The Treaty has been duly ratified, and the ratifications were exchanged in February, 1921.

The Treaty of London of April 28, 1915, granted Italy a large area of continental Dalmatia. Difficulties arose between the Italians and the Yugo-Slavs as to Italy's share, and the difficulties were complicated by the action of the poet D'Annunzio in seizing Fiume on September 12, 1919, and annexing it to Italy. The difficulties were, however, solved by the Treaty of Rapallo.

President of the Government of Fiume —Dr Grossich

The area of the new State is given as 8 sq miles and the population as 49,806.

By Article 5 of the Treaty of Rapallo, it is provided that the area of Fiume shall be delimited by a special commission composed half of Italian and half of Yugo Slav delegates.

FRANCE.

CENTRAL

SINCE the overthrow of Napoleon III on September 4, 1870, France has been under a Republican form of government, confirmed on February 25, and July 16, 1875, by a constitutional law, which has been partially modified in June, 1879, August, 1884, June, 1885, and July, 1889. It vests the legislative power in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, and the executive in the President of the Republic and the Ministry.

The President is elected for seven years, by an absolute majority of votes, by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies united in a National Assembly, or Congress. He promulgates the laws voted by both Chambers, and ensures their execution. He selects a Ministry from the two Chambers, but may, and sometimes does, choose ministers who are not members of either Chamber (e.g. a general as Minister for War, an admiral as Minister of Marine, a civilian as Minister for Foreign Affairs), he appoints to all civil and military posts, has the right of individual pardon, and is responsible only in case of high treason. The President concludes treaties with foreign Powers, but treaties which affect the area of France or of French colonies must be approved by the Legislature, and he cannot declare war without the previous assent of both Chambers. Every act of the President has to be countersigned by a Minister. With the consent of the Senate he can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies. In case of vacancy, the two Chambers united immediately elect a new President.

President of the Republic—Alexandre Millerand, born February 10, 1859, elected September 23, 1920.

The Ministers or Secretaries of State, the number of whom varies, are usually, but not necessarily, members of the Senate or Chamber of Deputies. The President of the Council (Premier) chooses his colleagues in concert with the President of the Republic. Each Minister has the direction of one of the great administrative departments and each is responsible to the Chambers for his acts, while the Ministry as a whole is responsible for the general policy of the Government.

The Ministry consists of the following members, appointed January 16, 1921—

Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs—M. A. Briand (Deputy)

Minister of Justice—M. Bonisway (Deputy)

Minister of the Interior—M. P. Marraud (Senator)

Minister of War—M. L. Barthou (Deputy)

Minister of Marine—M. Guist'hau (Deputy)

Minister of Finance—M. P. Doumer (Senator)

Minister of Colonies—M. Albert Sarraut (Deputy)

Minister of Public Instruction and of Fine Arts—M. L. Berard (Deputy).

Minister of Public Works—M. Y. Le Trouquer (Deputy)

Minister of Commerce—M. L. Diot (Deputy)

Minister of Agriculture—M. Lefebvre du Prey (Deputy).

Minister of Labour — M Daniel Vincent (Deputy)

Minister of the Liberated Territories — M L Loucheur (Deputy)

Minister of Hygiene, of Assistance, and of Social Provision — M Leredu (Deputy)

Minister of Pensions, Awards, and War Grants — M Andié Magimot (Deputy)

The Chamber of Deputies is elected for four years, by manhood suffrage, and each citizen 21 years old, not actually in military service, who can prove a six months' residence in any one town or commune, and not otherwise disqualified, has the right of vote. Deputies must be citizens and not under 25 years of age. The manner of election of Deputies has been modified several times since 1871. The scrutin de liste, under which each elector votes for as many Deputies as the entire department has to elect, was introduced in 1871. In 1876 it was replaced by the scrutin d'arrondissement, under which each department is divided into a number of arrondissements, each elector voting for one Deputy only, in 1885 there was a return to the scrutin de liste, in 1889 the universal nominal vote was reintroduced, and in 1919 the scrutin de liste, with proportional representation, was again adopted. In 1889 it was enacted that each candidate is bound to make, within the fortnight which precedes the elections, a declaration as to his being a candidate for a given constituency, and for one constituency only—all votes which eventually may be given for him in other constituencies being reckoned as void. The Chamber verifies the powers of its members. In each constituency the votes are cast up and the Deputy proclaimed elected by a commission of Councillors General appointed by the prefect of the department. The Chamber is now composed of 610 Deputies.

The Senate is composed of 314 members, elected for nine years from citizens 40 years old, one third retiring every three years. The election of the Senators is indirect, and is made by an electoral body composed (1) of delegates chosen by the Municipal Council of each commune in proportion to the population, and (2) of the Deputies, Councillors General, and District Councillors of the department. Besides the 225 Departmental Senators elected in this way, there were, according to the law of 1875, 75 Senators elected for life by the united two Chambers, but by the Senate Bill of 1884 it was enacted that vacancies arising among the Life Senatorships would be filled by the election of ordinary nine years Senators, the department which should have the right to the vacant seat to be determined by lot. The Princes of deposed dynasties are precluded from sitting in either House.

Senate, elected on January 11, 1920. Radicals, 120, Republicans of the Left, 58, Progressives, 23, Conservatives, 20, Liberal Republicans, 14, Socialist Republicans, 2, Unified Socialists, 2.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies assemble every year on the second Tuesday in January, unless a previous summons is made by the President of the Republic, and they must remain in session at least five months out of the twelve. The President is bound to convoke them if the demand is made by one half of the number of members composing each Chamber. The President can adjourn the Chambers, but the adjournment cannot exceed the term of a month, nor occur more than twice in the same session.

Bills may be presented either in the Chamber or Senate by the Government, or on the initiative of private members. In the first case they are remitted to the bureaux for examination, in the second, they are first submitted to a commission of parliamentary initiative. Financial laws must be first presented to and voted by the Chamber of Deputies.

The Senate, constituted as a High Court of Justice, tries cases of attempt against the safety of the State or of plotting to change the form of government.

Senators and Deputies are paid 27,000 francs (1,080*l*) a year and the Presidents of the two Chambers receive allowances for the expense of entertainment. Members of both Chambers travel free on all rail ways by means of a small annual payment. The dotation of the President of the Republic is 1,200,000 francs (48,000*l*), with a further allowance of 1,200,000 francs for his expenses. On January 1, 1905, a fund was instituted for pensions to ex Deputies, or their widows and orphans. It is supported by contributions from Deputies (deducted from their pay) as well as by gifts and legacies.

France has, besides, a special institution under the name of Conseil d'Etat, which was introduced by Napoleon I., and has been maintained since. It is presided over by the Minister of Justice or (in his absence) by a vice president, and is composed of Councillors, Masters of Requests (Maîtres des Requêtes), and Auditors, all appointed by the President of the Republic. Its duty is to give opinion upon such questions, chiefly those connected with administration, as may be submitted to it by the Government. It is judge in the last resort in administrative suits, and it prepares the rules for the public administration.

II LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes France is divided into 90 departments including the 'territory of Belfort' (remnant of the department of Haut-Rhin). Since 1881 the three departments of Algeria are also treated for most purposes, as part of France proper. The department has representatives of all the Ministries, and is placed under a Prefect, nominated by Government, and having wide and undefined functions. He is assisted by a Prefecture Council, an administrative body, whose advice he may take without being bound to follow it. The Prefect is a representative of the Executive, and, as such, supervises the execution of the laws, issues police regulations, supplies information on matters which concern the department, nominates subordinate officials, and has under his control all officials of the State. There is a Sub Prefect in every arrondissement, except in those containing the capitals of departments and the department of the Seine.

The unit of local government is the commune, the size and population of which vary very much. There were, in 1911, in the 87 departments into which France was then divided, 36,241 communes. Most of them (31,873) have less than 1,500 inhabitants, and 19,269 have even less than 500, while 134 communes only have more than 20,000 inhabitants. In 1910 Alsace and Lorraine had 1,705 communes of which 880 had less than 500 inhabitants. There were thus 37,946 communes, in the present area of France, of which 20,069 had less than 500 inhabitants. The local affairs of the commune are under a Municipal Council, composed of from 10 to 36 members, elected by universal suffrage, and by the scrutin de liste for 4 years by Frenchmen after 21 years and 6 months' residence, but each act of the Council must receive the approval of the Prefect while many must be submitted to the Council General or even to the President of the Republic, before becoming lawful. Even the commune's quota of direct taxation is settled by persons (répartiteurs) chosen by the Prefect from among the lists of candidates drawn up by the Municipal Council.

Each Municipal Council elects a Mayor, who is both the representative of the commune and the agent of the central government. He is the head of the local police and, with his assistants, acts under the orders of the Prefect.

In Paris the Municipal Council is composed of 80 members, each of the 20 arrondissements into which the city is subdivided has its own Mayor. The place of the Mayor of Paris is taken by the Prefect of the Seine, and, in part, by the Prefect of Police. Lyons has an elected Mayor, but the control of the police is vested in the Prefect of the department of the Rhone.

The next unit is the canton (2,915 in France before 1914), which is composed of an average of 12 communes, although some of the largest communes are, on the contrary, divided into several cantons. It is a seat of a justice of the peace (juge de paix), but is not an administrative unit.

The district, or arrondissement (385 in France), has an elected conseil d'arrondissement, with as many members as there are cantons, its chief function being to allot among the communes their respective parts in the direct taxes assigned to each arrondissement by the Council General. That body stands under the control of the Sub Prefect. A varying number of arrondissements form a department, which has its conseil général renewed by universal suffrage to the extent of one half every three years (one Councillor for each canton). These conseils deliberate upon all economical affairs of the department, the repartition of the direct taxes among the arrondissements, the roads, normal schools, and undertakings for the relief of the poor. Their decisions are controlled by the Prefect, and may be annulled by the President of the Republic.

According to the Peace Treaty with Germany (June 28, 1919) Alsace-Lorraine has been transferred to France, to date from the Armistice of November 11, 1918. The districts of Lower Alsace, Upper Alsace and Lorraine have become the departments of Bas Rhin Alsace (1,848 square miles and population 700,938), Haut-Rhin (1,354 square miles, population 517,865), and Moselle (2,403 square miles, population 655,211).

Total area added to France is 5,605 square miles, population (1910) 1,874,014. Thus the total area of France is 212,659 square miles and population 41,475,523.

According to the Treaty of Versailles (article 45), France obtained from Germany as a compensation for the destruction of the coal mines in the North of France, the exclusive rights of exploitation of the coal mines situated in the Saar Basin. The area of this district is about 751 square miles, and the population 657,870. For the next 15 years the Saar Basin will be governed by a Commission of Five, chosen by the League of Nations. At the end of 15 years the population will decide by vote one of three alternatives, viz, the maintenance of the rule set up by the Treaty, union with France, or union with Germany.

Between the years 1811 and 1820 the average annual surplus of births over deaths was 5.7 per thousand of population, between 1851 and 1860 it was 2.4, and between 1881 and 1885 it was 1.6. The average number of births per marriage was (1881-85) about 3, in 1891 it was 2.1.

In the following table, the third, fourth, and fifth columns give [in brackets] for the first five censuses the population, its density, and its average annual increase of France, excluding Alsace Lorraine, and are thus comparable with the data for the censuses posterior to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine (1872-1911).

In 1913 the average birth rate for all France (living births) was 1.88 per cent of population, and in 1918, 1.21 per cent.

In the 77 departments the total excess of deaths over births for 1914 to 1919 was 1,490,227.

The number of divorces was 3,668 in 1916, 5,572 in 1917, 8,121 in 1918, and 11,657 in 1919. (The figures refer to 77 departments only.)

On March 5, 1911, the urban population was 17,508,940, and rural 22,098,318.

For fiscal and electoral purposes the population of each commune is divided into agglomerated, scattered, and separated (complète à part), the first two constitute the municipal population, and the third consists of garrison, college, prison, and hospital population. Different from this is the distinction between urban and rural population, a commune being urban where the agglomerated population is over 2,000, and rural where under 2,000 |

Religion

No religion is recognised by the State

Under the law promulgated on December 9, 1905, the Churches were separated from the State, the adherents of all creeds were authorised to form associations for public worship (associations cultuelles). As transitory measures, ecclesiastics over 45 years of age and of over 25 years of service remunerated by the State were entitled to a pension, and all other ecclesiastics were to receive a grant during a period of from four to eight years. All buildings actually used for public worship and as dwellings in that connection were to be made over, after an inventory was taken, to the associations for public worship. The places of worship for the total period of the existence of these associations, the ecclesiastical dwellings for a time.

The law of January 2, 1907, provides (among other things) that, failing associations cultuelles, the buildings for public worship, together with their furniture, will continue at the disposition of the ministers of religion and the worshippers for the exercise of their religion, but, in each case, there is required an administrative act drawn up by the préfet as regards buildings belonging to the State or the Departments, and by the maire as regards buildings belonging to the Communes. Forms of the documents necessary under the new law have been supplied by the Government.

There are 17 archbishops and 68 bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in France, not including Alsace and Lorraine, Algeria or the colonies, in addition to 51,000 clergy of various grades. The Protestants of the Augsburg Confession are, in their religious affairs, governed by a General Consistory, while the Reformed Church is under a Council of Administration, the seat of which is at Paris. There are about a million Protestants in France.

The Associations law, passed July 1, 1901, requires religious communities to be authorised by the State, and no monastic association can be authorised without a special law in each particular case. Before the passing of that law there were 910 recognised associations, and 753 not recognised, the establishments, mostly not recognised, numbered 19,514, and their members 159,628 (30,136 men and 129,492 women). After the passing of the law, of the 753 associations not recognised, 305 dissolved themselves and 443 asked for authorisation, which was refused by the Chambers to the majority of them.

Instruction.

The Minister of Instruction, seconded by the Government educational bureaus and inspectors general, directs public and controls private schools. The public schools constitute the University of France and are divided into three classes, primary, secondary, and superior. The Superior Council of 52 members has deliberative, administrative, and judiciary functions, and a Consultative Committee advises respecting the working of the school system, but the inspectors general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local educational administration France is divided into 17 circumscriptions, called Academies, each of which has an Academic Council whose members comprise a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Councils deal with all grades of instruction Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department except Nord which has two (one being for primary instruction), and Seine which has eight (one being director of primary instruction), besides primary inspectors of schools, usually one for each arrondissement, 20 inspectors (male or female) for the department of the Seine Each department has a council for primary educational matters, the prefect being president, and this body has large powers with respect to the inspection, management and maintenance of schools and the opening of free schools

The law of August 9, 1879, rendered obligatory for each department the maintenance of two primary normal schools, one for school masters, the other for school mistresses, there are two higher normal schools of primary instruction one at Fontenay-aux Roses for professors for normal schools for school mistresses, the other at St Cloud for professors for normal schools for school masters The law of June 16, 1881, made instruction absolutely free in all primary public schools, that of March 28, 1882, rendered it obligatory for all children from 6 completed to 13 years of age The law of October 30, 1886, is the organic law of primary instruction now in force, it established that teachers should be lay, for infant schools it substituted écoles maternelles instead of salles d'asile, it fixed the programmes of instruction, and established freedom of private schools under the supervision of the school authorities The laws of July 19, 1889, and July 25, 1893, March 1 and Dec 30, 1903, and April 22, 1905, determined the payment of the teachers, who are nominated by the préfet on the recommendation of the Academy inspector under the authority of the minister, and who (except in towns of more than 150,000 inhabitants) are paid directly by the State, which itself receives the eight 'additional centimes' for primary instruction, formerly collected on behalf of the communes and departments

Courses of instruction for adults are conducted in the evening by teachers in their schools

In 1918, 25 per cent. of the conscripts could neither read nor write, as compared with 29 per cent. in 1912

The number of primary normal schools (exclusive of Fontenay and St. Cloud) is 84 for school-masters, and 82 for school mistresses (France and Algeria) The number of pupil teachers in primary normal schools in 1913-14 was 4,650 men and 4,863 women

Secondary Instruction Boys—Secondary instruction is supplied in two types of schools—by the State in the lycées, and by the communes in the colleges, by associations and by private individuals in free establishments (écoles libres) The course of study extends over 7 years, 4 in the first cycle, and 3 in the second, with four different courses of study, 1, Latin, Greek, 2, Latin, sciences, 3, Latin, living languages, 4, sciences, living languages

The number of public secondary schools for boys and the number of pupils for 3 years were as follows —

Higher Instruction is supplied by the State in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the private faculties and schools The freedom of higher instruction was established by the law of July 12, 1875, modified by that of March 18, 1880, which reserved to the State faculties the exclusive right to confer degrees A decree of December 28, 1885, created a general council of the faculties, and the creation of universities, each consisting of several faculties, was accomplished in 1897, in virtue of the law of July 10, 1896

There are 16 Universities in France The following table shows the year of foundation and the total number of students on July 31, 1919 —

Universities	Students	Universities	Students
Aix en Provence (1409)	1179	Lyon (1834)	2,593

There are free faculties at Paris (the Catholic Institute of Paris comprising the law and advanced scientific and literary studies), Angers (theology, law, sciences, letters, agriculture), Lille (theology, law, medicine and pharmacy, sciences, letters, social sciences and politics), Lyon (theology, law, sciences, letters), Marseille (law), Toulouse (the Catholic Institute with theological, literary, and scientific instruction). There is, besides, in Paris a large institution for free higher instruction, the École libre des Sciences Politiques.

The State faculties confer the degrees of bachelor, of licentiate, and of doctor. Admission to degrees (agréations) is by special competition, which lead to the title of professeur in secondary and in higher instruction.

The other higher institutions dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction are the Collège de France (founded by Francis I in 1530), which has courses of study bearing on various subjects, literature and language, archaeology, mathematical, natural, mental and social science (political economy, &c.), the Museum of Natural History giving instruction in the sciences and nature, the École Pratique des Hautes Etudes (history and philology, mathematical and physico chemical sciences, and the sciences of nature and of religion), having its seat at the Sorbonne, the École Normale Supérieure, which prepares teachers for secondary instruction and, since 1904, follows the curricula of the Sorbonne without special teachers of its own, the École des Chartes, which trains the archivist paleographers, the École des Langues Orientales vivantes, the École du Louvre, devoted to art and archaeology, the École des Beaux Arts, and the Bureau des Longitudes, the Central Meteorological Bureau, the Observatoire of Paris, and the French Schools at Athens, Rome, Cairo and Indo-China, besides a school for Morocco

Outside Paris there are eight observatories (Meudon, Besançon, Bordeaux, &c.) The observatory at Nice is dependent on the Academy of Sciences

Professional and Technical Instruction—The principal institutions of higher or technical instruction dependent on other ministries are the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers at Paris (with 20 evening courses on the applied sciences and social economy), the École Centrale des Arts et Manufactures, the École des Hautes Etudes Commerciales, 12 higher schools of commerce with about 600 pupils, dependent on the Ministry of Commerce, the National Agronomic Institute at Paris, the Veterinary school at Alfort, a school of forestry at Nancy, national agricultural schools at Grignon, Rennes, Montpellier, 46 practical schools of Agriculture, &c., dependent on the Ministry of Agriculture, the École Polytechnique, the École Supérieure de Guerre, the military school at St. Cyr, the École de Cavalerie at Saumur, and other schools dependent on the Ministry of War, the Naval School at Brest dependent on the Ministry of Marine, the School of Mines at Paris, the School of Bridges and Roads at Paris, with other schools dependent on the Ministry of Public Works, the School of Mines at St. Etienne, and the Schools of Miners at Alais and Douai, the École Coloniale at Paris, dependent on the Ministry of the Colonies. The École des Beaux Arts, the École Nationale des Arts Décoratifs, and the Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation depend on the department of the Under Secretary for the Fine Arts, which is attached to the Ministry of Public Instruction. In the provinces there are National schools of fine arts, and schools of music, and also several municipal schools as well as free subventioned schools, etc.

Technical schools of a somewhat lower grade (dependent on the Ministry of Commerce) are very numerous, comprising six national schools of arts and trades (Aix, Angers, Chalons, Cluny, Lille, Paris), two schools of horology, four national professional schools, 33 practical schools of commerce and industry (of which seven are for girls), 20 practical schools of industry, there are also 35 schools of industries, with 5,550 pupils, 13 municipal professional schools in Paris, with 1,385 pupils, and about 370 private schools, with 92,000 pupils

Justice and Crime.

The Courts of lowest jurisdiction in France are those of the Justices of Peace (juges de paix, one in each canton) who try small civil cases and act also as judges of Police Courts, where all petty offences (contraventions) are disposed of. The Correctional Courts pronounce upon all graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to 5 years. They have no jury, and consist of 3 judges belonging to the civil tribunals of first instance. In all cases of a délit or a crime the preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by an examining magistrate (juge d'instruction), who may either dismiss the case or send it for trial before a court where a public prosecutor (Procureur) endeavours to prove the charge. The Court of Assizes is assisted by 12 jurors, who decide by simple majority on the fact with respect to offences amounting to crimes. The highest courts are the 26 Courts of Appeal, composed each of one President and a variable number of members, for all criminal cases which have been tried without a jury, and one Court of Cassation which sits at Paris, for all criminal cases tried by jury, so far as regards matters of law.

For civil cases, wherein the amount in dispute is between 200 and 1,500 france, there is, in each arrondissement, a tribunal of first instance, above these are the Appeal Courts and the Court of Cassation. For commercial cases there are, in 226 towns, Tribunals of Commerce and Councils of experts (prud'hommes). In the towns are police courts.

All Judges are nominated by the President of the Republic. They can be removed only by a decision of the Court of Cassation constituted as the Conseil Supérieur of the magistracy.

The French penal institutions consist, first, of Houses of Arrest (3,375 chambres de sûreté and dépôts de sûreté in 1911). Next come Departmental Prisons, also styled maisons d'arrêt, de justice and de correction, where both persons awaiting trial and those condemned to less than one year's imprisonment are kept, as also a number of boys and girls transferred from, or going to be transferred to, reformatories. The reformatories are 14 for boys and 7 for girls, 10 for boys and 3 for girls being public, and 4 for boys and 4 for girls being private. The Central Prisons (maisons de force et de correction), where all prisoners condemned to more than one year's imprisonment are kept, provided with large industrial establishments for the work of prisoners, are 9 for men and 2 for women.

All persons condemned to hard labour and many condemned to 'reclusion' are sent to New Caledonia or Guiana (military and réculivistes), the dépôt de forçats of St. Martin de Ré is a dépôt for transferred hard labour convicts.

Pauperism and Relief of Old Age

In France the poor are assisted partly through public 'bureaux de bienfaisance' and partly by private and ecclesiastical charity. They are partly under the care of the communes and partly of the departments, both of which contribute, and ultimately under the supervision of Government. The funds of the 'bureaux de bienfaisance' are partly derived from endowments, partly from communal contributions, and partly from public and private charity. In 1913, the bureaux expended 33,648,000 francs and assisted 903,917 persons. Public assistance is rendered to poor or destitute children. At the end of 1913 the institutions for this purpose contained 212,186 children, the expenditure during the year amounted to 43,432,649 francs. In 1913 the hospitals for the sick, infirm, aged, or infants, numbered 1,722, and at the end of the year had 741,705 patients, besides 100,239 aged and infirm inmates, their expenditure for 1913 amounted to 198,548,406 francs. In the same year 945,043 persons received gratuitous medical assistance at home and 145,500 in hospitals, the expenditure for such purposes amounting to 28,097,418 francs. At the end of 1913 the asylums for imbeciles, national, departmental, and private, had 77,018 patients.

An Act was passed in 1905 for the relief of the aged poor, the infirm, and the permanently incurable, age limit, 70, but by the amendment of the Act, April 5, 1910, this was reduced to 65. The same amendment provided for limited help being given to those between the ages of 65 and 70. On December 31, 1913, there were 100,529 such persons in receipt of the limited assistance, the total expenditure for 1913 having been 8,007,595 francs. The Act of 1910 provided that the cost of the scheme should be borne by the communes, the departments, and the State. The number of persons registered for relief has risen from 511,446 on December 31, 1908, to 599,061 on December 31, 1911, and to 592,530 on December 31, 1913. The cost to the State alone for 1910 was 48,000,000 francs, for 1911, 49,600,000 francs, and for 1913, 41,651,057 francs. In addition, contributions of the departments and communes totalled 46,500,000 francs in 1911, and 50,793,000 francs in 1912; but it has to be remembered that the increased expen ditute under this law is in part balanced by the diminished activities of the 'bureaux de bienfaisance' in assisting invalids under 60 years of age. The Old Age Pensions Law of April 5, 1910, as amended on February 27, 1912, provides for all wage earners old age pensions towards which both employers and workers contribute. Contributions are to be paid up to the 60th year of the worker's life, and the State will contribute 100 francs. This sum will be increased by one tenth for every insured worker who has brought up 3 children of the age of 16. On December 31, 1913, 8,011,138 persons were registered under the scheme.

A law of March 24, 1873, provides protection for new born infants. In 1913 in 82 departments there were 77,829 such infants who came within the scope of the law. In 1913 two further laws were introduced that of June 17 to give relief, varying from 0.50 to 1.50 francs per day, to women in confinement, and that of July 14 to give relief to families with numerous children. The rate is between 60 and 90 francs for every child beyond the third.

The total annual debt charge on January 1, 1920, was 9,442 million francs

France has advanced to the Allied Governments (up to September 30, 1920) a total of 8,873 million francs, of which the principal items are as follows (in millions of francs) —Belgium, 2,286, Serbia, 706, Poland, 431, Czecho-Slovakia, 100, Russia, 4,210, Greece, 376

The public fortune of France was estimated in 1912 (latest available date) to amount to 304,517 million francs

II LOCAL FINANCE

For 1915 the revenue of the departments of France, excluding a balance of 131,018,505 francs from 1914, amounted to 551,313,501 francs (22,052,540*l*), and the expenditure to 515,209,966 francs (20,608,398*l*). The departmental debt stood at 1,157,952,504 francs (46,318,100*l*)

For the year 1921, the revenue of the City of Paris was estimated at 1,003,494,949 francs, and the expenditure at 986,394,949 francs

Defence

I LAND DEFENCES

France has a coast line of 1,760 miles, 1,304 on the Atlantic and 456 on the Mediterranean. Its land frontier extends over 1,665 miles, of which 1,246 miles are along the Belgian, German, Swiss, and Italian frontiers, and 419 along the Spanish frontier

The permanent land defences of France now include the former German fortresses of Strassburg, Metz and Thionville, the former being in Alsace and the two latter in Lorraine. West of these lies the former first line of French permanent defences, namely the first class fortresses of Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. The experiences of the Great War, which brought to light the power of mobile heavy artillery, the fire of which could be observed and directed from aeroplanes against permanent defences, will affect profoundly the principles of permanent fortification, and it is doubtful if many even of the first class fortresses will in future be maintained, while those of the second and third classes will almost certainly disappear in so far as they have been designed to meet land attack. On the other hand coast defences will probably be maintained. On the coast Toulon, Rochefort, Lorient, Brest, and Cherbourg are naval harbours surrounded by forts.

II ARMY

France mobilised during the Great War 7,935,000 white troops, and 475,000 native troops, of these about 2,300,000 were serving at the beginning of 1919. During 1919 the 1907 16 classes (men of 23 to 32 years of age) were demobilised, leaving the 1917, 1918 and 1919 classes with the colours (men of 20 to 22 years of age). In December, 1920, the total strength of the active army, white and native, was about 660,000, of these 200,000 formed the army of occupation on the Rhine. There were also French forces in occupation of Syria, and Constantinople. During the war the French Colonies furnished 216 battalions, of which the greater part served on the Western front, of these battalions 92 were Senegalese, 83 Algerian and Tunisian, 17 Indo-Chinese, 12 Moroccan, 10 Malagase, 1 Somali, and 1 from the French Pacific Islands. In addition large contingents of native labour were found from the French Colonies, Indo-China supplied 48,981, Madagascar 5,535, Algeria 75,864, Tunisia 19,538, Morocco 35,010, China 36,710, a total of 221,668 native workmen.

At the end of 1918 the French Aviation Service had a strength in pilots of 13,000, and the production of aeroplanes for 1918 amounted to 35,000.

The total French casualties during the war were, white troops 1,358,872 killed and 2,560,000 wounded.

Native troops 67,000 killed, 140,000 wounded, total 207,000.

The future size and organisation of the French Army had not been determined at the end of 1920, but it is certain that France will retain universal compulsory military service. On September 18, 1919, the Committee on Armaments and Troops of the French Chamber recommended that the annual contingent of men conscripted should be 200,000, and that an additional 150,000 men should be obtained by voluntary enlistment or by re-enlistment, for which special premiums were proposed. Thus it was calculated would give, on a peace footing, an army of 350,000 men, which could be raised to a war footing of 1,300,000 men. In addition it was recommended that the Territorial and Reserve forces, which would yield a total of about 2,000,000 men should be retained on a basis corresponding approximately to that which existed before the war. In November, 1920, the French Government decided in principle that service in the active army should be for eighteen months as compared with 3 years in 1914. The reduction in the period of service is to be effected gradually, and will probably take two years. It may be assumed then that the general organisation of the French Army will be on the following lines—The army as before is divided into the Metropolitan and the Colonial Army, both are under the War Minister, but the estimates for Colonial troops other than those maintained in Algeria, Tunis, and Morocco are included in the budget of the Minister for the Colonies. The Metropolitan Army will be divided into the Active Army, the Reserve Troops and the Territorial Army. The Army, with the exception of the Armies of occupation will be localised and territorialised in 20 districts. The Active Army is organised in Army Corps and Cavalry Divisions, the post war composition of these has not yet been determined, but the normal war organisation, which will probably be retained, was 2 divisions to an army corps, each division contained 2 brigades and each brigade 2 infantry regiments of 3 battalions. The amount of artillery to be attached to each division and army corps was not decided at the end of 1920. The Reserve Troops form divisions corresponding to those in the Active Army on mobilisation, in the same districts as those to which the Active divisions belong. The Territorial Army forms a second line and is similarly organised in divisions on mobilisation. The Customs Corps is organised in battalions as are the Chasseurs Forestiers, these are both recruited from men who have passed into the Territorial Army.

The Gendarmerie is a police force recruited from the Army but performing civil duties in time of peace. There is a legion in each military district. The pre war strength of the Gendarmerie was 21,700, of whom about half were mounted.

The Garde Républicaine is also a police force and performs duties in Paris similar to those performed by the Gendarmerie in the districts.

The Colonial Army is distinct from the Metropolitan, and consists partly of white troops and partly of native troops. The Colonial white troops are recruited either by voluntary enlistment, or by voluntary transfer from the Metropolitan Army. It is proposed to maintain 2 Army Corps in North Africa, at Algiers and Rabat, one of these to be Colonial Troops. The normal pre war Colonial garrisons, except for North Africa, amounted to 19,000 white and 40,000 native troops. The total white overseas garrisons provided by France before the war amounted to 75,000 men.

The administration of the French Army consists of a General Staff and of a number of departments, all under the War Minister. In questions of strategy and of higher military policy the War Minister is assisted by a Council called the Conseil Supérieur de la Guerre, consisting of himself as President and twelve selected generals.

In September, 1919, it was decided that the uniform of the Army should be the horizon blue dress with kepi. The Chasseurs or Light Infantry battalions were, however, permitted to keep their distinctive dark blue uniform. Khaki was adopted for Colonial and North African troops.

The French infantry is armed with the Lebel magazine rifle (calibre 315). The French field gun is the 7.5 cm (2.95 in.) Q F, shielded gun. The French howitzer is the 10.5 cm (3.35 in.) howitzer, and as the result of the war the French Army possesses a large variety of heavy guns of all calibres.

NAVY

The personnel of the French Navy was demobilized even more rapidly than that of the army. The naval establishments have since undergone a great revision, and with reduced personnel, the work has been slow. The position is not yet normal. Reduced expenditure was demanded, and, in inspecting and reconditioning the ships and vessels attention was devoted chiefly to the flotillas. It was decided to discontinue all work on the super Dreadnoughts of the Normandie class, and they will not be completed. The inclusion of ex-enemy light cruisers, destroyers, and submarines in the French Fleet has strengthened it where it was weakest. A great number of old destroyers, torpedo boats, and submarines have been struck off the list.

Economies are being made in other directions. The naval port of Lorient is being given over to civil industry, and it will henceforth, as a naval establishment, be dependent on Brest. Rochefort is also being given over to private uses, but will continue as a base for flotillas and will be capable of rapid expansion in case of war. The Mediterranean squadron has been reduced and a large part of it remains in reserve.

The Navy is under the supreme direction of the Minister of Marine, assisted by a Chief of the Staff. The latter has charge of all the work of the department having reference to construction, maintenance, commissioning, and the mobilization of the fleet, and particularly of all that concerns preparation for war. He is chief of the Military Cabinet. There are two sub-chiefs of the staff, of whom one is in charge of various sections, and the other of the work of the Military Cabinet. The central administration also embraces the directorates of personnel, matériel, and artillery, the inspectorate of works, the finance department, the services of submarine defences, hydrography, and other special branches. In addition to these are the Superior Council of the Navy, which advises the Minister on high policy, and several special committees. For purposes of administration the French coasts have been divided into five maritime arrondissements, having their headquarters at the naval ports of Cherbourg, Brest, Lorient, Rochefort, and Toulon. Reference has been made above to the future of Lorient and Rochefort. At the head of each arrondissement is a vice admiral, with the title of Maritime Prefect, who is responsible for the port administration and the coast defences, mobile and fixed. The chief torpedo stations are Dunkirk, Cherbourg, Brest, Rochefort, Toulon, Corsica, Bizerta, Oran, Algiers, and Bona.

The French navy is manned partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. By the channel of the 'Inscription Maritime,' which was introduced by Colbert, and on the lists of which are the names of all male individuals of the 'maritime population'—that is, men and youths devoted to a seafaring life, from the 18th to the 50th year of age—France was provided with a reserve of 114,000 men, of whom about 25,500 were usually serving with the fleet. The time of service in the navy for the 'Inscripts' is the same as that in the army. It is expected that the period will be reduced in both services.

The enemy vessels allotted to France are included in the following summary—5 light cruisers, one flotilla leader, 12 destroyers, and 10 submarines.

In the ship tables which follow, the older vessels have been removed as being no longer in service. The pre Dreadnoughts have little value, and will be condemned. From five of them the main turrets have been removed. The armoured cruisers are of a class that will not be maintained.

The five cruisers last named are late enemy vessels, all ex German except the Thionville, which was Austrian. Other old French cruisers in the list are the Cassard, d'Entrecasteaux, d'Estrées, du Chayla, Descartes, and Lavoisier. During the war 55 despatch vessels were put in hand, of which nearly 40 have been completed. Ten ex German submarines have been added to the French flotilla, also a powerful destroyer flotilla leader, and 12 ex German and Austrian destroyers.

I AGRICULTURE

Of the total area of France (132,381,447 acres) 24,716,752 acres were under forests in 1912, and 9,483,625 acres were returned as moor and uncultivated land, and 98,181,070 acres, of which 59,127,750 acres were arable, were returned as under crops, fallow and grass. The following tables show the area under the leading crops and the production (1 metric ton = 2205 lbs) for three years —

Crop	Area (1,000 acres)			Produce (1,000 metric tons)

II MINING AND METALS

In France there were in 1913, 41,638 mines and quarries in work, with 237,864 workers (180,956 in 1918). The annual yield of all the mines was valued at 829,453,263 francs (33,178,130*l*), of quarries, 305,955,651 francs (16,238,226*l*).

The following are statistics of the leading mineral and metal products of conceded mines, in metric tons, in 1918 — coal and lignite, 26,259,083, iron ore, 1,572,000, pig iron, 1,292,958 (2,412,149 in 1919), finished iron and steel, 193,812, worked steel, 1,800,079.

The coal output was as follows for 4 years, in thousands of metric tons — 1917, 27,757, 1918, 24,941, 1919, 22,224, 1920, 25,276. Coal output of the Saar Basin in 1920, 9,410,433 tons.

In 1918 the production of ores was — lead, zinc and silver, 25,087 metric tons, copper and tin, 811 tons, antimony, 10,020 tons, arsenic and gold, 6,155 tons, manganese, 9,871 tons, and salt, 1,092,581 tons. In 1913 the output of quarries (for building stone, slate, cement, phosphates, &c.) amounted to the value of 305,955,651 francs (11,744,929*l*).

III MANUFACTURES

For the numbers of persons employed in the more important industries in 1906, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916, page 877.

Sugar — In 1916-17 there were 65 sugar works, employing 18,528 men, 1,063 women, and 335 children, in 1917 18 61 works employing 12,139 men, 1,012 women, and 369 children. The yield of sugar during 12 years (expressed in metric tons of refined sugar) was —

1907-08	656,832	1910-11	650,488	1914-15	802,961	1917-18	200,205

Alcohol — In 1906, 59,616 thousands of gallons of alcohol were produced, in 1913, 60,145, in 1916, 31,672, in 1917, 32,813, in 1918, 18,311, in 1919, 18,066; and in 1920, 28,489 thousands of gallons.

IV FISHERIES

For the French fisheries, including those of Algeria, the following are statistics for 1912 — Persons employed, 154,931, sailing boats, 28,505, tonnage, 216,905, steamers, 946, tonnage, 54,555, value of products, 143,003,160 francs

Commerce.

In French statistics General Trade includes all goods entering or leaving France, while Special Trade includes only imports for home use and exports of French origin

The chief subdivisions of the special trade in millions of francs were for three years —

Shipping and Navigation

On December 31, 1915, the French mercantile navy consisted of 15,161 sailing vessels, of 561,361 tons net, with crews 41,151, and 1,939 steamers of 1,066,139 tons, and crews numbering 17,002, plus 12,060, mechanics and drivers

Of the sailing vessels 143 of 14,058 tons net were engaged in the European seas, and 209 of 313,789 tons net in ocean navigation, of the steamers 279 of 337,344 tons net were engaged in European seas, and 239 of 633,246 tons net in ocean navigation. The rest were employed in the coasting trade, in port service, or in the fisheries

At the Quinquennial Census, June, 1912, of ships sailing on inland waters, the total was 15,141, of which 12,483 were French, 2,168 Belgian, 475 German, and 15 Dutch. These ships had a population of 44,724 (17,875 men, 10,457 women, and 16,392 children)

For three years the navigation of vessels with cargoes at the French ports was as follows, excluding the coasting trade —

Internal Communications

I RIVERS, RAILWAYS, ETC

On January 1, 1912, there were in France 23,899 miles of national roads, in addition to the vicinal roads

Navigable rivers (1911) 5,450 miles, actually navigated, 3,822 miles, canals, 3,104 miles, actually navigated, 3,052 miles, rivers navigable for rafts, 1,908 miles. In 1913 there were 3,620 miles of canals, in 1919 a programme was adopted for the extension and improvement of the canal system

By a law of 1842, the construction of railways was left mainly to companies, superintended, and if necessary assisted, by the State, which now constructs lines which the companies work, and works on its own account one important State system. There are lines of local interest subventioned by the State or by the departments. The concessions granted to the six great companies expire at various dates from 1950 to 1960, the periods of State guarantee of four of them terminated at the end of 1914, and will do so in the case of the others in 1934 and 1935.

The length of line open for traffic in 1919 was 25,167 miles of lines, made up as follows —

	Miles		Miles
State	3,586.8	Paris Belt Line	19.9
Nord (Northern)	2,140.4	Grand Belt Line	77.7

II. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS

In 1914, France had 15,769 post-offices. The receipts on account of posts, telegraphs, and telephones, amounted to 402 million francs, the expenditure to 358 million francs. The number of letters, &c., carried in 1914 was —

—	Internal	International		Transit (1918)
		Dispatched	Received
	millions	millions	millions	millions
Letters	1,145	87	81	135
Post cards	325	5	5	2
Other packages	1,325	97	48	142
Total	2,795	189	134	279

The total length of the telegraphic lines in 1913 was 120,471 miles, with 151,195 miles of wire. There were 23,117 telegraph offices, of which 19,461 belonged to the State, and the remainder to railway companies and private persons. In 1913 there were despatched 67,771,000 telegrams, of which 51,410,000 were internal, 10,261,000 international, 2,124,000 in transit, and 3,976,000 were official.

In 1913 there were in France 11,451 urban telephone systems with 36,100 miles of line and 790,173 miles of wire, number of conversations in 1913, 388,966,900. There were 20,331 inter urban circuits with 72,181 miles of line, and 387,641 miles of wire, conversations in 1913, 45,327,000. In 1913 the gross telephone receipts were 65,800,000 francs.

Money and Credit

The nominal value of the French money coined in France during 6 years was —

Year	Gold	Silver	Nickel and Bronze	Total

1919	—	76,782,759	6,859,961	83,642,720

The ordinary savings banks numbered 502 (with about 1,800 branch offices) on December 31, 1918, the number of depositors was 7,826,000, to the value of 3,583,200,000 francs. The National savings banks, on December 31, 1918, held deposits and interest amounting to 1,590,000,000 francs due to 6,694,000 depositors. On December 31, 1919, the deposits amounted to about two milliards of francs.

The Bank of France, founded in 1800, and placed under State control in 1806, has the monopoly of issuing bank notes. The present privileges of the Bank were renewed on December 11, 1917, for a further 25 years, i.e. until December 31, 1945. The capital of the Bank is fixed at 182,500,000 francs (7,300,000 l.).

The situation of the bank on March 4, 1920, and on April 14, 1921, was —

	March 4, 1920	April 14, 1921
	1000 francs	1000 francs
Gold	3,582,145	3,556,778
Silver	251,747	270,301
Advances to the Public	1,566,735	2,196,082
Advances to the State	96,500,000	26,250,000
Notes in circulation	38,355,755	38,528,500
Capital and Reserve	225,463	337,415

At the outbreak of war the maximum note issue of the Bank of France was 6,800 million francs, on August 5, 1914, it was raised to 12,000 million francs, the amount was increased on successive occasions, the last having been Sept 28, 1920, when the maximum was fixed at 11,000 million francs.

Of the other well known banks, the following may be mentioned —The Crédit Foncier de France, founded in 1852, which lends money on mortgage, the Crédit Lyonnais, founded in 1863, the Société Générale, and the Comptoir-Nationale d'Escompte de Paris

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Franc of 100 centimes is of the value of 9½d or 25 225 francs to the pound sterling

Gold coins in common use are 20 and 10 franc pieces. The 20 franc gold piece weighs 6 4516 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 5 80645 grammes of fine gold. Silver coins are 5, 2, 1, and half franc pieces and 20 centime pieces. The 5 franc silver piece weighs 25 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 22 5 grammes of fine silver. The franc piece weighs 5 grammes 835 fine, and contains 4 175 grammes of fine silver. Bronze coins are 10 and 5 centime pieces. There are also 25, 10, and 5 centime nickel pieces.

There is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being theoretically 15½ to 1. Of silver coins, however, only 5 franc pieces are legal tender, and of these the free coinage has been suspended since 1876.

The present monetary convention between France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, and Greece is tacitly continued from year to year, but may be denounced by any of the contracting States, and, if denounced, will expire at the end of the year, which commences on January 1, following the denunciation. According to its terms, the five contracting States have their gold and silver coins respectively of the same fineness, weight, diameter, and current value, and the allowance for wear and tear in each case is the same. The coinage of 5-franc pieces, both gold and silver, is temporarily suspended, and the issue of subsidiary silver is, with certain exceptions for special reasons, limited to 7 francs per head of the population of each State (but 6 francs for Greece). Each Government, in its public offices, accepts payments in the silver 5-franc pieces of each of the others, and in subsidiary silver to the amount of 100 francs for each payment. Each State engages to exchange the excess of its issues over its receipts of subsidiary silver for gold or 5-franc silver pieces, and at the termination of the convention each is bound to resume also its 5-franc silver pieces, and to pay in gold a sum equal to the nominal value of the coin resumed. The following are the total issues of the five States, authorised by the convention of 1897:—

France, 394 millions of francs ; Italy, 232·4 ; Belgium, 46 8 ; Switzerland, 28 , Greece, 15

The monetary system of the Union has been adopted, either wholly or partially, in Spain, Rumania, Bulgaria, Servia, Russia, Finland, and many of the South American States

ANDORRA

The republic of Andorra, which is under the joint suzerainty of the head of the French state and of the Spanish Bishop of Urgel, consists chiefly of a valley, surrounded by high mountain peaks. Its maximum length is 17 miles, and its width 18 miles, it has an area of 191 square miles and a population of 5,231, scattered in some 80 villages. The surface of the country is rough and irregular, with an altitude varying between 6,562 and 10,171 feet. It is governed by a council of twenty-four members elected for four years by the heads of families in each of the six parishes. The council nominates a First Syndic to preside over its deliberations, in the First Syndic is vested the executive power. A Second Syndic is also nominated as deputy of the First Syndic. The judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by 2 civil judges appointed by the Bishop and by France respectively, and there is also a Supreme Court of Andorra at Perpignan. This, or the Ecclesiastical Court of the Bishop, forms the highest appeal court. For criminal suits two magistrates (le Viguer de France and le Viguer Episcopal) preside over a criminal court at Andorra-la-Vieille. The republic pays an annual due of 960 francs to France and 460 pesetas to the Bishop. A permanent delegate, the Prefect of the Pyrénées Orientales, moreover, has charge of the interests of France in the republic. A good road runs from the Spanish frontier to Andorra. Catalan is spoken in Andorra. French and Spanish currency are both in use.

Colonies and Dependencies

The colonies and dependencies of France (including Algeria and Tunis) have an area roughly estimated at about 5,119,138 square miles with a population of about 53,582,905. Algeria, however, is not regarded as a colony but as a part of France, and Tunis and Morocco are attached to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The administration of the colonies is directed or controlled by the Ministry of the Colonies, which was organised as a separate department in 1894. Most of them enjoy some measure of self government and have elective councils to assist the governor. The older colonies have also direct representation in the French legislature, Reunion, Martinique and Guadeloupe sending each a senator and two deputies, French India a senator and a deputy, Senegal, Guiana and Cochinchina each a deputy, while most of the others are represented on the "Conseil Supérieur des Colonies." This council consists of the senators and deputies of colonies, delegates from other colonies, and officials and other persons appointed on account of their special knowledge or qualifications. Some only of the colonies have a revenue sufficient for the cost of administration. In 1919, France spent on the colonial service 201,835,110 francs, of which 18,001,210 francs were for civil administration, 173,791,000 francs for military services, and 10,042,900 francs for penitentiary services.

The area and population of the colonial domain of France are as follows:

ASIA.

FRENCH INDIA

The chief French possession in India is Pondicherry. It was founded by the French in 1674, taken by the Dutch in 1693, and restored in 1699. The English took it in 1761, restored it in 1765, retook it in 1778, restored it a second time in 1785, retook it a third time in 1793, and restored it in 1814.

As established by the treaties of 1814 and 1815, the French possessions in India consist of five separate colonies, which cover an aggregate of 50,803 hectares (about 196 square miles), and had in 1919 the following estimated populations —

*Pondichery	46,657	Modelarpeth	15,224	Nodoukadou	7,151
Oulgaret	22,838	Arianeoupom	11,804	Cotchery	5,529
Villenour	16,283	*Karikal	18,944	*Chandernagar	26,490
Tiroubouvané	21,532	Tirnoular	10,228	*Mahé	11,111
Bahou	18,544	Grande Aldée	7,241	*Yanaon	5,043
Nettapacom	13,141	Neravy	6,108	Total	263,868

In 1919 the population of the Provinces was as follows — Pondichéry, 166,023, Karikal, 55,201, Chandernagar, 26,490, Mahé, 11,111, Yanaon, 5,043, Total, 263,868.

The colonies are divided into five dépendances (the chief towns of which are marked with an asterisk in the above table) and seventeen communes, having municipal institutions. There is also an elective general council. The Governor of the colonies resides at Pondichéry. The colonies are represented in the Parliament at Paris by one senator and one deputy. At Pondichéry the birth rate in 1919 was 1.93 per cent for Europeans and 3.51 per cent for natives, and the death rate 2.33 per cent for Europeans and 4.29 per cent for natives. There were in 1919, 61 primary schools and 3 colleges, all maintained by the Government, with 312 teachers and 9,491 pupils. Local revenue and expenditure (budget of 1920) 2,266,420 rupees. The principal crops are paddy, rice, sugar, cotton, manioc, cacao, coffee, ground-nuts. There are at Pondichéry 4 cotton mills, and at Chandernagar 1 jute mill, the cotton mills have, in all, 1,622 looms and 171,213 spindles, employing 7,335 persons. There are also at work 2 oil factories and a few oil presses for ground nuts, 1 ice factory, a cocoatine factory, and an iron foundry.

The chief exports from Pondichéry are oil seeds. At the ports of Pondichéry, Karikal, and Mahé in 1919 the imports amounted to 22,529,747 francs, and the exports to 26,792,148 francs. At these three ports in 1919, 159 vessels of 36,856,198 kilos entered and cleared. Railway open, 43 miles, Pondichéry to Villapuram, and Peralam to Karikal.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

French Indo China, with an area of about 256,000 square miles and a population in 1914 of 16,990,229, of whom 23,700 were European (excluding military forces), consists of 5 States: the Colony of Cochin China, the Protectorates of Annam, Cambodia, Tonking and Laos, and Kwang Chau Wan leased from China as well as the territory around Battambang, which was ceded by Siam in 1907. The whole country is under a Governor General, assisted by a Secretary General, and each of the States has at its head a functionary bearing the title of Resident Superior, except in the case of Cochin China, which, being a direct French Colony while the others are only Protectorates, has a Governor at its head. There is a Superior Council for the whole of Indo China and a Permanent Commission of the Council.

The white population are subject to French law. Throughout the country there are native tribunals from which there is an appeal to courts at Saigon and Hanoi. In these appeal courts European judges, in matters affecting natives, are assisted by Annamite mandarins.

There is a common budget for the whole of Indo-China, and also a separate budget for each of the States. The Provinces, about 120 in number, have also their budget, as have the municipalities. The general budget is supported by receipts from customs, Government monopolies, indirect contributions, posts, telegraphs, and railways in all the countries of the union, and besides maintaining these, provides for military and judicial services, public works, and other matters relating to the whole of the union. For 1920 the revenue and expenditure of the general budget balanced at 57,092,640 piastres. The outstanding debt of Indo China on January 1, 1920, amounted to 403,000,000 francs.

The military force, totalling about 25,514 are commanded by the Commandant-Superior, a general of division with the same rank as army corps generals in France. The naval force comprises 2 gun boats, 4 torpedo boats, and 21 despatch vessels.

Indo China is divided into three main economic areas:—(1) The territory tributary to Saigon (Cochin China, Cambodia, Southern Laos, and Annam South of Cape Varella), which, apart from the fisheries on the Coast and the interior lakes, is almost entirely agricultural, being one of the great rice regions of the world. (2) The region tributary to Haifong (Tonking and the three northern districts of Annam), which is devoted to agriculture, mining and manufacture. (3) Central Annam (the region between Porte d'Annam and Cape Varella), with Tourane as the principal port, which is mainly agricultural, but is not a great rice-growing district; its main exports are cinnamon, sugar and tea. The minerals of Indo-China are coal (636,000 tons in 1918), lignite, antimony, tin (604 tons in 1918), wolfram and zinc (28,000 tons in 1918). In 1918, 218 mining concessions were granted.

In 1887 the French possessions in Indo-China, including Annam, Tonking and Cambodia, were united into a Customs Union. In 1918 the total imports amounted to 363,388,754 francs, and exports to 454,303,991 francs. The chief export is rice, forming about 70 per cent. of the total (1,475,771 tons in 1918), and other exports are fish, pepper, hides, coal, cotton, rubber and sugar. The principal imports are cotton-tissues, cotton-thread, tin

Into Great Britain in 1920 the imports from Indo-China amounted to 4,950 $\frac{1}{2}$  tons, and the exports from Great Britain, 1,827,724 $\frac{1}{2}$  (chiefly cotton)

In 1918, 2,714 vessels of 2,241,746 metric tons entered, and 2,568 vessels of 2,196,064 tons cleared. Of those entered 332 of 437,080 tons were French, 281 of 366,438 tons were English, and 258 of 525,094 tons were Japanese.

There are about 3,300 miles of principal roads and 2,000 miles of local roads.

The oldest railway in Indo China is that from Saigon to Mytho. Total length of line, two thirds Government, at end of 1918, 1,300 miles. There are 348 post offices (1918). Number of letters, postcards, etc., handled in in 1918, 10,621,464.

The Bank of Indo-China, with an authorised capital of 48 million francs and reserve and redemption funds amounting to 33,500,000 francs, had till 1920 the privilege not only of making advances on security, but also of engaging in financial, industrial, or commercial enterprise in Indo China and New Caledonia. For French Indo China there is a coinage of silver pieces, piastres,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastres,  $\frac{1}{4}$  piastres, and  $\frac{1}{10}$  piastres, the piastre (since 1895) weighs 27 grams, and the fractional coins in proportion, the piastre and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastre are 900 fine, but the  $\frac{1}{4}$ - and  $\frac{1}{10}$ -piastre (since 1898) only 835 fine. The piastre is usually worth rather less than 24d. There are two bronze coins, one equal to the 100th and the other the 375th part of a piastre.

STATES AND PROTECTORATES

Cochin-China.

The area of French Cochin-China is estimated at 20,000 square miles. The whole is divided into 17 provinces. The towns of Saigon and Cholon have been formed into municipalities. The Colonial Council contains 18 members. The colony is represented in France by one deputy. The population consists mainly of Annamites, Cambodians, Mois, Chams, Chinese, and a few Indians, Malays, Tagals, and foreigners. In 1919 the total population was put at 3,452,248, of whom 6,301 were Europeans (excluding the military forces). Saigon had, in 1919, a population of 64,486, of whom 4,161 were Europeans, exclusive of 2,200 troops; the town of Cholon has about 190,085 inhabitants, of whom about 97,211 were Chinese. There are about 867 schools, with 1,325 teachers, and 51,452 pupils.

The total area is put at 5,011,277 hectares (1 hectare = 2.47 acres) of which 1,975,725 hectares are cultivated, and 3,488,611 hectares uncultivated (1,748,694 hectares being forest). The chief culture is rice, to which 1,665,159 hectares are devoted. The planting of rubber has been undertaken in recent years. Other crops are maize, beans, sweet potatoes, earth nuts, cotton, sugar cane, tobacco, coffee, coco nuts, betel nuts, pepper, oranges, bananas, &c. The farm animals in 1920 comprise 12,383 horses, 435,489 buffaloes, 277,478 pigs, 2,568 sheep and goats.

River and coast fishing is actively carried on; there are about 73,520 boats on the rivers, and 3,000 on the coast; the fishery products are valued at 2,800,000 francs yearly. There are 10 rice mills in Saigon and Cholon, turning out each from 450 to 900 tons a day. In these towns are also 2 saw-mills, 2 soap factories, and a varnish factory. Commerce is mostly in the hands of Europeans and Chinese, but about 22,000 Annamites are small traders. The chief exports are rice, fish and fish oil, pepper, cotton, copra, silk, shrimps, isinglass, hides, cardamoms. During 1919, 589 steamers of 895,592 tons entered at the port of Saigon of which 114 of 160,103 tons) were British. The vessels of the Messageries Maritimes and of the Chargeurs Réunis Companies visit Saigon regularly. There is also constant communication with Hong Kong and Singapore by British vessels. (For railways see Indo China.) At Saigon there are 5 banks or bank-agencies. The total exports in 1919 amounted to 980,777,780 francs, and imports to 84,202,744 francs. In 1919 the local budget balanced at 9,085,358 piastres.

Annam

French intervention in the affairs of Annam, which began as early as 1787, was terminated by a treaty, signed on June 6, 1884, and ratified at Hue on February 23, 1886, by which a French protectorate has been established over Annam. The King Khai-Dinh, who succeeded to the throne in 1916, governs the country, assisted by a Council of Ministers, in accordance with the wishes of the French Government. The ports of Tourane, Qui Nhon, and Xuan Day are opened to European commerce, and the customs revenue conceded to France. French troops occupy part of the citadel (called Mang Ca) of Hue, the capital (population 60,611). Binh Dinh, the largest town, has 74,400 inhabitants. Annamite functionaries, under the control of the French Government, administer all the internal affairs of Annam. The area of the protectorate is about 52,100 square miles, with a population in 1919 of 5,952,000, including 2,117 Europeans (exclusive of the military forces). The population is Annamite in the towns and along the coast, and consists of various tribes of Mois in the hilly tracts. At the end of 1920 the official schools of Annam were reorganised and placed under the direct control of the French Protectorate. There were 685 village schools with 14,438 pupils, 98 elementary schools with 5,985 pupils, 16 secondary schools with 5,058 pupils, one higher secondary school, at Hue, with 562 pupils, one higher secondary school for native girls with 289 pupils, one professional school with 125 pupils, and one school of law and administration with 55 pupils. Local budget, 1919, balanced at 5,723,139 piastres. The Phanrang river has been utilised to irrigate about 10,000 acres, and similar works, on a smaller scale, have been carried out in Central Annam. Rice is one of the most important products. Others are cotton, maize, and other cereals, the areca nut, mulberry, cinnamon, tobacco, sugar, betel, manioc, bamboo, excellent timber abounds, also caoutchouc, cardamoms, coffee, dye, and medicinal plants. Raw silk is produced, amounting annually to about 800,000 kilogrammes, one-third of which is exported, and the remainder used in native manufactures. There are about 681,000 head of cattle in Annam, and cattle rearing is of some importance. There are copper, zinc, and gold in the province of Quang nam, the mines are worked by natives. An important seam of haematite iron is worked about 9 kilometres from Thanhhoa. At Nongson, near Tourane, coal mines are worked. In North, Central, and Southern Annam there are salt works. Imports in 1919, 9,248,049 francs, exports, 51,556,788 francs. The chief imports are cotton yarn, cottons, tea, petroleum, paper goods, and tobacco, chief exports, sugar, rice, cotton and silk tissues, cinnamon, tea, and paper. In 1919, 117 ships (48 Portuguese of 5,119 tons, 37 Japanese of 42,580 tons, 18 English of 15,114 tons, 52 Chinese of 22,520 tons, 4 Dutch of 2,160 tons, 4 American of 9,329 tons, and 1 Norwegian of 1,102 tons) of a total tonnage of 97,924 tons, cleared the port of Tourane.

Cambodia

Cambodia is bounded on the south by Cochin China, on the east by Annam, on the north by Laos and Siam, on the north west by Siam, and on the west by the Gulf of Siam. Area, 45,000 square miles, population in 1919, 2,000,000 (estimated), of whom 1,100 were Europeans (excluding the military forces), 108,500 Annamites, and 140,000 Chinese. The present King, Sisowath, in 1904 succeeded his late brother, Norodom, who had recognised the French protectorate in 1863. The country is divided into 42 provinces. The three chief towns are Pnôm Penh (population 85,000), the capital of the territory Battambang, and Kampot, a seaport but not accessible for sea going vessels. The budget for 1920 balanced at 6,500,000 piastres, including a sum of 525,000 piastres allowed for the civil list of the king and princes. There are 60 schools with 4,000 pupils.

The soil is fertile, but only a part of it is under cultivation. That cultivation is not intensive, as the natives are scarce and not very fond of work. Enormous tracts of rich land are available for plantation of cotton, tea, rubber, and coffee. The overflow of the Mekong river fills up the Great Lake which occupies the middle of Western Cambodia. With the low water season the lake slowly empties and leaves innumerable ponds on the ground it covered during the high water season. These ponds are filled with an enormous quantity of fish suitable for salting and smoking. This is the principal native industry, and the export to China of Mekong fish attains in some years 30,000 tons. The chief product of Cambodia is rice, of which that country exports over 300,000 tons yearly, but as the export is made by way of Colono (where the rice is milled) and Saigon (where it is shipped), these figures appear in the customs statistics of Cochin China. Amongst the other products are kapok, cotton, pepper, salt fish, hides, cattle, palm sugar, and tobacco, and amongst the produce to become more important in the near future, coffee, rubber, and iron. Pepper is grown by 61 villages with 4,800 planters, the production being over 800,000 kilogrammes annually. Cotton growing is extending, the production is estimated at 9,000 tons, the whole of which is exported. Cattle breeding is a flourishing native industry, especially between Pnôm Penh and Manila. Salt is worked. There is a cotton ginning mill at Khsach Kandal, near Pnôm Penh, and another at Kompong han. The external trade is carried on mostly through Saigon in Cochin China. The imports comprise salt, wine, and textiles, the exports comprise salt fish, cotton, tobacco, rice, also boats. In 1920, 4,236 vessels of 179,874 tons entered, and 10,806 vessels of 312,166 tons cleared the ports of Cambodia.

Cambodia possessed in 1916 500 miles of good metalled roads and nearly 1,000 miles of unmetalled roads and roads in course of construction. The chief roads are from Saigon to the Siamese frontier, via the left side of the river from Banan, on the right side of the Mékong, from Pnôm Penh, through the district south west of the lakes, the road from Pnôm Penh to the Gulf of Siam, and the road from Saigon to Kratié. The Mékong and the Great Lake with their affluents give a total of 875 miles of waterways, of which about 370 are not navigable to launches during the low water season. Sea going steamers can easily reach Pnôm Penh, which has good quays and embankments.

Of all the countries of the Far East, Cambodia is among the richest in ancient monuments.

Tonking

This territory, brought under France's protectorate in 1884, has an area of 46,400 square miles, and is divided into 21 provinces, and 4 military territories, with 8,698 villages and a population in 1919 of 6,470,250, of whom 6,875 were Europeans (exclusive of military forces). The King of Annam was formerly represented in Tonking by a viceroy, but, in July, 1897, he consented to the suppression of the viceroyalty and the creation of a French residency in its place. Chief town Hanoi, a fine and large modern town, with a population of 109,500 in 1919. This town on January 1, 1902, became the capital of Indo China, instead of Saigon. There are 14 grammar schools with (1920) 4,967 pupils. In 1902 a school of medicine for natives was opened at Hanoi. This with the other higher education schools for natives was formed in 1917 into the University of Indo China. Hanoi has also since 1918 a large European college. The local budget for 1921 balanced at 13,131,390 piastres. The chief crop is rice (total exports 1919, 186,685 tons valued at 117,045,000 francs) exported mostly to Hong-Kong (in 1919, 183,812 tons, valued at 83,779,000 francs). Other products are maize, arrowroot, sugar cane, coffee, tea, various fruit trees, and tobacco. A large quantity of raw silk is produced annually, most of which is used in native weaving and the remainder exported (13,000 kilogrammes for 1919). There are rich limestone quarries, calamine and tin mines, and also rich hard coal beds. The enormous limestone quarries allowed the rapid increase of Portland cement manufacture which produced for export in 1919 67,567 tons of cement. During the same year 290,000 tons of hard coal were exported.

Chief imports are metal tools and machinery, yarn and tissues, beverages, chief exports, rice, maize, and animal products. The principal port is Haiphong, which is visited regularly by the steamers of two French lines. In 1919, 588 vessels of 711,961 tons gross entered and cleared this port, 187 vessels (226,443 tons) being British.

The Laos territory, under French protectorate since 1893, is estimated to contain 98,000 square miles, and in 1914 there were 640,877 inhabitants. The capital is Vientiane. In the country there are three protected states, Luang Prabang, which has a capital of the same name, the residence of the King, who is assisted in his government by a French Administrator, the other protected states are Bassac and Muong Sing. The soil is fertile, producing rice, cotton, indigo, tobacco and fruits, and bearing teak forests, from which the logs are now floated down the Mekong to Saigon. Gold, tin, lead and precious stones are found, and concessions have been granted to several French mining companies. It can be entered only by the Mekong, which is barred at Khone by rapids. A railway, four miles in length, has been constructed across that island, and by means of it several steam launches have been transported to the upper waters, where they now ply. A telegraph line connects Hue in Annam with the towns on the Mekong, and these with Saigon. The cost of the Laos administration is borne by Cochin China (to the extent of six thirteenths), Tonkin and Annam (five thirteenths), and Cambodia (two thirteenths). The local budget for 1918 balanced at 1,747,800 piastres.

In 1900 the territory of Kwang Chau Wan on the coast of China, leased from China in 1898, and increased in 1899 by the addition of 2 islands in the bay, was placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Indo-China. The territory has been divided into 3 administrative circumscriptions, but the Chinese communal organisation is maintained. Its area is about 190 square miles and its population about 168,000. The imports are chiefly cotton yarns, opium, petroleum, the exports are straw sacks, swine, mats. The port is a free port. The territory is regularly visited by the vessels of two French companies, in 1919 there were 290 vessels of 94,905 tons. Official buildings, a post office, roads, &c., have been or are being constructed. The local budget for 1918 balanced at 404,960 piastres.

ALGERIA

(L'ALGÉRIE)

Government.

The government and administration of Algeria are centralised at Algiers under the authority of the Governor General, who represents the Government of the Republic throughout Algerian territory. With the exception of the non Mussulman services of Justice, Public Instruction, Worship, and the Treasury, which are under competent ministers, all the services are under his direction. He has to prepare a special budget for Algeria, he grants concessions for works, and he contracts loans in the name of the Colony.

The budget of Algeria which, since 1901, has been entirely distinct from that of France, comprises under revenue the imposts of every sort which are collected within the Colony and under expenditure the whole of the civil disbursements. The expenditure on War and Marine is still at the cost of the mother country, as is also the burden of guarantees of interest on railways up to 1926. The budget, prepared by the Governor under the control of the Minister of the Interior, is discussed and voted by the Financial Delegations and the Superior Council. These Delegations were instituted in 1898 to enable the body of tax-payers to state their views on questions of imposts by means of elected delegates. There are three Delegations representing respectively the French colonists, the French tax payers other than colonists, and the Mussulman natives. The Superior Council is composed of elected members and of high officials. Lastly, the Governor is assisted in the exercise of his functions by a purely consultative council of government.

The territories of the South, forming a separate colony, are each under a military command which directs all the administrative and civil services under the authority of the Governor. They have a budget distinct from that of Algeria. The natives are represented on the communal administration. By the law of February 4, 1919, the position of French citizens is accorded to natives, above the age of 25 and monogamous, who served in the war, who are proprietors or farmers, who can read or write or hold a French decoration. It is proposed to create in Paris a Consultative Committee on the same lines as the British Council of India.

The French Chambers have alone the right of legislating for Algeria while such matters as do not come within the legislative power are regulated by decree of the President of the Republic. Each department sends one senator and two deputies to the National Assembly.

Governor-General —M. Abel, appointed July 29, 1919

Area and Population.

The census of March 5, 1911, which is the last taken, showed a population (including the military forces) amounting to 5,563,828 on an area of 222,180 sq miles. The colony has been organised in 2 great divisions called respectively Northern and Southern Algeria. Northern Algeria consists as formerly of Civil Territory and Territoire de Commandement, but the Civil Territory has been extended, while the Territoire de Commandement has been diminished and will before long be completely merged in the Civil Territory. Northern Algeria contains 17 arrondissements and 269 communes and 74 are mixed.

communes Southern Algeria consists of the 4 Territories of Ain Sefra, Ghardaia, Tougout, and the Saharan Oases, organized under decree of August 14, 1905 These territories contain 12 communes of which 5 are mixed and 7 native

Constantine	2,118,446	Tougout	165,551
Total	5,069,522	Saharan Oases	40,379
		Total	494,306

The total population in 1891 was 4,124,732, in 1896, 4,429,421. In 1911, the native population numbered 4,411,276, French, 492,660, naturalised Jews and their offspring, 70,271, Tunisians, 2,375, Moroccans, 23,115, Spaniards, 135,150, Italians, 36,791, other foreigners 23,927. Of the municipal population of Northern Algeria, 2,484,400 were males, and 2,236,574 were female.

The chief towns with the total communal population in 1912 were Alger, 172,397, Oran, 123,086, Constantine, 65,173, Bone, 42,039, Sidi bel Abbes, 30,942, Tlemcen, 39,874, Mostaganem, 23,166, Mascara, 24,254, Blida, 35,461, Philippeville, 27,137, Sétif, 26,261.

Religion and Instruction

The native population is entirely Musulman, the Jews being now regarded as French citizens. The Roman Catholic Church has an archbishop and 2 bishops, with 386 officiating clergymen. There are 13 Protestant pastors and 6 Jewish rabbis sharing in Government grants.

At Algiers (city) there is a University, attended in 1919-20 by 1,428 students (614 for Law, 359 Medicine and Pharmacy, 189 Science, 266 Arts), Professors (1919-20), 101. There are also special schools for commerce, the fine arts, hydrography, and agriculture. There were also in 1919-20 496 Musulman schools with 35,578 pupils. There are higher Musulman schools (médersas) at Algiers, Tlemcen, and Constantine. In Algeria there are 16 establishments for secondary education with, in 1919, 9,837 pupils (7,180 boys and 2,651 girls). In 1919-20 there were 1,298 primary and infant schools, public and private, and 132,617 pupils. There were two normal schools for men teachers with 29 professors and 230 students (54 Musulman), and three normal schools for women teachers with 21 professors and 200 students.

Justice and Crime

There is an Appeal Court at Algiers, and in the arrondissements are 16 courts of first instance. There are also commercial courts and justices of the peace with extensive powers. Criminal justice is organised as in France for Europeans. Since 1902 there have been criminal courts and special repressive tribunals for trying natives accused of crime.

Musulman justice is administered to natives by the Cadis in the first instance with an appeal to French courts.

Finance

Europeans and natives pay the same direct and indirect taxes. The departments of War and Marine are excluded from the estimates, but the proceeds of the Military tax, the Government monopolies, and some other revenues are paid to France. The total expenditure (including military and extraordinary disbursements) exceeds the Algerian revenue by about 75,000,000 francs.

The budget estimates for five years were as follows in francs —

—	1917	1918	1919	1920	1921
Revenue	132,091,326	159,859,921	222,948,810	510,652,801	501,659,318
Expenditure	132,080,652	159,857,955	222,732,317	510,649,736	501,525,219

The details of the 1921 budget were as follows —

Revenue		Expenditure
	Francs		Francs

		Extraordinary	174,569,000
Total (including all items)	501,659,318	Total (including all items)	501,525,219

For the Southern Territories in 1920 the revenue was put at 7,755,573 francs, and the expenditure at 7,743,618 francs.

Defence.

The military force in Algeria constitutes the XIXth Army Corps, consisting of 3 divisions. French residents are under the same obligation to serve as in France, natives are under the obligation to serve 3 years with the colours and can be called up as reservists in case of mobilisation. The troops might be stationed in North Africa or employed on Colonial expeditions, but they belonged to the 'Metropolitan,' not to the Colonial Army. There are 3 regiments of zouaves, each of 3 battalions, of 5 companies; 3 regiments of cavalry (Chasseurs d'Afrique), of several squadrons, 3 groups of artillery, 1 battalion of engineers, and 1 regiment of the Flying Corps. These were all European troops, and in the case of the artillery and engineers their recruiting depôts were in France. The Foreign Legion of 2 regiments of a varying number of battalions is recruited from foreigners of any nationality, but officered chiefly by Frenchmen, the headquarters of the regiments is in Algiers, but battalions are sent to any colony where they may be required. The Natives were 9 regiments of Algerian Tirailleurs, each of 3 battalions, and 5 regiments of Spahis (Arab cavalry) each of several squadrons. The officers and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers of the native regiments are French. Some of the troops ordinarily belonging to Algeria are in Morocco, and these are not counted above.

Agriculture and Industry.

There exists in Algeria a small area of highly fertile plains and valleys in the neighbourhood of the coast, mainly owned by Europeans, which is cultivated scientifically, and where profitable returns are obtained from vineyards, cereals, &c., but the greater part of Algeria is of limited value for agricultural purposes. The northern portion is mountainous and generally better adapted to grazing and forestry than agriculture, and a large portion of the native population is quite poor. In spite of the many excellent roads built by the Government, a considerable area of the mountainous region is without adequate means of communication and is very inaccessible.

The soil is, under various systems, held by proprietors, by farmers, and by Métayers or Khammes. Most of the State lands have been appropriated to colonists. The chief cereal crops are wheat (243,000 tons in 1920), barley (207,397 tons in 1920), oats (73,422 tons in 1920), maize, potatoes, artichokes, beans, peas and tomatoes. Flax, silk, and tobacco (the cultivation of which is most remunerative) are also cultivated.

In 1920 the yield of wine was 157,136,452 gallons. The orange, date, mandarine, citron, banana, pomegranate, almond, fig, and many other fruits grow abundantly. The production of olive oil is an important industry. Cotton in 1920 was sown on 415 acres. Forests cover 6,560,232 acres, and, for the most part, belong to the State and communes. The greater part is mere brushwood, but on 645,000 acres are cork-oak trees, from which, in 1918, 611 tons of cork were obtained. The dwarf-palm and alfa are worked on the plains. Timber is cut for firewood, also for industrial purposes, for railway sleepers, telegraph poles, &c., and for bark for tanning. Considerable portions of the forest area are also leased for tillage, or for pasturage for cattle, sheep, or pigs. The forest revenue annually amounts to over 240,000*l*.

In 1919 there were in Algeria 202,839 horses, 184,895 mules, 247,808 asses, 1,092,996 cattle, 9,139,722 sheep, 3,793,998 goats, and 108,213 pigs.

There are extensive fisheries for sardines, anchovies, sprats, tunny fish, &c., and also shell-fish. In 1919, 4,262 persons, and 1,116 boats of 3,313 metric tons were employed in fishing, and the fish taken were valued at 10,685,120 francs.

Algeria possesses iron, zinc, lead, mercury, copper, antimony, and petrol. In 1919 the total mineral output amounted to 1,019,824 metric tons (1,041,317 tons in 1918). The output in 1919 was as follows: iron ore, 721,584 tons, zinc and lead ore, 22,116 tons, phosphate rock, 276,040 tons, antimony, 120 tons.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Algiers in recent years has been as follows (in 1,000/ telling) —

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports

Shipping and Communications.

In 1919, 8,170 vessels of 5,807,632 tons net entered, and 8,107 vessels of 5,784,719 tons cleared Algerian ports.

On January 1, 1920, the mercantile marine of Algeria consisted of 364 vessels of 29,505 tons net

National roads have a length of 3,330 miles

On December 31, 1919, there were 2,221 English miles of railway open for traffic (exclusive of lines on Tunisian territory) Of the total 807 miles are privately owned

The postal receipts in 1919 were 7,181,480 francs, and there were 718 post offices The telegraphic receipts were 4,595,626 francs, and those from telephones 3,164,028 francs. The total for the three services was 14,941,134 francs.

The telegraph of Algeria consisted on December 31, 1919, of 8,121 miles of line and 25,283 miles of wire, serving 786 offices. Telephone urban systems, 6,296 miles of line, inter-urban, 13,287 miles of line. Number of subscribers January 1, 1920), 10,259.

The Bank of Algeria, whose privilege has been extended to the end of 1920, is a bank of issue, with a capital of 20,000,000 francs, but its note circulation must not in any case exceed 1,300,000,000 francs (law of January 29, 1920). Several co-operative agricultural banks, assisted by Government funds, are in operation. There are in Algeria 7 savings banks with, on December 31, 1918, 20,511 depositors, the amount due to depositors being 4,828,400 francs. Messrs Cox & Co (France) have branches at Algiers and Oran.

FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA (FRENCH CONGO)

The French Congo extends along the Atlantic coast between Cameroon and the territories of the Belgian Congo, with the exception of the Spanish territory on the coast from the Muni river on 1° N lat to Cameroon, and inland to the meridian of 11° 20' E of Greenwich, and the Kabinda region, which is Portuguese. Inland it is bounded by the Congo and Ubanghi rivers and stretches northwards to the Bahr el Ghazal and Lake Chad. French acquisition began on the Gabun river in 1841, Libreville was founded in 1849, Cape Lopez was gained in 1862, and the French possessions extended along the coast for about 200 miles. Since then the territories have been increased by exploration and military occupation and their limits have been defined in a series of international conventions. By a convention, dated November 14, 1911, France agreed to cede certain parts of the colony to Germany in return for German recognition of the French protectorate in Morocco. The total area ceded is about 107,270 square miles with a population of about 1,000,000. Sleeping sickness is very prevalent in the district and is fast decimating the population. At the same time Germany ceded to France from her Cameroon territory 6,450 square miles.

By decree of January 15, 1910, the French Congo was divided into three circumscriptions which form three colonies, viz — the Gabun Colony (capital Libreville), the Middle Congo Colony (capital Brazzaville), and the Ubangi-Shari Colony (capital Bangui). The Chad Territory, which was formerly a dependency of the Ubangi-Shari Colony, was, by decree issued on March 17, 1920, made a separate colony.

By decrees issued on January 15, 1910, the name of the French Congo was changed into French Equatorial Africa, which extends over the Gabun, the Middle Congo, the Ubangi-Shari Colonies, and Chad Territory, to these have since been added the Cameroon territories.

The area is about 1,037,131 square miles containing a population estimated in 1915 at 9 millions of negro and other races. Estimated area and population of the separate colonies is shown as follows —

Colony	Area in square miles	Population
Gabun	105,906	1,300,000
Middle Congo	92,640	1,390,000
Ubangi Shari	190,491	1,590,000
Chad	481,728	2,090,000
Cameroon	166,366	2,500,000
Total	1,037,131	8,870,000

The Colonies have each a Lieutenant Governor, they all have financial and administrative autonomy, and each has an administrative council, the Lieutenant Governors are under the Governor General of French Equatorial Africa, having his headquarters at Brazzaville who is assisted by a Secretary General and a Council of Government. There is a general budget for the whole of French Equatorial Africa, and also separate budgets for the colonies. Local revenues accrue chiefly from customs duties, there are native poll taxes. The sale of alcohol to natives is restricted. For 1920 the budgets showed the following figures: General budget, 7,600,000 francs, the colonial budgets were as follows: Gabun, 3,316,000 francs, Middle Congo, 3,930,000 francs, Ubangi Shari, 3,400,000 francs, Chad Colony, 5,130,000 francs, Cameroon, 10,283,000 francs. In the colony there are (1916) 45 mission schools for boys and 10 for girls, with about 3,600 pupils (724 being girls), and 94 public schools with about 3,900 pupils.

The resources of French Equatorial Africa are quite undeveloped. There are about 30,000 square miles of tropical forest extending to the Gabun coast, containing many species of industrial value. Wild caoutchouc is the most important export, 2,770 tons in 1917. Palm oil is also produced to some extent, 7,770 tons were exported in 1917. Coffee is also cultivated. In the Chad Military Territory large numbers of cattle, sheep, asses, camels, horses, and ostriches are raised, but there are no facilities for export. Copper, zinc, and lead are found. In 1913 the total exports amounted to 36,865,000 francs, and imports, 21,182,000 francs, in 1917, exports, 27,732,410 francs, imports, 9,575,000 francs.

There is considerable shipping at Port Gentil and Libreville, the chief ports, but at Loango steamers must anchor about three miles off the coast. All three ports are visited by the vessels of the Chaqueurs Réunis, and the steamers of the Elder Dempster Line. Whale fishing commenced in 1912. The military force of the colony (1914) consisted of 7,145 men, of whom 530 are Europeans.

The Central African telegraph line connects Brazzaville with Loango, and is in communication with the English Atlantic cable. Wireless telegraphy connects Brazzaville and the head of the Southern Railway in the Loango Region, a distance of 300 miles, and also Brazzaville and Leopoldville. In the Chad region there are several stations connecting Fort Lamy, Ati, Faya, and Maô. A line has been laid to connect Brazzaville with Bangui, and another to connect Bangui with Fort Lamy. The total length of line in operation is about 2,366 miles.

On the north-east of Lake Chad is the state of Kanem, which was completely subjected to France in 1903, and is now only a district of the Shari territory with Maô for its capital. Wadai, to the east of Kanem, with an area of about 170,000 square miles, and a semi-civilised population of about 1,000,000, accepted the French Protectorate in the summer of 1903. In 1911 a French force occupied Arada, some miles to the north of the capital, Abeshr, which is in communication with Beughazi, on the coast of Tripoli, by caravans, and in 1913 Ain Galakka

Governor General of Equatorial Africa —J. Augagneur (May, 1920)

Cameroon —The former German Colony of Kamerun, including the area of French Equatorial Africa ceded by France to Germany, was occupied by French and British troops in 1916. The greater portion of the territory has been placed under French administration, and a strip on the southern border of Nigeria under British. The total area allotted to France amounts to 166,489 square miles, excluding the 107,270 square miles ceded to Germany in 1911. Imports in 1918 amounted to 13,528,967 francs, exports to 7,857,214 francs. General budget for 1920 balances at 7,370,500 francs, special railway budget, 2,913,000 francs. Chief products are coffee, tobacco, palm oil, and ivory. The country has 213 miles of good roads, and 359 miles of railway. See also p. 255.

MADAGASCAR

Government

The last native sovereign of Madagascar, Ranavalona III (born 1861, died 1916), succeeded in 1883. The French having claimed a portion of the north west coast as having been transferred to them by local chiefs, hostilities were carried on in 1882-84 against the Hovas, who refused to recognise the cession. In 1885 peace was made, Diego Suarez having been surrendered to France. A French Resident General was received at the capital, and the foreign relations of the country were claimed to be regulated by France. By the Anglo-French agreement of August 5, 1890, the protectorate of France over Madagascar was recognised by Great Britain, but the Native Government steadily refused to recognise any protectorate. In May, 1895, a French expedition was despatched to enforce the claims of France, and on October 1, the capital having been occupied a treaty was signed whereby the Queen recognised and accepted the protectorate. By a unilateral convention made in January, 1896, Madagascar became a French possession, and by law promulgated August 6, 1896, the island and its dependencies were declared a French colony.

Governor General. —Hubert Garbit (appointed March 14, 1920)

A Consultative Council of Administration has been established at Antananarivo. The Colony is not represented in the French Parliament, nor has it any elective assembly. By decree of June 1918, Madagascar is divided into 24 provinces, and 75 districts administered by officials of the council of administration. Natives are employed to a large extent in subordinate positions both in the civil and military administration. In some parts of the island the natives, under the direction of the administrators, are allowed to choose one of their number as intermediary between themselves and the native governors appointed by the French Government. These representatives receive a remuneration and give their whole time to this work.

Area and Population

Madagascar is situated to the south east coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mozambique Channel, the least distance between island and continent being 240 miles, its length is 980 miles, greatest breadth, 360 miles. The area is estimated at 228,000 square miles. The census of December 31, 1917, showed a population of 3,545,264, of whom 15,157 were French, 3,101 were of other European birth, 5,272 were Hindus, 1,007 Chinese, 631 were African, and 3,520,096 were Malagasy. On December 31, 1918, the population was 3,545,575.

The Malagasy races or tribes are very numerous, the more important being the Hova (1,097,458), the Betsileo (515,005), the Betsimisaraka (401,857), the Tanala (151,061), the Sakalava (208,777), and the Bara (161,116). Hindus, Chinese, Arabs, and other Asiatics carry on small retail trade. The most intelligent and enterprising tribe is the Hova, whose language, allied to the Malayan and Oceanic tongues, is understood over a large part of the island. The people are divided into a great many clans, who seldom intermarry.

The slave trade was nominally abolished in 1877, slavery in Imerina and in all parts under French authority was abolished by proclamation on September 27, 1896. The system of forced labour in the public service was abolished on January 1, 1901, but the personal tax due from 16 to 60 years of age, formerly 5 francs, has been increased to 10, 15, in some provinces 20, and in Antananarivo to 30 francs. The populations of the chief towns were: The capital, Antananarivo, in the centre of the island, 63,115; Tamatave 15,000, Fianarantsoa 8,231, Andovoranto 1,322, Majunga 7,205, Diégo Suarez 10,377, Ambohitra 3,580, Tuléar 2,467, Mananjary 8,927, Maroantsetra, 3,294, Fort Dausslen 2,000. The principal ports are Tamatave, on the east coast, Majunga on the north-west coast, Diégo Suarez in the north, and Tuléar in the south west.

In 1896 Diégo Suarez (a French colony from 1885), the island of Nossi Be (area 130 sq. m.) on the west coast, and the island of Ste. Marie on the east coast (area, 64 sq. m.), and in 1914 the Comoro Islands, were placed under the authority of the Governor General of Madagascar.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Up to 1895 a large portion of the Hova and of the other tribes in the central districts had been Christianised. The Christian population was estimated at 450,000 Protestants, and 50,000 Roman Catholics. There are many missionary societies at work, French (Catholic and Protestant), British (the London Missionary Society, the Friends' Mission, and the Anglican Mission); there is also a Norwegian Lutheran Mission and an American Mission. French Catholic missions had 258 European workers (67 female),

Protestant and Anglican missions had 173 (54 female) The outlying tribes are still mostly heathen

Education is compulsory from 8 to 14 years of age On January 1, 1918, there were 745 official schools with 76,248 pupils (48,444 boys and 24,206 girls), and 432 private schools, with 43,994 pupils Children are required to learn the French language At Antananarivo there is a school of native medicine, an administrative and commercial school, a normal school, and a school of agriculture

For the administration of French justice there are a Parquet consisting of a Procureur Général and other officials, a court of appeal, 4 courts of first instance in the principal towns, and justice of peace courts at 17 centres For native justice there are tribunals in the districts and provinces, and the natives have the right of appeal from lower to higher tribunals

Finance.

The local revenue of Madagascar is derived chiefly from direct taxation (including a poll tax and taxes on land, cattle, and houses), from customs and other indirect taxes, from colonial lands, from posts and telegraphs, markets, and miscellaneous sources The chief branches of expenditure are general administration, public works, the post office, and the public debt For 1920 the local budget balanced at 68,866,200 francs

The colony has since 1897 contracted debt to the amount of 4,200,000/ at the average yearly rate of interest of 3.02 per cent The loans were made for the purpose of public works or for the conversion of loans for that purpose.

Defence

In peace time the troops in Madagascar (including the forces at Diego Suarez) consist of 2,411 Europeans, and 6,376 natives The police and militia are maintained on the local budget

Production and Industry.

In 1896, on the completion of the French occupation of the Island, the Malagasy system of land tenure was modified, foreigners were permitted to acquire land, and registration of land was begun Government lands, urban or non urban, are let or sold to private persons, or to companies for agriculture, pasturage, or mining On December 31, 1916, there were 2,634,410 acres of land under cultivation by natives and 257,343 acres by Europeans. Estimated yield of the chief vegetable products for 1918 was rice (701,005 tons), sugar (516 tons), coffee (1,116 tons), manioc (800,700 tons), cotton, cacao, vanilla, (422 tons), tobacco (986 tons), butter beans (12,375 tons), cloves, mulberry trees, and rubber trees Sericulture is encouraged The forests abound with many valuable woods, while caoutchouc, gum, resins, and plants for textile, tanning, dyeing, and medicinal purposes abound The quantity of graphite and caoutchouc exported is at present considerable, the production of graphite for 1917 was 35,000 metric tons

Cattle breeding and agriculture are the chief occupations of the natives, there were on December 31, 1919, 7,277,609 cattle in the island, 3,086 horses, 270,690 sheep, 140,426 goats 662 ostriches, and 421,349 pigs

Silk and cotton weaving are carried on, and the working of metal and the making of panama and other straw hats The preparation of sugar, rice, soap, tapioca, &c., is being undertaken by Europeans, as well as the canning of meat There are large meat preserving factories at Boanamaray (Majunga), Diego-Suarez, Tamatave, Antananarivo and Antsirabe

Of minerals, gold (27,141 ozs in 1918), iron, copper, lead, silver, zinc, antimony, manganese, nickel, sulphur, graphite (27,838 tons in 1917), lignite (first found in March, 1912), and also coal have been found in various parts of the island

Commerce

The trade of Madagascar has been as follows in five years —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
Imports	1,750,694	4,078,225	5,479,813	4,090,792	3,958,909
Exports	2,642,644	3,490,605	3,445,318	3,671,308	7,086,703

The chief articles of import and export in 1917 and 1918 were the following —

Imports	1917	1918	Exports	1917	1918
	£	£		£	£
Cottons	1,154,224	—	Gold dust	110,554	74,613
Beverages	156,000	323,091	Cattle	23,971	14,566
Machinery	76,412	74,252	Tanning bark	10,184	515
Metals	71,388	112,611	Rice	70,606	212,005
Cement	33,391	19,087	Hides	348,656	242,149
Lime	4,570	3,678	Rafia fibre	132,597	128,075
Nothing	1,980,662	1,979,757	Wax	65,342	37,146

The trade in 1917 and 1918 was distributed as follows —

From or to	Imports		Exports
	1917	1918	1917	1918
	£	£	£	£
France	3,920,152	1,763,021	2,600,194	2,441,309
French Colonies	300,949	596,674	181,966	495,581
United Kingdom	236,361	216,752	499,639	414,496
British Possessions	630,329	1,275,085	127,021	193,312

According to Board of Trade returns, the imports from Madagascar into Great Britain in 1920 amounted to 878,034 (mainly beans and plumbago), and the exports from Great Britain amounted to 294,201 (mainly cotton goods)

Shipping and Communications

Tamatave the principal seaport of the island, is visited by the steamers of two French shipping companies, and the principal ports are connected with each other by coasting steamers plying regularly. In 1918, vessels of 630,320 tons entered and vessels of 632,133 tons cleared at the ports of Madagascar. Of the total tonnage entering 490,563 tons were French, and 78,981 tons were British, and of those clearing, 492,671 tons were French and 81,384 tons British.

There are as yet but few roads in Madagascar in the European sense of the word. At the end of 1918 there were 1,611 miles of metalled roads. The transport of mails and passengers by motor-cars is being extended. A fortnightly service of motor cars has been established between Antananarivo and Miarinarivo (97 miles), and a service—twice weekly—between Antananarivo and Fianarantsoa, the capital of the southern provinces (259 miles), and Mananjary on the east coast (328 miles). Waggon roads have been made from Tamatave to Antananarivo, from Antananarivo to Maevatanana and between most of the chief military posts. Three railways are at present worked in Madagascar. The first is the through railway line between Antananarivo and Tamatave (229 miles) which was opened for traffic in March, 1913. The second is the railway which is being constructed between Antananarivo and Antsirabe (noted for its thermal springs), 107 miles south of Antananarivo, 27 miles of which were opened for traffic in January, 1919. The third is the branch line of the Tamatave railway, from Moramanga to the Antsihanaka provinces, towards the north of the island, which was opened for traffic in October, 1917, as far as Anosimoa, a distance of 61 miles. Total railway mileage on June 30, 1919, 776 miles.

There is postal communication throughout the island. The telegraph line has (December 31, 1918) a length of 4,444 miles, and 6,520 miles of wire. In 1916, 366,521 telegrams were sent. There is cable communication to Mozambique, Mauritius, Reunion, and Aden. In 1918 there were 462 miles of urban telephone line, 1,703 miles of inter urban circuits, and three Government wireless telegraph stations.

Money and Banks

The Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris has agencies at Antananarivo, Tamatave, Diego Suarez, Mananjary, Majunga and Tuléar, in 1911 the Bank of Madagascar, with headquarters in Paris, was opened at Tamatave with a capital of 600,000 francs.

The only legal coin is the silver 5 franc piece, with its silver sub divisions, as well as copper coins of 5 and 10 centimes, but the Italian 5 lire piece and Belgian, Greek, and other coins of equal value are also in circulation. French Bank notes of 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 francs are also legal tender, as well as, since the war, postage stamps affixed to cardboard, for smaller values, viz, 10, 25 and 50 centimes, and 1 and 2 francs.

MAYOTTE AND THE COMORO ISLANDS

The archipelago of the Comoro Islands, is formed by the islands of Mayotte, Anjouan, Grande Comore and Moheli. Before 1912, Anjouan, Moheli and Grande Comore were only under French protection, Mayotte alone being a colony. But by a law of July 25, 1912, and a decree of February 23, 1914, the whole archipelago has become a colony, attached to the general government of Madagascar, of which it forms a twenty third province, the 'Province des Comores'.

The island of Mayotte (140 square miles) had a population (1915) of 13,500. There is an increasing emigration to Zanzibar and Madagascar. In 1914 there were two schools with 2 teachers and 60 pupils. The chief product was formerly sugar, but the cultivation of vanilla has now superseded that of the sugar cane. There are now only two sugar works and two distilleries for rum. Besides vanilla and sugar, cacao, aloes and perfume plants (citronella, ylang-ylang, patchouli, &c) are cultivated.

Grande Comore, Moheli, Anjouan, and a number of smaller islands, have an area of about 650 square miles and population in 1914 of 84,117. Vanilla, cacao and perfume plants are successfully cultivated. Grande Comore has a fine forest and exports timber for building and for railway sleepers.

The principal imports are cotton fabrics, metals, and rice, the principal exports, hides, sugar, and vanilla

RÉUNION.

Reunion (or Bourbon), about 420 miles east of Madagascar, has belonged to France since 1643. It is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council, and an elective Council General, and is represented in the French Parliament by a Senator and two Deputies. It has an area of 970 square miles and population (1912) of 173,822, of whom 159,218 were Europeans, 130,000 of French origin, there were also 8,341 British Indians, 1,868 natives of Madagascar, 2,927 Africans, 884 Chinese, 584 Arabians. The chief towns are St Denis, with 23,972 inhabitants in 1912, St Pierre, 29,481, St Paul, 18,646; St Louis, 13,346. The towns are under the French municipal law. Réunion has a lycee with 24 teachers and 290 pupils. Primary education is given in a training school with 46 pupils and 7 teachers, and 169 elementary schools with 361 teachers and 17,808 pupils (1920). The chief port, Pointe des Galets, is connected by a coast railway of 80 miles with St Benoit on the one hand, and St Pierre on the other. In 1888 this railway was taken over by the State. The chief productions are sugar (62,000 acres), rum, coffee (8,000 acres), manioc, (12,000 acres) tapioca, vanilla, spices. The forests occupy about 150,000 acres. There are 20 sugar factories in the island. The annual production of rum amounts to 1,166,000 gallons, of which 836,000 gallons are exported. The chief imports are rice, grain, &c, the chief exports are sugar and rum. Total value of imports in 1919, 41,759,750 francs, of exports, 50,311,574 francs. In 1919, 65 vessels of 117,264 tons entered, and 67 vessels of 118,066 tons cleared at the ports of the island. There are about 80 miles of railway. The Tamatave Réunion-Mauritius Telegraph Cable is open for traffic. On December 31, 1917, there were 233 miles of telephone wire, 242 miles of telegraph wire, 187 telephone stations and 34 telegraph offices. The budget for 1920 balanced at 12,170,760 francs. The debt was 1,122,500 francs. The currency of Réunion consists of local bank notes and token nickel coinage. It has nominally the same value as that of France.

St Paul and Amsterdam, small islands in the Indian Ocean, belong to France.

Kerguelen, a desolate island, about 50 S lat and 70 E long, was annexed by France in 1893.

FRENCH SOMALILAND

The colony of the Somali Coast lies between the Italian Colony of Eritrea and British Somaliland. On the north it is bounded by Cape Doumeirah, which separates it from the Italian possessions; on the south by a line drawn from the wells of Hadou to Gueldessa, which separates it from the British possessions; the inland boundary towards Abyssinia being, by convention of March 20, 1897, at a distance of 90 kilometres (about 56 miles) from the coast. The territory has an area of about 5,790 square miles, and the population was estimated in 1917 at about 208,000. It is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Administrative Council. The port of Obock was acquired for France in 1862, but it was not till 1884 that its active occupation began. In 1884 Sagallo and Tajurah were ceded to France, in 1885, Ambado, in 1888 the territory was delimited by agreement with Great Britain; in 1888 a port was created at Djibouti, now the seat of government.

Djibouti has (1917) 13,608 inhabitants, of whom 294 are European (107 French). The natives are made up as follows (1917) Issas, 3,954, Danakils, 1,184, Arabs (foreign subjects) 3,130, Arabs (French subjects),

1,359, Somalis, 3,568, and Indians, 109. In 1902 a French mission school for boys and one for girls were opened at Djibouti with 50 pupils. The local budget for 1920 balanced at 2,887,000 francs. The country has scarcely any industries, but with the coast fisheries and inland trade there is considerable traffic. The salt mines, opened in 1912, exported in 1918, 11,500 metric tons of salt. The chief imports are cotton goods, butter, coal, sugar, the chief exports were coffee, ivory, hides and skins. The total imports in 1918 amounted to 67,411,794 francs, and the total exports (1917) to 50,324,846 francs. The export of the products of Abyssinia in 1918 amounted to 75,552,277 francs. Merchandise imported at Djibouti, destined for Abyssinia, amounted to 35,839,140 francs. Much of the traffic with Abyssinia which formerly passed by Zailah now goes by railway from Djibouti to Addis Abeba (386 miles) [See also under Abyssinia]. The vessels of 3 French, 4 English, 2 Russian, and 1 Italian shipping companies visit Djibouti, which is also in communication with Aden by means of French and English steamboats for local traffic. In 1917 there entered at Djibouti 272 steam merchant vessels of 643,290 tons. Of these vessels, 163 were French, 44 English, 33 Italian, 19 Greek, 11 Japanese, 1 Dutch, and 1 Swedish.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

French West Africa comprises the following colonies — (1) Senegal, (2) French Guinea, (3) the Ivory Coast, (4) Dahomey, (5) Upper Senegal Niger (French Sudan), (6) the Upper Volta Colony, (7) Civilian Territory of Mauritania, and (8) the Military Territory of the Niger.

In 1912 the Military Territory of the Niger was placed under a Commissioner, whose headquarters were at Zinder, the capital. In 1916 the region of Tibesti was attached, administratively, to French West Africa, it forms a part of the Military Territory of the Niger.

The approximate area and population of French West Africa is (1920) shown as follows —

Colony	Area (in Square Miles)	Population			Total
		Non African Races		African Races
		French	Foreign	French
Senegal	74,112	3,559	54	1,200,000	1,204,113

A treaty of October 19, 1906, determines the course of the Anglo French boundary from the Gulf of Guinea to the Niger. The delineation of the boundary was completed in 1912, and approved by the two governments 1914. The British government has leased to France for purposes of commerce two pieces of land, one on the right bank of the Niger between Lealaba and the confluence of the rivers Moussa and Niger, and the other on one of the mouths of the Niger, each to form one block of from 25 to 120 acres with a river frontage not exceeding 436 yards, the lease, at first, to be for 30 years. It is further stipulated that, within the boundaries indicated in the convention, British and French as regards persons and merchandise shall enjoy for 30 years the same treatment in all matters of river navigation, of commerce, and of tariff and fiscal treatment and taxes of all kinds.

Under the Anglo-French Convention of April 8, 1904, the river port of Yarbata on the Gambia (belonging to the British colony of Gambia), with all its landing places, was ceded to France, and, if this port should prove inaccessible to sea going merchantmen, access to the river will be granted to France at an accessible point lower down. At the same time the Los Islands were ceded to France.

By an agreement, dated July 6, 1911, between England and France, the boundary line between French Guinea and Sierra Leone was readjusted.

By a Convention between Great Britain and France the former recognised the right of France to all territory west of the Nile basin, which practically includes the whole of the Sahara (exclusive of the Libyan Desert), and the State of Wadai. The French Sahara may be roughly estimated at about 1½ million square miles.

Over the whole of French West Africa there is a Governor General, who is assisted by a Council, the seat of the general government being at Dakar. The Colonies are each under a Lieutenant Governor, subject to the direction of the Governor General, who has been relieved of the direct administration of any portion of his Government, and is free to devote the whole of his attention to directing and controlling the common interests of all the Colonies. To facilitate this object a General Budget has been created, drawn up by the Governor General, which provides for all the services which are common to all the Colonies, and the funds for which are provided by the customs and shipping dues of each of the Colonies, which have now only their internal revenues to depend upon for their local budgets, which have however, been relieved of the cost of all the general services.

The general budget of the Colonies for 1920 amounted to 40,509,800 francs. The military forces in peace times consist of 13,500 men, of whom 1,500 are Europeans. The police force numbers 3,000.

Schools are at work for elementary primary, superior and commercial primary, and technical education, with a central normal school for training native teachers for the village schools, and a certain number of professional schools in the different colonies, with a central professional training school at Gorée (near Dakar). Over 13,000 children are receiving elementary instruction, about 3,000 of the pupils being girls.

The imports into French West Africa are mostly food substances, tissues, mechanical implements, and beverages, the exports from these colonies are chiefly fruits, oils and oil seeds, as well as rubber, cotton, cacao and timber. The following is a comparative table of values of the imports and exports during 1918 and 1919 for each of the colonies —

Colonies	Imports		Exports

In 1919, 3,169 vessels of 6,430,949 tons entered and cleared the ports of French West Africa

There are 1,370 miles of railway and 12,500 miles of telegraph. In 1916 there were 263 post offices, divided as follows—Senegal, 59, Upper Senegal, 73, Guinea, 38, Ivory Coast, 38, Dahomey, 30, Mauretania, 13, and Military Territory of the Niger, 12

The use of French weights and measures, and money, is compulsory throughout French West Africa

Governor General of French West Africa—M Merlin Appointed January, 1918

The colony of Senegal consists of—

1 The four municipal communes of St. Louis, the capital of the Colony (population, 1917, 23,326, French, 307), Dakar, a fortified naval station, and the seat of the Government General of French West Africa (population, 1918, 25,468, French, 2,791), Rufisque (population, 11,414, French, 205), and Goree (population, 1,444, French, 67). The total area is 438 square miles. The natives of these towns and their descendants are French citizens, and have the right of vote

2 The territories of direct administration, in which the Government exercises absolute authority, which consist of—

The outskirts of the communes of Dakar, Rufisque and St. Louis, and one kilometre on each side of the Dakar St. Louis Railway, with the principal parts of Hann, Pout, Thias, Tivaonane, Pire, Mackhé, Mekhe, Kelle, Kebemer, Guicoul, Louga, Sakal

A rectangle with a front of two kilometres and a depth of one kilometre around the posts of Richard Toll, Dagana, Podor, Salde, Matam, and Bakel on the river Senegal, Kaolack, Fatick, and the island of Foundiougne in the Sine Saloum, Sedhiou, Ziguinchor, and the island of Carabane on the river Casamance, and Portudal, Nianning, and Joal on the sea coast east of Rufisque

In these territories the natives are not French citizens, and are not electors

The former Protectorate has been restored to the Colony, but with a separate budget. The total population of Senegal in 1920 was put at 1,204,113 (including 4,118 Europeans), and the area 74,112 sq miles

The Colony is represented in the French Parliament by a deputy. The budget of the directly administered territory provided for 1920, 4,675,680 francs. The local budget for 1920 was 13,357,085 francs

All towns having a sufficiently numerous European or assimilated native population have urban schools giving the same instruction as the French primary schools, modified to suit local requirements. At Dakar there are grouped superior technical schools common to all the colonies, normal school, professional school, commercial and administrative school, a school of medicine. At St. Louis are a secondary school, a superior primary school, a professional school for interpreters, kads (native judges), and chief's sons. There is a large hospital for natives at Dakar

The soil is generally sandy. The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, and some rice, other products are castor beans, some coco nuts, gum from Mauritania, and rubber from the Casamance river. Ground nuts form the bulk of the exports. A salt industry is being developed

Native industries comprise weaving, pottery, brick making and jewellery

The chief imports are cottons, foodstuffs, metal work, coal. The chief exports are pea nuts (247,672 tons in 1919), hides and skins, rubber and gums.

There are 1,494 miles of telegraph and about 100 miles of telephone lines

A submarine cable from Brest to Dakar was completed in April 1905, so that the French West African Colonies are now independent of foreign cables. There are three other cables, one Spanish, one French West African, and the third belonging to a South American company.

One railway connects Dakar, Ruhsque and St. Louis (165 miles), another one Thiés and Kayes (Upper Senegal Niger) 435 miles (350 miles open).

There is a river service on the Senegal from St. Louis to Kayes, the former a principal town of Upper Senegal Niger (490 sea miles) on the Senegal river, during the rainy season, and extensive works for the improvement of the river have been carried out. The Senegal is closed to foreign flags. Dakar, the principal port, is in regular communication with French ports by the steamers of 4 French lines, and with Liverpool by a British line. In 1919 1,109 vessels of 2,277,988 tons entered and 1,093 vessels of 2,179,988 tons cleared the ports of the colony. Works are in progress for the extension and deepening of the harbour, the erection of sheds and workshops. The dry dock at Dakar which was completed in 1908, can take boats 630 feet long. The Bank of West Africa (established June 29, 1901), with a capital of 6,000,060 francs, and reserve funds 3,920,000 francs, was founded for the purpose of carrying on financial, industrial or commercial operations, it has a branch at Dakar, and agencies at St. Louis, and at Rufisque. La Banque Française de l'Afrique Equatoriale has a branch at Dakar.

H B M's Consul General at Dakar (for French Western Africa, including the Sudan) —R C F Maugham,

Consul at Senegal —Y H J Huckin

French Guinea lies on the coast between Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of Sierra Leone, and extends inland so as to include the territories of Koubibia, Dinguray, Sigui, Kouroussa, Kankan, Kissidigo, Bevia, Macenta and N'zerékoré. The area is about 95,218 square miles, and the population was, in 1920, 1,851,200, including 1,200 Europeans (1,100 French). A regular system of Government lay schools has recently been introduced all over French West Africa. The principal products are palm oil and nuts, rubber, millet, earthnuts, rice, gum, and coffee, which is grown in the Rio Nunez region. There is an experimental garden near Konakry (the capital) where the culture of bananas, pineapples, rubber trees, and other plants is being tried. Futa Jallon contains cattle in abundance. In 1919 there were 420,000 cattle, 102,000 sheep, 2,000 goats, and 2,800 horses. Gold is found in the river Tinkisso and in the Bonré and Siecke districts. Imports in 1919, 25,918,911 francs; exports, 23,735,011 francs. The principal exports were rubber, cattle, ground nuts, hides, wax, wool, and palm kernels. Number of vessels entered in 1919 was 169, of 288,614 tons, number cleared 173, of 292,780 tons. A network of roads is being made to connect with the railway station from Konakry to the Niger. The French Guinea railway which runs from Konakry on the coast to the Niger at Kouroussa (366 miles long) was opened in January, 1911, and in August, 1914, was continued to Kankan (412 miles from Konakry). The jetty 1,066 feet long, at Konakry has been completed. In the colony there are 2,556 miles of telegraph and 43 miles of telephone line, with 6 miles of submarine line. The Colony is connected by cable with France and Pernambuco, also with Freetown, Monrovia, and Grand Bassam. Konakry is visited regularly by the steamers of two French and one English company. The budget of the colony provided for 1920 the sum of 13,124,800 francs.

The Ivory Coast lies between Liberia and the British Gold Coast Colony. It has common frontiers with French Guinea and Upper Senegal-Niger Colonies. France asserted and obtained rights on the coast about 1843, but did not actively and continuously occupy the territory till 1883. Area about 121,976 square miles, population, 1,407,030, Europeans, 1,030. The seat of administration was Bingerville, the capital, formerly called Adjame (European population, 69). There is a central school group at Bingerville and a number of Government schools in the districts. The chief ports, in a populous and commercial point of view, are Grand Bassam, with a lagoon (124 miles long, and 12 to 15 ft deep), forming an excellent harbour of refuge, Assinie, also with a lagoon, Grand Lahou, the lagoon of which is connected by means of a canal with the lagoon of Grand Bassam, Sassandra, with a pier, and Tabou, which has a wireless station. The chief centres in the interior are Abiyeau, Dimbokro, Bouaké, Aboisso, Bondoukou, and Korhogo. The natives cultivate maize, rice, plantains, pine apples, and many other fruits. The Europeans culture with success coffee trees and cocoa trees, especially in Elima near Assinie and in M'Bato near Bingerville. Coco nuts and rubber are collected. The mahogany forests inland are worked. Gold is found near Grand Bassam in Baouli, on the Comoe and Bia Rivers, in Indenie. The imports in 1919 amounted to 23,537,038 francs, and the exports to 28,478,353 francs. Chief imports in 1919 were, tobacco, 7,956,197 francs, wines, 636,484 francs, cotton goods, 4,624,129 francs. Chief exports were, palm kernels, 10,517,531 francs, palm oil, 10,216,248 francs, coffee, 284,147 francs, cocoa, 1,811,538 francs, rubber, 381,450 francs, colo, 53,693 francs, and mahogany, 3,422,391 francs. The ports of the Colony are visited by liners of several French, English and Belgian shipping companies. Number of vessels entered in 1919, 188 of 414,768 tons, and cleared 200 vessels, of 439,931 tons. From Abidjan, on the north side of the lagoon, a railway has been constructed, running between Abiyeau and Bouaké (197 miles). Works are now contracted to lengthen this to the north. At the end of 1918, there were 2,300 miles of telegraphic and 117 miles of telephonic lines. The telegraph connects the principal towns and extends to adjoining colonies. Telephonic communication exists between Bassam and Bingerville and other places. The budget of the colony for 1920 has been fixed at 12,325,700 francs.

Dahomey stretches from the coast between Togoland on the west and the British possessions of Lagos and Nigeria on the east, and extends northwards to the French Military Territories. France obtained a footing on the coast in 1851, and gradually extended her power until in 1894 the whole kingdom of Dahomey was annexed. The colony has only about 70 miles of coast, but opens out northwards into a wide hinterland. The area in 1920 was 42,460 square miles, and the population 860,590, including 590 Europeans. The seat of government is Porto Novo (the chief business centre), which has about 20,000 inhabitants. Village, regional, and urban schools are instituted under the new West African educational system. The natives are of pure Negro stock, and belong to the Fon branch of the Ewe family. They are industrious agriculturists in the coast region, and grow maize, manioc, yams, and potatoes. The forests contain oil palms, which have been profitably utilized. These furnish the chief exports—kernels and oil. Cotton cultivation has recently been successfully introduced in the central provinces. At Porto Novo there is an experimental station. The principal imports were cottons machinery, liquors, and tobacco, the chief exports were maize, palm kernels (45,188,505 francs in 1919), palm oil, (20,260,490 francs in 1919), copra, the exports of kola nuts and of rubber are decreasing. In 1919 the United Kingdom participated in the foreign trade to the extent of 30 per cent and France to 29.60 per cent. There are few roads in the colony, but in the last four years they have been greatly improved. A new metalled road (310 miles in length) for motor traffic runs from Savé to the Niger. At Kotonu an iron pier has been erected, and from that port a railway runs into the interior to Savé (156 miles) with a branch line to Whydah and Segborué in Lake Aheme (20 miles). The line is intended to run to Chaoru (400 miles). The gauge is a metre. A metre gauge railway has also been constructed from Porto Novo to Pobé (50 miles) along the Lagos frontier. A telegraph line connects Kotonu with Abomey, Togoland, the Niger, and Senegal. In the colony there are 1,389 miles of telegraph line, and 70 miles of telephone line. In 1919, 114 vessels of 259,887 tons entered, and 123 vessels of 277,003 tons cleared the ports of Dahomey. French and English coins are in circulation. The budget of the colony for 1919 provided for the sum of 5,921,000 francs. The local budget for 1920 was 7,785,175 francs.

The Colony of French Sudan was formed in 1904 from the Territories of Senegambia and the Niger, less the Senegal Protectorate, which was restored to Senegal. Its old name of Upper Senegal Niger was changed to French Sudan by decree of December 4, 1920.

The Colony is bounded on the north by the Algerian sphere, on the west by Mauritania, the Falcine river, and the frontier of French Guinea, on the south by the frontiers of the Ivory Coast, Gold Coast, and the Upper Volta, and on the east by the Military Territory of the Niger. It therefore includes the valley of the Upper Senegal, about two thirds of the course of the Niger, much of the country enclosed in the great Bend, and a large part of the Sahara to the Algerian sphere of influence. The area is about 617,600 square miles with a population in 1920 of about 2,200,975, including 975 Europeans.

At the same time that this Colony was formed the Military Territories, which now form an integral part of it, were broken up. The Second Military Territory, which included nearly all the country within the Bend, was handed over to the Civil administration, and the First (Timbuktu) has been incorporated in Upper Senegal Niger, and is administered by a colonel under the authority of the Lieutenant Governor. The Third (Zinder Chad) Territory has been constituted an autonomous unit. In 1919 the greater part of the southern portion in the bend of the Niger was created a separate Colony in the name of the Upper Volta (Haute Volta, see below).

The whole of Upper Senegal Niger is under civil administration, with the same judicial and educational systems as the other Colonies comprised in the Government General. The budget of the colony for 1920 provided for 13,567,000 francs.

The most important and populous towns in the Upper Senegal Niger are Bamako, the capital, (16,000 inhabitants), Segou (8,405 inhabitants), Kayes (12,000 inhabitants), Djenné (5,450 inhabitants), Timbuktu (4,270 inhabitants), Goundam (3,200 inhabitants) Nioro (3,400 inhabitants). All the principal towns have regional or urban schools, Bamako has a professional school, there is a Mussulman superior school at Timbuktu with 67 pupils and one médessa (official).

The natives cultivate ground nuts, millet, maize, rice, cotton, castor oil plant, sesame, other products are rubber and karité. Large stocks of cattle abound in the colony.

Native industries comprise pottery, brick making, jewellery, weaving, leather making. Chief imports are cottons, food stuffs, metal work. Chief exports are ground nuts, cattle, rubber, gum, kopak, skins and wool.

There is a very complete system of telegraphs throughout the Colony from Kayes to Niamey, Zinder, and Lake Tchad

The Senegal Niger Railway goes from Kayes to Koulikoro, a distance of 344 miles For about three months in the year small steamboats perform the service from Koulikoro to Timbuktu

Wireless telegraph connects Timbuktu and Bamako with the Eiffel Tower in Paris

The Colony of the Upper Volta was formed by a decree of March 1, 1919, from the southern section of the Upper Senegal Niger It lies within the bend of the Niger which, with the Military Territory forms its eastern boundary, its southern boundary is formed by the river Makrom and the northern boundary of Dahomey, Togoland, the Gold Coast, and the Ivory Coast, thence the boundary runs in a north easterly direction from the river Bago to the Niger, about 16° N, below Ausinge It embraces the circles of Gacus, Bobo Dioulasso, Dedougou, Ouaga dougou, Dori, Sry, and Fada-N'Gourma Area about 154,400 square miles, and population 3,000,100, including 100 Europeans The administrative centre is Ouaga dougou (population 19,332), other towns are Bobo Dioulasso (8,736), Gikasso (7,825) Administratively it is on the same footing as the other Colonies of French West Africa Economically, industrially and commercially it possesses the same characteristics as the Upper Senegal Niger Colony The budget for 1920 balanced at 5,102,125 francs

Mauritania, formed into a Protectorate in May, 1903 and converted into a special "Civilian Territory," under the command of a Commissioner of the Government General, in October, 1904, consists of the districts of Trarza, Brakna, Gorgol, Assaba, Tichit, Adiar, Levrier Bay, and Tagant, with a total area of 344,967 square miles The native population numbers about 256,000, mostly Moorish Mussulmans The northern limit of the Territory is approximate, and the foregoing area is obtained by taking the latitude 23° 3' N as the northern boundary

The budget of the Protectorate for 1920 was 2,984,000 francs

Togo—The German Colony of Togoland has administratively been divided between France and England The eastern section has been allotted to France, which took possession of the country as manditory on October 1, 1920 An Administrative Council has been established, of which two European non officials and one native notable will be members The Council will be consulted in drawing up the budget

Togo is bounded to the west by the British Colony of the Gold Coast, to the north and to the east by French Western Africa, and to the south by the Gulf of Guinea The colony has a seaboard of about 434 miles It is a prolongation of the colony of Dahomey with identical climate and possibilities It measures 33,679 square miles, and is populated by 1,100,000 natives of the Fwe race, kindred to the race which populates Dahomey This race is fairly intelligent, hard working and thrifty Of the total area, 20,072 miles have been allotted to France

The climate of Togo is not particularly suitable to Europeans, and the soil, while rich, requires considerable care during crop growing periods In 1917 the colony's exports of cocoa rose from 7 tons in 1913 to 1,569 tons (2,851 tons in 1919), exports of copra rose from 44 tons in 1913 to 734 tons in 1917, exports of palm oil products increased from 30,205 tons in 1913 to 39,589 tons in 1917 Togo is exceedingly rich in iron ore and various other minerals

902 FRANCE — FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

The first railway line was built along the coast, uniting the port of Lome with that of Grand Popo, serving also the smaller ports of Bagida, Porto Seguro, Petit Popo, and Anecho. From Lome two lines were also constructed into the interior. The first, to the town of Misahohe, passing through one of the richest sections of the colony, is 74 miles long, the other, which has its terminal at the town of Atakpame, is 99 miles long, and passes through the cotton producing districts of the country.

The ports of Lome and Anecho are of modern construction, capable of sheltering and unloading vessels of any size. In 1917, 278 ships entered these ports carrying merchandise to and from the colony valued at 56 million francs.

The French Minister of the Colonies has lately announced that the French Government proposes to carry on the work started in Togo by the Germans and the British, along lines which should both benefit the natives very greatly and also help France in her work of reconstruction.

TUNIS

AFRIKIYA )

Government.—Sidi Mohamed En Naccur Bacha Bey, born 1855, son of Mohamed Pasha Bey, nephew of Sidi Ali, former Bey of Tunis, succeeded his cousin, Sidi Mohamed el Hadi, May 12, 1906 The heir presumptive is Sidi Mohamed el Habib Bey, born 1858

The reigning family of Tunis, occupants of the throne since 1705, descend from Hussein ben Ali, commonly believed to be a native of the Isle of Crete, who made himself master of the country, acknowledging, however, the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey

After the French invasion of the country in the spring of 1881, the treaty of Kasr es Said (May 12, 1881), confirmed by convention signed June 8, 1883, placed Tunis under the protectorate of France The government is carried on under the direction of the French Foreign Office, which has a special department for Tunisian affairs, under the control of a French Minister Resident-General, who is also Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a ministry of 10 heads of departments, 8 of the ministers being French and 2 Tunisian The country is divided into 19 districts (contrôles civils), and 6 military circles, the district governors (contrôleurs) are French, the subordinate officials (Cads, Kahas and Shuiks) are Native French tribunals administer justice between subjects of European powers, and also between them and natives (tribunals at Ouzia and Charaâ), there are Native courts for cases between natives In 1914 the Tunisian penal law was codified French administration in Tunis has been confirmed by conventions with all the European Powers regulating the status and the conditions of trade of their respective citizens within the Regency

French Resident General —Lucien Saint (appointed November 24, 1920)

Area and Population.—The present boundaries are on the north and east the Mediterranean Sea, on the west the Franco Algerian province of Constantine, and on the south the great desert of the Sahara and Libya Area about 50,000 English square miles, including that portion of the Sahara which is to the east of the Beled Djerid, extending towards Gadamés

Population, in 1920, about 1,940,000, but no proper census has ever been taken for the Moslems and the Jews. The majority of the population consists of Bedouin Arabs and Kabyles (1,739,744 in 1919) with 50,467 Jews. The French population in 1911 (date of the last census) was estimated as 46,044, exclusive of the army of occupation. The foreign population in 1911 was estimated as about 102,432, of whom 88,082 were Italian, 11,300 Anglo-Maltese, 587 Spaniards, 696 Greeks, and 1,767 other foreigners.

The capital, the city of Tunis, had a population of 67,129 Moslems, and 26,491 Jews, besides 17,875 French, 44,237 Italians and 5,986 Maltese. By means of the canal, which was opened in 1893, Tunis is directly accessible to ocean going vessels.

The bulk of the population is Mohammedan under the Sheik ul Islam, and the revenue from the "Habus" lands, like that from the "Wakf" lands in Egypt, is applied to religious, educational, and charitable purposes. There are about 35,000 Roman Catholics, under the ministrations of the Archbishop of Carthage, and about 25 other clergymen. The Greek Church (400), the French Protestants, and the English Church are also represented, and there are 30 English Protestant missionaries at work.

Education—Within the Regency there are about 313 public schools, 8 lycées and colleges, and 27 private schools (of which 6 Jewish schools are provided for by the Government). At all the schools there are 42,497 pupils, of whom 25,443 are boys. Of the total number of pupils, 10,502 are French, 11,552 Mussulman, 9,249 Jews, 9,133 Italian, 1,964 Maltese and 297 others. In the Great Mosque at Tunis there is a Mohammedan university. In the city are 86 and in the interior 1,214 Mussulman primary schools, some of them assisted by Government funds. 23 Moslem apprentice ship schools have been created during the last few years numbering 524 native pupils. Many private schools have recently sprung up at Tunis and Sfax. The abolition of congregational teaching decreed in France has been extended to the Regency as regards French children. The Italian Government and certain Italian societies still maintain Italian schools at Tunis and other large towns.

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
Revenue	2,568,649	3,024,915	2,795,822	4,803,482	5,823,925

		Public Works	527,319
Total	£4,803,482	Total	£4,803,409

At the end of the year 1915 the Tunisian Public Debt amounted to about 360,000,000 francs (90,000,000*l*) The yearly charge for interest (at 3, 3½, and 4 per cent due on the various loans—1892, 1902, 1903, 1907, and 1912) together with sinking fund is 490,893*l* In normal conditions, the 1903 loan (610,000*l*) will be extinguished in 1968, and the rest in 1988

Defence—The army of occupation, which, in 1913, numbered 17,514 men, including 600 officers, consisted in 1914, of a nucleus of French troops supported by native regiments (tirailleurs and spahis) Of the latter which were supplied by a system of local conscription, not all were permanently employed in the Regency itself It may be sufficient to say, at the present time, that while the army of occupation has been maintained at the strength considered desirable, no less than 35,000 native troops have been serving in Europe under the French colours since the beginning of the war

Production and Industry—Tunis may be divided into five districts—the north, characterised by its mountainous formation, having large and fertile valleys (e.g., the valley of the Merjeidjah, and the plains of Mornag, Mateur, and Beja), the north east, with the peninsula of Cap Bon, the soil being specially suited for the cultivation of oranges, lemons, and citrus fruits, the Sthel, where olive trees abound, the centre, the region of high table lands and pastures, and the south, famous for its oases and gardens, where dates grow in profusion The chief industry is agriculture, and large estates predominate The area of the country is divided as follows—7 million acres of tillage land, 2,740,000 acres of forest, containing 11,907,007 olive trees and 1,035,152 palm trees, 58,115 acres of vineyards, and 12,800,000 acres of stockland The area of wheat in 1919 was 1,424,652 acres, the production was 190,000 tons, of barley (1919) 1,119,337 acres, and the production 120,000 tons, of oats 139,442 acres, and the production 45,000 tons For 1920 the results of the cereal crops were given as follows—Wheat, 110,000 tons, barley, 60,000 tons, and oats, 22,000 tons The total area of vineyards in 1919 was 58,115 acres, and 9,771,454 gallons of wine was produced In the south of Tunis the date palms produced in 1918, 91,632,744 pounds of dates Other products are almonds, oranges, lemons, shaddocks, pistachios, alfa grass, henna, and cork The cork forests in the north west have an area of 617,440 acres Considerable areas of agricultural land have been acquired either on lease or by purchase by immigrants In 1919 the total area occupied by French colonists was 2,675,020 acres, by Italians 345,000 acres, and by other Europeans 113,600 acres

In 1919 the farm animals were—horses, 78,864, asses, 198,654, mules, 31,324, cattle, 634,823, sheep, 2,661,579, goats, 1,660,621, camels, 170,606, pigs, 17,680

In 1919 40 mines were worked These are being developed, and the output steadily increases Lead ore, zinc ore, and iron are all found By far the greatest development has been in phosphates, the output of which is increasing yearly Mineral output in 1919—lead, 13,455 tons, zinc, 6,185 tons, iron, 360,453 tons, manganese, 1,313 tons, phosphate of lime, 815,385 tons, total value of the minerals, 1918, 2,922,335*l*

Native industries are the spinning and weaving of wool for garments, carpet weaving, leather embroidery, saddle making, the manufacture of slippers, pottery (in ancient style), and matting, tanning and silk weaving are declining,

The fisheries are principally in the hands of Italians and Tunisians. In 1919, 2,489 boats (5,894 tons) were engaged in this industry, with a total of 9,548 men. Sardines, anchovies, allaches, tunny (5,513 tons of fish, valued at 514,690*l* in 1919) were caught.

Commerce.

AMERICA.

GUADELOUPE AND DEPENDENCIES

Guadeloupe, situated in the Lesser Antilles, consists of two islands separated by a narrow channel, called 'Rivière Salée'. That on the west is called Guadeloupe proper or Basse Terre, and that to the east, Grande Terre, with a united area of 138,000 hectares (532 square miles), and a circumference of 275 miles, it has five dependencies consisting of the smaller islands, Marie Galante, Les Saintes, Désirade, St Barthélemy, and St Martin, the total area being 688 square miles. It is under a governor and an elected council, and is represented by a senator and two deputies. Population (1912) 212,430, of whom 3,461 were born in France and 12,306 were foreigners. Instruction (1919-20) is given in 1 lycée with 377 pupils, a secondary course for girls at Pointe à Pitre, with 201 pupils, and 101 public and private elementary schools. The public elementary schools have 261 teachers and 14,022 pupils, and the private have 634 under 28 mistresses. The seat of government is Basse-Terre (8,184 inhabitants). Pointe à Pitre (22,664 inhabitants) has a fine harbour. Revenue and expenditure balanced at 6,942,490 francs (214,767 local) for 1918. Outstanding debt, December 31, 1917, 416,784 francs.

Chief products are sugar, coffee, vanilla (35,000 pounds in 1920), cacao, and rum. For local consumption there are grown bananas, sweet potatoes, manioc, tobacco, indian corn, and vegetables.

In 1919, the imports were 63,844,241 francs, and the exports 103,628,520 francs (sugar, 17,692 tons, coffee, 2,251 tons, rum, 19,599,078 litres, cacao, 1,429 tons). Guadeloupe is in direct communication with France by means of two steam navigation companies. A new wireless station at De trellan was opened in 1918. Within the islands traffic is carried on by means of roads. The Bank of Guadeloupe, with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, and reserve funds amounting to 843,746 francs, advances loans chiefly for agricultural purposes, even on the security of jewellery. The Royal Bank of Canada has also established a branch. There is likewise another bank, the Banque de Commerce, but while this is a private institution, the Banque de la Guadeloupe and the Royal Bank of Canada have a semi-official character. Silver coin has disappeared from circulation, nickel treasury tokens (bons) of 1 franc and of 50 centimes are authorised up to a total emission of 1,000,000 francs.

British Vice-Consul at Guadeloupe—J. E. Devaux

GUIANA

The colony of French Guiana, on the north east coast of South America, is administered by a Governor, assisted by a Privy Council of 5 members. The colony has a Council General of 16 members elected by French citizens resident in Guiana, and is represented in the French Parliament by one deputy. Area about 82,000 square miles, and population, 1918, 26,825. Cayenne, the chief town and only seaport, has a population of 13,527, and the other 14 communes have 12,798. These figures are exclusive of the population of the penal settlement, of the floating population of miners without any fixed abode, as also officials, troops, and native tribes. At Cayenne there are a court of first instance, a court of appeal, and justices of the peace, with jurisdiction in other localities. The military force consists of 150 European officers and men. On December 31, 1918, there were 24 primary schools with 2,003 pupils, and 4 Congregational schools with 512 pupils. The penal settlement also has 4 schools with 163 pupils. There is a secondary school at Cayenne, which has also a local museum and a library. The budget for 1918 amounted to 3,490,000 francs, receipts and expenses. There is little agriculture in the colony, only about 8,800 acres are under cultivation. The crops consist of rice, maize, manioc, cocoa, coffee, sugarcane, indigo, tobacco, and gutta percha. The most important industry is gold mining (placer), the quantity of gold declared produced was, in 1915, 120,714 oz., in 1916, 109,090 oz., in 1917, 95,454 oz., in 1918, 80,477 oz. Silver, iron, and phosphates are also worked. The exports consist of cocoa, phosphates, various woods, gold, rosewood essence, and hides. The total imports in 1918 were valued at 15,308,526 francs, and the exports at 15,321,697 francs. There are three ports—Cayenne, Saint Laurent du Maroni, and Oyapoc. Cayenne is visited once a month by a cargo boat of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique. There is also steamboat communication between the capital and the other towns and with the neighbouring colonies. There are three chief and many secondary roads connecting the capital with various centres of population in the interior.

Since 1855 Guiana has had a penal settlement for habitual criminals and convicts sentenced to hard labour. On December 31, 1918, the penal population consisted of 2,631 transported and 6 undergoing seclusion, 1,217 relegates, and 2,179 freed.

The Bank of Guiana, under Government control, with a capital of 600,000 francs with statutory reserve fund amounting to 300,000 francs, advances loans for agricultural and other purposes.

MARTINIQUE

The colony is under a Governor, a General Council, and elective municipal councils. It is represented by a senator and two deputies. Area 385 square miles, divided into 31 communes, population in 1916, 193,087. The military force (1919) consists of one company of infantry and a battery of artillery. There is (1919) a law school (at Fort de France) with 56 students, a lycée for boys, with 652 pupils, a high school for girls with 815 pupils, primary schools, with 21,037 pupils (including 7 private schools), a commercial school and a school of arts and crafts (93 pupils). Chief commercial town, Fort de France (population, 26,399). The budget for 1919 balanced at 10,314,361 francs. Sugar, rum, and cocoa are the chief productions, then come coffee, tobacco, and cotton. There are 15,000 hectares under the food-producing crops. Tobacco culture is under special regulations. There are 15 sugar works, 126 rum distilleries, and other industrial establishments. In 1919 sugar to the value of 8,286,286 francs, rum to the value of 141,561,893 francs and cocoa to the value of 1,996,000 francs were exported. The total imports in 1919 were valued at 74,670,266 francs, and the exports at 172,705,720 francs. Vessels entered in 1919, 766 of 341,206 tons, vessels cleared, 788 of 378,260 tons. The island is visited regularly by the steamers of French and American companies. For local traffic there are subsidised mail coaches and motor cars, and subsidised steamers ply on the coast. The colony is in telegraphic communication with the rest of the world by telegraph cables. The Bank of Martinique at Fort de France with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, and a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada advances loans for agricultural and other purposes.

ST PIERRE AND MIQUELON

The largest islands of two small groups close to the south coast of Newfoundland. Area of St Pierre group, 10 sq miles, population in 1911, 4,209, area of Miquelon group, 88 sq miles, population, 443, total area, 98 sq. miles; total population, 4,652. Since May, 1906, an Administrator organizes and regulates the various branches of the public service. He is assisted by a consultative council of administration and municipal councils. Chief town, St Pierre. Primary instruction is free. There are 3 public schools for boys, and 3 for girls, with (in all) 27 teachers and 618 pupils. There are, besides, infant schools, 'salles d'asile,' frequented by 116 children. There are a private boarding school and two private schools with 434 pupils.

The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture. The chief industry is cod fishing. In 1919, owing to lack of labour, only two local smacks engaged in fishing on the Newfoundland banks, the catch being 394,315 pounds. Imports in 1919, 24,983,552 francs, exports, 18,515,231 francs. The imports comprise textiles, salt, wines, foodstuffs, meat, and the exports, cod, dried and fresh, and fish products. St Pierre is in regular steam communication with North Sydney and Halifax, and is connected by telegraph cable with Europe and the American continent. Local budget for 1920, 1,235,038 francs. Expenditure of France (budget 1920), 234,478 francs.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA

NEW CALEDONIA AND DEPENDENCIES

New Caledonia is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council consisting of the Secretary General, the Procureur Général (the head of the Judicial administration), the Superior Commandant of the Troops, the Director of the Penitentiary administration, the head of the Department of Domains and Colonisation, and two notables of the colony appointed by the President of the Republic. The colony has also an elective Council General. Nouméa, the capital, has a municipality, other centres of population are locally administered by municipal commissions. The colony contains a penal settlement at Nou Island. Since 1896, however, no convicts have been sent thither, and the convict element in the population is quickly decreasing.

The island is situated between the 20° 1' and 22° 26' parallels south latitude, and 161° 30' and 144° 40' east longitude. It has a total length exceeding 248 miles and an average breadth of 31 miles. Area, 7,650 square miles. According to the census of March 5, 1911, the population was 50,608, of whom 13,138 were free, 5,671 of convict origin, and 28,075 Melanesians and Polynesians. On January 1, 1916, the population of convict origin totalled 2,680. Nouméa had (1915) 10,000 inhabitants, of whom 8,000 were free. The immigrants from France are not numerous. Other immigrants (June 30, 1917) were 1,483 Javanese, 297 Tonkinese, 62 Indians, and 578 islanders from the New Hebrides. Primary instruction is provided in public and also in private elementary schools, the latter being assisted by the municipalities. In 1919 there were 50 public and private primary schools with 2,591 pupils (1,252 being girls), and 70 native schools with 2,408 pupils. In Nouméa the 'collège La Pérouse' gives classical tuition to 120 pupils and professional instruction (iron and wood) to 80 pupils. Local budget for 1921, receipts and expenses, 18,359,125 francs. In 1921 the military force consisted of 400 Europeans. Of the total area more than half is mountainous or not cultivable, about 1,600 square miles is pasture land, about the same area is cultivated or cultivable, and about 500 square miles contain forest which is being worked. The land is divided into 3 domains: that of the state (in which gratuitous concessions may be made), that of the penal establishment (about 400 square miles), and that of the native reserve. The chief agricultural products are coffee, copra, cotton, manioc (cassava), maize, tobacco, bananas, pine apples. There are 200,000 cattle and about 25,000 sheep. Local industries are developing, there are a grain storage and cleaning dépôt, meat preserving works, baking mills for coffee and cotton, and two blast furnaces melting nickel ore. About 179,563 hectares of mining land are owned, and 90,722 hectares have been granted for prospecting. In 1919 the mineral export comprised nickel ore, 1,560 metric tons, chrome ore, 23,547 tons, and manganeese, 2,359 tons. The value of the mineral export was 95,400/. The blast furnaces produced 3,413 tons of nickel valued at 222,500/. The imports in 1919 were valued at 1,000,000/, and the exports at 950,000/. The imports comprise wine, coal, flour, rice, the exports, minerals, coffee copra, rubber, guano, and preserved meats. In 1919, 98 vessels of 88,434 tons entered and 106 of 92,751 tons cleared at the ports of New Caledonia. Nouméa is connected three times monthly with Sydney in N. S. Wales by regular steamers sailing monthly, and by other vessels sailing irregularly. There is a mail service by steamer along the coast. A railway from Nouméa to Bourail (90 miles) is under construction, it is open for traffic to Paita (about 20 miles). Harbour improvements are in progress, a pier and a slip are being constructed, dredging operations are about to begin, and a wharf and a dry dock are contemplated. There are 580 miles of telegraph line and 115 of telephone line.

Dependencies of New Caledonia are

1 The Isle of Pines, 30 miles to the south east, with an area of 58 square miles and a population of about 600.

2 The Wallis Archipelago, north east of Fiji, with an area of 40 square miles and about 4,500 inhabitants. The islands were placed under the French protectorate in 1887. There is a French Resident, and the archipelago is in regular communication with Nouméa.

3 The Loyalty Islands, 60 miles east of New Caledonia, consisting of 3 large islands, Maré, Lifou, and Uvéa, and many small islands with a total area of about 800 square miles. The chief culture in the islands is that of coconuts, the chief export, copra and rubber.

4 The Huon Islands, 170 miles north west of New Caledonia, a most barren group.

5 Futuna and Alofi, south of the Wallis Islands, with about 1,500 inhabitants, were annexed by France in 1888.

The New Hebrides, in accordance with the Anglo French convention of February (ratified in October), 1906, are jointly administered by the High Commissioners of His Britannic Majesty and the French Republic. In 1914 an Anglo French conference was appointed to devise means of remedying the defects of the condominium. There are French and English courts, and a mixed court with a judge foreign to both nations. Maize, coffee, vanilla, coconut trees are grown. In some places sulphur is abundant.

British Consul at Nouméa —Mr Johnston

FRENCH ESTABLISHMENTS IN OCEANIA

These, scattered over a wide area in the Eastern Pacific, are administered by a governor with an Administrative Council consisting of certain officials, the maire of Papeete, and the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture. The establishments consist of the Society Islands, the most important of which are Tahiti and Moorea, the former with an area of about 600 square miles and 11,691 inhabitants, the latter with an area of 50 square miles and 1,564 inhabitants, the principal product is phosphate (annual production, 80,000 metric tons). Other groups are the Marquesas Islands, with a total area of 480 square miles and 3,424 inhabitants, the two largest islands being Nukahiva and Hivaoo, the Tuamotu group, consisting of two parallel ranges of islands from King George's Island on the north to Gloucester Island on the south, their total population being 3,828, the Leeward Islands (Iles sous le Vent), of which the more important are Huahiné (pop 1,230), Raiatea and Tahaa (pop 3,347), and Bora Bora Maupiti (pop 1,295), the Gambier, Tubuai, and Rapa Islands, the Gambier group (of which Mangareva is the principal) having six square miles of area and 1,533 inhabitants, the Tubuai (or southern) Islands, of which Rurutu is the largest, Raiavavae (or Vavitu), Rimataia, and, far to the south, Rapa, having together an area of 115 square miles and about 2,550 inhabitants. The total area of the Establishments is estimated at 1,520 square miles, and their population on December 29, 1911, at 31,477, of whom 26,219 were natives. There were 28,875 French, 2,656 other Europeans, and 975 Chinese. In 1903 it was decreed that separate islands or groups should no longer be regarded as distinct Establishments, but that all should be united to form a homogeneous colony. Local budget 1919, 3,879,000 francs.

The most important of the islands is Tahiti, whose chief town is Papeete with 3,617 inhabitants, of whom 1,909 are French. A higher primary school, with a normal school, has been established at Papeete, and there are 6 primary schools, each with about 100 pupils, in various islands, besides 4 Catholic and 2 Protestant mission schools. Pearls and mother-of-pearl are important products. The island is mountainous and picturesque with a fertile coast land bearing coconut, banana, and orange trees, sugar-cane, vanilla, and other tropical fruits, besides vegetables grown in temperate climates. Cotton, coffee, and tobacco are now little cultivated. The chief industries are the preparation of copra, sugar, and rum. Value of imports (1917) 312,256l., exports, 399,160/ The chief imports are tissues, wheat, flour, metal work The chief exports are copra (250,000/ in 1916), mother-o'-pearl, vanilla, coconuts and oranges In 1916, vessels of 160,527 tons entered, and 163,437 tons cleared The New Zealand company (with a French subvention) has a monthly service connecting San Francisco, New Zealand and Australia with Papeete, the Tuamotu Islands, the Marquesas, and the Leeward Islands The shipping between the islands is carried on by sailing boats

GEORGIA.

(SAKARTVELO )

The Georgians claim that they first appear in authentic history in the time of Alexander the Great, by whom they were conquered. But on Alexander's death (323 B C ), the Georgians regained their independence under Pharnavas. With Pharnavas (302-237 B C ) began the first of four dynasties: Karthlosi (302-93 B C ), Arsacidi (93 B C -267 A D ), Khosro Sassanidi (267-570 A D ), and Bagratidi (570-1801). In 1801 the Russian Emperor Alexander I annexed the Kingdom of Georgia. When the Bol-shevist régime was set up in Russia the Georgians, together with the Tartars and Armenians, formed the Transcaucasian Republic, which refused to recognise the Bol-shevists. The capital of Georgia, Tiflis, became the centre of that Republic, the independence of which was formally proclaimed by the Transcaucasian Diet (Seym) on April 22, 1918. But Georgia was eventually forced to form a separate State, and on May 26, 1918, its independence was proclaimed in Tiflis by the representative organ, the National Council, elected by the National Assembly of Georgia on November 22, 1917. The Act of Independence of Georgia was approved, confirmed and ratified on March 12, 1919, by the Constituent Assembly, elected according to the electoral system of direct, equal, universal, secret and proportional voting of citizens of both sexes. The Government received de jure recognition by the Allies on January 27, 1921.

Constitution and Government—Georgia is a Democratic Republic. The executive power is entrusted to a Cabinet of Ministers, elected from amongst the members of the Constituent Assembly, and the President of the Cabinet is acting temporarily as the Supreme Head of the Republic. All Ministers are responsible to the Constituent Assembly, and every official of the State is subject to the control of the Senate. The Senate is nominated by the Constituent Assembly. The Social Democratic Party, which is strongly supported both by the working classes and the peasantry, dominates in Constituent Assembly and Government.

At present (April, 1921) the Constituent Assembly is working out the Constitution of the State. New elections for the first Parliament will take place as soon as the definite Constitution is adopted.

President of the Cabinet—Noah Jordania

Area and Population.—Georgia is situated in Transcaucasia, between the Black and Caspian Seas. Her frontiers are, in the north, the Caucasus, in the east, the Republic of Azerbaijan, and in the south, Armenia. The capital of Georgia is Tiflis (in Georgian Tplisi, so called from the hot-springs found there), which was founded by King Vakhtang in the fifth century A D.

Georgia comprises the following provinces and districts—Zakathali, Tiflis (Tplisi), Kutais, Sukhum, the southern part of the Black Sea district up to Tuapse (Sotchi district), Ardahan, Olti. This territory has an area of 32,769 square miles, and a population, according to statistics for 1915, of 3,053,345. The population of Georgia is divided into three classes—the remnants of a feudal aristocracy, the bourgeoisie of the towns, principally shopkeepers and merchants, most of those in Tiflis being of the Armenian race, though Georgian merchants do inhabit the smaller towns, and a peasantry largely of Georgian stock, engaged in agricultural pursuits and the raising of sheep and cattle. While this population is more or less racially solid in character, the Georgians are divided into a number of separate tribal stocks, each of which has its peculiar customs, and in some cases its distinct language. The principal groups are Georgians proper, Mingrelians, Ossetines, Hevsurs, Abkhazians, and Emertines. Of these the Emertines constitute the largest racial group, and have more energy and executive ability than the other tribes.

The area, population, and density of population of each of the seven provinces were claimed to be as follows—

Provinces and Districts	Area in square versts	Population in 1915	Population per square verst
Zakathali	3,502 22	92,608	26 4
Tiflis	35,904 04	1,473,305	41 0
Kutais	18,535 12	1,344 68	55 8
Sukhum	5,791 79	209 671	36 2
Sotchi	3,304 84	49,666	15 0
Ardahan	4 917 90	85,869	17 6
Olti	2,621 27	57,755	16 2
Total	74 577 18	3 053,845	40 9

The Georgians also claim Batum. By the Peace Treaty between Soviet Russia and Georgia of May 25, 1920, the former agreed to the latter's claim to Batum. But the ultimate disposition of this province has not yet been settled. On March 12, 1921, the Turks were in occupation.

In 1915 there were 78,744 births, 16,572 marriages, and 47,876 deaths. The chief towns, with population, are—Tiflis (346,766), Kutais (85,151), Sukhum (61,974), Poti (20,731), and Sotchi (13,254).

Religion and Instruction.—Christianity is said to have been preached in Georgia as early as the first century by the Apostles St. Andrew and Simon the Canaanite, and was adopted as the State religion in 323.

Georgia has three types of educational institutions.—Elementary schools, where instruction is free and compulsory for all children from 5 to 11 years, preparatory schools for the colleges, consisting of four classes, to which are admitted without examination children leaving elementary schools, and colleges, consisting of four classes, to which are admitted, also without examination, children leaving preparatory schools.

The elementary and preparatory schools are under the rural and municipal councils, their control and administrative supervision being reserved to the Ministry of Public Instruction, whilst the colleges are controlled directly by the Ministry.

University instruction is given at the University of Tiflis (founded in 1918), which has 45 professors and 1,500 students.

The Georgian language, formerly in common use only among the peasants, has been declared the official language. Owing to years of disuse it is somewhat undeveloped, but in recent months it has been introduced into the schools and adopted in governmental correspondence.

Defence.—The formation of the National Army is based upon two principles: voluntary service and compulsory service. Of the former is constituted the National Guard, and of the latter the Regular Army. In time of war the two armies are under the Generalissimo of the Armies of the Republic. The Army possesses 1 staff college, 1 aviation and 3 military schools.

Production and Industry.—About 90 per cent of the population is engaged in agriculture, but methods are primitive. The principal crop is corn. The land of the great landowners has been distributed among the peasants, the minimum allowance for any one family being 7 dessiatines (about 17 acres) Wine growing is extensive The country is also rich in fruits Silk production and bee keeping are old occupations

There are about 12,000,000 domestic animals, and the country has vast possibilities for cattle breeding

A number of minerals are found, viz., naphtha, copper ore, coal, lead, manganese ore, iron ore, pyrites and sulphur, zinc and antimony The most important mineral industry is that of manganese, the centre of which is at Tchiatur

Commerce.—For the year ending July 1, 1919, the imports of Georgia amounted to 366,897,167 roubles, and the exports to 257,559,000 roubles

Communications.—The railway system of Georgia extends to 970 miles The trunk line leading from Batum through Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea has several narrow gauge branches on Georgian territory to the coal mines of Tkhibuli, to the port of Poti, to the manganese mines of Tchiaturi, to the mineral springs of Borjom and the health resort Bakuriani, to the towns Signakh and Telavi, in Kakhetia, and to the Armenian frontier, across the coal mine district of Alverdi The last branch divides in Armenia, going on the one side to Tabriz in Persia, and on the other to Erzurum in Anatolia All the railway lines on the territory of Georgia belong to the State

A railway line from Akhal Senaki along the Black Sea coast, through Sukhum to Tuapse, is being constructed

Currency.—The Transcaucasian Republic had been forced to print its own money, and notes were printed in four languages—Georgian, Armenian, Tatar, and Russian—and were called Transcaucasian bonds These notes, estimated at 2,000,000,000 roubles, were supposed to constitute a lien against the resources of the Caucasus When Georgia declared its independence, Azerbaijan withdrew from the financial convention, and Georgia continued to print these Caucasian bonds with Armenia until the latter half of the year 1919, when each began the issue of its separate money The Georgian rouble steadily fell in value throughout 1920, and now stands at about 1,100–1,200 to the pound sterling Other roubles are also in circulation (Imperial, Kerensky, etc.)

GERMANY.

(DEUTSCHES REICH)

On November 9, 1918 the abdication of the German Emperor was announced, and from that date Germany became a Republic

(For the constitution of the Empire and its rulers, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1918, pp 831-884)

Constitution and Government

The Council of People's Commissioners in Berlin took over the Government of the country, the reigning princes of the Federal States were either deposed or abdicated, the existing Imperial Parliament was declared dissolved, and arrangements were made for summoning a National Assembly. The elections for the body (for which all Germans, men and women, over 20 years of age voted) were held in January, 1919, and resulted, on the basis of proportional representation, in the return of the following parties — Majority Socialists, 165, Centre (Catholic) Party, 90, Democrats, 75, Conservatives, 42, Independent Socialists, 22, German People's Party, 22, and minor parties, 7, total, 423. The National Assembly was summoned to meet at Weimar on February 6, and on February 11, 1919, it elected the first President of the Republic.

President of the German Republic — Friedrich Ebert, born February 4, 1871

The President receives a salary of 100,000 marks per annum, and an allowance of 100,000 marks. Future Presidents will be elected by the direct vote of all citizens, male and female, over 20 years of age. The election must be held either on Sunday or on a day of public rest.

On June 27, 1920, the following Cabinet was appointed —

Chancellor — Constantin Fehrenbach

Vice Chancellor and Minister of Justice — Dr. Rudolf Heinze

Minister for Foreign Affairs — Dr. Walter Simons

Minister for Home Affairs — Friedrich Koch

Minister of Finance — Dr. Joseph Wirth

Minister of Defence — Dr. Otto Gessler

Minister of Economics — Dr. Ernst Scholz

Minister of Labour — Dr. Heinrich Brauns

Minister of the Treasury — Hans von Raumer

Minister of Posts — Johann Giesberts

Minister of Transport — Wilhelm Groener

Minister for Food Supplies and Agriculture — Dr. Andreas Hermes

The Constitution of the Republic was adopted on July 31, 1919, by the National Assembly at Weimar, and promulgated on August 11, 1919. It declares that the new Commonwealth is a Republic and that the power of the State is derived from the people. The colours of the Republic are black, red and gold. The Constitution provides for Central and State Legislative organs. It makes foreign relations, defence, customs duties, taxation and railway services matters for the central authority, lays it down that every component State in the Federation must have a Republican Constitution, with a universal, equal, direct, and secret franchise of male and female voters on the proportional system. An Imperial Council (Reichsrat) is to be formed for the representation of the component States (Länder). All Bills (Gesetzesvorlagen) before they are introduced into the Reichstag require the assent of the Reichsrat. The principle of the Referendum is provided for in the Constitution. The Constitution further declares all Germans equal before the law, and abolishes all privileges or disadvantages of birth, class, or creed. Freedom of speech and of the Press is guaranteed, so is the right of meeting. Members of the Legislature of the Empire (Reichstag) are to be elected by universal, equal, direct and secret votes of male and female voters, on the proportional system. The Reichstag is to be elected for 4 years. The President of the Empire is elected by the whole German people for a period of 7 years. Declarations of war and conclusions of peace are made by a law of the Empire. The Cabinet appointed by the President must enjoy the confidence of the Reichstag.

The Reichsrat consists of 55 members (Prussia 22, Bavaria 7, Saxony 5, Württemberg 3, Baden 3, and the other States 15).

The Reichstag, in accordance with the elections on June 6, 1920, is composed as follows:—Majority Socialists, 113, Independent Socialists, 81, Centre Party, 69, German National People's Party, 66, German People's Party, 62, German Democratic Party, 45, Bavarian People's Party 20, and minor parties, 10 total, 466.

The actual votes cast for the larger parties were:—Majority Socialists, 5,616,164 (21.6 per cent of total), Independent Socialists, 4,896,095 (18.8 per cent), Centre Party, 3,541,791 (13.6 per cent), German National People's Party, 3,740,107 (14.4 per cent), German People's Party, 3,610,198 (13.9 per cent), German Democratic Party, 2,202,202 (8.4 per cent), Bavarian People's Party, 1,172,608 (4.5 per cent), and minor parties, 1,249,197 (4.8 per cent), total, 26,028,362.

Area and Population

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITIONS

The following table gives the area and population of the present States (Länder) of Germany<sup>1</sup> in the order of their magnitude, according to the returns of the census of October 8, 1919:—

States of the Empire	Area English sq miles	Population Oct 8, 1919			Pop per sq mile 1919
		Male	Female	Total

According to the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919) Germany has agreed to the following territorial rearrangements —(1) Alsace Lorraine has been ceded to France, (2) the greater part of the Province of West Prussia has been ceded to Poland, (3) a part of Eastern Silesia likewise to Poland, (4) a portion of Upper Silesia to Czecho Slovakia, (5) Memel to the Allies, (6) Danzig to the Allies, (7) Eupen and Malmédy to Belgium

Provision is made in the Treaty to settle the ultimate fate of the following areas by plébiscite — (1) The Saar Basin (after 15 years), (2) Schleswig (in two zones), (3) districts in Southern East Prussia, in West Prussia and in Upper Silesia Results of the plébiscites —Schleswig (March, 1920), northern zone for Denmark, southern zone for Germany, East and West Prussia (July, 1920) for Germany, Upper Silesia (March, 1921) for Germany

An estimate of the actual areas and populations of these districts has been made as follows —Alsace Lorraine, 5,604 square miles, population 1,874,014, ceded to Belgium, 386 square miles, population 60,924, ceded to Poland, 16,744 square miles, population 2,961,685, Memel, 1,057 square miles, population 140,746, Danzig, 794 square miles, population 330,252, total 24,540 square miles, population 537,621

The Saar Basin, which will be placed under the government of the League of Nations, has an area of 751 square miles and a population of 657,870 The area of the occupied territory is about 9,650 square miles, containing about 7 million inhabitants

The population of the German Empire (without Heligoland) was 24,831,396 in 1816, and 31,589,547 in 1837, showing an average annual increase of nearly 1.3 per cent The following table shows the actual increase in population at various periods, with the annual rate of increase per cent The small increase in 1867-71 is explained by the intervention of the war with France

Of the children born in 1917, 486,572 were boys, and 453,366 girls, in 1916, 549,390 were boys and 512,897 girls, and in 1915, 733,655 were boys and 691,941 girls

The number of divorces in Germany was in 1914, 17,740, being 26·2 per 100,000 inhabitants, in 1915, 10,791 or 15·9, in 1916, 10,494, or 15·5, and in 1917 (exclusive of Alsace Lorraine), 11,603, or 17·3

III PRINCIPAL TOWNS

German towns are officially distinguished as large towns (with 100,000 inhabitants and upwards), medium towns (20,000-100,000 inhabitants), small towns (5,000-20,000 inhabitants), and country towns 2,000-5,000 inhabitants. In 1905, only 1 town had over 1,000,000 inhabitants, 10 others over 250,000, 30 others over 100,000, 43 between 50,000 and 100,000, and 187 between 20,000 and 50,000. According to the results of the census of October 8, 1919, the population of the principal towns at that date was —

Religion

The Constitution provides for entire liberty of conscience and for complete social equality among all religious denominations. There is no State Church.

There are 5 Roman Catholic archbishoprics, 14 suffragan bishoprics, and 6 bishoprics immediately subject to Rome; there are 3 apostolic vicariates. The 'Old Catholics' have a bishop at Bonn.

The following are the results of three religious censuses —

Creed	1900	Per Ct of Pop	1905	Per Ct of Pop	1910	Per Ct of Pop
Protestants	35,231,104	62.5	37,646,852	62.1	39,991,421	61.6
Catholics	20,327,913	36.1	22,109,644	36.5	23,821,453	36.7

Others and unclassified	17,535	0.03	17,203	0.03	214,152	0.3

Roman Catholics in 1905 were in the majority in Alsace Lorraine, Bavaria, and Baden; and formed more than 20 per cent of the population in Oldenburg, Württemberg, Hesse, and Prussia.

Instruction

Education is general and compulsory throughout Germany. The laws of Prussia, which provide for the establishment of elementary schools (Volksschulen), supported from the local rates, in every town and village, and compel all parents to send their children to these or other schools, have been adopted, with slight modifications, in all the States of the Empire. The school age is from six to fourteen.

According to a school census taken in 1911 there were in that year 61,557 public elementary schools in Germany with 148,217 male and 39,268 female teachers, and 10,309,949 pupils (5,157,446 boys and 5,152,503 girls).

There were also, in 1911, 480 private schools with 11,894 boys and 14,257 girls who received instruction similar to that given in the Public Elementary Schools.

The system of secondary education is also practically homogeneous. Above the elementary schools rank the middle schools of the towns, the Bürger schulen and Höhere Bürgerschulen, which fit their pupils for business life. Children of the working classes may continue their education at the Fortbildungs Schulen or continuation schools, which are open in the evening or other convenient time. The Gymnasien are the most fully developed classical schools, preparing pupils in a nine years' course for the universities and the learned professions. The Progymnasien differ from these only in not having the highest classes. In the Realgymnasien, Latin, but not Greek, is taught, and what are usually termed 'modern subjects' have more time devoted to them. Realprogymnasien have a similar course, but have no class corresponding to the highest class in the preceding. In the Oberrealschulen and Realschulen Latin is wholly displaced in favour of modern languages. The teachers in German schools are required to hold a Government certificate, and to have undergone a year's probation. For girls there are Höhere Töchterschulen and special Gymnasien which prepare for the universities. Besides these there are numerous Gewerbeschulen or technical schools, Polytechnica, normal schools, seminaries, and the universities.

In 1911 (the latest available figures) the number of secondary schools was as follows — For boys, Gymnasias, 524, with 9,769 teachers and 160,237 pupils, Realgymnasias, 223, with 3,708 teachers and 70,375 pupils, Oberrealschulen, 167, with 3,473 teachers and 75,832 pupils, Progymnasias, 81, with 570 teachers and 9,509 pupils, Realschulen, 411, with 4,265 teachers and 89,968 pupils. For girls, Gymnasias, 39, with 1,039 teachers and 22,137 pupils, High schools, 789, with 11,359 teachers and 212,324 pupils.

There are 10 fully-equipped Technical High Schools, with the power of granting degrees. They are all aided by the States to which they respectively belong. The statistics for the summer half year 1920 were as follows —

Schools	Teaching Staff	Students	Schools	Teaching Staff	Students
Berlin	270	3,829	Stuttgart	85	1,632
Munich	128	3,002	Aachen	85	1,145

Karlsruhe	—	1,491	Breslau	48	908
Hanover	73	2,692
Dresden	86	2,474	Total	929	10,862

For 1917 the number of students was 1,721. But in peace times about 12,000 students are enrolled at these schools. Number of women students, 1,246.

For instruction in agriculture there are Agricultural High Schools at Berlin (662 students in 1920), Hohenheim (599), Bonn-Poppelsdorf (652), and Weihenstephan near München (358), at 8 of the universities there are Agricultural Institutes, at Weihenstephan (Bavaria) an agricultural and brewing academy, in Prussia 16 secondary agricultural schools, and in other German States 6, in Prussia 26 farming schools, in other States 19, in Prussia 118 lower agricultural winter schools, and in other States 77, besides many schools for special agricultural instruction (in Prussia alone, 1,320) Other technical schools are 3 Veterinary High Schools with 1,072 students in 1920, 15 schools of mining, 15 schools of architecture and building, 4 academies of forestry, 27 schools of art and art industry (Kunst and Kunstgewerbe Schulen), 429 commercial schools (including 6 commercial colleges with the right of granting degrees), about 100 schools (including universities) for textile manufactures, 12 for special metal industries, 12 for wood working, 4 for ceramic industries, 11 for naval architecture and engineering, 8 for ships' engineers, 19 for navigation and 11 public music-schools There are also numerous smaller as well as private music and other schools, and a large number of artisans' or trade schools There was a naval academy and school at Kiel, and military academies at Berlin and Munich, besides 47 schools of navigation, 9 military schools, and 9 cadet institutions

There are 23 universities in the German Empire, besides the Lyceums, at Braunsberg, Bamberg (46 students in 1919), Dillingen (83 students in 1919), Eichstatt, Freising (100 students in 1919), Passau (50 students in 1919), and Regensburg, which have only faculties of theology (Roman Catholic) and philosophy

The following table gives the date of foundation, the number of teachers and students for the summer half year, 1920 —

In three universities, namely, Freiburg, München, and Würzburg, the faculties of theology are Roman Catholic, four are mixed, both Protestant and Roman Catholic—Bonn, Breslau, Münster, and Tübingen, and the rest are Protestant. Cologne, Frankfurt, and Hamburg have no theological faculties.

Justice and Crime

A uniform system of law courts exists throughout Germany, though, with the exception of the Reichsgericht, all courts are directly subject to the Government of the special State in which they exercise jurisdiction, and not to the Imperial Government. The appointment of the judges is also a State and not an Imperial function. Germany possesses uniform codes of commercial and criminal law.

The lowest courts of first instance are the Amtsgerichte (1,955 on January 1, 1919), each with one or more judges, competent to try petty civil and criminal cases. The Landgerichte (176 on January 1, 1919), exercise a revising jurisdiction over the Amtsgerichte, and also a more extensive original jurisdiction in both civil and criminal cases, divorce cases, &c. In the criminal chamber five judges sit, and a majority of four votes is required for a conviction. But in the courts with appellate jurisdiction only three judges sit. Jury courts (Schwurgerichte) are also held periodically, in which three judges preside, the jury are twelve in number. The first court of second instance is the Oberlandesgericht. In its criminal senate, which also has an original jurisdiction in serious cases, the number of the judges is seven. There are twenty-nine such courts in Germany. The total number of judges on the bench in all the courts above mentioned was 10,569 (Jan 1, 1919). In Bavaria alone there is an Oberstes Landesgericht, with 22 judges, with a revising jurisdiction over the Bavarian Oberlandesgerichte. The supreme court is the Reichsgericht, which sits at Leipzig, and has 100 judges. The court exercises an appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts, and also an original jurisdiction in cases of treason. It has 5 criminal and 7 civil senates.

In 1915-16, 4,944 men and 477 women, total 5,421, were sent to prison, as compared with 4,297 in 1914-15.

Pauperism

Since January 1, 1916, the general principles as to poor relief in all the German States are laid down by the Imperial law of May 30, 1908. According to this law, there may be formed local unions (Ortsarmenverbände) and provincial unions (Landarmenverbände). Usually a local union is a commune (Gemeinde), while a provincial union consists of a large administrative division such as a circle (Kreis), a province, or a whole State. For the purposes of poor relief a settlement is acquired by one year's continuous residence (after the age of 16), by marriage, or by descent. A German in distress must be relieved by the local union in which he becomes destitute, and the cost must be refunded by the local union in which he has a settlement, or by the appropriate provincial union. In rural communes poor relief forms part of the ordinary local business of the district councils, in urban municipalities the actual administration is carried out by a special committee under the presidency of the burgomaster. Poor rates are usually not levied. In most large towns the Elberfeld system of unpaid district visitors is in force. Statistics of pauperism are not published regularly, the last issue related to the year 1885.

Compulsory Insurance.

Social insurance has existed in Germany since 1880. It comprises compulsory insurance of workmen against sickness, insurance against accidents by employers, and the insurance of workmen against old age and infirmity.

Under an Imperial law of 1883 and amending Acts (codified in the Reichversicherungsordnung (R.V.O.), of July 19, 1911), workmen must be insured against sickness, and must themselves pay two thirds of the contributions, their employers paying one third. For accident insurance, under an Act of 1884 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid entirely by the employers, and they, for mutual protection, have united into associations according to the nature of the industries in which they are engaged. The working of these insurance associations is controlled by Government. For invalidity and old age insurances, under an Act of 1889, amended in 1899, the contributions are paid half by the workmen and half by their employers, while towards each pension the Government grants an annual subsidy of 50 shillings. The employers are responsible both for their own and the workmen's contributions, but the latter may be deducted from wages paid subsequently.

Contributions are paid by the purchase of stamps from the Post Office, these are affixed by the contributing person to cards on which there are spaces for stamps for 52 weeks. When the contributions are complete, the card is handed in to a specified office and a certificate given in return.

For the year 1914 the average of those insured against sickness was 16,525,667. Of this total 15,609,586 (9,842,218 men and 5,767,368 women) were insured in ordinary societies, and 916,081 (901,318 men and 14,763 women) in Knappschaften or societies for miners. In 1917 there were 139 Knappschaften with 875,878 members. In 1917, 23,200,000 persons were insured against accident (14,199,000 men and 8,701 women) in 68 in dustrial societies and 9 agricultural societies, and 571 State or municipal organisations, and 17,253,400 against invalidity (11,961,300 men and 5,292,100 women) in 41 organisations.

Finance

The following tables exhibit the budget estimates of the revenue and expenditure (in pounds sterling) for five years, ending March 31 (20 marks = 17) —

1 Estimate

The budget estimates for 1920-21 gives the principal items of ordinary revenue and expenditure as follows —

Revenue	1,000 marks	Expenditure	1,000 marks
Direct taxes	24,320,000	Debt	12,693,316
Taxes levied once	4,500,000	Pensions	3,967,548
Customs and taxes on consumption	9,147,000	Ministry of Foreign Affairs	295,195
Taxes on coal, salt, and timber	700,000	" " Interior	1,482,826
Monopoly of alcohol	62,000	" " Labour	1,599,084
		Army	2,494,332
		Navy	518,580
Total (including all items)	39,891,562	Total (including all items)	38,891,562

The extraordinary budget provides for a revenue of 2,287,769,024 marks and an expenditure of 52,578,819,139 marks.

On March 1, 1919, the total funded debt amounted to 92,396,411,800 marks, of which 76,275,230,500 marks bear interest at 5 per cent, 1,126,230,100 marks at 4 per cent, 1,964,258,000 marks at  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, 1,622,554,200 marks at 3 per cent, the Treasury bills amounted to 2,315,187,000 at 5 per cent, 9,093,001,500 marks at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. There is also a debt of 63,696,000,000 marks of Treasury bills free of interest. On March 1, 1921, the total debt amounted to 300,000,000,000 marks.

Between August 4, 1914, and March 31, 1920, Germany issued loans to the total value of 222,151,465,980 marks. On November 30, 1920, the floating debt was 165,918,235,629 marks.

Year	Marks	Year	Marks
1870	485,600,000	1905	3,323,500,000
1875	120,300,000	1910	4,943,600,000

I ARMY

The retreat of the German Army into Germany in accordance with the terms of the Armistice of November 11, 1918, was completed at the end of that month, the total mobilised strength of the Army being then approximately 6,000,000 men. The terms of Armistice required the surrender by Germany of 5,000 guns (2,500 heavy and 2,500 field), 25,000 machine guns, 3,000 trench mortars, and 1,700 aeroplanes (fighters, bombers and night bombing machines), but did not specify either the size of the German Army during the Armistice or the rate at which demobilisation should be carried out. Demobilisation was begun during the first fortnight of December and at first proceeded somewhat slowly owing to the difficulty of absorbing rapidly the discharged men in the industries of the country and of feeding them when demobilised, but after February 1 the rate of demobilisation was very sensibly increased.

Towards the end of January, 1919, the President of the Republic was authorised by the Reichstag to disband the existing army and to raise a provisional National Defence Army pending the creation of a permanent Defence Force (Reichswehr). On May 1 the demobilisation of the German army was officially declared to be completed, and the Defence Force came into being. On August 1 the strength of the Defence Force was 500,000 men. It was voluntarily recruited and was formed by raising brigades with the necessary auxiliary services in each of the old army corps districts. Meanwhile the Treaty of Versailles was signed on June 28 and was ratified by Great Britain on July 10. It was not ratified by Germany until January 10, 1920, when its provisions became effective. The principal military clauses of the Treaty are —

1. Within three months from the coming into force of the Treaty, that is to say by April 10, 1920, the total number of effectives in the German army was not to exceed 200,000 men. From then on, under the supervision of military experts of the principal Allied Powers, the army was to be further reduced to 100,000 men, comprising not more than 7 divisions of infantry and 3 divisions of cavalry, with two army corps headquarters staffs. The authorised strength of an army corps headquarters staff is 30 officers and 150 N C O s and men, the authorised strength of an infantry division is 410 officers and 10,830 men, and of a cavalry division, 275 officers and 5,250 men. The maximum stocks of arms authorised are 84,000 rifles, 18,000 carbines, 792 heavy machine guns, 1,134 light machine guns, 63 trench mortars, 204 7.7 cm field guns and 84 10.5 cm field howitzers.

- 11 Universal compulsory service is abolished. The army may only be recruited by voluntary enlistment. The period of enlistment for N C O s and men must be twelve consecutive years. The number of men discharged for any reason before the expiration of their term of service must not exceed 5 per cent of the total effectives. Officers retained in the army must undertake to serve up to the age of 45. Newly appointed officers must serve for 25 consecutive years.

The German Great General Staff and all similar organisations are abolished and must not be reconstituted in any form.

All measures of mobilisation or appertaining to mobilisation are forbidden.

Educational establishments, the universities, societies of discharged soldiers, shooting or touring clubs, and, generally speaking, associations of every description, whatever be the age of their members, must not occupy themselves with any military matters.

The number of employees or officials of the German States, such as customs officers, forest guards and coastguards, are not to exceed the corresponding numbers in 1913. The gendarmes and police may only be increased to an extent corresponding to the increase of population since 1913.

The result of these clauses when carried into effect will be to limit the strength of the German army to 100,000 men, without powers of expansion.

- 12 All fortifications and military works west of a line to be drawn 50 kilometres east of the Rhine are to be demolished and no new works are to be erected within this zone. The fortifications on the eastern and southern frontiers may be maintained. This entails the demolition of the fortresses of Mayence, Cologne, Coblenz, Wesel, and New Breisach.
- 13 No naval or military air force is permitted. The air force was to be demobilised within two months of ratification, that is to say by March 10, 1920. All naval and military air material was to be surrendered by April 10. The manufacture or import of aircraft or parts of aircraft is forbidden for six months after ratification.

The reduction of the Reichswehr began in August, 1919, which then consisted of 43 brigades of all arms. There were then in addition 3 marine infantry brigades stationed at Hamburg, Berlin and in Upper Silesia, and a coastguard regiment stationed in the North Sea ports. In January, 1921, the reduction of the Reichswehr to its authorised establishment of 100,000 men was completed, 30,500 guns had been surrendered, and 6,000 guns in process of manufacture had been destroyed, 10,000 trench mortars, 63,100 machine guns and 2,524,000 rifles had been surrendered.

During 1919 a number of organisations came into existence under the auspices of the Ministry of the Interior, on the pretext that they were required to maintain public order. At the end of 1919 these organisations consisted of the Public Safety Police (Sicherheitspolizei), 50,000 strong, the Emergency Volunteers (Zeitfreiwilligen), 150,000 strong, and the Civic Guards (Einwohnerwehr), 350,000 strong. Of these only the Public Safety Police were armed and equipped, and they were distributed amongst the chief towns of Germany. They were provided with rifles, bayonets, hand grenades and machine guns, and had in addition 8 field howitzers, 16 field guns, and 12 trench mortars.

The Emergency Volunteers were organised locally in companies to assist the Civil Power in case of disturbance, and to act as a reserve to the Reichswehr. They were unarmed, but arms were stored for them at the headquarters of the Reichswehr brigades to which they were affiliated.

The Civic Guards were organised in companies for service in aid of the Civil Power within their own communes. They were unarmed, but rifles and revolvers were stored for them in depôts.

The raising of these forces was not contrary to the terms of the Armistice, but they are contrary to the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, which forbid any military associations of civilians or reservists. After numerous negotiations and great pressure from the Supreme War Council, these forces were disbanded during 1920, except in East Prussia and Bavaria, the German Government professing itself unable to enforce disbandment in these places. A large number of rifles, particularly in Bavaria, are still in the hands of the population. Negotiations on these infractions of the Treaty were still in progress in January, 1921.

II NAVY

As a fighting force the German Navy ceased to exist under the terms of the Armistice and the Treaty of Peace.

The Treaty allows to the German Government the right of maintaining a navy, recruited and maintained on a volunteer basis. The fleet consists of six pre-Dreadnoughts completed between 1904 and 1908, each displacing approximately 13,000 tons and mounting four 11 inch and fourteen 6.7 inch guns. They are the Braunschweig, Elsass, Hannover, Hessen, Schlesien, and Schleswig Holstein. They possess little fighting value. The six light cruisers authorized by the Treaty are the Medusa, Thetis, Amazona, Arkona, Hamburg, and Berlin, completed between 1901 and 1905, and each of them mounting ten 4.1 inch guns. There are also twelve destroyers, three of older type and nine dating from 1911-14, and twelve torpedo boats. No submarines are permitted. In addition to the ships and vessels indicated, Germany is authorised to retain certain others, which are to be kept in reserve and to have no ammunition on board. These are the battleships Lothringen and Preussen, the cruisers Nymphe and Nube, four destroyers, and four torpedo boats. All these are of the classes and dates of the vessels named above. Ships may be built of like strength to replace any of the ships of the existing establishment.

The total personnel may not exceed 15,000, including a maximum of 1,500 officers and warrant officers. The officers and warrant officers engage for a minimum of twenty-five consecutive years, and the petty officers and men for twelve years. The vessels of war are to have a fixed allowance of arms, munitions, and material.

An Act was passed by the National Assembly establishing a provisional Navy on a volunteer and democratic basis for the protection of the coasts and the removal of mines, and also for policing and protecting the fisheries. A decree was signed by the Defence Minister and the Chief of the Admiralty on September 3, 1919, instructing the commanders of the naval stations on the Baltic and North Sea to enlist volunteers throughout the country for this provisional Imperial Navy. This has been done and the arrangement has been confirmed by the Reichstag. One or two large ships are in commission with a number of smaller vessels for police, fishing protection, and mine-sweeping purposes. The naval expenditure in 1921, including mine-sweeping, is estimated at 221,000,000 marks.

Of the former High Sea Fleet of Germany, all the capital ships left afloat have been or will be broken up. The same is the case with the submarines, except that ten have been incorporated in the French Navy, which has also received four of the light cruisers, a flotilla leader, and twelve destroyers. The light cruiser Grandenz and a powerful flotilla leader or scout have been added to the Italian Navy. Brazil and Poland have each been allotted six German torpedo boats, but these are to be disarmed and used for police purposes.

Production and Industry

I AGRICULTURE

In Germany (except the Mecklenburgs) there is complete free trade in land. Generally speaking, small estates and peasant proprietorship prevail in the West and South German States, while large estates prevail in the north east.

The subdivision of the soil, according to the latest official returns (1913), was as follows (in acres) — Arable land, 65,148,000, grass, meadows, pasture, 21,760,500, vineyards, 296,500, woods and forests, 35,558,000, all other, 12,811,560.

On June 12, 1907, the total number of agricultural enclosures (including arable land, meadows, cultivated pastures, orchards, and vineyards) each cultivated by one household, was 5,736,082, with an area of 78,665,370 acres, being an average of about 13.7 acres to each. The total was distributed as follows —

Under 2.47 acres	2.47 to 24.7 acres	24.7 to 247 acres	247 acres & over	Total

On June 12, 1907, these farms employed 15,169,549 persons, in the year ending June 12, 1907, the greatest number employed at the same time was 19,732,424.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, and the yields, in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs or 984 an English ton), were for three years as follows —

	Acreage			Produce (Metric tons)
	1918	1919	1920	1918	1919	1920
Wheat	3,588,995	2,828,150	3,473,185	2,458,418	2,169,169	2,255,065

In 1918 there were within the Empire 196,084,642 fruit trees, comprising 74,375,929 apple trees, 30,788,886 pear trees, 64,547,217 plum trees, 21,390,088 cherry-trees, 769,731 apricot trees, 2,021,188 peach trees, and 2,191,603 walnut trees. In 1919 the area devoted to vines was 172,907 acres, the wine yield 38,307,610 gallons, valued at 1,114,894,079 marks.

The number of domestic animals in Germany according to the Censuses of December 1, 1919, and September 1, 1920, was —

Prussia	2,449,425	8,921,884	8,528,143	7,640,919	2,478,376

II FORESTRY

Forestry in Germany is an industry of great importance, conducted under the care of the State on scientific methods. The forest area of the Empire is put in 1913 (latest statistics) at 35,552,930 acres, of which crown forests occupy 707,352 acres, State and partly State forests, 11,638,027 acres, communal forests, 5,721,892 acres, private forests, 16,184,772 acres, and forests belonging to various associations or foundations, 1,300,885 acres. Of the whole forest area 6,599,477 acres are under foliage trees, oak, birch, ash, beech, &c, and 22,192,810 acres bear pine, larch, red and white fir, &c

III. MINING

The great bulk of the minerals raised in Germany is produced in Prussia, where the chief mining districts are Westphalia, Rhenish Prussia, and Silesia, for coal and iron, the Harz for silver and copper, and Silesia for zinc. Saxony has coal, iron, and silver mines.

In 1913 there were 4,275 mines and foundries in Germany employing 1,196,786 persons (1,133,701 men, 15,969 women, 46,947 juveniles, and 169 children under 14 years of age).

The quantities of the principal minerals raised were as follows in metric tons —

	1915	1916	1917
Coal	146,867,563	159,169,666	167,747,171
Lignite	87,948,803	94,180,462	95,542,922
Iron ore	17,709,580	21,338,664	22,404,750
Zinc ore	486,476	525,172	522,416
Lead ore	88,960	106,804	94,990
Copper ore	963,435	1,025,435	960,097
Rock salt	1,310,202	1,835,335	2,089,237
Potash	6,981,063	8,723,822	8,953,110

In 1913 the total output of pig iron was 16,763,809 tons, in 1914, 12,581,167 tons, in 1915, 10,154,721 tons, in 1916, 11,842,077 tons, in 1917, 11,707,100 tons, and in 1918, 11,754,542 tons. Ingot steel production in 1914 totalled 13,710,498 metric tons, in 1915, 12,010,020 tons; in 1916, 14,240,262 tons, in 1917, 14,821,928 tons.

IV FISHERIES

In 1911, 701 boats, with an aggregate crew of 6,876, were engaged in deep-sea fishing in the North Sea. In 1918, the yield of the North Sea fisheries was valued at 13,465,600 marks, and the Baltic fisheries, 42,212,700 marks.

V MANUFACTURES

The chief seats of the German iron manufacture are in Prussia, Bavaria, and Saxony. Steel is made in Rhenish Prussia. Saxony is the leading State in the production of textiles, but Westphalia and Silesia also produce linen, Württemberg, Baden, and Bavaria produce cotton goods. Woollens are manufactured in several Prussian provinces, also in Saxony and Bavaria, silk in Rhenish Prussia, and Baden. Beetroot sugar is an important manufacture in Prussia, Brunswick, Anhalt, and Bavaria, &c., glass, porcelain, and earthenware in Silesia, Thuringia, Bavaria, and Saxony, clocks and wooden ware in Württemberg and Bavaria, and beer in Bavaria, Prussia, Saxony, Baden, Hamburg, Bremen, &c.

The following are the statistics of the beetroot sugar manufacture in Germany.

Years beginning 1 August	Number of Factories	Beetroot used in Metric Tons	Production in Metric Tons		No. of Kgs Beetroot to produce 1 Kg of Sugar
			Raw Sugar	Molasses
1916-17	16	9,570,777	1,661,508	208,297	6.13
1917-18	912	9,229,999	1,566,255	228,250	5.89
1918-19	307	8,704,011	1,346,101	194,031	6.47
1919-20	261	—	733,000	—	—

In 1916-17 the amount of beetroot used was 6,560,097 metric tons, in 1917-18, 6,437,809 metric tons.

The following table shows the quantity of beer (in thousands of hectolitres, 1 hectolitre = 22 gallons) brewed in Germany in the Beer excise district (Brausteuerggebiet), which includes all the States of the Zollgebiet, except Bavaria, Württemberg, and Baden —

1913	40,974	19,084	4,058	3,283	69,200
1914	34,249	17,020	3,355	2,961	59,373
1915	25,609	14,192	2,375	2,363	45,562
1916	19,643	12,817	1,721	1,538	36,835

The total number of active breweries in the Beer-excise district was in 1913, 3,786, in 1914, 3,602, in 1915, 2,900, in 1916, 2,418; in 1917, 2,192.

In 1913 (latest figures), 556,840 juvenile workers were employed in Germany, 376,481 being males and 180,359 females. In addition 8,008 boys and 6,158 girls (total 14,166) under 14 years of age were employed.

The bank notes current in Germany are those of (1) the Imperial Bank (in denominations of 20, 50, 100 and 1,000 marks), (2) the Badische Bank (100 mark notes only), (3) the Bayerische Notenbank (100 mark notes only), (4) the Sächsische Bank (100 and 500 mark notes), and (5) Württembergische Notenbank (100 mark notes). The notes of the last four banks are termed 'private bank notes'. The notes of all five banks must be accepted at their full face value by each of the banks named. Since January 1, 1910, the notes of the Imperial Bank are legal tender. On April 8, 1921, a law was passed, suspending until December 31, 1923, the provision of the Banking Law under which one third of the note circulation of the Imperial Bank had to be covered by specie, Treasury Notes, or Loan Bank Certificates.

Imperial Treasury Notes in denominations of 10 and 5 marks, which were first issued in 1874, were as a war measure by the law of August 4, 1914, declared legal tender. Their total issue amounts to 860 million marks. By the same law the necessity to change all notes into gold was set aside. Moreover, Loan Banks (Darlehnskassen) were established in August, 1914, with the right of issuing notes up to 3,000 million marks. These notes, which are in denominations of 50, 20, 5, 2 and 1 marks, are accepted at all public offices (e g., post, railways, customs, etc.)

On January 1, 1919, the circulation of paper money was as follows — Imperial Bank Notes, 22,188 million marks (11,467 million marks in 1918), Loan Bank Notes, 10,109 million marks (6,264 million marks in 1918), total, 32,297 million marks. On January 1, 1921, the total note circulation was 80,838,000,000 marks.

The condition of the Imperial Bank of Germany on April 7, 1921, is shown as follows (in thousands of marks) —

—	Amount April 7, 1921	—	Amount April 7, 1921
Total coin and bullion	1,100,163	Advances	16,184
Of which gold	1,091,619	Investments	218,128

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Mark, of 100 Pfennig, is of the normal value of  $11\frac{1}{4}$ d, or 20.43 marks to the pound sterling (April, 1921, 243 marks to the £). Gold coins are 20, and 10 mark pieces, called respectively doppel-krone, and krone. The 20 mark piece weighs 7.96495 grammes 900 fine, and consequently contains 7.16846 grammes of fine gold. Silver coins are 5, 2-, and 1-mark pieces and half mark pieces. Silver coins were, however, put out of currency on January 1, 1921. The mark weighs 5.5 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 5 grammes of fine silver. Nickel coins are 10 and 5 pfennig pieces, Copper coins are in 2 and 1 pfennig pieces. There are bronze coins of smaller denominations. Iron coins were introduced in 1915—5 pfennig pieces in August, and 10 pfennig pieces in December. Aluminium coins

—1 pfennig pieces in 1916 and 50 pfennig pieces in 1919 Zinc coins—10 pfennig pieces in 1917

STATES OF GERMANY.

Statistics of area, population, births, deaths, marriages, emigration, primary schools, universities, and railways are given collectively for all the German States under the head of Germany

ANHALT.

(FREISTAAT ANHALT)

The Constitution of the Free State of Anhalt bears date July 18, 1919. The Diet is elected by the people for 3 years, and the Government is in the hands of a State Council composed of 5 members, whose chairman bears the title of President.

Area, 888 square miles. Population, 1919, 331,258. The capital, Dessau, 57,658 inhabitants in 1919. Bernburg, 33,724; Cothen, 23,416; Zerbst, 19,210; Rossau, 11,354. Population mostly Protestant (1910), 12,755 Catholics, 1,383 Jews.

Estimated income and expenditure, 1920 21, 62,285,300 marks. Public debt, June 30, 1919, 63,765,266 marks. State property, June, 1919, 64,910,689 marks.

BADEN.

(REPUBLIK BADEN)

Until 1771, Baden was a Margraviate divided into two or more lines, it was then united, and subsequently received various additions, and its ruler took the title of Elector in 1803, and of Grand-duke in 1806. On November 22, 1918, the Grand duke abdicated, and the Provisional Government proclaimed Baden a Republic.

Constitution —The Constitution of the Republic of Baden was determined by the National Assembly which met on January 15, 1919, and which was elected on the basis of equal, secret, direct, universal suffrage (with proportional representation) of all males and females over 20 years of age. According to this Constitution of March 21, 1919, the Free State of Baden is a Republic and a component state of Germany. All privileges of birth, religion, and caste are abolished. Women enjoy the same rights as men and are eligible for all public offices. There is no State or established church, but religion is taught in all schools. The right of combining is granted to all citizens, including civil servants. The Initiative and Referendum have been adopted, as also proportional representation. The suffrage is granted to all adults, male and female, who are over 21 years of age. There is only one Chamber (Landtag), the members of which are elected for 4 years. Qualified electors over 25 years of age are eligible as members of the Chamber. No fixed number of seats has been provided for, but generally one member is allocated for each 10,000 voters. The present Landtag, elected on January 15, 1919, will continue until October 15, 1921. Its membership numbers 107, distributed as follows:—Centre, 39; Majority Socialists, 36; German Democratic Party, 25; Conservatives, 7.

The Cabinet consists of 5 Ministers and 4 State Councillors (Ministers without portfolio), elected by the legislature. The Landtag also nominates the President of the Cabinet, who is styled officially 'State President.'

The new Government (1921) is made up as follows —

State President and Minister of Justice —G Trunk (Centre)

Minister of Social Affairs and Public Works —A Engler (Socialist)

Religion and Instruction —In 1910 there were 1,271,015 Catholics, 926,364 Protestants, 13,229 other Christian sects, 25,896 Jews, and 6,329 others

All religious denominations enjoy equality and self government, appointing their own clergy. The Protestant Church is governed by a synod, and its affairs are administered by a board (Oberkirchenrat). The Roman Catholic Church has an Archbishop (at Freiburg), whose 4 suffragans are outside Baden. The Catholic Foundations Council (Oberstiftungsrat) manages the property of the Catholic Church. The Jews, whose ecclesiastical affairs are managed by the 'Oberrat der Israeliten,' have 15 rabbimates.

Instruction is general, free, and compulsory. Schools are under the authority of the State. Religious instruction, however, is provided by each denomination, but there is no compulsion to give or to receive religious instruction. Baden has 2 universities (Heidelberg and Freiburg), 1 technical high school (Karlsruhe), 1 Academy of Arts (Karlsruhe), 1 commercial high school (Mannheim), 17 gymnasia, 50 Real schools, 12 high schools for girls, 12 training colleges for teachers, and a number of technical and special schools.

Finance—The following table shows revenue and expenditure for six years. The first three entries are actual returns, the last three are estimates (20 marks = £1) —

BAVARIA.

(FREISTAAT BAYERN)

Bavaria was for over a century a kingdom, ruled by descendants of the ancient Counts of Wittelsbach, who flourished in the twelfth century. Duke Maximilian I of Bavaria was elevated to the rank of Elector of the Holy Roman Empire in the Thirty Years' War, and Elector Maximilian Joseph was raised to the rank of king by Napoleon I in 1805. On November 22, 1918, the dynasty was deposed, and Bavaria was declared a Republic.

Constitution and Government.—On the outbreak of the Revolution the Government was taken over by a cabinet under the leadership of Kurt Eisner, an Independent Socialist. Eisner was assassinated in February, 1919, and a struggle ensued between the extremists of the Left, who proclaimed themselves Bolsheviks, and their more moderate opponents, with varying success on either side. By May, 1919, the moderate party had returned to power.

The constitution of August 14, 1919, establishes the Free State of Bavaria. The supreme power lies with the people. The Diet consists of one Chamber, elected for 4 years on the basis of 1 member for every 40,000 inhabitants, at present there are 183 members. The present Chamber will continue until June 30, 1922. The suffrage is universal, equal, direct, secret and proportional. All citizens over 23 years of age have the vote. The supreme executive power is exercised by the Ministry as a whole. All privileges of birth and caste are abolished. The Church is separated from the State. All religious associations have equal rights, and are free in their activities.

State of parties in the Bavarian National Constituent Assembly (elected July, 1920) —Bavarian People's Party, 65, Majority Socialists, 25, German Democrats, 12, Peasants' Union, 12, National Liberals, 19, and Independent Socialists, 20, members for Coburg, 3.

The Cabinet, constituted on March 7, 1920, is as follows —

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs —Herr Dr. von Kahr

Minister of Education —Herr Dr. Matt

Minister of Commerce and Industry —Herr Hamm

Minister of Social Welfare —Herr Oswald

Minister of Agriculture —Herr Wutzelhofen

Minister of the Interior —The Premier

Minister of Finance —Dr. Krausnick

Minister of Justice —Dr. Roth

PRUSSIA.

(FREISTAAT PREUSSEN)

Until November 13, 1918, Prussia was ruled by sovereigns who traced their origin to Count Thassilo, of Zollern in Swabia, one of the generals of Charles the Great. His successor, Count Friedrich I, built the family castle of Hohenzollern, near the Danube, in the year 980. A subsequent Zollern, or Hohenzollern, Friedrich III, was elevated to the rank of a Prince of the Holy Roman Empire in 1273, and received the Burggraviate of Nuremberg in fief, and his great grandson, Friedrich VI, was invested by King Sigmund, in 1415, with the Margraviate of Brandenburg, and obtained the rank of Elector in 1417. A century after, in 1511, the Teutonic Knights, owners of the large province of Prussia, on the Baltic, elected Margrave Albrecht, a younger son of the family of Hohenzollern, to the post of Grand Master, and he, turning Protestant, declared himself hereditary duke. The early extinction of the male line of Albrecht brought the province of Prussia by inheritance to the electors of Brandenburg, who likewise adopted Protestantism. In the seventeenth century, the Hohenzollern territories became greatly enlarged by Friedrich Wilhelm, 'the Great Elector,' under whose fostering care arose the first standing army in Central Europe. The Great Elector, after a reign extending from 1640 to 1688, left a country of one and a half million inhabitants, a vast treasure, and 38,000 well-drilled troops to his son, Friedrich I, who put the kingly crown on his head at Königsberg on January 18, 1701. His successor Friedrich Wilhelm I, after adding part of Pomerania to the possessions of the house, left his son and successor Friedrich II, called 'the Great,' a State of 47,770 square miles, with two and a half millions of inhabitants. Friedrich II added Silesia, an area of 14,200 square miles, this, and the large territory gained in the first partition of Poland, increased Prussia to 74,340 square miles, with more than five and a half million inhabitants. Under the reign of Friedrich's successor, Friedrich Wilhelm II, the State was enlarged by the acquisition of the principalities of Ansbach and Bayreuth, as well as the vast territory acquired in another partition of Poland, which raised its area to nearly 100,000 square miles with about nine millions of souls. Under Friedrich Wilhelm III, nearly one half of this State and population was taken by Napoleon, but the Congress of Vienna not only restored the loss, but added part of the Kingdom of Saxony, the Rhineland, much of Westphalia, and Swedish Pomerania, moulding Prussia into two separate pieces of territory, of a total area of 106,820 square miles. This was shaped into a compact State of 134,463 square miles, with a population of 22,769,436, by the war of 1866. According to the Constitution of the German Empire which was established in 1871, the King of Prussia was chosen hereditary German Emperor.

On November 13, 1918, Prussia was proclaimed a Republic.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution, adopted on November 30, 1920, gives a vote to every citizen, male and female, over 20 years of age in general, equal, secret, and direct suffrage. Prussia is declared to be a Republic. Besides the Diet (Landtag) there is a State Council (Staatsrat) elected by the Provincial Assemblies on the basis of one representative for every 50,000 inhabitants. The function of the State Council is to advise and control the Diet, and is intended to be a kind of parallel institution to the Reichsrat in the Empire. The State Council has the right of rejecting legislation adopted by the Diet. The Diet elects the Premier, and he appoints the other members of the Cabinet. The Diet is elected for 4 years on the principle of proportional representation by secret and direct ballot, and the ministry is invested with the powers of the former King.

The Prussian Constituent National Assembly, elected by universal, equal, and secret suffrage of men and women, met on March 14, 1919.

In February, 1921, the elections were held for a Parliament, and resulted in the return of the following parties — 114 Majority Socialists, 81 Centre (Catholics), 26 Democrats, 75 German National Party, 29 Independent Socialists, 58 German People's Party, 11 Guelphs, 30 Communists, and 4 Economic Party, total, 428.

The State Council, composed of 74 members, is made up as follows (April, 1921) — German People's Party, and German National Party, 27, Centre, 16, Democrats, 4, Social Democrats, 18, Communists, 2, Independent Socialists, 7.

The Cabinet appointed on April 18, 1921, is composed as follows —

Minister of Justice — Herr Zehnhoff (Centre)

Minister of Commerce — Herr Fischbeck (Democrat)

Minister of the Interior — Herr Dominicus (Official)

Minister of Agriculture — Herr Dr Warmbold (Official)

Minister of Finance — Herr Haensch

Minister of Education and Public Worship — Herr Becker (Official)

For local government Prussia is divided into Provinces, Government districts (Regierungsbezirke), urban circles (Stadtkreise), and rural circles (Landkreise). According to the Constitution, there are 13 Provinces, but it is proposed to form Upper Silesia into a new Federal State. Urban circles consist of towns of over 25,000 inhabitants, rural circles consist of the smaller towns, rural communes (Landgemeinden), and manors (Gutsbezirke). For provinces and rural circles the local authorities of the constituent areas elect deliberative assemblies which appoint executive committees. Each province has a governor (Oberpräsident), each government district has a president, and deals chiefly with local affairs of State concern. In towns the deliberative authority is the town council (Stadtvorordnetenversammlung), elected on the system of proportional suffrage. The executive is a magistracy with the burgomaster as president. Each rural circle has a Landrat. Local administrative business varies according to the nature of the administrative division. The matters dealt with are such as poor relief, roads, light railways, &c, but in rural districts they include agricultural interests, and in towns, education, sick-insurance, valuation, collection of certain taxes, mustering of recruits, management of gas, water, and electric works, &c.

Education in Prussia is compulsory. Every town, or community in town or country, must maintain a school supported by local rates, supplemented by the State, and administered by the local authorities, who are elected by the citizens, and called aldermen or town councillors. All parents are compelled to have their children properly taught or to send them to one of these elementary schools, in which all fees are now abolished. No compulsion exists in reference to a higher educational institution than elementary schools, but parents who send more than one child to any school supported by the community have, in many cases, a reduction made in the charge, and a limited number of pupils (about 10 per cent) whose parents cannot afford to pay the full rate either enjoy this reduction or are admitted entirely free, at the discretion of the authorities. The school age is from 6 to 14 years, and the number of children of that age in 1910 was returned at 7,165,744.

(Berlin, Klausthal), 2 agricultural high schools (Berlin, Poppelsdorf), agricultural institutes connected with universities, 2 veterinary high schools (Berlin, Hannover), a great number of other schools for various aspects of agriculture, 4 commercial high schools (Berlin, Coln, Frankfurt am Main, Königsberg i Pr.), 2 academies of local government work (Düsseldorf and Cologne), besides other special schools and State establishments for art and music.

The Universities, the high schools (exclusive of commercial high schools), some of the Gymnasias, Realgymnasias, and similar schools, as also the normal schools, are maintained and administered by the Government, while all the other scholastic institutions are supported by the community, &c., under control of the Government.

Justice, Crime

Prussia contains 14 Oberlandesgerichte (see under German Empire). The Oberlandesgericht at Berlin is called the Kammergericht, and serves as an ultimate appeal court for summary convictions, though for all cases the court of final instance is the Reichsgericht at Leipzig. The prosecution in all criminal cases is conducted by Staatsanwälte, or public prosecutors, paid by the State.

SAXONY.

(FREISTAAT SACHSEN)

The former Kingdom of Saxony was proclaimed a Republic on November 9, 1918

The former royal house of Saxony counted amongst the oldest reigning families in Europe Heinrich of Eilenburg, of the family of Wettin, was Margrave of Meissen 1089-1103, he was succeeded by his son, Heinrich (1103-1123), and Konrad the Great (1123-1156), well known in Saxon history. The house subsequently spread into numerous branches, the elder of which, called the Ernestine line, is represented by the former ducal families of Saxe-Altenburg, Saxe-Coburg Gotha, and Saxe Meiningen, and the grand ducal family of Saxe-Weimar, while the younger, the Albertine line lived in the rulers of the Kingdom of Saxony. In 1806 the Elector Friedrich August III (1763-1827), on entering the Confederation of the Rhine, took from Napoleon the title of King of Saxony, which was confirmed by the Congress of Vienna in 1815

The administration of the Evangelical Church is in the hands of a consistorium of a president, and councillors, and four general superintendents, at Ludwigsburg, Heilbronn, Reutlingen, and Ulm. The representative body of the Evangelical ecclesiastical communes is the Evangelical Landeskirchenversammlung consisting of 26 clerical and 55 lay representatives of the dioceses and 1 of the evangelical theological faculty of the university. It meets at least every six years, oftener if necessary. The Roman Catholics are under a bishop, who has his see at Rottenburg, and is suffragan to the archbishop of Freiburg in Baden. The Jews likewise are under a special council (Oberkirchenbehörde).

Instruction.—Education is compulsory, and there must be one public school or more in every commune. According to official returns, there is not an individual above the age of ten unable to read and write. In 1918 there were 2,232 places with elementary schools with 6,776 teachers, attended by 381,033 pupils, 109 Realschulen with 17,654 pupils, 21 grammar schools (Elementarschulen) with 3,830 pupils, 17 gymnasia, of which 4 are training colleges for the Protestant clergy, 10 Realgymnasias, 5 Progymnasias and 8 Real Progymnasias, 43 Latin schools, having together 9,456 scholars, 5 city schools with 4,550 scholars. For girls there are 24 high schools with 8,467 pupils and 1 gymnasium with 183 pupils. There are, besides, the Technical High School at Stuttgart, the Agricultural High School at Hohenheim, and several agricultural and other special institutes. The State funds appropriated to education amounted in 1917-18 to 23,553,434/. For Tübingen University, see under Germany.

Justice—In addition to other tribunals there is one Oberlandesgericht at Stuttgart. In 1914, 16,100 persons were convicted of crimes.

By decision of the Greek National Assembly (January 1921) the civil list amounts to 4,000,000 drachma

Greece, a province of the Turkish Empire since the latter part of the 15th century, gained its independence in the insurrection of 1821-29, and by the Protocol of London, of February 3, 1830, was declared a kingdom, under the guarantee of Great Britain, France, and Russia. The crown was accepted by Prince Otto of Bavaria, who ascended the throne January 25, 1833, being under the age of eighteen. He was expelled the Kingdom, after a reign of 29 years, in October, 1862, which event was followed by the election, in 1863, under the directing guidance of the three guaranteeing Powers, of King George I, the grandfather of the present sovereign. George I, who was assassinated on March 18, 1913, was succeeded by his son Constantine, who reigned until June 11, 1917. Alexandros, second son of King Constantine, then reigned till his death on October 25, 1920. From October 25 to November 18 Admiral Coundouriotis was Regent, and from November 18 to December 5, 1920, Queen Olga.

The King, according to Art. 49 of the Constitution of 1864, attains his majority upon completing his eighteenth year. Within two months at the most the King must convoke the Legislature. If the successor to the throne is either a minor or absent at the time of the King's decease, and no Regent has been appointed, the Legislative Chamber has to assemble of its own accord within ten days after the occurrence of that event. The constitutional royal authority in this case has to be exercised by the ministerial council, until the choice of a Regent, or the arrival of the successor to the throne. The sovereign and his heirs and successors must be members of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Constitution and Government

The Constitution of Greece, adopted October 29, 1864, vested the whole legislative power in a single chamber, called the Bulé, consisting of 184 representatives, elected by manhood suffrage (in the proportion of 1 for every 16,000 inhabitants) for the term of four years. In 1911 the Constitution was modified and a substitute for a second chamber was adopted in the re-establishment of the Council of State. The functions of the Council will be the examination of Projets de Loi and the annulling of official decisions and acts which may be contrary to law. The new Constitution came in force on June 1, 1911. The deputies must be at least 25 years of age. The elections take place by ballot. The Bulé must meet annually for not less than three months. No sitting is valid unless at least one third of the members of the Assembly are present, and no bill can pass into law without an absolute majority of members attending. Every measure before being adopted, must be discussed and voted, once in principle and twice article by article, on three separate days. A revision of any non fundamental provisions of the new Constitution may be demanded, after the lapse of ten years, by an ordinary Parliament by means of two votes passed by a two thirds majority, provided that the second vote shall not be taken until at least one month after the first, and provided also that such revision shall be carried out by a newly elected Chamber. The Chamber of Deputies, unless specially convoked at an earlier date, must meet on October 1 (old style) of every year. The deputies are paid 4,000 drachmai a year, except those living in Athens or in Piræus, who receive only 3,200 drachmai. In case of absence extending over more than five sittings every month, the deputy has 20 drachmai per sitting taken from the total amount due to him. The number of Deputies, including those for the new territories, is 316.

The Chamber, elected in November, 1920, is composed of the following parties — Rallis Party, 25, Gounaris Party, 75, Diagoumists, 30, Independents, 69, Strátos' Party, 62, Liberals (Venizelists), 110.

The Ministry, appointed April 1, 1921, is as follows —

Premier — D. Gounaris

Minister of Foreign Affairs — J. Baltazzi

Minister of Justice and of War and Marine (ad interim) — M. Theotoky

Minister of the Interior — M. Stais

Minister of Communications — P. Tsaldares

Minister of Education — Theodore Zaimis

Minister of Finance and of Supplies — M. Protopapadakis

Minister of National Economy — Peter Maxromichalis

Minister of Public Assistance — M. Bartialis

Minister of Agriculture — M. Tertipis.

Area and Population.

Old Greece (before 1912) comprises continental Greece, the Peloponnesus to the south of the Gulf of Corinth, the Aegean Island of Euboea, the Cyclades (about 220 islands, including Syra, Naxos, Andros, Tinos, Mikonos, Thermia, Seriphos, Paros, and Amorgos), the Sporades Islands (about 20), and the islands in the Ionian Sea, including Corfu, Zante, Santa Maura, and Cephalonia

New Greece consists of Macedonia, Epirus, Crete, and the other Aegean Islands

At the census of 1879 Greece had a population (including that of Thessaly in 1881) of 1,973,768, in 1889, 2,188,008, in 1896, 2,433,806, on October 27, 1907, 2,631,952. In 1896 the population consisted of 1,268,816 males and 1,166,990 females, in 1907, 1,324,942 males and 1,307,010 females. Estimated population (old territory) 1914, 2,765,000. The area of Old Greece was about 25,014 square miles, and thus had about 105 inhabitants to the square mile. The population of the nomes or departments into which Greece is divided is as follows —

Divisions of Old Territory		Divisions of New Territory
Departments	Population (Census 1907)	Departments	Population (Provisional Census 1913)
Attica and Boeotia	407,061	Macedonia —

		Iassithion	62,611
		Rethymnos	61,329
			336,150
		Total new territories	2,101,616

The acquisition of new territories by Greece, obtained as the result of the war with Turkey from October 17, 1912, to May 30, 1913, and with Bulgaria from June 30, to August 10, 1913, gave the country a total area of 41,933 square miles with an estimated total population (1914) of 4,821,300. The new territory is 16,919 square miles in extent.

The Powers, in accordance with the Treaties of London and of Athens, have decided that Greece shall retain all those Aegean islands which she occupied during the war, except Imbros, Tenedos, and Castellorizzo, which were to be restored to Turkey. In the meantime Greece is in occupation of all the islands. These include Crete and Samos.

As a result of the Great War of 1914-18, Greece, with the consent of the Allied and Associated Powers, has occupied part of Bulgarian (Western) Thrace

(principal town, Xanthe) and the greater part of the province of Aydın in Asia Minor (principal town, Smyrna)

As a result of the Treaty of Sévres with Turkey, Greece will obtain (1) all that is left of Turkey in Europe west of the Chatalja lines, only leaving out the Derkos water supply area, including Adrianople and Kirk Kilisse, (2) Western Thrace, transferred to the Allies under the Bulgarian Treaty, (3) the Dodecanese Islands (to be ceded by Italy, which holds them at present, May, 1920, when the Treaty with Turkey is signed. Some arrangement will also be come to in regard to Smyrna. (But as yet (May, 1921), Greece is at war with Turkey in this district.) It is estimated that Greater Greece will be inhabited by 6 million Greeks (some 4½ million in Europe and 1½ million in Asia Minor and the Aegean Islands), and about 2 million non-Greek peoples, 1 million of whom live in Smyrna and its hinterland.

Mount Athos is inhabited by the monks of Greek (17), Russian (1), Bulgarian (1), Rumanian (1), and Serbian (1) monasteries and hermitages (Sketai). The monks and their servitors till the fields, tend the vineyard, take in the harvest, fish, weave, sell in shops, and, indeed, take upon themselves all the secular duties of the community as well as the sacred. Originally inhabited by one mediæval ascetic, Peter the Athonite, it has at last grown to a religious colony of thousands, contained in 20 monasteries with their respective dependencies, and after having passed in the fifteenth century from the sovereignty of the Greek Emperors of Byzantium to that of the Sultans it fell again into the hands of the Greeks, who occupied it in November, 1912. Each of the 20 monasteries is a sort of little republic in itself, those of the 'coenobitic' category being ruled by abbots chosen for life, while the 'idiorrhhythmic' monasteries are administered by a board of overseers (epitropoi) elected for a certain term of years. Hitherto the peninsula has been administered by a Council of 4 members, and an Assembly of 20 members, the latter consisting of 1 deputy from each monastery.

In recent years there has been considerable emigration. According to United States statistics the number of Greek immigrants into the States was in 1915-16, 26,792, in 1916-17, 25,919, in 1917-18, 2,602, in 1918-19, 813.

The principal towns are the following, with populations, 1907 —

Athens	167,479	Larissa	18,041	Chalcis	10,958
Piræus	73,579	Trikkala	17,809	Tripolitsa	10,958
Patras	37,724	Pyrgos	13,690	Laurium	10,007
Corfu	27,397	Zante	13,580	Syra (Hermou
Volo	23,563	Calamata	15,397	polis)	18,132

The chief towns in the new territory (with population of provisional census 1915) are —

Salonica	157,889	Serres	18,668	Florina	10,155
Candia	25,185	Yanina	16,804	Kozani	9,408
Canea	24,399	Verria	13,812	Retymo	9,086
Corfu	23,378	Drama	12,903	Vodena	8,846

By 1919 the population of Athens and Piræus together was over 300,000, while that of Salonica had increased to about 250,000 civilians.

Religion.

The great majority of the inhabitants of the Kingdom are adherents of the Greek Orthodox Church. By the terms of the Constitution of 1864, the Greek Orthodox Church is declared the religion of the State, but complete toleration and liberty of worship is guaranteed to all other sects. A National Synod, held at Nauplia in 1833, vested the government of the Orthodox Church, within the limits of the Kingdom, in a permanent council, called the Holy Synod, consisting of the Metropolitan of Athens and 4 archbishops and bishops, who must during their year of office reside at the seat of the executive. The Orthodox Church has 3 archbishops and 29 bishops in the old territory and 59 archbishops and bishops in the new territories, including 1 metropolitan and 6 bishops in Crete. The Roman Catholic Church has an archbishop at Athens, another at Corfu, and a third at Naxos, and 1 bishop at Syra, Tinos, and Santorin respectively.

Instruction

All children between the ages of six and twelve years must attend school, but the law is not well enforced in country districts. Of the army recruits 30 per cent are illiterate, and 15 per cent can read only. Probably the percentage is higher when the recruits from the new territories are included.

There were (1917-18) 6,799 primary schools with 8,641 teachers (of whom 3,990 were of the female sex) and 476,695 pupils (174,805 females). For secondary education there were 76 high schools, 425 middle schools, having 55,408 pupils (50,997 boys and 5,311 girls). There are 2 agricultural schools in Greece with, together, 150 pupils. There is a Trade and Industrial Academy. The Government Commercial Schools at Athens, Volo, Salonica and Patras have together 326 pupils. In 1912 the two Universities of Athens, the National University (founded 1836) and the Capodistria University, had 56 ordinary professors, 106 lecturers, and 3,250 students studying medicine, law, philosophy, theology, and chemistry. Of the total number, 800 were from abroad, chiefly from Turkey. The Polytechnic, with 22 professors and 170 students, provides instruction in painting, sculpture, mechanics, architecture, surveying, etc.

The cost of primary instruction is borne by the State. It amounts to some 10 million drachmai annually.

The Ministry of Education is also charged with the Service of Antiquities, managed by an Archaeological Council, which is responsible for the conservation and repair of ancient monuments of all periods (Prehistoric, Classical, Byzantine and Mediæval), the upkeep of museums and the conduct of excavations. The service is well organised and efficient; it has carried out the difficult and expensive work of repairing the Parthenon and other buildings on the Acropolis at Athens. There is an archaeological department of the Ministry to which the provincial inspectors (ephoroi) of antiquities report.

British Science is represented in Athens by the British School of Archeology, which, by the aid of grants from the Government, universities, and private subscribers, is able to encourage and carry out scientific research of all kinds, but especially art, archeology and history. Members of the school have in recent years been responsible for the excavations at Knossos, in Crete, in Milo, at Sparta, in Thessaly, and elsewhere. There are also similar French, American, Italian, Austrian and German institutions.

Finance

The estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years are as follows —

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1915-16	17,724,596	19,061,291	1918-19 <sup>1</sup>	40,960,942	32,951,543
1916-17	12,530,043	14,528,288	1919-20 <sup>1</sup>	15,906,773	61,694,029

The main items of the budget for 1920-21 are given as follows —

Revenue	Drachmāi	Expenditure	Drachmāi
Ordinary .	491,125,728	War, ordinary	211,878,307
Extraordinary	69,954,022	War, extraordinary	28,432,100
Loans	472,500,000	Other war expenses	84,805,000
	1,033,579,740	Total war expenditure	525,115,487
Deficit	265,180,014	Other expenditure, including debt service	766,644,267
	1,298,759,754	Total expenditure	1,298,759,754

The outstanding external debt of Greece amounted on December 31, 1920, to 3,282,986,597 drachmāi, the principal items in which were the five per cent loan of 1833, 47,646,011 drachmāi, old gold loan, 447,790,500 drachmāi, new gold loan, 601,205,500 drachmāi, temporary loans, 402,679,350 drachmāi.

In accordance with the peace preliminaries between Greece and Turkey and the Greek Law of Control of March, 1898, the financial commission of delegates representing Germany, Austria Hungary, France, Great Britain, Italy and Russia (the mediating Powers) is established at Athens in direct relation with the Greek Minister of Finance (Germany and Austria Hungary are not now represented). The public debt of Greece is in large measure under the control of this commission. To this commission were assigned, for the payment of the interest on the external debt, the revenues from the salt, petroleum, matches and playing cards monopolies, the duties on tobacco, cigarette paper, Naxos emery, the stamp duty, and the import duties at the port of Piræus. In their report for 1920 the Commissioners announce an income of 123,662,707 drachmāi, of which the receipts from monopolies were 65,630,414 drachmāi, and the Piræus customs 58,032,293 drachmāi.

The collection of the assigned revenues and the administration of the monopolies is entrusted to a Greek Company, called the "Société de Régie des Revenues affectées au Service de la Dette Publique," which is under the control of the international commission.

By Agreements dated February 10, 1918, the Governments of Great Britain, the United States and France agreed to advance to the Hellenic Government credits as follows — Great Britain, 14,700,000*l.*, France, 410,000,000 francs, and the United States, 48,239,267 dollars. The control of the Fund thus created was lodged in an Inter Allied Financial Commission and an Inter Allied Military Commission sitting at Athens. Of the sum agreed upon, there has been actually paid by January, 1921, 7,000,000*l.* by Great Britain, 30,000,000 francs by France, and 15,000,000 dollars by the United States.

Defence.

I ARMY

Military service in Greece is compulsory and universal, with very few exemptions (laws of 1867, 1896, 1904, and November 30, 1914). It commences in the 20th year, and lasts for the long period of 31 years. The normal term of service in the active army was 3 years for the cavalry and artillery and 2 years for the infantry, &c., followed by 21 years in the first serie of the reserve and 8 years in the second serie. The normal annual contingent of recruits, fixed by the Parliament, was about 25,000.

After the Armistice, November, 1918, a large part of the Greek army joined the Allied forces in occupation of Turkish territory. Demobilisation was therefore delayed and normal conditions of service had not been restored in January, 1921.

At that time the approximate strength of the army was 200,000 men, organised in 4 army corps and a reserve. Two of these corps and the reserve were in Asia Minor, in the Smyrna district, the remaining two corps were in Europe. The army corps in Asia each consisted of two divisions, those in Europe of three divisions, the total number of divisions thus being twelve. The average strength of a division was 12,000 men. The Greek cavalry is not organised in divisions, but is distributed by squadrons to the divisions of the army corps. The infantry is organised in regiments of three battalions, three regiments forming the infantry of each division. The field artillery is organised in brigades, each of two regiments. The regiment of artillery is composed of three groups, and each group of three batteries of four guns. The Greek infantry is armed with both the Mannlicher and the Mauser rifle but some battalions are armed with the Martini. The artillery is armed with the French 75 field gun and the French light and medium howitzer. The reorganisation of the Greek army is in abeyance pending the ratification of the treaty of Sévres with Turkey, and in consequence of the situation which has arisen from the fall of M. Venizelos and the restoration of King Constantine.

II NAVY

The Greek Navy was reorganised in 1906, and after 1911 a British naval mission superintended the training and organisation of the fleet. The principal vessels are as follows (the three first named have now little value) —

—	Launched	Displacement Tons	Armament		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Horse Power	Max Speed Knots
			Belt In	Cann In
Spetsai	1869	5,000	12	13½	3 10 6, 5 6in, 1 4in	3	6,700	17

There are also 13 destroyers, 6 modern torpedo boats, 2 submarines, and a variety of miscellaneous craft. To these have been added the ex Austrian destroyer Ulan, and (for police duties only) 7 surrendered torpedo boats.

Much preliminary work has been done on the new arsenal for the Greek Navy, which is intended to take the place of the establishment at Salamis. The cost of the new work was estimated at 2,800,000l, it was to be carried out under the direction of British engineers. A recent British Naval Mission in Greece has been charged with the reorganization of the Greek Navy.

Production and Industry

Greece is mainly an agricultural country, and the economic life is directly dependent on the products of the soil. Of the total area only one fifth is cultivable. The total area (old Greece) is 6,429,610 hectares (16,074,025 acres), made up as follows: 1,286,583 hectares (3,216,457 acres) is cultivated land, 5,055,122 hectares (12,137,805 acres) is covered by mountains, and 87,905 hectares (219,762 acres) occupied by lakes and marshes.

The deforestation of Greece progresses steadily and in every part of the country. The pine woods in Attica steadily decrease by cutting and by fires, but great efforts for re-afforestation and proper forest administration are being made.

By the draining of Lake Copais, an area of about 53,000 acres has been acquired for agricultural purposes. Irrigation and drainage canals, farm roads and buildings are being constructed, tree planting is undertaken, and the breed of cattle is being improved.

While there are a few large proprietors in Greece, the land is to a large extent in the hands of peasant proprietors and metayer farmers, among whom the large estates on which they live and work, are being divided. On the whole, agriculture is in a backward state, chiefly because of the dryness of the climate, the scarcity of rivers which may be utilised for irrigation, the system of payment of rent in kind, and by the lack of co-operative societies and agricultural banks. The most favoured and best cultivated crop is the currant, which covers vast districts. Patras is the great currant centre. The yield for 1920 was 95,000 tons. Thirty three thousand stremmata (stremma=0.2471 acre) of currant plantations have been uprooted in accordance with a law to limit the production of currants.

The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

	Area in Acres		Production in Metric Tons
	1917	1918	1918
Wheat	1,057,656	1,104,608	17,346,770
Barley	994,290	418,435	15,903,250
Maize	438,087	423,807	16,423,500
Oats	166,935	188,242	6,589,330
Tobacco	99,940	117,782	3,095,120
Cotton	12,320	19,502	589,730
New wine	429,107	411,180	31,738,560
Currants	202,617	244,635	12,051,610

Olives are abundant, about 717,500 acres are under cultivation, olive oil production in 1918, 31,702,800 gallons. The nut crop was estimated at 4,486,185 lbs for 1919. The fig industry is centred in the port of Calamata. In 1918 the number of oranges grown was 49,000,000, of mandarins, 53,000,000, and of lemons, 35,500,000. Rice is cultivated in Greek Macedonia—Vodena, near Salonika, being the principal centre. Two kinds of cheese are produced in Greece—sliced cheese in brine (commercially known as Fetta cheese) and head cheese.

There were in Greece (1918) 131,436 horses, 111,979 mules, 242,700 asses, 527,173 cattle, 5,467,828 sheep, and 365,074 pigs.

Greece has a great variety of mineral deposits, and there are now in force about 35 mining concessions embracing a total area of nearly 20,000 acres. The ore and other minerals worked include iron, copper, zinc, lead, silver, manganese, aluminium, antimony, tin, nickel, magnesite ore, cobalt, lignite, sulphur ochre, and various other earths. The Laurium district, Thessaly, Eubœa, the Ægean islands and other parts of Greece yield a large output of ores and earths.

The principal mineral output of all Greece for two years is given as follows (in metric tons) —

	1917	1918		1917	1918
	Tons	Tons		Tons	Tons
Chromite	6,750	10,890	Lead	36,535	18,416
Emery	16,440	—	Magnesite	162,948	39,340
Iron	65,364	67,890	Nickel	1,598	12,166
Manganese iron	509	977	Zinc	14,290	4,348
Iron pyrites	—	12,446	Salt	45,500	—

Lignite production is increasing, the output in 1915 was 39,745 tons; in 1916, 116,916 tons; in 1917, 157,956 tons, and in 1918, 208,797 tons.

Industry is making considerable progress in Greece. The leading industries are tanneries and soap making. The industrial census of 1917 showed that the country had 2,213 factories, employing 36,124 hands, and valued at 260,363,647 drachmai. In the cotton mills of Greece there are 128,225 spindles and 16,965 looms. Total number of workers employed in mines (1918) 7,567, including 4,244 underground.

The customs revenue amounted in 1919 to 3,507,709*l*

The commercial treaty of 1886 provides for 'the most favoured nation' treatment between the United Kingdom and Greece, and the declaration of November, 1904, extends the scope of the treaty so as to include all British possessions, colonies, &c., which accord the 'most favoured nation' treatment to Greece (that is, all except India, Canada, the Cape, and New South Wales). The treaty is terminable July 25, 1910, and then after 12 months' notice.

The staple article of import from Greece into the United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) is currants, the value of which amounted in 1919 to 8,469,079*l*. Other articles of import in 1919 were — iron ore (including chrome), 50,168*l*; raisins, 264,574*l*; slate, 105,225*l*. Of the exports from the United Kingdom to Greece in 1919, cotton goods and yarns were valued at 2,443,042*l*; woollens, 893,819*l*; coal, 468,131*l*; iron, 177,241*l*; machinery, 143,907*l*.

The total trade between Greece and the United Kingdom for 5 years was as follows —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
Imports from Greece to U.K.	4,686,668	958,092	2,829,688	10,440,500	6,771,610

Navigation and Shipping.

The merchant navy of Greece on January 1, 1920, had 1,048 sailing vessels of 108,217 tons and 228 steamers of 190,686 tons. In 1918, 266 steamers of 338,127 tons, and 310 sailing vessels of 27,921 tons entered the ports of Greece, while 230 steamers of 343,583 tons, and 157 sailing vessels of 12,575 tons cleared all the ports.

Internal Communications

There are about 49,838 miles of roads in Old and New Greece. There is a canal (opened November 9, 1893) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 4 miles). In 1913, 2,877 steamers of 1,463,896 tons and 1,192 sailing vessels of 36,095 tons passed through the canal.

Railways open for traffic in 1920 for a length of about 1,507 miles. Principal lines—Hellenic Railway, 275 miles, Piræus Athens Peloponnesus railway, 468 miles, the Thessalian Railway, 145 miles, Athens Piræus railway, 6 miles, Attica Railway, 47 miles, North Western Railway, 40 miles, Salonica Gevgheh, 49 miles, Salonica Monastir, 125 miles, Salonica Oxilar, 211 miles. Before the war with Turkey (1912-18) Greece was completely isolated by land from the rest of Europe, but on May 8, 1916, the railway was completed between Gida on the Salonica Monastir line, and Papapuh, on the Thessalian frontier, a distance of 56 miles, whereby Greece was linked up with the European railroads. The railway system has been extended by the inclusion of the lines in Western and Eastern Thrace. The Government has also purchased from England for two million francs the Salonika Angista Stavros line, 75 miles long, which was built by the British during the war. All the lines are State owned and State controlled.

The telegraphic lines in 1919 had a length of 9,840 miles, with 17,347 miles of wire. The number of offices was 326. They despatched 3,730,092 inland telegrams, 932,232 international, and 123,224 official. Total, 4,785,548.

In 1919 there were 7,002 miles of telephone lines with 4,718 miles of wire belonging to 6 urban systems.

Of post offices there existed at the end of 1919, 901, and there passed through the post in that year 39,084,000 letters, 4,362,000 post cards, and 13,365,000 printed matter and samples.

Banking and Credit

The nominal value of the Greek coinage (minted in Paris) put in circulation since 1866 has been gold, in 1876, 1,000,000 drachmai, in 1884, 11,000,000 drachmai, total gold, 12,000,000 drachmai, silver, up to 1910, 26,262,865 drachmai, nearly all of which had disappeared from circulation during the period when the agio on gold made it profitable to export to other countries of the Latin Union, bronze, up to 1883, 6,816,065 drachmai, nickel, 1893-95, 3,000,000 drachmai. Since 1910 the silver currency has been restored by the repatriation from other countries of the Latin Union of 4,548,024 drachmai, in good condition, and by coin (at Paris) of 9,451,976 drachmai. Owing to the war 1 and 2 drachmai notes as well as 10 and 50 lepta notes have been issued to meet the scarcity of currency. There are also 50, 20, and 5 lepta coins made of a mixture of nickel and tin.

The National Bank (founded in 1841), and the Ionian Bank are authorised to issue forced currency notes to the amount of 73,000,000 drachmai. This privilege (so far as the National Bank is concerned) was extended to December 31, 1930, and by an agreement with the Government made on December 6, 1914, these privileges were extended to the new territories as from January 1, 1915. On December 31, 1920, the notes of the National Bank amounted to 1,547,884,000 drachmai.

The Bank of Piræus, with a capital of a million sterling, was founded in October, 1916, by a number of shipowners for the purpose of financing maritime ventures. Other banks are the Commercial Bank, the Central Bank (capital 3,500,000 drachmai), the Bank of Athens, the Bank of Crete, the Popular Bank, the Bank of National Economy (capital 10 million drachmai), the Industrial Bank (capital 15,000,000 drachmai), the Maritime Bank (capital 10,000,000 drachmai), and the General Bank (capital 3 million drachmai)

Money, Weights and Measures

Greece entered in 1868 the Latin Monetary Union

The Drachma, of 100 lepta, is equivalent to the franc (25 225 francs = 17 sterling) 100 new drachmai = 112 old drachmai

By Royal decree of January 30, 1893, the gold coins of Great Britain, Austria, Germany, Denmark, Russia, Spain, Turkey, Egypt, and the United States are accepted by the Treasury and by private persons as legal tender, one-fourth per cent being deducted from their nominal value

In September, 1898, it was announced that it had been decided to introduce the metric system as regards measures of length, weight, and capacity. The change from the old system is to be gradual, commencing with measures of length. The old system is as follows —

The Oke	=	2 827	lbs avoirdupois
„ Stater	=	123 20	„ „
„ Livre (Venetian)	=	1 05	„ „
„ Baril (wine)	=	16 33	imperial gallons
„ Kilo	=	0 114	„ quarter
„ Pike	=	‡	of an English yard
„ Stremma	=	242	„ „ acre

GUATEMALA

(REPUBLICA DE GUATEMALA)

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Guatemala, established on March 21, 1847, after having formed part for twenty-six years of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution proclaimed December, 1879, and modified October, 1885, November, 1887, October, 1889, and July, 1908. By its terms the legislative power is vested in a National Assembly, consisting of representatives (one for every 20,000 inhabitants) chosen by universal suffrage for four years, and a Council of State of 13 members, partly elected by the National Assembly, partly appointed by the President of the Republic. The executive is vested in a President, elected for six years.

President of the Republic—Don Carlos Herrera (March, 1920, to March, 1923)

The administration is carried on, under the President, by the heads of six departments—of Foreign Affairs, Government and Justice, Hacienda and Public Credit, Public Instruction, Fomento, War

Area and Population.

Area, estimated at 48,290 English square miles. In 1903 the population was 1,842,134, December 31, 1914, estimate, 2,003,579. About 60 per cent are pure Indians, most of the remainder being half caste, there being very few descendants of Europeans. Guatemala is administratively divided into 23 departments.

Capital of the Republic and seat of the government was Guatemala, with 90,000 inhabitants (1910), five sixths of them of European origin. An earthquake shock on January 3 and 4, 1917, completely destroyed the city. Other towns are Quetzaltenango, 28,040, Coban, 30,770, and Totonicapan, 28,310. A boundary convention with Honduras of March, 1905, was extended to March 1, 1915, and a New Convention was signed and ratified in 1915.

Religion and Instruction.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion, but all other creeds have complete liberty of worship. Guatemala has an archbishop under whom are suffragan bishops for Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, and San Salvador. The State does not recognise any creed.

Education is free, and obligatory for all children between 6 and 14 years of age. In 1917 there were 1,942 Government schools, including Kindergarten (18), primary schools for boys (492) and girls (516), training schools for girls (34), night schools for workmen (49), schools of arts and crafts (3), and rural schools (317). The number of pupils attending the elementary schools in 1920 was 55,100. On May 2, 1918, the Government promulgated a decree establishing the University of Guatemala, which is to be known as the "Universidad Estrada Cabrera". The University was opened on September 15, 1918. The National Central Institute confers degrees which are recognised in all the Central American Republics. Among the other institutions are a School of Handicraft for Women, a National Conservatoire of Music, and a School of Art. Total expenditure on education in 1916, 34,074. The national library contains 19,400 volumes.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered in a supreme court, 6 appeal courts, and 26 courts of first instance. In all the municipalities there are Justices of Peace.

Finance

Ordinary revenue and expenditure in currency (186 paper dollars = £1 in 1917, 194 = £1 in 1916) —

	dollars	dollars	dollars	dollars	dollars
Revenue	66,200,000	135,471,585	110,937,325	127,249,490	—

On December 31, 1920 (according to the report of the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders), the outstanding amount of the 4 per cent External Debt of 1895 was 1,414,980 $\frac{1}{2}$ , certificates in respect of unpaid interest, 844,603 $\frac{1}{2}$ , total, 2,259,583 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The internal debt on December 31, 1916, amounted to 135,799,843 dollars currency and 1,091,702 dollars sold

Defence

The military force of Guatemala, as reorganised, numbers 85,535 officers and men when mobilised. The reserve army consists of 40,575, divided into 81 battalions. All male citizens are liable to conscription from 18 to 50.

Production and Industry

The Cordilleras divide Guatemala into two unequal drainage areas, of which the Atlantic is much the greater. The Pacific slope, though comparatively narrow, is exceptionally well watered and fertile between the altitudes of 1,000 and 5,000 feet, and is the most densely settled part of the Republic. The Atlantic slope is sparsely populated and has little of commercial importance beyond the timber cutting of the Peten, coffee cultivation of Coban region, and banana raising of the Motagua Valley and Lake Izabal district.

By the National Land Law of 1894, the State lands (except those on the frontiers and the sea-shore) were divided into lots for sale, the maximum allotment permitted to one person being 15 caballarias (or about 1,687 acres), and these cannot be sold under ten years. In December, 1915, the state took over all the ore lands in the country, and such land may be exploited only under leasehold. The forest area has an extent of 1,316,482 acres.

The soil in general is exceedingly fertile. The most important crop is coffee, of which there are 1,500 plantations under cultivation, covering an area of 96,000,000 square yards and containing some 450,000,000 coffee trees. The quantity produced in 1918 was 110,000,000 pounds. Germans own and control between 50 and 60 per cent of the coffee plantations of Guatemala. Next to coffee, sugar is the most important crop, the yield in 1918 was 42,000,000 pounds. Other crops in 1916 were 9,351,485 bunches of plantains and bananas, 6,110,900 quintals (of 101.433 pounds) of maize. Of the smaller crops, beans, 180,000 quintals, and wheat, 344,041 quintals, were about the same as the previous year, rice (135,547 quintals) and potatoes (248,000 quintals) were also produced.

The department of Petén is rich in mahogany and dye woods, for which there is a ready market in the United States, whither they are carried overland through British Honduras and Mexico. Petén is also the centre of the chicle (gum) industry, in 1916, 4,407,195 lb. were obtained. Cotton is grown in small quantities. On the high plateaux the area of the cattle-grounds (potreros) is about 758,640 acres. On December 31, 1914, there were in the Republic 655,386 head of cattle, 114,451 horses and mules, 402,124 sheep, 58,847 goats, and 176,515 pigs, making a total of 1,467,323. On December 31, 1915, the total was 1,470,200.

There are silver, gold, copper, iron and lead mines, but owing to the lack of transport, mining is little developed. Chrome was discovered in 1916. In 1919-20 the ferro chromium mines of the department of Jalapa produced 2,241,341 kilos, of Estrada Cabrera, 11,352 kilos. The mines of Santa Rosa produced 680,770 kilos of mineral ore, the lead mines of Huehuetenango produced 1,249 quintals.

Shipping and Communications.

In 1919, 601 vessels of 696,885 tons (175 of 422,929 tons being American, and 129 of 58,888 tons British) entered and 576 vessels of 541,580 tons cleared the ports of the Republic. The chief ports on the Atlantic side are Puerto Barrios and Livingston, on the Pacific side, San José, Champerico, and Ocos.

The International Railway of Central America was incorporated in 1912 and represents a consolidation of the Guatemala Railway (195 miles), the Guatemala Central Railway (139 miles), the Occidental Railway (51 miles), and the Ocos Railway (22 miles). The company's main lines at present extend from Puerto Barrios to Guatemala City, a distance of 194.5 miles, thence to San José de Guatemala, on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of 74 miles. The company receives subsidies from the Governments of Guatemala and Salvador. The Salvador division of 40 miles is operated separately. The Government of Guatemala may purchase the lines after the year 2002 at a price to be decided by arbitration. The lines located in Salvador may be purchased after June, 1978, by the Government of that country at an arbitrated price. After the year 2006 Salvador will receive the lines without indemnity. In 1914 the International Railways of Central America acquired by purchase a 60-mile railroad extending from Santa Maria, on the main line between Guatemala City and San José de Guatemala, to Las Cruces. The same year it built an extension from Las Cruces to Ayutla, a distance of 45 miles. Ayutla is on the border of Mexico, Mariscal, in Mexico, being on the other side of the river Suchiate, which forms the boundary between the two countries. Although the road was constructed in 1914, through freight and passenger traffic between Guatemala City and Ayutla was not inaugurated until October 1, 1916. The International Railways of Central America has also projected a line to run south east from Santa Maria to Santa Ana in Salvador. It is stated that when this and other lines in Central America, projected or under construction, are completed, a direct through route will be afforded between Vera Cruz, Mexico, and Panama and Colon, extending along the western portion of Central America through the five Republics of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica.

There are a few good roads, and many bridges have been recently built, but away from the railway most of the traffic is on mule back. In November, 1916, a concession was granted to a company for the construction of an intra coastal canal, to be known as the Chiquimulilla Canal, skirting the Pacific Coast of Guatemala and extending 80 miles from San José to the Esclaves River.

There were in 1917, 423 post offices, through which passed 17,285,844 letters, &c. In 1920 the national telegraph lines had a length of 4,512 miles, and the telephones 416 miles. There were 262 telegraph and 252 telephone offices. Number of telegrams sent in 1920, 1,523,512.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On April 11, 1918, the National Assembly established a National Bank (Banco Nacional Privilegiado), with headquarters in the City of Guatemala. The principal functions of this bank is the making of agricultural loans, aiding in the reconstruction of the national capital and of other towns damaged by earthquakes, and co operating in the settlement of economic questions. The funds of the bank are to consist of money subscribed by the Government and the proceeds of the sale of shares to national and foreign capitalists who may desire to participate in the enterprise. The President of the Republic is authorised to negotiate and conclude such financial arrangements, either at home or abroad, as he may deem necessary or expedient in establishing and operating the bank.

Important private Banks are —(1) The Bank of Guatemala (1895), capital, 10,000,000 pesos, paid up capital, 2,500,000 pesos; reserve, 4,512,512 pesos. (2) The International Bank of Guatemala (1877), subscribed capital, 2,000,000 pesos, reserve fund, 1,651,000 pesos. (3) The American Bank (1895), paid up capital, 3,000,000 pesos, reserve fund, 1,200,000 pesos. (4) The Western Bank (Banco de Occidente) of Quetzaltenango (1881), capital, 2,000,000 pesos; paid-up capital, 1,650,000 pesos; reserve fund, 3,800,000 pesos. On December 31, 1918, there were in circulation 133,000,000 pesos in paper money issued by the banks.

The National Treasury has continued to withdraw from circulation the notes of the extinct banking committee, and during the year 1918 cancelled 309,972 dollars, which with amounts previously withdrawn makes a total of 3,631,156 dollars

The silver peso or dollar is not now current, the money in use being paper or fractional nickel and copper coin. The paper money in circulation is estimated at between 150,000,000 and 200,000,000 pesos

The Dollar or Peso, of 100 Centavos, weight, 25 grammes, 900 fine, nominal value, 4s. Nickel coins are the real, nominal value 6d, and the half and quarter real. Copper coins (introduced in 1915) are 25 and 12½ centavos. In 1917, 1,200,000 of the former and 2,468,000 of the latter were coined

The Spanish Libra of 16 ounces	= 1 014 lb avoirdupois
„ Arroba of 25 libras	= 25 85 lb „
„ Quintal of 4 arrobas	= 101 40 „
„ Tonelada of 20 quintals	= 18 10 cwt „
„ Fanega	= 1½ imperial bushels

The metric system is in use only to a small extent, Spanish measures being the principal units.

HAITI.

(RÉPUBLIQUE D HAITI )

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Haiti, formerly a French colony, was proclaimed independent January 1, 1804, and is now governed under a Constitution ratified on June 12, 1918 The legislative power is vested in a Chamber of Deputies on the basis of one member for each 60,000 inhabitants, members being chosen for 2 years by direct popular vote, and in a Senate of 15 members chosen for 6 years likewise by direct vote of the people Citizens over 21 enjoy the franchise The President is elected for 4 years by the two Chambers in joint session Members of both houses are paid a monthly salary of 150 dollars throughout the year

President of the Republic —Monsieur Sudre Dartiguenave, elected August 12, 1915

The administration of the Republic is carried on, under the President, by five Secretaries of State The President receives an annual salary of 24,000 dollars

In November, 1915, both Houses of the Haitian Congress ratified the treaty with the United States establishing a virtual protectorate by the United States over Haiti

Area and Population

The area of the Republic, which embraces the western portion of the island of Haiti—the larger but less populated eastern division forming the Republic of Santo Domingo—is estimated at 10,204 English square miles The inhabitants were estimated to number 960,000 in 1887, the ecclesiastical estimate, based on parish registers, in 1909 put the number at 2,029,700 In 1912 the estimated population was 2½ millions The majority of them are negroes, there are also great numbers of Mulatto Haitians, the descendants of the former French settlers There are about 5,000 foreigners, of whom about 10 per cent are white Capital, Port au Prince, with 120,000 inhabitants, situated on a large bay, and possessed of an excellent harbour Cape Haiti has an estimated population of about 15,000, Jacmel, 20,000, Cayes about 15,000, Gonaives, 8,000, Port de Paix, 5,000 The official language of the country is French, though most of the common people speak a debased dialect known as Creole French

Religion and Instruction.

The religion is Roman Catholicism There is an archbishop with 4 suffragan bishops The Catholic clergy are French Public elementary education is free, the country being divided into 15 inspectors' districts The sum allotted for public instruction amounts to nearly 1,000,000 dollars annually, but the educational system is still very imperfect, especially in rural districts. In 1910 education was made compulsory. In 1918 there were 854 primary schools with 61,956 pupils, 29 secondary schools with 4,816 pupils, 1 normal school, a school of law and one of medicine, with 102 students.

Justice

Justice is administered by a Court of Cassation and by lower courts. All the judges are nominated by the President and are irremovable.

Finance

The revenue of Haiti is derived almost exclusively from customs, paid in American gold on exports and imports. The largest portion of the expenditure is for debt charges.

The following table shows the revenue and expenditure for two years —

	Revenue		Expenditure
	U S Gold dollars	Currency gourdes	U S Gold dollars	Currency gourdes
1917-18	2,639,008	1,014,252	2,616,175	4,534,121
1918-19	2,115,930	3,063,958	2,349,880	3,750,070

On December 31, 1919, the debt consisted of gold loans amounting to 149,894,087 francs. The internal debt amounts to 2,918,080 dollars. The total interest of the foreign debt now due is 28,417,632 francs.

Defence

An armed constabulary (Gendarmerie d'Haiti), both urban and rural, was instituted in 1916. The officers are drawn from the United States Marine Corps. The establishment consists of 110 officers and 2,688 non-commissioned officers and men. A coastguard service of one armed auxiliary schooner is attached to the constabulary. The reserve troops consisting of the former 'Guard of the Government' and old line regiments, have an effective of 19,128 men.

Production and Commerce

The industries of Haiti are mainly agricultural, and the most important product is coffee of excellent quality, but the export duty (3 cents gold per lb.) is so considerable as to hamper the development of its cultivation. Cocoa is grown extensively and cotton is exported in increasing quantities. The cultivation of tobacco is extending, and a cigar and cigarette factory is successful. Sugar is likewise grown, and there are 4 sugar-making establishments. An extensive sugar central, founded with American capital, has been constructed near Port au Prince. Rum and other spirits are distilled but not exported; the rum is of a superior quality. Logwood is an important product, and other valuable woods are now exported. Cattle breeding is neglected.

Haiti possesses considerable mineral resources quite undeveloped. Gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal, kaolin, nickel, gypsum, limestone and porphyry are found but are little worked. Some effort has been made to work copper mines in the last few years, and concessions have been granted for mining coal, iron, and copper.

Imports and Exports for 4 years —

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1915	4,844,768	—	1916-17	1,661,369	1,692,966
1915-16	1,925,255	1,937,744	1918-19	17,117,608	21,460,044

The values of imports into Haiti from various countries for the years 1915 and 1916 were as follows — From the United States, 8,775,064 dollars in 1916 and 3,806,673 dollars in 1915, from Great Britain, 719,959 dollars in 1916 and 296,284 dollars in 1915, from France, 467,336 dollars in 1916 and 167,779 dollars in 1915.

The following statistics of exports show only the quantities of given commodities exported from Haiti. No values are available.

Articles	1916	1917	Articles	1916	1917
Beeswax lbs	52,091	57,749	Hides and skins lbs	1,144,702	707,048

Shipping and Communications

In 1916 there entered at the ports of the Republic 86 steam vessels of 415,574 tons, and 20 sailing ships of 4,900 tons. Several lines of steamers (French, Dutch, and Norwegian) connect the ports of Haiti with New York.

Port-au-Prince is connected with Cape Haiti by a road 169 miles long, and with Morebalaïs and Las Coobas by a road 33 miles long. A light railway has been constructed from Port-au-Prince to Lake Assuén (28 miles), and to Léogane (22 miles), but the traffic is small. A concession has been granted the 'National Railroad Company of Hayti' for a railroad from Cape Haiti to Port-au-Prince, now in construction. Total length of line, 64 miles. Port-au-Prince has 5 miles of tramway.

The principal towns are connected by the Government telegraph system. A cable runs from the Mole St. Nicholas to Santiago de Cuba and from the Mole to Port-au-Prince, and also to Cape Haiti, whence it runs to Puerto Plata (Santo Domingo) and to South America.

There are 31 post offices Haiti joined the Postal Union in 1880
Length of telegraph lines, 124 miles

Money, Weights, and Measures

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti, established October 21, 1910, with a capital of 10,000,000 francs, undertakes to render services to the Government in respect of loans and other matters In 1916, the National City Bank of New York purchased control over this bank In 1918 the American Foreign Banking Corporation, and in 1919 the Royal Bank of Canada each established a branch at Port au Prince

The Gourde, or dollar, nominal value, 4s Nickel coins are 50, 20-, 10 and 5-centime pieces, and bronze 3, 2, and 1 centime pieces The money in circulation consists of paper money, 8,289,812 gourdes, nickel coins, 7,000,000 goudes, bronze coins, 225,000 gourdes, total, 15,514,812 gourdes It is estimated there are also 2,100,000 dollars in American gold in circulation The bank notes are to be issued by the Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti under the control of the Haitian Government In 1917 the premium on gold as against Haitian gourdes was stationary at 400 per cent, at which rate the local currency will probably be stabilized On August 19, 1912, a law was approved providing for the withdrawal from circulation within two years of 6,000,000 gourdes

The metric system of weights and measures came into use officially on October 1, 1920

HONDURAS.

(REPÚBLICA DE HONDURAS)

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Honduras, established September 15, 1821, is governed under a charter proclaimed October, 1894. It gives the legislative power to a Congress of Deputies consisting of 42 members, chosen for 4 years directly by popular vote, in the ratio of one per 10,000 inhabitants. It meets for 60 days on January 1 each year. The executive authority rests with a President, nominated and elected by popular vote for 4 years, and holding office from February 1st.

President — General Rafael Lopez Gutierrez (1920-1924)

The administration of the Republic is carried on by a Council of five ministers, to whom are entrusted the departments of Foreign Relations, Government and Justice, War, Treasury and Public Credit, Public Works and Agriculture, and Instruction.

Area and Population.

Area about 44,275 English square miles, with a population, in 1920, of 637,114 (314,528 males and 322,846 females), according to official figures, or 12.5 inhabitants to the square mile. The inhabitants are chiefly Indians with an admixture of Spanish blood. On the north coast there is a considerable proportion of negroes. The Republic is divided into 17 departments. La Mosquitia is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by native races who speak no Spanish. The capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with 38,950 inhabitants in 1920; other towns are Pespire, 7,132; Nacaome, 8,152; La Esperanza, 11,453; Santa Rosa, 10,574; Choluteca, 8,065; San Pedro Sula, 7,820. The main ports are Amapala on the Pacific, and, on the Atlantic, Puerto Cortez (2,500), Omoa (1,000), Ulúa, La Ceiba, Trujillo, Roatan, and Tela. Amapala, on Tiger Island, is 3 hours by gasoline launch from San Lorenzo on the mainland, where a cart road starts for the capital Tegucigalpa, 81½ miles (130 kilometres). Traction is by autos and bull carts. Tegucigalpa is 4 days' mule travel from the end of railroad on North Coast, and 5 hours from the end of the cart road at Comayagua, by auto, to Tegucigalpa.

Religion, Instruction, Justice

The Roman Catholic is the prevailing religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any. Instruction is free, compulsory (from 7 to 15 years of age), and entirely secular. In 1920 there were 867 schools, with 1,107 teachers. In 1920 there were 87,207 children of school age, of whom 35,912 attended school. The expenditure for education in 1920 was 371,538 pesos. At Tegucigalpa there is a central university with faculties of medicine, and of science, law, and political sciences, also a military and automobile school, and at Comayagua there is a school of jurisprudence. For secondary instruction the Government maintains a Central Institute at Tegucigalpa, and subsidised colleges in the departments. To these colleges five normal schools are annexed.

FINANCE—DEFENCE—PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY 989

The Judicial power resides in the Supreme Court with five judges chosen directly by the people for 4 years, four Appeal Courts, and departmental and local judges

Finance.

Every citizen of Honduras belongs to the regular army from the age of 21 to 35, to the reserves from the age of 35 to 40 Foreigners are exempt from service, naturalised citizens being exempt for 10 years The troops on July 31, 1918, consisted of 46,106 fighting men and 21,505 reserves, making a total force of 77,611 The country is divided into five military zones

Production and Industry

The chief culture is that of bananas, mostly on the Atlantic coast where coconuts are also grown In 1920 there were exported 11,524,145 bunches of bananas The coconut groves of Puerto Sal extend from the Ulúa River to the Cuero River, a distance of about 60 miles, and are said to contain over 28,000 fruit-bearing trees The export of coconuts in 1920 was 3,862,612 Rubber is produced in decreasing quantity, coffee of fine quality is grown, and the industry is increasing Tobacco too is grown While the Department of El Paraíso has become noted for its fine quality of tobacco, the Department of Copán still leads in quantity, producing 75 per cent of the total amount raised in the Republic (about 1,717,500 pound annually) This finds a market in the neighbouring Republics and also in Peru In 1915-16 there was produced 1,644,521 quintals (of 100 pounds) of corn, 187,227 quintals of beans, 407,828 quintals of maize (Kaffir corn), 76,936 quintals of rice, 4,963 quintals of wheat, 67,119 quintal of coffee, and 6,069,379 bunches of bananas The cultivation of indigo is being revived round Camasca, where 6,373 acres were cultivated in 1917 Hennequen is being widely planted, the government having offered a subsidy Attention is also being paid to the planting of the castor oil plant.

Honduras is essentially a cattle producing country. The total number of farms was 3,658, of cattle ranches, 1,561. Cattle breeding is carried on extensively, and dairy farming on a small scale. In 1919 there were within the Republic 103,120 head of cattle, 12,701 horses, 2,813 mules, 331 donkeys, 23,054 pigs, 4 sheep, and 14 goats. About 150,400 acres are devoted to pasture.

The mineral resources of Honduras are—gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron, antimony, some of them being found in almost every department. Gold, bar silver, some copper and lead, and various ores are exported. Deposits of brown and other coal have also been found. The chief requisites for the development of the mining industries are capital, and facilities for transport.

Straw hats and cigars are the only articles of home manufacture exported. A very good quality of Panama hat is manufactured in the Departments of Copan and Santa Barbara. There are in all 106 registered factories of all classes in the Republic, mostly for making aguardiente, soda water, cigars, sugar, soap, candles, shoes, and artificial ice, besides minor establishments.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 5 years —

—	1915-16	1916-17	1917 18	1918-19	1919-20
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	890,421	1,259,032	1,435,384	2,070,412	3,858,228
Exports	338,113	1,070,690	1,376,079	1,790,322	2,083,418

The principal exports from Honduras in 1919-20 were bananas (2,872,475 U.S. dollars), coconuts (550,588 dollars), coffee (216,918 dollars), hides (2,173,628 dollars), cattle (185,380 dollars), and sugar (2,313,064 dollars).

The United States takes practically all the exports of Honduras (95.9 per cent in 1919-20), and furnishes practically all its imports.

In February, 1916, Congress agreed to the establishment of a free port, called Puerto Herrera, and built at the point where the Cruta River joins the Bay of Caratasca.

The treaty of Commerce and Navigation of 1915 provides for the 'most favoured-nation' treatment between the United Kingdom and Honduras.

Total trade between Honduras and United Kingdom for 5 years was (according to Board of Trade returns) as follows —

—	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Honduras	1,275	120	—	540	12,302
Exports to Honduras	52,446	86,778	64,269	72,278	329,710

The transport of fruit, &c., to the United States is effected largely by steamships, some of them built for the purpose.

Communications.

In general, travelling and transport are accomplished by means of mules and ox carts. Slow improvements in road making and repairing are beginning to be made. The cart road from Tegucigalpa to the north coast is being rapidly pushed forward, reaching Comayagua in 1919. There is a good mail service by automobiles. The two principal roads are the Carretera del Sur from San Lorenzo, on the Pacific Coast, to Tegucigalpa, 84 miles, and the Carretera del Norte from Tegucigalpa to Comayagua, 63 miles. A third road is being built from Lake Yojoa to Signatepeque, and thence to Comayagua, and a fourth from Tegucigalpa to Juticalpa.

There is a railway of 60 miles (95 kilometres) from Puerto Cortes to Potrerillos, the line, which was taken over by the Government in 1912, has been almost completely overhauled and repaired, and is now in a condition to meet the heavy demands made upon it by the banana crop. The other four railroads are owned and operated by the various fruit companies on the north coast. The Trujillo Railway, which will eventually reach Juticalpa, has about 73 miles completed, the Tela Railway has about 155 miles completed, the Cuyamel Fruit Co. Railway (Department of Cortes) has an extension of 49 miles, and the Vaccaro Brothers' Railway, which is being built towards the town of Yoio, has 126 miles. Total length of line (1920) 463 miles.

In 1920 the country had 877 miles of telephone lines and 4,663 miles of telegraph lines. Number of telephone offices 664, number of telegraph offices, 277.

Money, Weights, and Measures

The silver peso or dollar, of 100 cents, weighing 25 grammes, 900 fine, is the monetary unit. The fractional silver money consists of 50, 25, 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces. The real is also in popular use. It is equivalent to 12½ cents. There is a 1 cent and a 2 cent copper coin. On January 10, 1920, the government signed convention with banks for the introduction of United States coin into Honduras. The value of the silver peso is legally fixed at one half the value of an American dollar.

There are four banks in the Republic, the 'Banco de Honduras,' with a capital of 417,000 pesos, the Banco Atlántida (1913), with a capital of 500,000 dollars, Banco Comercio, a branch (at San Pedro Sula) of the American Foreign Banking Corporation (1919). The first two are banks of emission. The total bank notes of the two banks amount to 1,083,000 pesos. Nearly all these notes have been withdrawn from circulation, and replaced by American bills. The money in circulation is now about 2½ million dollars in U.S. currency and 140,000 pesos of Honduras Banks notes. There is practically no silver in circulation.

The metric system of weights and measures has been legal since April 1, 1897, but English pounds and yards and the old Spanish system are still in general use.

1 Vara	= 32 inches
1 Arroba	= 25 lb
1 Quintal	= 100 lb
1 Tonelada	= 2,000 lb

HUNGARY.

(KINGDOM OF HUNGARY)

Constitution and Government

On October 31, 1918, a revolution broke out in Hungary with the object of establishing a Republic and making the country independent of Austria. On November 13 King Charles issued a letter of abdication, and on November 16, 1918, Hungary was proclaimed an independent Republic (Hungarian People's Republic), of which Count Michael Karolyi became Provisional President. The two Houses of the Legislature were abolished, and their place taken by a Provisional National Assembly. The Karolyi regime continued until March 22, 1919, when the Count resigned in consequence of an Entente note in reference to the boundary between Hungary and Rumania. Count Karolyi's Cabinet was succeeded by a Soviet Government, which proclaimed the dictatorship of the proletariat. An opposition Government was, however, soon set up at Arad and Szeged, which with the assistance of the Rumanian army swept away the Soviet Government, and on August 7, 1919, a National Government was again in the Capital. Elections were held on the basis of universal suffrage in January and February 1920, and as a result a blocc composed of parties of the Right was returned to power. The new Parliament proceeded to elect a Regent who was styled officially 'Protector of the Magyar Republic.'

Regent - Admiral Nicholas von Horthy (Elected March 1, 1920)

The Ministry at present (May, 1921), in power was formed on April 14, 1921, as follows -

Prime Minister - Count Bethlen

Minister of Foreign Affairs - Count Banffy

Minister of the Interior - Count Rudan

Minister of Finance - M. Hegedus

Minister of Agriculture - M. Szabo

Minister of Commerce - M. Hgyeshalmi

Minister of Public Instruction - Dr. Vass

Minister of Justice - M. Tomcsanyi

Minister of National Defence - General Birtka

Minister of Social Welfare - M. Bernolák

Minister of Food - M. Mayer

On March 23, 1920, a Government Order that Hungary was a Monarchy, that the official style of the Ministry is 'Royal Hungarian Ministry,' that Hungary should be described as a Monarchy in all official documents, and that the Royal Arms were to be adopted again.

II LOCAL GOVERNMENT

In Hungary a distinction is observed between communes which are large or small, or may be townships with regular magistrates, and municipalities, which are regarded as communes of a higher order. The communal electoral right is possessed by every male inhabitant over twenty years of age who for two years has paid the State tax. The representative body is composed half of members elected for six years, and half of persons who pay the highest taxes. The committee consists of members appointed, in the towns for six years, in the rural communes for three years, with officials appointed for life. The counties and cities invested with similar rights are independent municipalities. Each has its council constituted similarly to the representative body of the communes, and the members are elected also for six years. All electors for the Parliament are qualified to vote. In Budapest they must be able to read and write. The executive is in the hands of the official body of the municipality, who sit and vote with the council.

Area and Population.

The Treaty of Neuilly, signed on June 5, 1920, and ratified by Hungary on November 13, 1920, mentions in general terms the boundaries of the new State with Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugo-Slavia and Rumania. The exact boundaries with Yugo-Slavia and Rumania are to be determined by a mixed commission.

The new State is roughly about one third the size of the old Kingdom of Hungary. The northern boundary commencing at Pressburg runs parallel with the Danube as far as Gran, then north and north east to Mogoshezt, on the Theiss, then south west to Nagylak on the Maros, then west as far as Beremendo, on the Drave, then north west to Toka along the Drave, and then north to Pressburg.

Until the boundaries of the new State are determined and statistical returns are available, it is impossible to state exactly the area and population of Hungary as it is. The following figures give details for old Hungary. At the last four census enumerations the total (civil and military) population of the old kingdom was as follows:—

Year	Population	Absolute increase	Yearly increase percent
1880	15,739,259	—	—
1890	17,463,791	1,724,532	1.09
1900	19,254,559	1,790,768	1.03
1910	20,886,487	1,631,928	0.85

Of the total in 1910, Hungary proper had 18,264,533 in an area of 109,188 square miles. The population of Hungary according to the census of 1921 is 7,840,832, and its area 35,164 square miles.

PRINCIPAL TOWNS, WITH POPULATION IN 1910.

Budapest (Census Jan 1, 1921)	1,184,616	Ujpest	55,197	Kiskunfélegyháza	34,924

		Nyíregyháza	38,198	Szombathely	30,947
		Székesfehérvár	36,625	Kispest	30,212

Religion.

Religious toleration is one of the fundamental principles of the Hungarian State. There is perfect equality among all legally recognised religions, which include the Roman and Greek Catholic, the Evangelical (Augsburg and Helvetian), the Unitarian, the Greek Oriental, the Gregorian Armenian, the Baptist (since 1905), the Jewish, and the Mohammedan (since 1916) Each has the independent administration of its own affairs

The following table gives the division of the total population of the whole of the former Kingdom according to religion on the basis of the census of 1910 —

Religion	Number	Per cent of pop
Roman Catholics	10,888,138	52 1
Greek Catholics	2,025,508	9 7

Instruction.

Public education in Hungary comprises the following grades — (1) Infant schools, (2) elementary schools, (3) industrial and commercial apprentice schools, (4) higher primary and primary schools, (5) training colleges for teachers, (6) middle or secondary schools, gymnasia and realschools, secondary schools for girls; (7) academies (high schools) of law; (8) institutions for religious education, (9) universities, (10) technical high schools, economic mining, industrial, and commercial special schools

School attendance is compulsory for children of six to twelve years. The industrial law of 1884 requires special courses for apprentices. Every parish or commune is bound, according to its means, to maintain an infant school or permanent or summer foster home. There were in the school year 1916 altogether 2,385 infants' schools and permanent foster homes with 214,199 infants, and 9 training colleges for female teachers of infant schools

In Old Hungary there were in the school year 1916-17 15,224 elementary schools, the prevailing language in 12,503 was Hungarian, in 428 German, in 304 Slovak, in 1,707 Rumanian, in 1,767 Croatian and Serb, in 42 other languages. The number of pupils at elementary daily schools was 1,795,443, and the number of teachers 29,611. The number of primary schools was 533, with 104,855 pupils and 4,256 professors. The number of training colleges for teachers and female teachers for elementary schools was 55, and for primary schools 9

In the middle schools the curriculum extends over eight years. They are maintained by the State, by the larger communes, or (in the case of the denominational schools) by ecclesiastical foundations, with sometimes a subvention from the State. There were in 1916-1917, 186 gymnasia, with 3,198 teachers and 67,190 pupils, 34 realschools, with 628 teachers and 12,662 pupils, and 39 secondary schools for girls, with 804 teachers and 9,899 pupils

Hungary has four universities all maintained by the State. In the first semester of the year 1916-17 the University of Budapest had 526 professors and 3,950 students (4,589 in 1920-21), the University of Kolozsvár, 165 professors and 420 students, the Universities of Pozsony (Pressburg) 19 professors and 147 students, and Debreczen 38 professors and 257 students—the last two having been founded in 1912. There are also 42 theological colleges, viz., 25 Roman Catholic, 4 Greek Catholic, 3 Greek Oriental, 7 Protestant, 1 Unitarian and 1 Jewish, with a total of 238 professors and 1,355 students, and 8 law schools with 90 professors and 729 students. The technical high school (polytechnicum) in Budapest has 120 professors and 727 students. In Old Hungary there were 5 academies of agriculture, 1 veterinary college, 1 high school for mining and forestry, 1 Oriental commercial academy, 2 courses of the commercial academy, and 1 high school for plastic and graphic arts. In the school year 1916-17 there were 66 high commercial schools separately for boys and girls, 1 industrial school of art, 4 high industrial schools. There were 49 industrial schools.

In 1915, 1,248 periodicals of various kinds were published in Hungary, 311 being political papers. Of the whole, 941 were in Hungarian, 43 in Hungarian with another language, 130 in German, the rest being in Slovakish, Croatian, Serbian, Ruthenian, French, Italian, &c.

Justice and Crime

In the former Kingdom of Hungary the ordinary judicial authorities were—The Supreme Court in Budapest and the Supreme Court of Justice (Table of Septemvirs) in Zagrab (Agram), of the highest instance in all civil and criminal matters, 12 Tables of second instance. As courts of first instance, 76 county courts (torvényszékek) with collegiate judgeships, 458 district courts (járásbíróságok) with single judges, 15 jury courts, (sajtóbíróságok) for press offences, besides an army special court.

There are 11 penal establishments in Hungary for males, and 1 for females.

Pauperism

In Hungary poor relief is in the main left to communal administration. In the smaller communes orphans and the indigent are cared for by official guardians and overseers, while in the larger there are poor houses, the funds being mostly derived from fines and taxes. The number of asylums for paupers and orphans is about 300. The Church and charitable societies also render assistance, and several millions of crowns are annually bestowed in legacies and gifts towards benevolent purposes.

Defence

The organisation of the military forces of Hungary after the war has been ad interim pending the ratification of the Treaty of Peace, which had not taken place in May, 1920. At that time the armed forces of the country consisted of the National Army, the Gendarmerie and the Police.

The National Army consisted of 3 divisions, each composed of 3 infantry regiments and an artillery detachment. The average strength of a division was 6,350 men of all ranks. The country west of the Danube was divided into the 3 military districts of Szekesfehervar, Szombathely, and Kaposvar, in each of which one division was quartered. There was also at Szeged a group of about 3,900 men and a cavalry brigade of about 2,100. The total strength of the National Army was about 25,064, exclusive of staffs, training establishments, &c, which amounted to about 2,000 of all ranks.

The strength of the Gendarmerie was —In Budapest, 200, outside Budapest, 5,378. The reserves of the Gendarmerie outside Budapest amounted to 16,760.

The strength of the Police was in Budapest, 3,500, outside Budapest, 1,914. The reserves of the Police in Budapest amounted to 5,000 men.

Production and Industry.

The cultivation of the soil is the chief industry of Hungary, since (if we include the forests) it furnishes employment to 64.5 per cent. of the population. According to the census of 1910, 13,232,286 persons are supported by agriculture properly so called, 14,101 persons by dairy work, sheep breeding, and poultry, 49,032 persons by market gardening and horticulture, 159,997 by forestry, the chase, and charcoal burning, and 10,237 by other agricultural occupations.

The total area of all the holdings in 1915 was 32,490,333 hectares (81,225,833 acres).

The estimated production of crops in the former kingdom of Hungary in 1915 is as follows —Wheat, 81,111,000 cwts, rye, 22,735,000 cwts, barley, 23,790,000 cwts, oats, 22,891,000 cwts, and maize, 92,835,000 cwts.

In 1915 the tobacco crop grown on 87,507 acres yielded 342,168 metric quintals. The wine production in 1915 was 76,490,106 gallons. The sugar yield in 1916-17 was 2,120,000 metric cwts, the best yield being 14,960,000 metric cwts. Hops in 1915 grown on 7,062 acres produced 4,667,000 pounds, in 1914, the quantity was 5,333,000 pounds.

In the former kingdom of Hungary there were in 1917 1,485,894 horses, 969 mules, 14,703 asses, 5,934,833 cattle, 5,123,271 sheep, 5,644,025 pigs, and 251,236 goats. In silk culture 48,457 families were engaged in 1915, compared with 1,059 in 1879. The produce of cocoons (1915) was 6,180 metric tons, the value being 1,255,633 kronen.

The total area under forest in the former Kingdom of Hungary (1915) was 9,596,665 acres, of which 1,357,438 acres are in present day Hungary.

Of the total production of coal in Old Hungary in 1913, amounting to 10,274,051 tons, 5,906,907 tons were produced in New Hungary. Of the total production of iron in Old Hungary, amounting to 2,165,905 tons, 394,960 tons came from New Hungary

Value of the principal mineral and furnace products in thousands of kronen for 1915 Gold, 6,211, silver, 685, iron ore, 11,191, pig iron, 33,676, cast iron, 1,974, coal, 17,552, and lignite, 92,183 The steel production of Hungary totalled in 1917, 692,429 metric tons (688,267 in 1915)

Commerce.

The special commerce of the old Kingdom of Hungary for five years was as follows (in thousands of kronen) —

—	1912	1913	1914	1915	1916
Imports	2,212,143	2,075,336	1,829,549	2,537,318	3,197,002

(REGNO D'ITALIA )

Reigning King

Vittorio Emanuele III, born November 11, 1869, the only son of King Umberto I of Italy and of Queen Margherita, succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, July 29, 1900, married October 24, 1896, to Elena, born January 8, 1873, daughter of Nicholas, King of Montenegro, offspring, Princess Jolanda, born June 1, 1901, Princess Mafalda, born November 19, 1902, Prince Umberto, Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont and Heir Apparent, born Sept 15, 1904, Princess Giovanna, born November 13, 1907, Princess Maria, born December 26, 1914

Mother of the King

Queen Margherita, born November 20, 1851, the only daughter of the late Prince Ferdinando of Savoy, Duke of Genoa married, April 22 1868, to Umberto of Savoy, Prince of Piemonte (King of Italy, 1875), widow July 29, 1900

Uncle of the King

Prince Tomaso Alberto Vittorio, of Savoy, Duke of Genoa, born February 6, 1854

Cousins of the King

Prince Emanuele Filiberto of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, born January 13, 1869, married June 20, 1895, to Princess Elena, d Orleans, daughter of the late Comte de Paris offspring, Prince Amdeo Umberto, Duke of Apulia born October 21, 1898 and Prince Asimone, Duke of Spoleto, born March 9, 1900, Prince Vittorio Emanuele, of Savoy Aosta, Count of Turin, born November 24, 1870 Prince Luigi Amedeo, of Savoy Aosta, Duke of the Abruzzi, born January 30, 1873—children of the late Prince Amedeo of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, from his union with Maria Vittoria, Princess of Pozzo della Cisterna, who died November 8, 1876

Most genealogists trace the origin of the reigning house to a German Count Berthold, who, in the eleventh century, established himself on the western slope of the Alps, between Mont Blanc and Lake Lemman In the end of the eleventh century the Count of Savoy acquired the countries of Turin and Susa Count Amadeus, in 1383, founded a law of primogeniture which led to the immediate acquisition of the territory of Nice In 1416 the Counts of Savoy adopted the title of Duke, in 1418 they acquired the Principality of Piedmont, and in 1713 they obtained the island of Sicily, with the title of King Sicily had to be exchanged, in 1720, for the isle of Sardinia, to which henceforth the royal dignity remained attached The Genoese territory was added at the peace of 1815 The direct male line of the House of Savoy died out with King Carlo Felice in 1831, and the crown fell to Prince Carlo Alberto, of the house of Savoy Carignano, a branch founded by Tommaso Francesco, born in 1596, younger son of Duke Carlo Emanuele I of Savoy King Carlo Alberto abdicated the throne March 23, 1849, in favour of his son, the late King Vittorio Emanuele II, who, by the Peace of Zurich, November 10, 1859, obtained Lombardy, with the exception of Mantua and a part of the surrounding territory On March 11, 1860, annexation to Sardinia was voted by plebiscites in Parma, Modena, the Romagna, and Tuscany, on October 21, Sicily and Naples (including Benevento and Pontecorvo, part of the Papal States), and on November 4, the Marches and Umbria The first Italian Parliament assembled in February 1861, and declared (March 17, 1861) Vittorio Emanuele King of Italy The remaining part of the province of Mantua and Venetia were added in 1866 Finally, the remaining part of the Papal States (province of Rome), having been taken possession of by an Italian army (September 20, 1870), after the withdrawal of the French garrison, was annexed to the Kingdom by plébiscite on October 2

The civil list has been settled at 16,050,000 lire <sup>1</sup> From this amount the children of the late Prince Amedeo, Duke of Aosta, receive jointly allowance of 400,000 lire, Prince Tomaso, Duke of Genoa, an allowance of 400,000 lire, and Queen Margherita, an allowance of 1,000,000 lire

The greater part of the private domains of the reigning family were given up to the State in 1848

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Italy is an expansion of the 'Statuto fondamentale del Regno,' granted on March 1, 1848, by King Charles Albert to his Sardinian subjects. According to this charter, the executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, while the legislative authority rests conjointly in the King and Parliament, the latter consisting of two Chambers—an upper one, the Senate, and a lower one, called the 'Camera dei Deputati.' The Senate is composed of the princes of the royal house who are twenty-one years of age (with the right to vote when twenty-five years of age), and of an unlimited number of members, above forty years old, who are nominated by the King for life, a condition of the nomination being that the person should either fill a high office, or have acquired fame in science, literature, or any other pursuit tending to the benefit of the nation, or, finally, should pay taxes to the annual amount of 3,000 lire, or 120*l*. On January 1, 1920, there were 368 senators and 9 members of the royal family. The electoral law of December 1920, made the suffrage universal for men and women 21 years of age, and also for men aged less than 21 years who have performed military service during the war. The Electoral Reform Act of 1919 introduced the principle of proportional representation and scrutin de liste. The number of deputies is 508, or 1 to every 71,000 of the population (census 1911). In 1919 the number of enrolled electors was 11,115,441 (34 per 100 inhabitants without distinction of sex or age) inclusive of the electors temporarily disfranchised on account of military service. For electoral purposes the whole of the Kingdom is divided into 508 electoral colleges or districts, and these again into several sections (19,508). A deputy must be thirty years old, and have the requisites demanded by the electoral law. Incapable of being elected are all salaried Government officials, as well as all persons ordained for the priesthood and filling clerical charges, or receiving pay from the State. Officers in the army and navy, ministers, under secretaries of State, and various other classes of functionaries high in office, may be elected, but their number must never be more than forty, not including the ministers and the under secretaries of State. All deputies receive 15,000 lire (600*l*) annually, and all deputies and senators travel gratis on the railways.

Lower House, elected May, 1921. Constitutionalists, 275, Socialists, 122, Catholics, 107, Communists, 16, Republicans, 7, Germans, 4, and Slavs, 4.

The duration of a Parliament is five years, and it must meet annually, but the King has the power to dissolve the lower House at any time, being bound only to order new elections, and convoke a new meeting within four months. Each of the Chambers has the right of introducing new bills, the same as the Government, but all money bills must originate in the House of Deputies The ministers have the right to attend the debates of both the upper and the lower House, but they have no vote unless they are members. No sitting is valid unless an absolute majority of the members are present.

The executive power is exercised, under the King, by a ministry. The ministry, constituted June 15, 1920, is as follows —

President of the Council and Minister of the Interior — Signor Giovanni Giolitti

Minister of Foreign Affairs — Signor Carlo Sforza (Senator)

Minister for the Colonies — Signor Luigi Rossi

Minister of Justice and of Ecclesiastical Affairs — Signor Luigi Einaudi

Minister of the Treasury — Signor Ivanoe Bonomi

Minister of Finance — Signor Francesco Tedesco

Minister of War — Signor Rodino

Minister of Marine — Signor Giovanni Scelzi (Senator)

Minister of Public Instruction — Signor Benedetto Croce

Minister of Public Works — Signor Peano (Liberal)

Minister of Agriculture — Signor Micheli (Catholic)

Minister of Industry and Commerce — Signor Giulio Alessio

Minister of Labour — Signor Arturo Labriola

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs — Signor Pasqualino Vassallo

Minister of the Liberal Provinces — Signor Giovanni Raineri

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The administrative divisions of Italy are provinces (69), territories or circondari (214), districts or mandamenti (1805), and communes.

In 1920 (January 1) there were 8,946 communes. The two principal elective local administrative bodies are the communal councils and the provincial councils. According to the law of February 4, 1915, each commune has a communal council, a municipal council, and a syndic. Both the communal councils and the municipal councils vary according to population, the members of the latter being selected by the former from among themselves. The syndic is the head of the communal administration, and is a Government official, he is elected by the communal council from among its own members, by secret vote. Each province has a provincial council and a provincial commission, the numbers varying according to population. The council elects its president and other officials. The provincial commission is elected by the council from its own members. It conducts the business of the province when the latter is not sitting. Both communal and provincial councillors are elected for 4 years. The communal council meets twice and the provincial once a year in ordinary session, though they may be convened for extraordinary purposes. All communal electors are eligible to the council except those having an official or pecuniary interest in the commune. Electors must be Italian citizens, resident in the kingdom, or belonging to Italian provinces outside Italy, and be on the Parliamentary electoral list.

In 1911 the number of enrolled administrative electors was 4,011,038 (11.2 per cent of population). As a result of the amended law of June 19, 1913, the number of these electors, in 1914, was 9,554,273 (26.7 per cent of population).

As a result of the Treaty of St Germain there has been a considerable rearrangement of the Italo Austrian frontier, and Italy has obtained large tracts of what were formerly Austrian lands. The following table shows the area and population of the acquired territories —

The resident population (i.e. having habitual residence in Italy, including persons temporarily absent) on June 10, 1911, numbered 35,845,048

The population of Italy is in general perfectly homogeneous. According to statistics of 1911, the exceptions are: about 33,300 of French origin, 9,600 of Teutonic origin, 81,000 of Albanian origin, 29,000 of Greek origin; 11,700 of Spanish (Catalan) origin, and 42,200 Slavs

PRINCIPAL TOWNS

The numbers of inhabitants at the different centres do not in Italian statistics afford a sufficient basis for distinguishing between the urban and rural population. In Northern Italy the population is scattered over the country and there are few centres. In Southern Italy, and in the islands the country people live in the towns, coming and going to cultivate their own plots of land, consequently there are many populous centres where, if numbers alone were considered, the population would be regarded as urban, though it is, in truth, almost exclusively rural. The following statement gives the classification of communes according to resident population on December 31, 1918, on the basis of the 1911 census

Religion

The Roman Catholic Church is, nominally, the ruling State religion of Italy, but the power of the Church and clergy is subordinated to the civil government, and there is freedom of worship to the adherents of all recognised religions. The census returns of 1911 were as follows —

Profession	Total	Per cent
Roman Catholics	32,983,664	95.13
Evangelical Protestants	123,253	0.36
Jews	34,324	0.11
Other professions	2,200	-

Not known	653,404	1.88

Of the Protestants, 22,500 belonged to the Waldensian Church of Piedmont, about 10,000 to the other Evangelical Italian Churches, and 30,000 to foreign Protestant bodies.

Italy is divided into 13 apostolical provinces, comprising 272 episcopal jurisdictions, viz., 1 patriarchate (Venice), 49 archbishoprics, 6 cardinal bishoprics, and 216 bishoprics, 11 abbeys, and a number of prelates without dioceses. Every archbishop or bishop is appointed by the Pope, on the advice of a committee of Cardinals, but the royal exequatur is necessary for his installation. In 1911, the number of parishes was 20,707. According to the census, 1911, the secular clergy numbered 67,147, the regulars (monks, lay brothers, nuns, &c.), 45,253, sacristans, &c., 10,761, persons employed at the Pontifical and Episcopal Courts, &c, 284<sup>1</sup> There were in 1911, 358 Evangelical pastors and ministers, and 54 Jewish Rabbis

The suppression of the religious corporations began for the old provinces in 1855, and was continued for the whole of the country by a law of July 7, 1866, and completed by the law of June 19, 1873, which extended the measure to the city and province of Rome Of the monastic edifices some were occupied by the State, others assigned to communes or provinces The corporations of Lombardy were privileged by the treaty of Zurich, and their lands and houses were left to the disposal of their individual members The administration of the revenue from the proceeds of land destined for charity or instruction now belongs to the communes, that from monastic parish church property in Rome, to the parish churches, that from property of foreign religious orders in Rome (400,000 lire) to the Holy See, while the remainder is administered by two institutes which pay the pensions and other dues, and provide (1) for beneficent work and for worship in Rome, and (2) for worship in the rest of Italy

Instruction

The State regulates public instruction, and maintains, either entirely or in conjunction with the communes and provinces, public schools of every grade

Schools in Italy may be classified under four heads, according as they provide (1) elementary instruction, (2) secondary instruction—classical, (3) secondary instruction—technical, (4) higher education

(1) Schools providing elementary instruction are of two grades Religious instruction is given to those whose parents request it Only the lower grade instruction is compulsory Every commune must have at least one lower-grade school for boys and one for girls, and no school with only one master should have more than seventy pupils Higher-grade elementary schools are required in communes having normal and secondary schools, and in those with over 4,000 inhabitants In both grades the instruction is free The age-limit of 6 to 9 exists for communes where there is no higher elementary school, but where there is such higher school, children are required to attend till they have completed the course of instruction, the compulsory age being thus raised to 12 years This law provides that illiterate persons shall be under various disabilities

(2) Secondary instruction—classical—is provided in the ginnasi and licei, the latter leading to the universities

(3) Secondary instruction—technical This is supplied by the technical schools, technical institutes, and institutes for the mercantile marine

(4) Higher education is supplied by the universities, by other higher institutes, and by special higher schools

According to the census of 1911 the smallest percentage of illiterates above six years was in Piedmont, male 9.1, female 12.8 (male and female 11.0), and the largest in Calabria, male 59.5, female 78.1 (male and female 69.6) Since then there has been much improvement, and now there are circondari (arrondissements), e.g. Domodossola, Pallanza, and Varallo in the province of Novara, and others in the provinces of Turin, Como, Cuneo, &c, where all young people twenty years of age can read and write.

Besides the universities there are also three institutions of university rank—the Institute of Higher Education in Florence, the Royal Scientific and Literary Academy in Milan, and the Higher Technical Institute of Milan.

There were, also, six higher institutes for commercial education (Turin, Genoa, Milan, Venice, Rome, and Bari), with 2,554 students in 1917-18; three higher schools of agriculture (Milan, Perugia, and Portici) with 370 students, five engineering colleges (Turin, Milan, Bologna, Rome and Naples) with 5,014 students, the higher naval college at Genoa with 277 students, the high school of forestry in Florence, with 20 students (1914-15), the school of social science in Florence, with 75 students (1917-18), the school for Oriental languages in Naples, with 53 students, 3 veterinary colleges (Turin, Milan, and Naples) with 180 students, 3 women's training colleges (Florence, Rome, and Naples), with 691 students

In 1919 there was set up a national institute for the instruction of illiterate adults

Justice and Crime

Italy has 5 Courts of Cassation (4 of which have jurisdiction exclusively in civil matters), and is divided for the administration of justice into 20 appeal court districts, subdivided into 162 tribunal districts, and these again into mandamenti, each with its own magistracy (Pretura), 1,535 in all. In 12 of the principal towns there are also Pretori urbani (15), who have jurisdiction exclusively in penal matters. For civil business, besides the magistracy above mentioned, Conciliatori have jurisdiction in petty suits.

The Pretori have jurisdiction concerning all misdemeanours (contravvenzioni) and offences (delitti) punishable by imprisonment (reclusion and detention) not exceeding six months, or banishment not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding 2,000 lire. The penal Tribunals have jurisdiction in the first instance in offences (delitti) for which the Code establishes a minimum penalty not exceeding five years of imprisonment and a maximum not exceeding ten years, or in offences punishable by a fine, exceeding 2,000 lire.

The Courts of Assize, which in all cases have juries, have jurisdiction in all proceedings concerning serious offences punishable by imprisonment for life (ergastolo), or by imprisonment (reclusion and detention), exceeding in the minimum five years, and in the maximum ten years. They have exclusive jurisdiction (save that the Senate is, on occasion, a high Court of Justice) concerning offences against the internal and external security of the State, and all press offences. Appeal is allowed to the penal Tribunals from the sentences of the Pretori, and to the Courts of Appeal from those of the penal Tribunals. There is no appeal from sentences of the Courts of Assize. The Court of Cassation in Rome has power to annul, for illegality, sentences passed by the inferior magistracy and to decide questions of jurisdiction or competency.

In 1918 (January 1) there were 30,704 males and 2,903 female prisoners, and 3,202 males and 1,441 females were placed in reformatories. At that date there were 167 central and arrondissement prisons, 70 penal establishments, 34 reformatories, and 8 colonies for persons under domiciliary restraint There were, besides, 1,414 cantonal prisons

Pauperism.

In Italy legal charity, in the sense of a right in the poor to be supported by the parish or commune, or of an obligation on the commune to relieve the poor, does not exist Public charity in general is exercised through the permanent charitable foundations, called 'Istituzioni pubbliche di beneficenza' (Opere pie), regulated by the law of July 17, 1890 The general results of an inquiry in 1900 were —Leaving out of account institutions intended for lending, or for the encouragement of saving (that is monti di pietà, monti frumentari, casse di prestanze agrarie), there were 27,078 opere pie, with a gross capital of about 2,205,000,000 francs Their net income amounted to 52,559,000 lire Added to this net income were casual legacies, contributions from private benefactors, subsidies from communes (for hospitals), &c, all of which receipts are spent annually, and thus the sum at the disposal of the opere pie in 1900 (last available data) amounted to 120,765,000 lire Between 1901 and 1917 the capital of all the benevolent institutions was increased by 385 million lire On December 31, 1918, the charitable foundations numbered 29,995, and their capital was 2,627,264,723 lire

Finance

Revenue and Expenditure

Direct taxes are those on lands, on houses, and on incomes derived from movable capital and labour The tax on houses is at the rate of 12.5 per cent (with three tenths additional) of the amount taxable, which is two thirds of the real annual value in the case of factories, and three-fourths in the case of dwelling houses The tax on incomes from movable wealth was raised to 20 per cent of the amount taxable The communes and provinces also tax lands and buildings The State grants to the communes one tenth of the proceeds of the tax on incomes as compensation for other communal revenues made over to the State by various laws

The principal indirect taxes are —the customs duties, the octroi, the taxes on manufactures, the salt and tobacco monopolies, lotto

I FRONTIER

The extent of the land frontier of Italy is as follows — French frontier 300 miles, Swiss 418, Austrian 566, frontier of San Marino 24, in all (exclusive of San Marino) 1,284 miles. The coast line of the peninsula measures 2,052 miles, of Sicily, 630, of Sardinia, 830, of Elba and the small islands, 648, the total length of coast is thus 4,160 miles.

On the Continental frontier of Italy the principal passes of the Alps are defended by fortifications. The basin of the Po is also studded with fortified places, the chief strong places in the region are the following — Casale, Piacenza, Verona, Mantua (these two belong to the old Austrian Quadrilateral), Venice, Alessandria. On the coasts and islands are the following fortified places — Vado, Genoa, Spezia, Monte Argentaro, Gaeta, works in the Straits of Messina, Taranto. To the north of Sardinia a group of fortified islands form the naval station of Maddalena. Rome is protected by a circle of forts.

II ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is compulsory and universal. The total period is 19 years, beginning at the age of twenty. The young men of the year are divided into 3 categories, the first being posted to the permanent army, the second also to the permanent army but with 'unlimited leave', and the third, that is those exempted from active service, to the territorial militia. The second category men form what is called the 'complementary force'.

The term of service in the ranks of the permanent army is 2 years for all arms. After passing through the ranks, the men are placed on 'unlimited leave,' i.e., they are transferred to the reserve, in which they remain until they have completed a total of 8 years' service. From the reserve the soldier passes to the mobile militia, the term of service in which is 4 years. After completing his time in the mobile militia he is transferred to the territorial militia, in which he remains 7 years, thus finishing his military service at the age of 39.

The second category recruits are regarded as belonging to the permanent army for the first 8 years of their service. During this period they receive from 2 to 6 months' training, which may be spread over several years. They then pass to the mobile militia, and afterwards to the territorial militia, the periods of service in each being the same as in the case of the first category soldiers. The men allotted to the third category, who are posted at once to the territorial militia, receive 30 days' training.

In Italy each regiment receives recruits from all parts of the country, and the troops change their stations by brigades every four years. On mobilisation regiments would be filled up by reservists from the districts in which they are quartered at the time. Reliefs are so arranged that at least half the reservists shall have previously served in the unit which they would join on mobilisation.

As provisionally fixed by the 'Gazzetta Ufficiale' of November 25, 1919, the future field army will be composed of 15 Territorial Army Corps, subdivided into 30 divisions and 2 cavalry divisions, and includes—the General Staff and Commands of the larger units, the Royal Carabinieri, Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, Aerial Corps, the Military Districts, Invalid and Veteran Corps, Mechanical Transport, Railway Transport, Medical Corps, Supply Corps, Administrative Services, Veterinary Corps, the Military Schools, Institutes and various Technical establishments, the Army and Navy Supreme Tribunal and the Military Penal Establishments.

Besides the above mentioned units permanently maintained on service, other units and corps that are generally formed at time of mobilisation for instructional duties of a temporary nature, or for internal duties, will form part of the Royal Army. The establishment of the active army in January, 1921, was 250,000 men.

The army corps consists of 2 divisions, the divisions of 2 brigades of infantry each of 3 battalions, and of artillery, engineers and auxiliary services. A regiment of Bersaglieri and a proportion of heavy artillery will be attached to each army corps.

Each regiment of Bersaglieri (light infantry) consists of 3 battalions of infantry and 1 battalion of cyclists, the cyclists being intended to supplement the cavalry in the field. The Alpini are frontier troops, specially organised to defend the mountain passes leading into Italy, they consist of 8 regiments (26 battalions) of Alpine infantry, and 2 regiments of 36 mountain artillery batteries.

Cavalry divisions each consist of 2 brigades of 2 regiments and of a horse artillery regiment. Each cavalry regiment comprises regimental headquarters, 2 squadron groups and 1 depot squadron.

The regiments of field artillery, heavy field artillery, heavy and coast artillery each comprise 1 headquarters, 4 groups and a depot. The mechanically transported artillery is composed of a headquarters, 5 groups and a depot. The regiment of horse artillery comprises 1 headquarters, 2 groups and a depot.

The Carabinieri are a force of military police. They are recruited by selection from the army, and they remain in the ranks of the force until they have completed 3 years' service. They then serve in the reserve of the Carabinieri for 4 years, after which they are transferred to the territorial militia for the remainder of their service, and are reckoned as a part of the army.

The total number of men mobilised by Italy during the war was 5,615,000. The casualties amounted to —

Dead in the zone of operations	424,921
„ in rear of the zone of operations	22,000
„ as prisoners of war	50,000
<hr/>
Total dead	496,921
„ wounded	949,576

The garrison of Libya consists of 3 infantry battalions, 4 companies mounted infantry, 2 field batteries and 2 mountain batteries as colonial troops recruited voluntarily in Italy for 3 years' service. The native army is to consist of 12 battalions, 6 squadrons, 6 mountain batteries, 3 camel squadrons, etc.

The Italians have a special African corps in Erythrea, consisting of 3 companies of white infantry and 10 native battalions, also 1 squadron of native cavalry, a local company of artillery (Italians), and a native mountain battery. Its total strength is about 8,600 of all ranks.

In Italian Somaliland there is a native corps of 15 infantry companies, 1 camel company and 1 artillery company, with Italian officers, and a body of military police. Total strength about 4,700 of all ranks.

III NAVY

The Italian Navy has undergone complete revision and reduction since the Armistice. It has been decided not to recondition the Dreadnought Leonardo de Vinci, which was refloated after the explosion which sank her at Taranto. The four super Dreadnoughts of 30,000 tons, which were to mount 8 15 in. guns, will not be completed, though one of them was launched. Two old battleships have been removed from the list, and the others will soon follow. The armoured cruisers are of little value. The list of light cruisers have been expanded by the accession of six enemy vessels. There have been considerable reductions in the personnel.

The naval administration is under the Minister of Marine, with an assistant secretary, a Chief of the Staff, a Superior Board which controls the general administration and advises on policy. Under its direction are the heads of the various services of the personnel, naval constructors (Genio Navale), ordnance, equipment, engineering, and civil administration. A civil officer administers the department of the merchant marine, which is under the direction of the assistant secretary for the navy. For purposes of local naval administration and defence the Italian littoral is divided into four departments: Spezia, Naples, Venice, Taranto. The vessels are apportioned, for administrative purposes, between the four departments. There are torpedo stations all round the Italian coasts, the head stations being at Genoa, Spezia, Maddalena, Gaeta, Messina, Taranto, Brindisi, Ancona, and Venice, but some of them are being demobilised. Summary of the Italian navy —

Some ships of no fighting value are excluded from the summary. The four pre-Dreadnoughts included in the summary in the following table are to be sold.

The tables which follow of the Italian fleet are arranged after the manner of other similar tables in this book.

The Ancona and two following are ex German vessels, and the last two ex Austrian vessels. The older Italian cruisers are the Campania, Liguria, and Puglia. There are 13 modern scouts or flotilla leaders, ranging upward from 1,000 tons to 3,400 tons, and a speed from 28 to 35 knots. Their guns are from 4in to 5 9in. One of them is the Premuda, ex German V 118.

The large flotillas of destroyers are composed of 30 and 35 knot vessels, very effective in character, and there are flotillas of quite modern torpedo boats. The destroyers include 2 ex German and 7 ex Austrian. The submarines number about 65, but 14 older boats are to be sold. A large number of motor submarine chasers were built.

Monitors Faà Di Bruno, Carso, Cucco, Monfalcone and Vodice, 1,650 tons, 2 15in., 4 14in. and 6 light guns.

The personnel normally consists of over 1,000 officers and 40,000 men, but the numbers have been reduced.

Production and Industry.

I AGRICULTURE

The systems of cultivation in Italy may be reduced to three — 1 The system of peasant proprietorship (coltivazione per economia o a mano propria), 2 That of partnership (colonia parziaria), 3 That of rent (affitto). Peasant proprietorship is most common in Piedmont and Liguria, but is found in many other parts of Italy. The system of partnership or colonia parziaria, more especially in the form of mezzadria, consists in a form of partnership between the proprietor and the cultivator. This system is general in Tuscany, the Marches, and Umbria. It is almost unknown in the Basilicata, little practised in Apulia, Calabria, and Sardinia, and has been entirely abandoned in the two most advanced centres of cultivation in the south, viz. — Barese and the province of Naples. Various modifications of the system exist in different parts of Italy. The system of rent (affitto) exists in Lombardy and Venetia. Large farms (la grande coltura) exist in the neighbourhood of Vercelli, Pavia, Milan, Cremona, Chioggia, Ferrara, Grosseto, Rome, Caserta, and in Apulia, the Basilicata, Calabria, and at Girgenti and Trapani in Sicily. In Italy generally the land is much subdivided.

The area of Italy comprises 71,652,592 acres. Of this area 65,995,000 acres are under crops and 5,662,500 acres are waste.

Number of proprietors in Italy, 1911. — Proprietors of lands, 1,326,736, of buildings, 732,484, of lands and buildings, 1,737,341, total, 3,796,561. Proprietors of lands and buildings (3,796,561) per 100 of population, 11, proprietors of lands (3,064,077) per square mile, 27.

The principal crops for 3 years were as follows —

In 1918 Italy had 989,786 horses, 949,162 asses, 496,743 mules, 6,289,741 cattle, 24,026 buffaloes, 2,338,926 pigs, 11,753,910 sheep, and 3,082,558 goats.

Silk culture, though flourishing most extensively in Lombardy, Piedmont and Venetia, is carried on all over Italy. In 1918 the silk cocoon crop was 29,560,000 kilos. On June 30, 1917, there were 2,081 establishments connected with the silk industry, 200 of which were devoted to the cultivation of the silkworm eggs, 1,703 to spinning and 169 to weaving.

In the year 1898-99 there were only 4 sugar factories, with an output of 5,972 metric tons, in 1919-20 there were 35, their output being 170,466 tons.

The value of the output of industrial chemical products in 1915 was 215,093,928 lire (in 1898, 26,134,000 lire).

II FORESTRY

The forest area (exclusive of chestnut plantations) is about 4,000,000 hectares. The yield from the forests was valued as follows in 1915 — Timber, 1,120,000 cubic metres at 39,280,000 lire, firewood, 4,500,000 cubic metres at 63,000,000 lire, charcoal, 4,528,500 quintals valued at 68,927,500 lire, total value, 171,207,500 lire (6,848,300*l*).

This total is exclusive of secondary produce valued at about 55 millions of lire annually. The forest produce thus amounts to 225 millions of lire. From 1867 to June 30, 1915, 33,555 hectares were replanted by or with assistance from the Government.

III MINES AND MINERALS

The Italian mining industry is most developed in Sicily (Caltanissetta), in Tuscany (Arezzo, Florence, and Grosseto), in Sardinia (Cagliari, Sassari, and Iglesias), in Lombardy (particularly near Bergamo and Brescia), and in Piedmont.

Production in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs, or 1,016 metric tons = 1,000 English tons) of metallic ores and other minerals in 1919 —

The quarries of Italy employed in 1916, 46,820 persons (1,257 females), the output of building and decorative stone being valued at 61,739,320 lire

IV FISHERIES

On December 31, 1915, the number of vessels and boats employed in fishing was 26,725, with an aggregate tonnage of 70,443. These numbers include 48 boats of 419 tons engaged in coral fishing. There were 162,755 fishermen, of whom 6,902 were engaged in deep-sea or foreign fishing. The value of the fish caught in 1916 (excluding foreign fishing) was estimated at 17,473,503 lire, the value obtained from tunny fishing was in 1915 2,221,331 lire, and from coral fishing 35,340 lire, the quantity being estimated at 327 kilogrammes.

V MANUFACTURES

The Italian industrial census of June 10, 1911, showed that there were 213,926 industrial establishments in the country having 2,304,438 employees, and possessing 1,620,404 horse power. The particulars as to the kind of industries were as follows —

Industries connected with products of agriculture, hunting, and fishing	135,461	640,856	293,942

For the determination of Customs' values, &c, in Italy there is a permanent central commission, comprising official members, representatives of commercial corporations, &c. The values recorded are those of the goods at the frontier, exclusive of import or export duties. For imports and exports the parties interested declare the value of the goods, their quantity, and the country of origin or destination. For imports there is recorded the gross weight in the case of goods subject to a duty of 20 francs per quintal (8s. 1½d. per cwt.) or less the net legal weight (i.e. with deduction of an official tare) in the case of goods subject to duty of 20 or 40 francs per quintal (8s. 1½d. to 16s. 3d. per cwt.), the actual net weight in the case of goods taxed at over 40 francs per quintal (16s. 3d. per cwt.). For exports the gross weight is usually given. Inaccurate declarations are punishable by fine if the inaccuracies are prejudicial to the Treasury.

The trade of Italy is regarded either as general or special. The general trade comprehends all imports from abroad, whether intended for consumption within the kingdom or merely for transit, and all exports to foreign countries, whether national nationalised or only issuing after transit. The special trade is restricted to imports for consumption and exports of national or nationalised merchandise. National merchandise consists of the produce and manufactures of the kingdom, while foreign imports on which the duties have been paid at the frontier are said to be nationalised. Transit trade denotes merchandise merely passing through the kingdom whether directly or after having been temporarily warehoused.

The treaty of 1883 provides for 'the most favoured nation treatment in matters of commerce and navigation between Italy and the United Kingdom, and Italy is a party to the International Sugar Convention.

The principal articles of import into Great Britain from Italy, and British exports to Italy (according to the Board of Trade returns) in 2 years were —

On August 12, 1912, a Law came into operation establishing life assurance as a State monopoly. The existing insurance companies were allowed to continue their operations for 10 years under certain conditions. The National Insurance Institute carries out the Government business. It started operations on January 1, 1913, and has already assumed large proportions, having absorbed the business of 24 insurance companies (15 foreign and 9 Italian). According to the law, the companies which at the end of 1911 were engaged in life insurance in the Kingdom which did not cede their business to the Government were given the privilege of continuing their business for not more than 10 years, with the obligation of turning over to the Government Institute 40 per cent of the business done after the beginning of the new regime. Only 3 Italian and 9 foreign companies continued business in Italy under these conditions and later one of these also ceded its business to the Institute. Branches of the National Institute of Insurance were established in every Province of Italy, 2,386 branches in all.

The insurance effected by the Institute in the years 1916 and 1917 was as follows —

Money, Weights, and Measures

The money, weights, and measures of Italy are the same as those of France, the names only being altered to the Italian form.

The Lira of 100 Centesimi, intrinsic value, 25 22½ to 1/ sterling

The coin in circulation consists of gold 10 lire, 20 lire, 50 lire and 100 lire pieces, of silver 50 cent, 1 lira, 2 lire, and 5 lire pieces, nickel 20 cent pieces, and bronze 1, 2, 5 and 10 cent pieces. Nickel coin is being substituted for bronze to a large amount. Bank notes of 25, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 lire are in circulation, also small notes, issued by the State (biglietti di Stato), for 5 and 10 lire. During the war there were issued cash notes (buoni di cassa) of 1 and 2 lire, in substitution for silver pieces of corresponding value.

San Marino

Embraced in the area of Italy is the independent Republic of San Marino, which claims to be the oldest State in Europe. Its legislative power is vested in the Great Council of 60 members elected by popular vote, a third of whom are renewable every three years, and two of whom are appointed every six months to act as Regents (Capitani reggenti). The regents exercise executive power, assisted by various nominated congresses, viz., Congresso Economico di Stato, Congresso dei Legali, Congresso degli Studi, Congresso militare. The frontier line is 24 miles in length, area is 38 square miles, and population (June 1920) 12,027. The revenue and expenditure for 1920-21 amounted to 2,000,000 and 2,150,000 lire respectively. There is no public debt. The military force contains 39 officers and 950 men. The chief exports are wine, cattle and stone. A new treaty of friendship with the kingdom of Italy was concluded June 28, 1907, revised in 1908 and in 1914. The Republic has extradition treaties with England, Belgium, Holland, and United States. San Marino has bronze and silver currency coined in Italy. 210,000 lire in silver and 119,000 lire in bronze.

FOREIGN DEPENDENCIES.

Colony of Eritrea.

The dominion of Italy on the coast of the Red Sea extends from Cape Kasar (18° 2' N) to Cape Dumeirah on the strait of Bab-el Mandel (12° 30' N). The length of coast is about 670 miles. The area is about 45,800 square miles, and the whole population is estimated at 450,000, inclusive of about 3,000 European, of whom 2,600 are Italian (exclusive of the military forces) and 400 of other nationalities. Massawah has 2,645 inhabitants, of whom about 400 are European, mainly Italian. The seat of the Government is Asmara, a modern town 7,765 feet above the sea level, with 14,711 inhabitants (2,500 European). The religions of the native population are the Christian (Coptic rite) and the Mohammedan. There are some Roman Catholics and a few Pagans. Tigrean (an Abyssinian dialect) is spoken in the plateau, and Arabic in the lowlands.

The Italian possessions on the Red Sea are constituted as the Colony of Eritrea, with the management of its own finances and an autonomous administration in 8 commissariats, as follows —

Commissariat	Area in square miles	Total Population	Capital
Hamassen	1,160	60,274	Asmara
Massowah	5,000	47,910	Massowah
Assab	5,500	8,926	Assab

Cheren	8,800	73,737	Cheren
Barca	12,700	58,540	Agordat
Gasc and Setit	5,500	26,966	Barentu

Military force 233 commissioned and non commissioned officers and 4,030 men, exclusive of 5 native battalions provisionally in service in Tripolitania, Crenaica, and Italian Somaliland, and exclusive of the police force of the colony

In the Italian dependencies the central government is represented by a civil governor who is nominated by the King and is under the direction of the Minister for the Colonies

Governor —Marquis G. Gerina Feroni (1919)

For the financial year 1920-21 the revenue and expenditure of the Colony of Eritrea were estimated at Colonial revenue, 10,132,040 lire, State contribution, 6,650,000 lire, extraordinary revenue, 5,224,400 lire, total revenue, 22,006,440 lire, expenditure, civil administration, 12,049,820 lire, military, 3,857,290 lire, extraordinary expenditure, 6,099,330 lire, total expenditure, 22,006,440 lire

For climatic and agricultural purposes the country must be divided into two zones, the lowlands along the sea coasts and in the plains, where the tropical climate is very hot and the rains fall in winter, and the uplands, where the climate is cool and sometimes cold and the rains fall in summer. Both in the lowlands and the uplands the annual rain is sufficient for the successful raising of the crops. Irrigation works are being carried on in the lower zone in order to facilitate the intensive production of Italian farmers. Pasture is abundant, but the pastoral population is partly nomadic. Camels, oxen, sheep, goats, are common, and the produce, consisting of meat, hides, butter, supplies articles of local trade. Pearl fishing is carried on at Massawah and the Dahlak archipelago to the annual value of from 250,000 lire for pearls and 800,000 lire for mother-of-pearl. A very promising trade is being carried out in palm nuts. The exportation of these nuts in 1917 was 1,089,500 lire. There are gold mines worked successfully in several localities of Ha nasien. Other minerals have recently been found, including petroleum.

At Massawah the imports by land and sea, the exports, and the tonnage entered were as follows —

		1915	1916	1917	1918
Imports	Lire	23,623,400	21,047,777	47,591,648	108,811,379
Exports	"	14,605,301	11,299,259	21,666,428	85,354,452
Transit	"	5,646,617	567,217	2,698,293	5,418,090
Tonnage and.	Tons	356,258	286,942	167,327	166,078

Through the land frontier the imports in 1918 amounted to 22,864,290 lire, and the exports to 12,786,784 lire

There are 74 miles of railway from Massawah to Asmara (end of 1912), and now the line is being taken to Keren (60 miles) and to Agordat (54 miles). There are 12 post offices. There is a telegraph line of 514 miles in length. There are 863 miles of telephone lines. Two wireless telegraph stations have been opened at Massawah and Assab. They communicate with the radiotelegraphic system of Italian Somaliland and also with Italy (Coltano). There is, thus, through wireless communication between Italy and Italian Somaliland, via Massawah.

The legal currency consists of Italian coins and those of the Latin Union, but in actual circulation there are still Maria Theresa dollars. The Italian mint in 1918 issued a new silver coin, the Tallero d'Italia, the weight of which is 28.0668 grammes.

Italian Somaliland.

The Colony and Protectorates of Italian Somaliland have an area of 139,430 sq. miles and a population of about 650,000. They extend along the east coast of Africa from British Somaliland to the course of the Juba. The inland boundaries are determined under the Treaty of May 16, 1908, between Italy and Abyssinia, by a line (only partially demarcated) from Dolo on the Juba to the confluence of the Juba with the Daua, thence to the Webi Shebeli (comprising in Benadir the territory of the Somali tribe Baddi Addo and dependent clans), and finally to the Anglo Abyssinian frontier fixed by protocol of May 14 and June 4, 1897. As a result of the Treaty of 1915 and the Colonial rearrangements consequent on the war, Britain will grant Italy territories on the right bank of the Juba with the port of Kismayu. Italy thus controls the whole of the Juba.

Italian Somaliland comprises (I) The Protectorates, viz.—(1) The Sultanate of the Muxatins (Sultan Osman Mahmud), from Bender Ziade, the most northerly point belonging to Italy on the Gulf of Aden, to Cape Gabbee on the Indian Ocean ( $8^{\circ} 13' N$  lat.), with an Italian Commissioner, resident at Alula, capital of the Sultanate; (2) the territory of the Nogal, from Cape Gabbee to Cape Guad ( $6^{\circ} 47' N$  lat.), formerly occupied by the Mad Mullah; (3) the Sultanate of Obbia (Sultan Ali Iusuf), from Cape Guad to the northern boundary of the colony of Benadir, determined by a line which ends at the sea near the wells of Fah (about  $4^{\circ} 30' N$  lat.), with an Italian Commissioner resident at Obbia, capital of the Sultanate. (II) The Colony formerly called 'Benadir' but now officially known as 'Southern Italian Somaliland,' which extends from  $4^{\circ} 30' N$  lat to the mouth of the Juba, and comprises the following four administrative divisions—(1) Medio Shebeli, with Afgor (population 3,000) as capital, (2) Basso Shebeli and Gosha, with Brava (8,000) as capital, (3) Alto Shebeli, with Mahaddi (5,000) as capital, and (4) Alto Juba, with Burdoa (2,000) as capital. Mogadisho (population 14,000), capital of the Colony, with its territory, has been placed under the direct dependence of the Governor.

The Colony is administered by a civil governor who resides at Mogadisho. A royal decree of December 8, 1910 provides for the minting of silver coins of 1 rupee,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{2}$  rupee for Italian Somaliland, of the value of 15 rupees to 17 sterling.

The principal occupations of the people are cattle rearing and agriculture. Formerly only the lower classes of the population cultivated the fields, but in Southern Somaliland, after the Italian occupation of the interior, the shepherds were turned into farmers, and now the whole country near the banks of the Webi Shebele is inhabited and cultivated by the higher classes also of the Somali tribes. The most productive districts are Gheledi, Mobilen and Bur Acaba. But in Northern Somaliland the Mijertins rear camels and sheep. Exports (1918) are 6,064,782 lire, imports, 13,872,370 lire. Imports are cottons, sugar, rice, petroleum, yarn, timber, exports, dura, maize, gum, hides, butter, cotton. Animal produce is exported to Italy, Aden and Zanzibar, whence it is shipped to Europe, America, or India. Length of roads 1,135 miles, steamship service on the Juba River from Kismayu to Bardera. A monthly service of steamers between Genoa and Port Durban, and the East African line of the Indian Steamship Company, Cowajee Dinshaw, from Aden to Zanzibar, connects the colony with Italy, the former directly, the latter through Aden and the India lines. Military force, 67 (Italian) officers and 2,879 (coloured) men.

Governor — Carlo Riven (1919)

The budget of Italian Somaliland for the year 1920-21 is as follows: revenue proper of the colony, 2,082,000 lire; State contribution, 4,638,000 lire; extraordinary revenue, 4,257,000 lire; total, 10,977,000 lire. Civil expenditure, 4,283,207 lire; military, 2,029,700 lire; special expenditure, 294,000 lire; extraordinary expenditure, 4,370,092 lire; total, 10,977,000 lire.

Thirteen wireless telegraph stations are working in the Colony connecting the principal coast and inland towns. The wireless station at Mogadisho communicates with Italy, via Massawah.

There are in the Colony 6 principal post offices (Mogadisho, Merca, Biava, Jumbo, Baidoa, and Mahaddei), but postal business is carried out at every station. A railway will shortly be constructed from Mogadisho to Baidoa.

Tripoli and Cyrenaica

(LIBIA ITALIANA)

Italian Libya lies along the north coast of Africa between Tunis on the west and Egypt on the east, in longitude from about 9° to 23° east. The extreme northerly point of Libya is at about the parallel of latitude 33° north, the southernmost point is unknown, as the territory runs into the unmapped Sahara indefinitely. According to an arrangement with France (September 12, 1919) as a result of the Treaty of 1915, the frontier extends in a curve from west of Ghadames to south of Tummo. On the Egyptian frontier Italy has obtained from Britain Jarabab.

Government — Tripoli fell under Turkish domination in the sixteenth century, and though, in 1714, the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country was in 1835 proclaimed a Turkish vilayet. In September, 1911, a quarrel broke out between Turkey and Italy, and the latter invaded Tripoli and established an army there. On November 5, 1911, a decree was issued annexing Tripoli, and on February 23, 1912, the Italian Chamber passed the Bill which ratified the decree of annexation. The war, nevertheless, continued until October 18, 1912, when the Treaty of Ouchy was signed, by which the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli was established. This has now been recognised by the Great Powers.

For administrative and military purposes the country is divided (decree of May 17, 1919) into two independent districts, Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, with their respective capitals at Tripoli and Benghazi, all under the jurisdiction of the minister of colonies. Each province or district has its governor, appointed by the King upon the nomination of the minister of colonies. Immediately under the governor is the secretary general for civil and political affairs, and the commander of the forces. To the secretary general belongs the duty of organising and supervising the civil administration within the civil zone. In both provinces natives have equal rights with Italians, and in each there is a small local parliament elected by all citizens.

Governor of Tripolitania —Luigi Mercatelli (1920)

Governor of Cyrenaica —Giacomo De Maitino (1919)

Area and Population —The entire area of the territory is estimated at about 406,000 square miles. According to a census taken on August 3, 1911, there were 523,176 natives, of whom 29,761 were in Tripoli town. It is estimated that the total population is about 6 millions, of whom some 30 per cent are Arabs, 40 per cent Negroes, 23 per cent Jews, and about 10 per cent Europeans. The civil European population numbers 10,000 or 12,000, mostly Maltese and Italians. Arabic is generally spoken, and both Italian and Arabic are the official languages. The principal towns are on the coast, Tripoli, with 73,000 inhabitants, Benghazi with 35,000, Derna, with 8,000 inhabitants, and Homs, inland are the caravan halting places Ghadames, Murzûk, and Ghat.

Justice —In both districts justice is administered by Mahommedan or rabbinic tribunals, and by regional tribunals, presided over by civil magistrates who are assisted by Italian or Mussulman assessors according as the cases concern Italians or native subjects. In civil and commercial matters the laws of the Koran or the Talmud are in force for natives, and in penal matters, the judicial law of Italy holds good. The Court of second instance is the Assize Court, which deals with more serious cases. The Royal Court of Appeal for Libya held its first session in December, 1912.

Finance —For the financial year 1920–21 the revenue and expenditure of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica were estimated at Colonial revenue, 24,086,000 lire, State contribution, 55,499,210 lire, extraordinary revenue, 47,610,800 lire, total revenue, 127,196,010 lire. Civil expenditure, 38,241,210 lire, military expenditure, 41,344,000 lire, extraordinary expenditure, 47,610,800 lire, total expenditure, 127,196,010 lire.

Defence —The military force in Tripolitania consists of 1,030 officers and 25,200 men (9,120 natives and 16,080 Italians), that in Cyrenaica of 540 officers and 17,370 men (10,550 natives and 6,820 Italians).

Production and Industry —Tripolitania has four zones, the first of which, along the sea, is covered with palm, olive, lemon, and fruit trees. The second is formed by the highlands of Gebel and Tarhuna, the former has olive groves and palm and fig trees, while cereals and saffron are also grown. The country, however, is rather barren. The Tarhuna land is rich in esparto grass. The rest of the second zone, which includes the hills of Mesellata and Bondaia, as well as numerous valleys, is most fertile, and olive trees are abundant. The third zone consists chiefly of oases and is rich in palms. The oases (of which Ghadames is the most important) are some distance apart. The fourth zone is covered with palms, figs, vines, and almonds.

In Cyrenaica, olives and cypresses predominate. Pasturage is abundant and cattle could be bred on a vast scale. Bananas are grown at Derna. Barley is the chief food of the people.

Commerce.—There is a considerable caravan trade between Benghazi and Wadai and between Tripoli and Central Sudan when the routes are free from raiders. An important article of trade is ostrich feathers, which are brought overland from Central Africa, and exported to Paris and London from Tripoli to the value of 50,000*l* annually, and 20,000*l* from Benghazi.

Imports and exports for 5 years —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
Imports	£ 2,004,730	£ 1,161,327	£ 2,416,964	£ 3,994,402	£ 3,900,000
Exports	212,079	98,429	208,791	300,309	3,256

Sponge fishing was started in 1885. In good years the returns from the industry amount to some 2,000,000 lire (£80,000) out of a total of 10,000,000 lire (£400,000) for the whole Mediterranean. The two fishing seasons in Libia are from November to February, and from March to October, the latter being the more important. During the year 1919-20 38 boats engaged in fishing, the sponges collected totalled 32,000 kilos, valued at 2,500,000 lire.

In 1917, 4,527 steamers with a tonnage of 2,831,167 entered and cleared at the ports of Libia, in 1914, there were 8,203 steamers of 6,446,377 tons.

Communications.—The principal means of communication inland are the caravans which follow long frequented routes. Tripoli (town) is connected by telegraph cable with Malta, and by land lines with Gabes (Tunis). In 1912 two Italian cables were laid, one between Syracuse and Tripoli, and the other between Syracuse and Benghazi.

Total length of railways, 157 miles. The principal lines in Tripolitania are a line 58 miles in length, running from the coast to Hensair el Abiat, another, 75 miles long, along the coast, from Tripoli to Zuara, and a third, 12 miles long, from Tripoli to Taginra. In Cyrenaica a line 20 miles long runs from Benghazi inland. In both districts some 600 miles of line are in operation.

In 1918, 57,597 parcels were sent and 105,381 received through the parcel post. The postal savings bank had deposits to the value of 379,964*l* and withdrawals of 314,479*l*, leaving a balance of 65,485*l*.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia, the Banco di Sicilia, the Banco di Napoli, the Banco di Roma and other banks carry on financial operations.

There is a British Consul at Benghazi, and a Vice Consul at Homs.

Concession of Tientsin.—The Italian concession of Tientsin, under the agreement with China of June 7, 1902, lies on the left bank of the Peiho and has an area of about half a square kilometer with a population of 10,017 (Chinese, 9,887; Italians, 51, other Europeans, 79) in 1915. It contains a village and salt pits. Revenue 1915-16, 433,532 lire; expenditure, 513,002 lire.

Aegean Islands.—During the war with Turkey in 1912, Italy occupied as base, the islands of Egco, Rhodes and the other small islands of the Sporadi group (Stamperia, Scarpanto, Caso, Piscopi, Nisiro, Colimno, Liro, Patino, Cos, Simi, Calchi and Lipso—the Dodecanese). The total population in 1917 was 100,198. The Treaty of Peace with Turkey allots these islands to Italy, but when the Treaty is signed Italy will cede them to Greece, with the exception of Rhodes.

JAPAN

(NIPPON)

Reigning Sovereign

THE Japanese claim that their empire was founded by the first Emperor Jimmu Tennō, 660 B.C., and that the dynasty founded by him still reigns. It was revived in the year 1868 (the first year of the Meiji), when the now ruling (de jure) sovereign overthrew, after a short war, the power of the Shogun (the de facto sovereign), who had held the ruling power in successive families, since the twelfth century, and in 1871 the feudal system (Hōken Seiji) was entirely suppressed. The Emperor bears title of Tennō, but the appellation by which he is called in relation to external affairs is 'Kōtei,' a word of Chinese origin. Only foreigners make use of the poetical title 'Mikado.'

Emperor of Japan — Yoshihito (Harunomia), born at Kyoto, August 31, 1879, succeeded his father, Mutsuhito, July 30, 1912, married, May 10, 1900, to Princess Sadako, born June 25, 1884, daughter of Prince Kujō.

Children of the Mikado — I, Prince Hirohito, born April 29, 1901 (Crown Prince) II, Prince Yasuhito, born June 25, 1902 III, Prince Nobuhito, born January 3, 1905 IV, Prince Takahito, born December 2, 1915

Sisters of the Mikado — I, Princess Masako, born Sept 30, 1888, married, April 27, 1908, to Prince Tsunehisa II, Princess Fusako, born Jan 29, 1890, married, April 29, 1909, to Prince Narihisa III, Princess Nobuko, born August 7, 1891, married May 6, 1910, to Prince Yasuhiko IV, Princess Toshiko, born May 11, 1896, married May 18, 1915, to Prince Naruhiko

By the Imperial House Law of February 11, 1889, the succession to the throne has been definitely fixed upon the male descendants. In case of failure of direct descendants, the throne devolves upon the nearest Prince and his descendants. The civil list is fixed at 4,500,000 yen.

Constitution and Government

By the Constitution of February 11, 1889, the Emperor combines in himself the rights of sovereignty, and exercises the whole of the executive powers with the advice and assistance of the Cabinet Ministers, who are responsible to him, and are appointed by himself. There is also a Privy Council, who are consulted by the Emperor on important matters of State. The Emperor can declare war, make peace, and conclude treaties. The Emperor exercises the legislative power with the consent of the Imperial Diet. It is his prerogative to give sanction to laws, to convoke the Imperial Diet, to open, close, and prorogue it, and to dissolve the House of Representatives. The Imperial Diet consists of two Houses, a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. Every law requires the consent of the Imperial Diet.

Both Houses may respectively initiate projects of law, can make representations to the Government as to laws or upon any other subject, and may present addresses to the Emperor.

The House of Peers (373 members) is composed of (1) male members of the Imperial family of full age, twelve in number, (2) princes and marquises of the age of 25 and upwards (13 princes and 36 marquises), (3) counts, viscounts, and barons of the age of 25 and upwards, and who have been elected by the members of their respective orders, never to exceed one fifth of each order (103 counts and 17 members, 397 viscounts and 69 members, 429 barons and 62 members), (4) persons above the age of 30 years, who have been nominated members by the Emperor for meritorious services to the State or for erudition (5 viscounts, 23 barons and 91 others), (5) persons who shall have been elected in each Fu and Ken from among and by the 15 male inhabitants thereof, above the age of 30 years, paying therein the highest amount of direct national taxes on land, industry, or trade, and have been nominated by the Emperor. The term of membership under (3) and (5) is seven years, under (1), (2), and (4) for life. The number of members under (4) and (5) must not exceed the number of other members.

The members of the House of Representatives number 381, a fixed number being returned from each electoral district. The proportion of the number of members to the population is one to about 136,522. Voting is by secret single ballot. Electors are (1) male Japanese subjects of not less than full 25 years of age, (2) permanent and actual residents in the electoral district for not less than a year, (3) and paying land tax to the amount of not less than 3 yen in a year for more than one year, or direct taxes other than land tax to the amount of not less than 3 yen in a year for more than two years or of land tax together with other direct national taxes to the amount of not less than 3 yen in a year for more than two years. In general, male Japanese subjects of not less than 30 years of age are eligible to the House of Representatives, without any qualification arising from payment of taxes. Disqualified for membership are the Imperial Household officials, priests, students, teachers of elementary schools, government contractors, election officials. The President and Vice President of the House of Peers are nominated by the Emperor from among the members, and President and Vice President of the House of Representatives are nominated by the Emperor from among three candidates, elected by the House. The Presidents of both Houses receive an annual salary of 5,000 yen, Vice Presidents, 3,000 yen, elected and nominated members of the House of Peers and members of the House of Representatives, 2,000 yen, besides travelling expenses. The Imperial Diet, which must meet annually, has control over the finances.

At the elections held in May, 1920, the following parties were returned to the Diet — Sayukawai (Government Party), 281, Kenseikai, 109, Kokuminto (Popular Party), 29, Koshin Club, 25, and Independents, 19.

The Cabinet (formed on September 30, 1918) consists of the following members —

Prime Minister — Takashi Hara

Interior — Takejiro Tokonami

Foreign Affairs — Count Yasuya Uchida

War — General Guchi Tanaka

Marine — Admiral Tomosaburo Katō

Finance — Baron Korekiyo Takahashi.

Minister of Justice — Count Ohki

Agriculture and Commerce —Tatsuo Yamamoto.

Education —Tokugorô Nakabashi

Communications —Utarô Noda

Railways —H Motoda.

Local Government

For local administration Japan (except Hokkaidô or Yezo, Chosen, formerly Korea or Chao psien, Karafuto or Japanese Sakhalin, and Taiwan or Formosa) is divided into prefectures ('Fu' and 'Ken'). The prefectures are subdivided into municipalities ('Shi') and counties ('Gun'), and the counties are again subdivided into towns ('Chô') and villages ('Son'). Okinawa Prefecture and some islands have, however, special organisations. Municipality, town, and village are the units of local government. These administrative divisions form at the same time local corporations of the same names. In each prefecture there are a governor ('Chiji'), a prefectural assembly ('Fu kwan' or 'Ken kwan'), and a prefectural council ('Fu Sanji kwan' or 'Ken sanjikwan'), of which the governor is president, in each county a sheriff, a county assembly, and a county council, of which the sheriff is the president, in each municipality a mayor, a municipal assembly, and a municipal council, of which the mayor is the president, and in each town or village a chief magistrate and a town or village assembly. Prefectural, county, municipal, town and village assemblies give decision mainly upon financial matters. The prefectural and county councils give decision upon matters delegated by the prefectural and county assemblies respectively, and upon matters of pressing necessity when the respective assemblies are not in actual session.

The qualifications of the prefectural electors are (1) citizenship and residence in the prefecture, (2) payment of the direct national tax to the amount of not less than 3 yen for one year in the prefecture. Persons eligible for election must pay direct national tax to the amount of not less than 10 yen. Citizenship is shared by all male Japanese subjects not less than 25 years of age, who for two years (1) reside in the municipality, or town, or village, (2) share its burden, and (3) pay land tax or not less than 2 yen direct national tax annually in it. The governor and sheriff are appointed by Government, the mayor is that one of three candidates elected by the municipal assembly who has obtained the Emperor's approval, and chief magistrate of town or village is one who has been elected by the town or village assembly and has obtained the governor's approval.

Hokkaidô has a governor and a special organisation. Chosen has a Governor-General. The peninsula is administered in 13 Do or provinces, these being sub divided into 329 Tuand Yun or districts. Taiwan (Formosa) also has a governor general, who is invested with very extensive powers. The island is divided into 12 local divisions (Chô), each of which has a chief magistrate. Karafuto is divided into 5 local divisions (Chô).

Area and Population.

The Empire consists of the five principal islands of Honshiu (mainland), Kiushiu, Shikoku, Hokkaidô (Yezo), and Taiwan (Formosa), besides the Chishima (Kuriles), Sado, Oki, Awaji, Iki, Tsushima, Riukiu (Luchu Islands), Ogasawarajima (Bonin Islands), Hôkotô (Pescadores) islands, the peninsula Chosen (Korea) and the southern half of the island of Karafuto (Sakhalin) Total area is shown as follows —

Administratively there exists a division into 47 prefectures. There is also a division into 636 rural districts, 79 cities, 1,333 towns, and 10,839 villages (1918).

Taiwan (Formosa) and Hōkotō (the Pescadores) were ceded by China in accordance with the treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895, and Japanese Karafuto was ceded by Russia by the Treaty of Portsmouth, N. H., in 1905. By the same Treaty of Peace the Russian Government ceded to Japan the lease of Port Arthur, Ta-lien, and adjacent territory and waters, and also the railway between Chan Chun and Port Arthur, and the coal mines worked in connection therewith. In March, 1915, the Chinese Government agreed to extend the lease of the territory on Liaotung Peninsula, including Port Arthur and Dalny, to 99 years. The Sino-Japanese Treaty of December 22, 1905, provided for the interests of China and Japan with respect to Manchuria. By a treaty between Japan and Korea on Aug. 23, 1910, the Korean Territory was annexed to the Empire of Japan.

By an agreement signed May 25, 1915, Japan obtained from China exclusive mining rights in Eastern Mongolia, and the right to settle in the province, and in Shantung the transference of all mining and railway privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Germans, also the extension of the lease of Port Arthur to 99 years, and a joint control over certain industrial works in which they have a large financial interest, besides other privileges. (For full details, see Introduction to THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916.)

Religion (excluding Formosa)

There is absolute religious freedom. The chief forms of religion are—(1) Shintoism, with 14 sects, (2) Buddhism, with 12 sects (56 denominations). There is no State religion, and no State support. In 1917 Shinto shrines numbered 49,446 (besides 67,418 minor shrines), and the priests, 14,732. Buddhist temples, 71,702 (besides 36,247 minor temples), high priests and priestesses, 51,363. There were, besides, 2,521 licensed preachers and 1,450 churches and preaching stations of the Roman Catholic, Greek, Catholic, and Protestant Churches. Since 1891 the Roman Catholics have had an episcopate of one archbishop and three suffragan bishops. There are shrines dedicated to the eminent ancestors of the Imperial House, and to meritorious subjects, these are independent of any religious sect, and some of them are supported by State or local authorities.

Instruction

Elementary education is compulsory. The number of children of school age (6-14) on March 31, 1915, was 9,061,921. The following are the educational statistics for 1915-16 —

I ARMY

Service in the army (or navy) is universal and compulsory. Liability commences at the age of 17 and extends to the age of 40, but actual service begins at 20. All those physically capable of bearing arms are divided into two classes, the 'fit,' and the 'absolutely fit.' The numbers necessary for the first line (or active army), called Gen eki, are taken solely from the 'absolutely fit.' Service in the ranks is for 2 years in the infantry, 3 in all other arms, then for 5 (or 4) years and 4 months in the reserve (Yobi). One year volunteers are admitted. Reservists are called out twice for training during their reserve service, for 60 days on each occasion. Having completed 7 years and 4 months in the first line, including its reserve, the men are transferred to the second line, called Kōbi. Service in the Kōbi is for 10 years, with two trainings of 60 days each in the whole period. At the end of their Kōbi service the men are in the 38th year of their age, and they are passed into the Kokumin, which is the territorial or home defence army. In this they serve for 2 years and 8 months, to complete their total service of 20 years.

The reserve for making good the waste of war, or supplementary reserve, is called Hojū. It is composed of the balance of the 'absolutely fit' recruits not required for the first line, and of as many of those classed as 'fit' as may be required to make up a certain fixed number. They all serve in the Hojū for 7 years and 4 months, during which they have a first training of 90 days, and two subsequent trainings of 60 days each. After completion of this period of their service they are passed to the Kōbi, in which they serve for ten years, like the men who have passed through the first line. Like them also they are finally passed to the Kokumin for 2 years and 8 months to complete their army service.

The Kokumin is divided into two 'bans.' The first ban comprises all the men who have passed, as shown above, through the first line and landwehr, or through the supplementary reserve and landwehr, and who therefore have only 2 years and 8 months to spend in the Kokumin. The second ban is the levy en masse of all those capable of bearing arms. It includes (1) those who though 'fit' are not required for the Hojū, (2) those who for various reasons have been exempted from military service, and (3) the young men between 17 and 20 years of age who have not been called up. None of these classes receive any military training, but they can be drawn on in case of national emergency.

The partially trained men who have been passed into the Kōbi from the Hojū are not included in the fighting units of the Second Line. They supply the large number of men required for the transport service on mobilisation, and for the expansion of other departmental corps.

The field army of Japan consists of 21 divisions, including the guard, 4 independent cavalry brigades, 3 independent brigades of field artillery (each of 12 batteries of 6 guns), 3 independent divisions of mountain guns, and 6 regiments of heavy field artillery, each of 24 guns.

Two infantry regiments form a brigade, and two brigades (12 battalions) a division. The artillery consists of a regiment of field artillery (6 batteries of 6 guns) supplemented by heavy or mountain guns as required (also probably by 3 batteries of Kōbi artillery). A regiment of cavalry of 3 squadrons, with 4 machine guns, and a battalion of engineers, complete the division. Four infantry, and 4 artillery, ammunition columns, 6 field hospitals, 4 supply columns, and 1 remount depot accompany each division in the field. The war strength of a division is reckoned at 18,700 officers and men, 4,800 horses, 86 guns, and 1,674 vehicles.

The strength of an independent brigade of cavalry is 2 regiments, each of 4 squadrons and a battery of 8 machine guns, total about 1,650 men and 1,680 horses. The strength of an independent artillery brigade of 12 batteries is about 2,500 men and 1,000 horses. Divisions are grouped directly into armies, 3 to 5 divisions forming an army of from 80,000 to 180,000 men. The war strength of the army may be taken at about 600,000 combatants, including Kōbi troops detailed for the lines of communication.

The active army consists at present of 76 regiments (228 battalions) of infantry, 27 regiments of cavalry (89 squadrons), 150 field batteries, 9 mountain batteries, 19 battalions of garrison artillery, 19 battalions of engineers each of 3 companies, 12 railway companies, 6 telegraph companies, 1 aero battalion, and 38 companies of train troops.

The Kōbi comprises 228 battalions, 57 squadrons, 114 field batteries, 12 battalions of garrison artillery, and 19 battalions of engineers, and would on mobilisation form independent divisions.

The Japanese Islands are divided into military districts, corresponding to the divisions of the army, and the district is the unit of administration as well as of territorial command. Each division is supplied with recruits from its own district, except the Guards, whose infantry recruits are selected from the whole country, the other arms of the Guard division are recruited from the large district of the 1st division. Abroad there are the separate division of Formosa, and the small garrisons of Saghalien and Tsushima, also some 25,000 to 30,000 men in Korea and Manchuria. Between July and November, 1918, 60,000 men were dispatched to Siberia. At the end of 1919 this force had been reduced to 39,000 men, but was again increased in the spring of 1920 to about 50,000 men.

The Emperor is the head and supreme commander of the army, and also of the navy. He nominates the War Minister (always a general officer of high rank), the Chief of the General Staff, the Director of Military Schools, and the Members of the Military Council.

The arm of the Japanese infantry is the improved Arisaka rifle, calibre, 6.5 mm (256"), a Mauser with an altered chamber. The cavalry are armed with a carbine of similar construction. The field gun is a 7.5" shielded Krupp of 7.5 cm calibre, which fires a shrapnel of 14.3 lb. The mountain artillery has a gun of the same calibre firing a lighter shell. There are a certain number of field howitzer batteries, armed with 4.6" and 5.9" howitzers, firing shells of about 44 lb and 80 lb respectively. A 4" gun for heavy field batteries is being introduced.

No returns of the peace strength of the Japanese army are published, but the total apparently amounts to rather over 250,000 of all ranks.

The military budget for 1921-22 amounted to 39,450,000.

II NAVY

The coast of Japan is divided into five maritime districts having their headquarters at Yokosuka, Kure, Sasebo, Maizuru, and Chinkai.

The Japanese Fleet is being expanded in pursuance of the programme of 1916-17, supplemented by a new programme which was introduced in 1920, but has not yet been put in hand. The 1916-17 plan was to provide a strength of 8 battleships and 8 battle cruisers, not any one of which should be of greater age than 8 years. Four battleships have been put in hand, as well as four battle cruisers, of which the last was laid down in February, 1920. These ships are shown in the table below. The 1920 programme proposes 4 additional battleships and 4 battle cruisers, as well as 12 light cruisers and destroyers and submarines, all to be completed by 1927-28.

It is, of course, obvious that if the Japanese Fleet can be maintained on the very modern basis of an age of 8 years there will also be a large reserve of ships a little older, such as are maintained in the active lists of other Powers. Of the pre Dreadnoughts in the list 5 are practically obsolete.

The Kawasaki shipbuilding yard at Kobe and the Mitsubishi establishment at Nagasaki are receiving new plant, and there are lesser building yards at Maizuru, Uraga, Sasebo and Osaka, as well as the armour and armament factory at Kure. Japan has thus made herself independent of Europe for the building and arming and equipment of her warships. Experience has been gained of the finest English shipbuilding work, and now every class of vessel is built in Japan. The Navy is highly scientific and modern in every respect. The officers are energetic and capable, and the men are of the best class.

A statement of the Japanese fleet similar to that given for other navies is —

Production and Industry (exclusive of Formosa).

About three fifths of the arable land is cultivated by peasant proprietors and the remaining portion of it by tenants. According to the official report of January 1, 1920, taxed land owned by private persons and local corporations was in chō (1 chō = 2,4507 acres) 15,286,246, of which under rice fields, 2,922,575, other cereals, 2,501,785, forests, 8,048,889, plains, 1,336,545, pasturages, 50,966.

The forest area in 1917 was 18,783,516 chō, of which 7,288,261 belonged to the State, and 1,303,118 to the Imperial household.

The following are some agricultural statistics for three years —

Of the total steamships entered in 1919, 838 vessels of 3,566,280 tons were British, 238 of 293,411 tons Russian, 39 of 71,785 tons Norwegian, 356 of 1,206,506 tons American, 27 of 175,412 tons French, and 10,643 of 16,781,321 tons were Japanese.

On September 30, 1919, the merchant navy (without Formosa) consisted of 2,838 steamers of 2,694,804 tons gross, 13,505 sailing vessels of European style, of 930,534 tons, and 939 sailing vessels of Japanese style, of 300,067 koku. The Japanese Government subsidises shipping companies for foreign trade, and now Japanese vessels run on four great routes to Europe, North America, South America, and Australia. There are also lines plying between Japanese ports and Korea, Northern China, and nine ports on the Yangtse Kiang.

Internal Communications.

It has been decided to make the standard gauge 4 85 feet. The work is expected to be completed in 1943, and the cost estimated at 1,408,000,000 yen. Japan has been conceded by China the right to build five railway lines in Manchuria and Mongolia. A railway tunnel under the Moji Shimonoseki Straits was commenced in 1920 and is expected to be completed in 1928. The tunnel will connect the island of Kiushu with Honshu. The whole length of the tunnel will be 7 miles, of which one mile will be completely under the sea.

There are (1919) 1,659 miles of electric tramway in Japan

The total amount of coins in circulation at the end of 1919 was 212,589,701 yen, notes, 1,555,100,523 yen. On December 27, 1920, the gold stock of Japan was 2,183,060,000 yen, of which 889,000,000 yen were held by the Government and 1,294,000,000 yen by the Bank of Japan.

The modern banking system dates from 1872. The principal banks of Japan are the Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan), the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Hypothec Bank, the Industrial Bank of Japan, the Hokkaido Colonisation Bank, the Bank of Taiwan. There are also (1918) 46 agricultural and industrial banks, 1,389 ordinary banks, and 665 savings banks. The condition of the banks (ordinary, saving and special) for three years (December 31st) was —

Year	Paid up Capital	Reserve Fund	Deposits	Earnings	Rate of Dividend
	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen
1917	775,771,20	296,615,316	5,708,652,994	648 376,151	8 6

1919	781,324 688	227,462,850	6,681,770,559	337,430,78 6	6 9

The total postal bank savings on December 31, 1920, amounted to 827,550,777 yen, the number of depositors being 23,787,626.

Money, Weights, and Measures

The present monetary law came into force from October, 1897, by which gold standard was adopted. The unit of value is 0.75 gramme of pure gold, and is called the yen = 2s 0½d, which, however, is not coined. The pieces coined are as follows:—Gold coins (20, 10, and 5 yen pieces), silver coins (50, 20, and 10 sen pieces), nickel coin (5 sen piece), and bronze coins (1 sen and 5 rin pieces). The sen is the hundredth part of a yen, and the rin is the tenth part of a sen. The gold coins are 900 fine, and the silver coins 800 fine. The gold coins formerly issued (20, 10, 5, 2, and 1 yen pieces) are used at double their face value. The one yen silver coin formerly issued is with drawn. The old copper 2, 1 and  $\frac{1}{2}$  sen pieces, are used as formerly.

The Kin	= 160 momme	= 1 323 lb avoirdupois
„ Kwan	= 1,000 „	= 8 267 lbs „

KOREA (CHŌSEN)

Government.—The ex Emperor, whose surname is Yi and name Chok, was born March 25, 1874, and succeeded his father, Yi Hiung, on his abdication, July 20, 1907. He is reckoned as the thirty first in succession since the founding of the dynasty in 1392, but four of the so called Kings were Crown Princes who never ascended the throne.

For details of treaties between Japan and China, Russia, and Korea from 1895, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916, p 1112

By a treaty concluded between Japan and Korea on August 22, 1910, the Korean territory was formally annexed to the Empire of Japan. The Emperor was deprived of all political power, and was accorded the title of Prince Yi, and his father (the former ex Emperor), who died in January, 1919, that of Prince Yi, Senior. The title of the country was changed back to "Chosen," from Tai Han, which had been adopted in 1897, and the office of Japanese Governor General established. Henceforth Korea became an integral part of the Japanese Empire. By an Imperial Rescript of 1919, Korea is to be treated as in all respects an integral part of Japan, Koreans to be on the same footing as Japanese. Members of the Korean Imperial House and the late Korean Cabinet have had Japanese patents of nobility conferred upon them. In 1919 certain changes were introduced with a view to assimilate more closely the Korean administration with that of Japan.

Governor General —His Excellency Baron Saito (September, 1919)

Area and Population —Estimated area, about 84,000 square miles, population on December 31, 1918, was 17,412,871 (8,960,070 males and 8,443,801 females). Census population 1920, 17,284,207. The vast majority of the foreign residents are Chinese, numbering some 18,972. The latest returns give the number of British subjects as 257, Americans 597, French 107, and Germans 57. The urban prefecture of Seoul has 302,686 inhabitants (50,291 Japanese), and that of Ping Yang 173,273. There has been a large immigration of Japanese into the Peninsula of recent years.

The language of the people is intermediate between Mongolo Tartar and Japanese, with a large admixture of Chinese words, and an alphabetical system of writing is used. Official correspondence, except with Korean provincial officials, is conducted in Japanese. The written language of the people is a mixture of Chinese characters and native script.

Religion and Instruction.—The worship of ancestors is observed with as much punctiliousness as in China, but, otherwise, religion holds a low place in the land. In the country there are numerous Buddhist monasteries, which, however, are looked upon with scant respect. The knowledge of Chinese classics and of Confucian doctrine, formerly essential to the education of the upper classes, is giving way under Japanese influence to a more practical system of instruction. There is a large number of Christian converts. In 1890 an English Church mission was established, with a bishop and 20 other members. The American missionaries have two hospitals in Seoul, where the Japanese have also established a large Government hospital. The total number of hospitals in the country was 177 on December 31, 1919, while the Red Cross Society has a numerous membership among both Japanese and Koreans There are over 250 Protestant missionaries (British and American), and 60 Roman Catholic, also a Russian Greek Church mission in Seoul

There are numerous Christian Mission schools for boys and girls throughout the country All these schools are subject to the control of the Education Department Technical and industrial schools are rapidly springing up A model farm and agricultural school has been established at Suigen In 1919 there were 996 public schools of all sorts, with 140,067 pupils, other schools, 726, with 44,729 pupils

In Seoul there is one daily Korean newspaper, and 2 Japanese, besides others published at Chemulpo and other parts of the country There is a Government owned daily newspaper in English, published at Seoul The Press is entirely in the hands of the Japanese, and a strict censorship is exercised

Finance—The finances of Korea form a special account in the Budget of Japan The estimated revenue for two years is shown as follows (1 yen = 2s 0½d nominally) —

Revenue	1919 20	1920 21	Expenditure	1919 20	1920 21
	Yen	Yen		Yen	Yen
Ordinary	52,642,608	60,347,920	Ordinary	39,698,256	67,050,142
Extraordinary	24,918,082	4,462,128	Extraordinary	37,802,440	46,278,192
Total	77,560,690	123,809,948	Total	77,560,696	113,328,334

The main sources of revenue are taxes and public undertakings

The total debt on December 31, 1919, was 119,358,105 yen

Production—Korea is entirely an agricultural country, the cultivated area is about 7,770,000 acres The chief crops are rice, wheat, beans, and grain of all kinds, besides tobacco and cotton The rice crops for 5 years were (in bushels) — 1914, 62,254,935, 1915, 56,416,224, 1916, 62,185,201, 1917, 60,681,378, 1918, 68,622,018, 1919, 62,561,761 Whale fishing is carried on on the coast Live stock is raised as a by-product of agriculture The cattle are well known for their size and quality

Gold mining is carried on and promises to be successful There are four foreign owned gold mines in active operation, and others in process of development Copper, iron, and coal are abundant in Korea, but the development of these resources is impeded by defective means of communication An anthracite coal mine in the north of Korea is in operation, and considerable extension of the workings are in contemplation Graphite and mica also are found in considerable quantities The total value of mineral products in 1918 was 30,828,074 yen

Commerce—The open ports are Chemulpo, Fusan, Wousan, Chinnampo, Mokpo, Kunsan, Songchin, Ping Yang (inland city), Wiju, Yong Am Po (1908), Chung jin and Shin wiju

Trade (merchandise only) at the open ports —

—	1915		1916		1917		1918		1919
	Yen		Yen		Yen		Yen		Yen
Imports	59,199,357		74,456,805		102,886,736		158,309,363		280,786,318
Exports	49,492,325		50,801,934		83,775,387		154,189,148		219,665,781

The imports in 1919 included cotton goods, 69,486,157 yen, cotton yarn, 5,151,060 yen, machinery, 9,432,910 yen, silk goods, 1,017,810 yen, timber, 3,276,151 yen, kerosene oil, 8,150,895 yen, grass cloth, 7,079,499 yen, sugar, 4,161,178 yen, paper, 4,511,805 yen, coal, 14,384,693 yen. The principal exports were rice, 110,030,878 yen, beans, peas, pulse, 23,068,301 yen, hides, 3,254,720 yen, cattle, 3,478,140 yen, gold ore, 1,231,639 yen. Of the total imports, the value of 184,917,678 yen was from Japan, of the exports, the value of 199,848,854 yen was to Japan. From Great Britain and the United States of America respectively, imports amounted to 5,576,424 yen and 24,181,916 yen.

Shipping and Communication — The foreign going shipping entered at the open ports in 1919 had a tonnage of 565,903, and those that cleared a tonnage of 551,238.

Transport in the interior is by porters, pack horses and oxen, and by river. Improvements in road making are being effected. There are about 1,400 miles of road. Length of railways, 1920, 1,159 miles, number of passengers carried (1919-20), 12,184,485. The Korean system of railways is now connected with the Siberian and Chinese lines.

A street electric railway in Seoul has been extended in four directions to points three miles outside the city. Number of post offices (1920) 562. There are 1,996 miles of telegraph line open, and the lines connect with the Japanese and the Chinese systems. The telephone has been introduced at Seoul, Chemulpo, and several other towns, length of lines 1,336 miles.

Money — Regulations for banking were framed in 1906. In 1919 there were 15 ordinary banks with 12,000,000 yen paid up capital.

A central bank, the Bank of Chosen, was established in August, 1909, and in November it took the place of the First Bank of Japan (Dai Ichi-Ginko) as the Government Treasury. Notes of this bank are permitted to circulate unrestrictedly within the jurisdiction of the Government General of Chosen and are exchangeable with gold coin and convertible notes issued by the Bank of Japan. The Bank of Chosen has a paid up capital (1920) of 50 million yen, the deposits amounting to 178,573,456 yen. Notes issued to June 30, 1920, 108,239,690 yen. Against their issue must be provided a reserve of the same amount, consisting of gold coin, gold and silver bullion, and convertible notes of the Bank of Japan, silver bullion, however, must not exceed one fourth of the total reserve. The savings bank in 1919-20 had 1,406,259 depositors with a total amount 14,925,990 yen.

The coinage consists of gold pieces of 5, 10, and 20 yen, silver of 10, 20-, and 50 sen, nickel of 5 sen, and bronze of 1 sen and 5 rin. The old nickel coin has been practically wholly withdrawn from circulation, and the cash currency is now used only for petty transactions. Under certain regulations, bills of exchange and cheques may pass into the currency. In the more important commercial towns there are authorised 'note associations' of merchants for the transaction of business relating to bills.

British Consul-General at Seoul — A. Hyde Lay, C. M. G.
Vice Consul at Seoul — W. B. Cunningham.

FORMOSA (TAIWAN)

The Island of Formosa, or Taiwan, was ceded to Japan by China by the treaty which was ratified on May 8, 1895, and Japan took formal possession on June 2 of the same year. Japanese civil government in the island began on March 31, 1896.

The Island has an area of 13,839 square miles, with a population (1918 of 3,698,918 (1,919,701 males and 1,779,217 females) Census population 1920, 3,654,398 The chief towns are Taihoku (102,249 inhabitants), Tainan, Kagi and Taichu

Many improvements have been effected by the Japanese administration. A colonising scheme was commenced in 1909, whereby Japanese were settled in Taiwan. There are four villages containing (1916), 652 families consisting of 3,268 persons. An educational system has been established for Japanese and natives, for whom there are (1915) 631 elementary and other schools with 2,207 teachers and 78,653 pupils. There are also normal schools, a medical school, and a school for teaching the Japanese language to natives, and native languages to Japanese.

The receipts of the Japanese administration are from inland taxes, customs, public undertakings, and also subsidies from Japan ranging from 5 to 9 million yen annually. The expenditure is chiefly for internal administration and the working of public undertakings.

The agricultural products of Formosa are rice, tea, sugar, sweet potatoes, ramie, jute, turmeric, while camphor is worked in the forests under a Government monopoly. The production of camphor was in 1917 18, 4,297,662 lbs., in 1918 19, 3,122,733 lbs., in 1919 20, 2,933,333 lbs., in 1920 21, 4,000,000 lbs. There are active fisheries. The number of animals is estimated as follows—sheep, 90, goats, 14,000, cattle, 130,000, caribou, 260,000. The industries comprise flour milling, sugar, tobacco, oil, spirits, iron work, glass, bricks, soap, and many other manufactures. Mining is making steady progress, the output of coal in 1918 was 801,520 tons. In 1919, the area planted with sugar was 286,348 acres, and the yield 6,868,779,636 pounds. There are 37 sugar mills in Taiwan.

The commerce of Formosa is largely with Japan, the chief foreign countries with which there is traffic being China and the United States. In 1919 the imports from Japan amounted to 90,526,766 yen, exports, 141,885,540 yen. The chief exports in 1919 were tea, 8,208,664 yen, sugar, 7,542,252 yen, camphor, 3,073,735 yen, coal, 8,037,334 yen. The chief imports were opium, 6,433,950 yen, rice, 7,728,376 yen, oil cake, beans and tea seed, 10,260,723 yen.

In 1919, 2757 vessels, of 1,117,899 tons entered and cleared the ports of Taiwan.

Roads have been and are being constructed throughout the Island. There were in 1918-19 345 miles of railway open. In 1919 there were 166 post offices, through which passed 49,009,142 packets and 770,018 parcels. The telegraph service has 165 offices, length of line 692 miles, of wire, 3,082 miles, messages (1919), 2,888,891. Telephone line, 987 miles, calls, 30,376,783.

At the end of 1919 the post office savings bank had 358,204 depositors with 5,518,178 yen to their credit.

The coinage current in the Island is that of Japan.

Hōkotō or the Pescadores consist of about 12 islands, with a total area of about 50 square miles

Japanese Sakhalin (or Karafuto) consists of that portion of Sakhalin which lies to the south of the parallel of 50° north latitude. It has an area of about 13,148 sq miles, and, in 1918, a population of 79,131 (44,460 males and 34,671 females). Census population, 1920, 105,765. The most important industry of the island is the herring fishery, but large areas are fit for agriculture and pasturage, and Japanese settlers have been provided with seed and domestic animals. There is a vast forest area of larch and fir trees. The minerals found are coal and alluvial gold, coal raised in 1918, 104,695 tons.

The revenue for 1920-21 is estimated at 9,704,619 yen, and expenditure the same.

The leased Territory of Kwantung, the southern part of the Liaotung Peninsula, has an area of about 538 sq miles, and a population (December 31, 1919) of 600,644 (341,673 males and 258,971 females), of whom 534,849 (228,834 females) are Chinese and 65,692 (30,093 females) Japanese (exclusive of army and navy). The Territory is under a Japanese governor general, the seat of administration being at Dairen (or Tairend, formerly called Dalny), where in 1915 there were 77 schools with 14,984 pupils, also an American Presbyterian Mission with a church and a hospital.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for 1920-21 balance at 12,246,092 yen.

The chief agricultural products of the Territory are maize, millet, beans, wheat, buckwheat, rice, tobacco, hemp, and various vegetables. There is an active fishing industry. The chief manufactured product is salt, which is abundant in the Territory. Since July 1, 1907, the Territory forms a Customs district under the Chinese Imperial Customs, Dairen being the Customs port, with out stations at Kinchow, Pulantien, Pitzewo, and Port Arthur. The port is free, goods being subject to duty only on crossing the frontier of the leased territory. The trade is mostly with Japan and China. Imports (1919), 107,186,929 haikwan taels (tael = about 4s 4d), exports, 103,733,007 yen. Dairen has a fine harbour, ice-free all the year, and protected by a breakwater 1,000 yards long. The harbour is provided with sheds and ware houses, under the control of the Manchuria Railway Company. The railway connects Port Arthur and Dairen with Mukden, Kharbin, and the Eastern Chinese Railway System.

Gold and silver coin and the notes of the Yokohama specie bank are current.

Kiau-Chau.—Kiau Chau, on the east coast of the Chinese province of Shan-tung, was seized by Germany in November, 1897, the town, harbour, and district were by treaty transferred to Germany on a 99 years' lease, March 6, 1898, and the district was declared a Protectorate of the German Empire, April 27, 1898. In November, 1914, the territory was captured by Japanese and British forces, and is now administered by Japan under a mandate.

Area, about 200 square miles, exclusive of the bay (about 200 square miles). There are 33 townships, and a population of about 227,000. Surrounding the district and bay is a neutral zone, whose outer limit is 30 miles from highwater.

mark on the coast of the bay, its area being about 2,500 square miles, and population about 1,200,000. At Tsing-Tau there is one middle school, one girls' high school, 3 higher primary schools, schools for teaching Chinese to the Japanese, with a total of 123 teachers and 2,515 pupils in 1920. There are also 37 public schools for Chinese pupils, with 134 teachers and 2,965 pupils. For the year 1914 the revenue was estimated at 403,000/ and the expenditure 920,500/.

The products are wheat, fruits, beans, ground nuts, sweet potatoes, &c., and silk culture, coal mining, briquette making, brewing, soap making are carried on, and there is a prosperous silk factory. Over 1,000 Chinese were employed on the floating dock. At Kiau Chau in 1919 the imports amounted to 69,557,059 Mexican dollars and the exports to 69,131,550 dollars. The chief imports were cotton goods, cigarettes, metals, petroleum, lumber, and dyes. The chief exports were ground nut and bean oil, wheat, tobacco leaf, and Shantung pongees. In 1919 1,298 steamers of 1,938,895 tons entered and cleared at Kiau-Chau. Of this total 1,061 steamers of 1,573,634 tons were Japanese and 102 steamers of 273,402 tons British. A railway, Tsing Tau to Tsinan, is 277 miles long.

The number of Japanese residents (exclusive of the military) was on August 30, 1920, 28,336 (15,303 males and 13,033 females).

On August 6, 1915, an agreement was entered into between the Chinese and Japanese Governments providing for the re opening of the Chinese Maritime Customs at Tsing Tau on conditions similar to those in force during the German occupation.

Pacific Islands—Under the Treaty of Versailles Japan was appointed mandatory to the former German possessions north of the Equator. These include —(1) The Marianne (or Ladrone) Islands—By treaty of February 12, 1899, these islands, with the exception of Guam (the largest of the Marianne Islands) ceded to the United States in 1898, passed on October 1, 1899, from Spanish to German possession for payment of 840,000/. Sipan is the seat of Government. The Japanese population of the islands numbers 1,754, and the natives 3,638. The northern group is actively volcanic and uninhabited.

(2) The Caroline Islands—The Carolines consist of about 500 coral islets, Ponape having about 2,000 inhabitants, Yap 7,155, and Kusa 400. The population is mainly of Malay origin, with some Chinese and Japanese. The chief export is copra. For administrative purposes the islands were divided into two groups: (a) the Eastern Carolines, with Truk and Ponape as the centres of administration. There are in Truk 169 Japanese, 5 Europeans, and 15,004 natives; in Ponape there are 193 Japanese, 5 Europeans, and 6,778 natives. (b) The Western Carolines, with Palau and Yap as administrative centres. There are in Palau 206 Japanese, 4,598 natives, 1 European, and 15 Chinese. In Yap there are 76 Japanese, 8,537 natives, and 3 Europeans.

(3) Marshall Islands—The Marshall Islands, consisting of two chains or rows of lagoon islands (several uninhabited), known respectively as Ratak (with thirteen islands) and Ralick (with eleven islands), first came under German rule in 1885. The population consists of 102 Japanese, 5 Europeans, and 8,901 natives. The chief island and administrative centre is Jalut, the most populous island Majeru, with 2,600 inhabitants. Protestant (American) and Catholic missions are at work. There are plantations of coco palm (1,275 hectares). The chief export is copra.

LATVIA.

(REPUBLIKA LAIVIJA)

LATVIA, along the southern part of the Baltic littoral, is inhabited chiefly by Letts. As early as the 13th century the Letts fought against the Germans (battle of Durbe, 1260), but in the long run the Germans carried the day, and the state created by the Teutonic Order under the form of a Federal Republic (consisting of Esthonia, Latgale, Livonia, and Courland) lasted until 1560. Eventually, Esthonia passed under the rule of Sweden, Latgale and Livonia under that of Lithuania-Poland, while Piltene and Oesel became Danish. Courland alone retained her independence under the form of a vassal duchy of Lithuania-Poland. In 1621 Livonia was annexed by Sweden, and in 1710 by Russia. In 1772, after the first partition of Poland, Latgale was assigned to Russia, and in 1795 Courland joined Russia. From this time onwards, Latvia was under Russian rule.

In 1917 Lettish public opinion expressed itself in favour of the separate existence of Latvia, and announced its view officially in the Russian Constituent Assembly in January 1918. An organization for establishing the independence of the country was formed, and on November 18, 1918, it proclaimed in Riga the sovereign Free State of Latvia, which was recognised as an independent State by Finland, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy, and Japan, on January 26, 1921, by Germany on February 1, and by Denmark, Norway, and Sweden on February 4, 1921.

Constitution and Government—The present Constituent Assembly, elected on April 17 and 18, 1920, on the basis of universal suffrage for citizens of both sexes, 21 years of age, by equal, direct, and secret vote, and based on proportional representation, consists of 152 members, divided into the following political groups:—Social Democrats, 58; Labour party, 6; Democrats, 6; Agrarian party of landless peasants, 3; landless peasants and small farmers party, 2; Latgallen peoples party, 1; Union of Farmers, 26; Latgallen peasants' party, 17; Christian farmers party of Latgallen, 6; independent citizens party, 6; Christian nationalists, 3; Germans, 6; Jews, 6; Russians, 1; Poles, 1.

The Constituent Assembly met on May 1, 1920, and after the resignation of the Provisional Government, a Coalition Government, responsible to the Constituent Assembly, was formed, all parties, with the exception of the Social Democrats, participating. After the elaboration of the Constitution of the Latvian State, the Constituent Assembly will be replaced by a regular parliament.

The Ministries are those of Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, National Defence, Trade and Industry, Public Works, Public Instruction, Agriculture, Justice, Supplies, and the State Controller.

The national flag is made up of horizontal stripes of red, white and red.

Prime Minister—K. Ulmanis.

Area and Population—Latvia consists of the former Russian Province of Courland (about 10,435 square miles), four southern districts (Riga, Wenden, Wolmar, Walk) of the former Russian province of Livonia (about 8,715 square miles) and three western districts (Dvinsk, Reshitza, Lutsin) of the former Russian province of Vitebsk (about 5,292 square miles), making a total of about 24,440 square miles, or, including inland lakes, about 25,000 square miles. The total length of the frontier line of Latvia is 1,040 statute miles, with a coast line of 388 statute miles.

The chief towns are Riga (the capital of Latvia), population (1914) 569,100,

Libau (90,744), Mitau (46,860), Windau, Wenden, Wolmar, Walk, Daugavpils (Dvinsk)

The census taken on June 15, 1920, showed a population of 1,503,193 in Latvia. Of these 1,416,090 were Latvian citizens, and 87,103 foreigners. Of the Latvian citizens 80.41 per cent were Letts, 8.86 per cent Russians, 4.29 per cent Jews, 3.23 per cent Germans, 2.19 per cent Poles, 0.52 per cent Lithuanians, 0.25 per cent Esthonians, and 0.25 per cent other nationalities.

Religion and Instruction—The majority of the population in Latvia is Protestant, but in Latgale and one district of Courland there are also many Roman Catholics, while in Riga, Windau and south east of Livonia there are about 200,000 Greek Orthodox Letts. Jews form about 4.29 per cent of the population. According to a Draft Bill to be presented to the Constituent Assembly there is to be no State Church.

Before the war there were 98 secondary schools in Latvia with 22,600 pupils, or 1 secondary school for every 26,000 inhabitants. The percentage of illiterates, including children under the age of ten years, is 21.5.

Before the war the University of Dorpat served the whole of the former Baltic provinces of Russia, and as Dorpat became an Esthonian institution, the Riga Polytechnic was in 1919 raised to be the Latvian University. The number of students is over 3,000. A Musical Academy has also been re-opened in Riga.

Finance—The Budget for the financial year ending March 31, 1921 is as follows (in millions of Latvian roubles) —

The National Debt of Latvia is as follows — To United States of America, for the re-educating of the indigent population in 1919, repayable in 1921

2,885,487 dollars, to United States of America, for various stocks, repayable in 1922, 5,000,000 dollars, to Norway, credit for various goods, repayable with interest in 1926, 6,000,000 crowns, interior loan of 1918, repayable in 15 years, 4,000,000 Latvian roubles, interior loan of 1920, repayable in 59 years, for an amount of 50 millions of Latvian roubles, issue not yet completed, and paper money issued up to June 30, 1920, on the 900 millions authorised, 517,162,361 Latvian roubles

Production and Industry—Latvia is mainly an agricultural country, but an increasing number of people are passing from agricultural to industrial life. At present Latvia can export in large quantities only flax and timber. Before the war the Latvian flax crop averaged about 85,000 tons per annum, but this season (1920-21) only 16,000 tons are estimated to be available for export. Latvian timber lands, State and private, produce annually about 172·5 million cubic feet of timber, mostly redwood, which can be exported to the extent of about 14 per cent either as logs or sawn goods, or manufactured into furniture, or building material. On July 1, 1920, there were 1,242 industrial enterprises in Latvia, employing about 12,000 hands.

Latvia does not possess any mineral wealth, although brown coal has been found in the country. The extensive peat bogs of Latvia can be utilised for fuel. A scheme is under consideration to harness the waters of the Dvina for generating electricity at the expenditure of 7,000,000. When fully equipped the stations will be able to generate 360,000 horse power.

Commerce and Communication—Latvia possesses about 340 miles of sea coast, its 3 principal harbours are Riga, Libau, and Windau. Three Russian main lines converge on Latvian ports, viz the Riga Tsaritsin line, the Windau Moscow line, and the Libau Romin line.

On January 1, 1921, 10 steamboats of 9,003 tons, and 29 sailing vessels of 7,789 tons, making a total of 39 vessels of 16,892 tons, were sailing under the Latvian flag.

The Latvian railways in Courland have been altered during the German occupation to the German gauge, while those in Livonia and Latgale retain the Russian gauge. The total length of line is 1,715 miles, of which 516 miles are of Russian gauge, 595 miles of European gauge, and 426 miles of narrow gauge.

Money, Banking, and Currency—The only legal tender in Latvia are the Latvian roubles, of which up to July 1, 1920, 517,162,361 have been issued.

It is intended to issue a new currency on a gold basis. The unit will be 1 gold Lat, equal to a gold franc, or one twenty-fifth of a gold sovereign. It is also proposed to set up a central banking institution.

The metric system has been established by law, but the old Russian system of weights and measures may be used until January, 1, 1926.

LIBERIA.

Constitution and Government—The Liberian Republic had its origin in the efforts of several colonisation societies of Europe and America to make permanent provision for freed American slaves. In 1822 a settlement was formed on the west coast of Africa near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On July 26, 1847, the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The new State was first recognised by France and Great Britain, and ultimately by other Powers. The Constitution of the Republic is on the model of that of the United States, with trifling exceptions. The executive is vested in a President and a Council of 6 Ministers, and the legislative power in a parliament of two houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The President and the House of Representatives are elected for four years, and the Senate for six years. The President must be at least thirty five years of age, and have real property to the value of 600 dollars, or 120*l*. Electors must be of negro blood, and owners of land. The natives of the country are not excluded from the franchise, but, except in the centres of civilisation, they take no part in political life. The official language of the Government is English.

Vice-President—Hon Samuel A. Ross (1920-24)

The President is assisted in his executive function by the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, the Secretary for War and Navy, and the Secretary for Education.

Area and Population.—Liberia has about 350 miles of coast line extending from the British colony of Sierra Leone, on the west, to the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the east, and it stretches inland to a distance, in some places, of about 200 miles. The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian agreement of 1885 and the Franco-Liberian agreements of 1892 and 1907-10. Early in 1911 an agreement was concluded between the British and Liberian Governments transferring the territory of Kanre Lahun to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip of undeveloped territory of about the same area on the south side of Morro River, which now becomes the boundary.

The total area is about 40,000 square miles. The total population is estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000, all of the African race. Since the organisation of the frontier force the Government has obtained complete control of Northern Liberia and of the Kroo countries in Southern Liberia. The indigenous natives belong in the main to six principal stocks: (1) the Mandingos (Muhammadan), (2) the Gissi, (3) the Gola, (4) the Kpwesi, (5) the Kru negroes and their allies, and (6) the Greboes. The Kru tribes are mostly Pagan. The number of American Liberians is estimated at about 12,000. About 50,000 of the coast negroes may be considered civilised. All such use English as their language in daily life, and are Christian in religion. There is a British negro colony of about 500, and there are about 200 Europeans, including 100 Englishmen. The coast region is divided into counties, Bassa, Sino, and Maryland, each under a Government superintendent, and Montserrado, subdivided into 4 districts, each under a superintendent.

tendent Monrovia, the capital, has, including Krutown, an estimated population of 6,000. It is one of the 15 ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, the others being Liberian Jene (river port) Saywolu (river port), Robertsport (Cape Mount), Marshall (Junk), Grand Bassa, River Cess, Greenville (Sinoe), Nana Kru, Sasstown, Grand Cess, Harper (Cape Palmas), Kablaki (river port), Half Cavalla, and Webbo (river port). Other towns are Robertsport, Royesville, Marshall, Arthington, Careysburg, Millsburg, Whiteplains, Boporo (native), Rocktown (native), Philadelphia, Cuttington, Upper Buchanan and Edina.

Religion and Instruction—The Americo Liberians are all Protestant (Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, or Methodist). There are several American missions at work and one French Roman Catholic. The Government educational system is supplemented by mission schools, instruction being given both to American and to native negroes. In 1910 the Government had 113 elementary schools with 122 teachers and 4,100 pupils. There are 87 mission schools and about 3,000 pupils. The mission schools give industrial training. The Methodists have a college at Monrovia, the Protestant Episcopalians a high school at Cape Palmas and 3 other important schools. The Government has a college with (1916) 3 professors and 20 students. A criminal code was enacted in 1900, the customs laws were codified in 1907.

Finance—The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (in American dollars) —

	1912-13	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16	1917-18
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue	616,809	531,500	273,368	295,233	273,016
Expenditure	529,548	531,500	266,961	282,382	255,767

The customs duties for 1916-17 were 163,634 dollars, for 1917-18 they were 164,628 dollars and for 1918-19, 242,134 dollars.

In 1912 an international loan of 1,700,000 dollars was raised, secured by the Customs revenue, rubber tax, and tax on native labourers shipped from Liberia. The administration of the Customs is in the hands of a Customs Receivership, the Governments of Great Britain, France, and the United States each designate a Receiver. British financial interests preponderate in the loan. It is further provided that for the security of the revenue a frontier police force sufficient for the maintenance of peace in Liberia shall be established, and that the United States shall designate trained military officers to organise the force. In 1918, 72,207 dollars were spent on the force.

On September 30, 1918, the total debt was 2,131,700 dollars, of which 1,608,000 dollars refunding loan of 1912, 423,128 dollars internal floating debt, 84,603 dollars due to Bank of British West Africa Limited, and 15,969 dollars owing by post office to money order bureau.

Defence.—For defence every citizen from 16 to 50 years of age capable of bearing arms is liable to serve. The organised militia, volunteers, and police number about 5,000.

Production, Commerce.—The agricultural, mining, and industrial development of Liberia has scarcely begun. There are forests unworked, the soil is productive, but cultivation is neglected, cocoa and cotton are produced in small quantities only, and indigenous coffee is the staple product. Piassava fibre, prepared from the raphia palm, palm oil and palm kernels, kola nuts, chillies, beni seed, coffee, anatto seed and rice are also produced. Beeswax is collected, and gum copal is found but is not collected. Tortoiseshell, improperly prepared, is sold in small quantities. In the forests there are rubber vines and trees of 22 species. Rubber exports (in pounds) 1910, 115,785, 1911, 103,032, 1912, 93,822, 1913, 116,712, 1914, 8,003, 1915, 10,081, 1917, 69,835. Iron is worked by the natives. Gold in small quantities, tin, copper, zinc, monazite, corundum, lead, bituminous or lignite, and diamonds have been at different times found in the interior, but not as yet in payable form or abundance.

The trade for 4 years is shown as follows —

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1911	1,154,924	1,013,849	1913	902,063	1,288,915
1912	1,194,128	1,150,491	1917	—	618,536

The chief imports are rice, Manchester goods, gin, tobacco, building timber, galvanised roofing iron, ready made clothing, and dried and preserved fish. The chief exports are rubber, palm oil (336,407 gallons in 1917), palm kernels, piassava fibre, (5,911,903 lbs in 1917), cocoa (65,016 lbs in 1917), coffee (761,800 lbs in 1917), ivory, ginger, and camwood. The trade is chiefly with Great Britain, Holland, Spain, and the United States.

According to the 'Annual Statement of Trade' issued by the Board of Trade, the value of the trade between the United Kingdom and Liberia was as follows in five years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into U K from Liberia	194,116	211,270	161,423	528,219	513,421
Exports of U K produce to Liberia	101,748	117,009	178,161	163,715	271,327

In 1919, 244 vessels visited Monrovia with a tonnage of 622,844 tons. Of these, 116 vessels of 483,789 tons were British.

There are no railways or vehicular means of transport in the country, except ox carts and a motor road of about 20 miles recently constructed. The river St Paul is navigable for 25 miles from the sea northwards (including creeks, for 38 miles), and various Liberians maintain steam launches thereon. The Liberian Government has a river launch. There is direct cable communication with Europe and New York. There are two wireless stations at Monrovia.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The money chiefly used is British gold and silver, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Accounts are kept generally in American dollars and cents. The Liberian coins are as follows:—Silver, 50-, 25-, and 10 cent pieces; copper, 2- and 1 cent pieces.

Weights and measures are the same as Great Britain and the United States.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd, has a branch at Monrovia, and agencies at other ports of the Republic

LIECHTENSTEIN.

THE Principality of Liechtenstein, lying between the Austrian Land of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St. Gallen and Graubünden, is a sovereign State consisting of Schellenberg and Vaduz (formerly immediate fiefs of the Roman Empire). The former in 1699 and the latter in 1712 came into the possession of the house of Liechtenstein and, by diploma of January 23, 1719, granted by the Emperor Karl VI, the two lordships were constituted as the Principality of Liechtenstein. After the break up of the Empire in 1806 the Principality was incorporated in the Rhine Confederation, from 1815 to 1866 it formed part of the German Confederation, since the break up of which it has joined no similar union.

The Reigning Prince is John II, born October 5, 1840, succeeded his father, November 12, 1858. The reigning family originated in the twelfth century, and traces its descent through free barons who in 1608 became princes of Liechtenstein. The monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The constitution provides for a Diet of 15 members elected for four years by direct vote on the basis of universal suffrage and proportional representation. The capital and seat of Government is Vaduz (pop. 1,142). Formerly the principality was practically a dependency of Austria, but on November 7, 1918, the Diet resolved to establish the complete independence of Liechtenstein. The principality has a High Court. In 1920 negotiations were opened with Switzerland with a view to a Customs Treaty to include the administration by Switzerland of the posts and telegraphs of Liechtenstein, and early in 1921 Switzerland agreed.

Area, 65 square miles, population, of German origin and nearly all Catholic, 1912, 10,716 (5,266 males and 5,450 females). There is no public debt. The inhabitants of Liechtenstein since 1867 have not been liable to military service. The population is in great part agricultural, the chief products of the country being corn, wine, fruit, and timber. The rearing of cattle, for which the fine Alpine pastures are well suited, is highly developed. The industries of the Principality, except the textile industries, are not important. The Principality has no army (since 1868).

LUXEMBURG.

Reigning Grand-duchess —Charlotte born January 23, 1896, succeeded on the abdication of her sister Marie Adelaide, on January 9, 1919, married to Prince Felix of Bourbon Parma on November 7, 1919. Offspring —Prince Jean, born January 6, 1921. Sisters of the Grand Duchess —Princess Marie Adelaide, born June 14, 1894, Princess Hilda, born February 15, 1897, Princess Antoinette, born October 7, 1899, Princess Elisabeth, born March 7, 1901, Princess Sophie, born February 14, 1902.

The early history of Luxemburg may be divided into four periods, viz, from 963 to 1443, when the country was part of the Holy Roman Empire, from 1443 to 1506, the Burgundian period, from 1506 to 1714, the Spanish period, and from 1714 to 1795, the Austrian period. From 1795 to 1815 the Duchy was French. The Congress of Vienna made the Duchy into a Grand duchy, and from 1815 to 1866 the Grand duchy was included in the dissolved Germanic Confederation. By the Treaty of London, May 11, 1867, it was declared neutral territory, and its integrity and independence were guaranteed.

Constitution and Government —The Constitution now in force was proclaimed on October 17, 1868, in 1919 some important changes were introduced into it. Thus the Constituent Assembly decided that the sovereign power resided in the Nation (Article 32), that all secret treaties were abolished (Article 37), that the deputies are to be elected on the basis of universal suffrage, pure and simple, by scrutiny of lists, according to the rules of proportional representation and in conformity with the principle of the smallest electoral quotient.

The country is divided into four electoral districts: the South, North, Centre, and East. In order to qualify as an elector it is necessary to be a citizen (male or female) of Luxemburg and to have completed 21 years of age, to be eligible for election it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The electors may be called upon to record their votes by means of a referendum or plebiscite in all cases and under the conditions to be determined by law (Article 52). The Members of the Chamber of Deputies receive a salary which may not surpass 4,000 francs per annum, they are also entitled to receive a travelling allowance (Article 75).

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 48 members, elected October, 1919. The state of the parties is as follows: —Catholics, 27, National Party, 3, Liberals, 7, Socialists, 9, Popular Party, 2.

The head of the State takes part in the legislative power, exercises the executive power, and has a certain part in the judicial power. The Constitution leaves to the sovereign the right to organise his Government, which consists of a Minister of State, who is President of the Government, and of at least three Directors General. The Cabinet, appointed April, 1921, is composed as follows: —

Minister of State and President of Government —Emile Reuter

Director General of Finance —A. Neyens

Director-General of Commerce, Industry, and Labour —M. Leidenbach

Director General of Justice and Public Works —A. Bech

Director General of Agriculture and Social Welfare —Raymond de Waha

Besides the Government there is a Council of State. It deliberates on proposed laws and bills, on amendments that might be proposed, it also gives administrative decisions and expresses its opinion regarding any other question referred to it by the Grand-duke or by the Law. The Council of State is composed of 15 members chosen for life by the sovereign, who also chooses a president among them each year.

On September 28, 1919, a Referendum was taken in Luxemburg to decide on the political and economic future of the country. Those entitled to vote were men and women of 21 (voters on the register, 127,775, actual voters, 90,984). The voting resulted as follows —for the reigning Grand duchess, 66,811, for the continuance of the Nassau Braganza dynasty under another Grand duchess, 1,286, for another dynasty, 889, for a Republic, 16,885, for an economic union with France, 60,133, for an economic union with Belgium, 22,242. But France refused in favour of Belgium to consider the possibility of an economic union, and negotiations are accordingly in progress between Belgium and Luxemburg.

Area and Population—Luxemburg has an area of 999 square miles, and a population (Dec. 1, 1916) of 263,824 (130,514 males and 133,310 females). The population is Catholic, save (1910) 4,007 Protestants, 1,270 Jews, and 303 belonging to other sects. The chief town, Luxemburg, has 20,355 (1916) inhabitants. Other towns are Esch a Alz, the centre of the mining district, 20,672 inhabitants, Differdange, 14,035 inhabitants, Dudelange, 10,400 inhabitants, Rumelange, 5,264 inhabitants, and Diekirch, 3,776 inhabitants.

Instruction—Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 13. In 1920 the primary schools had 1,027 teachers (504 women), there are 35 higher elementary schools, 3 classical schools, 2 commercial and industrial colleges, a college of agriculture, and an academy of music.

Finance—Estimated revenue and expenditure (including extraordinary for the last five years) in francs —

Revenue	49,761,428	47,680,858	126,044,256	126,018,206	41,016,874
Expenditure	50,431,330	101,909,074	188,084,742	170,447,229	182,890,571

<sup>1</sup> Revenue includes loan of 90,000,000 francs, expenditure includes 30,000,000 francs debts of previous years.

The debt on September 30, 1920, amounted to 129,281,828 francs.

The armed forces of the State number 250 men.

Production and Industry—Agriculture is carried on by about 90,000 of the population (about 36 per cent), about 250,000 acres are agricultural land. The principal crops are beetroot and potatoes, but mining is the chief industry. Production of iron and steel for 3 years —

Year	Iron		Steel
	Tons	Value in francs	Tons	Value in francs
1916	1,960,514	205,794,142	1,296,407	195,060,772
1917	1,628,805	231,845,054	1,058,596	207,045,801
1918	1,266,871	254,590,306	857,987	199,673,806

Communications—There were 330 miles of railway in 1918, and 440 miles of telegraph line with 1,521 miles of wire, and 363 telegraph offices in 1919. There were also (1919) 109 telephone systems with 962 miles of line and 4,993 miles of wire. In 1919 there were 138 post-offices, through which there passed 13,393,000 letters and 6,276,000 post cards, &c

MEXICO

(REPÚBLICA MEXICANA)

Constitution and Government

Mexico was annexed to the Spanish Crown by conquest in 1521, and for three centuries continued to be governed by Spain. In all 64 Spanish Viceroyalties ruled the Courts, from Antonio de Mendoza (1535-1550) to Juan O'Donoju (1821-1822). In 1810 the rule of the Spanish Viceroyalties had become so tyrannical that it caused an outbreak headed by the patriot priest Hidalgo, who on September 15, 1810, declared the Independence of Mexico. On May 18, 1822, General Augustin Iturbide declared himself Emperor of Mexico, but in 1824 he had to flee, and the Republic was established. Several Presidents (Felix Fernandez Victoria, 1824-28, was the first) ruled the destinies of the country with more or less severity until 1864, when the throne of Mexico was offered to Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria. He was shot in 1867, and Benito Juarez, who had been President in the northern part of the country, took the reins of government. He was followed by Lerdo de Tejada, who in 1876 fled, and General Porfirio Diaz (died July 2, 1915) made his entry into Mexico City. He ruled the country with the exception of four years (1880-4, General Manuel Gonzalez) until May 25, 1911, when he presented his resignation to Congress. On November 6, 1911, Señor Francisco I. Madero assumed office as President and ruled until February, 1913, when a coup d'état took place, resulting in the President's murder (February 23, 1913) and his replacement by General Victoriano Huerta.

Civil war broke out in April, 1913, and on July 15, 1914, Huerta resigned. The internal discord continued, until December, 1915, when most of the American and European States recognized General Carranza as head of the Government of Mexico. In May 1920, civil war broke out again and Carranza fled from the capital, and he was shortly afterwards killed. General Adolfo de la Huerta was elected Provisional President in May, 1920, and in September, 1920, the presidential elections returned General Alvaro Obregon.

President — Alvaro Obregon. Assumed office, December 1, 1920.

A new Constitution, amending the Constitution of 1857, was promulgated on February 5, 1917. By its terms Mexico is declared a federative republic, divided into States, each of which has a right to manage its own local affairs, while the whole are bound together in one body politic by fundamental and constitutional laws. The powers of the supreme Government are divided into three branches, the legislative, executive, and judicial. The legislative power is vested in a Congress consisting of a House of Representatives and a Senate, and the executive in a President. Representatives are elected for two years by universal suffrage at the rate of one member for 60,000 inhabitants. The qualification is to be over twenty-five years of age on the day of election. The Senate consists of fifty-eight members, two for each State, of at least thirty years of age, who are returned in the same manner as the deputies. The members of both Houses receive salaries of about 7,000 dollars a year. The President is elected by direct popular vote in a general election, holds office for four years, and cannot be re-elected. Failing the President, Congress acts as an electoral college for the election of a successor. If the vacancy occurs during the first half of the President's term of office, Congress chooses a provisional President and arranges for new elections; if the vacancy occurs in the second term, Congress chooses the President for the remainder of the term. The Session of Congress is to be from September 1 to December 31. During the recess there is a Permanent

Committee consisting of fourteen Senators and fifteen Representatives appointed by the respective Houses

According to the law of April 13, 1917, the administration is carried on, under the direction of the President and a Council, by seven Secretaries of State (Foreign Affairs, Interior, Finance and Public Credit, War and Marine, Communications and Public Works, Industry, Commerce, and Labour, and Agriculture), and three Departments of State (Judicial, Educational, and Public Health)

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Mexico is divided into twenty eight States, one Federal District, and two Territories. Each separate State has its own internal constitution, government, and laws, but inter State customs duties are not permitted, though State taxes are levied. Each State has its governor, legislature, and judicial officers popularly elected under rules similar to those of the Federation. The Governors of the Federal District and the Territories are appointed by the President. All the States of the Mexican Union have their own special codes based, more or less, on those of the Federal District, but at the same time they must publish and enforce laws issued by the Federal Government.

Area and Population.

The population of the census of 1910 and the estimated population in 1912 are shown in the following table. The capitals of the States and districts are in brackets —

In 1910 there were 7,504,471 males and 7,055,898 females. The foreign population in 1910 numbered 116,527 — Spanish, 29,541; United States, 28,639; Guatemalan, 21,334; French, 4,604; British, 5,284; Cuban, 3,478; German, 3,827; Italian, 2,595; Chinese, 13,203; Japanese, 2,276; Arabs, 1,546; Turks, 2,907; all others, 5,433.

The chief cities, 1910 are — Mexico (capital), 1,080,000; Puebla, 96,121; Guadalupe, 119,468; San Luis Potosi, 68,022; León, 57,722; Monterrey, 73,528; Pachuca, 39,009; Zacatecas, 25,900; Guanajuato, 35,682; Mérida, 62,447; Queretaro, 33,062; Morelia, 40,042; Oaxaca, 38,011; Orizaba, 35,263; Aguascalientes, 45,198; Saltillo, 35,414; Durango, 32,263; Chihuahua, 39,706; Vera Cruz, 48,633; Toluca, 31,023; Celaya, 23,062.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice

The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic, but according to the new Constitution of 1917, the Church is separated from the State, and there is toleration of all other religions. No ecclesiastical body can acquire landed property. There are 7 archbishops and 23 suffragan bishops. In 1910, there were 15,033,176 Roman Catholics, 68,839 Protestants, 33,343 of other faiths, 25,011 of no professed faith.

Education is free and compulsory, and, according to the Constitution of 1917, secular. In the Federal District and in the Territories education is controlled by the National Government, elsewhere the State authorities regulate education. The Federal capital is the seat of the National University of Mexico, organised in 1910. In 1912 the system of primary education was extended so as to reach the native population, for whom 209 schools have been established with 13,616 pupils.

In 1918, 439 newspapers and periodicals were published in Mexico.

The judicial power, which is entirely distinct from and independent of the executive, consists of the Supreme Court, with 15 judges chosen for a period of six years, three Circuit Courts, with 3 judges, and District Courts, with 32 judges. After 1923 judges are to be appointed for life.

The Ordinary, Civil, Criminal, and Correctional Courts are controlled by the Department of Justice and Public Instruction.

Federal Finance.

The ordinary receipts and expenditure for six years —

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure

For the nine months ending May 31, 1919, the actual revenue amounted to 13,530,100%.

On December 31, 1920, the outstanding external debt, together with arrears of interest, amounted to 72,815,642%. The internal debt amounted to 16,582,277 pesos.

Défence.

Before the Revolution every Mexican capable of bearing arms was obliged to serve in the Active Army or in the National Guard. The army then consisted of the Active Army, the Reserve, and auxiliary troops; and was organised on a peace footing as follows infantry, 34 battalions, 20 auxiliary battalions, and 49 irregular corps, cavalry, 18 regular regiments, 21 auxiliary regiments and 2 squadrons of army gendarmes, 52 irregular corps, and 26 scout corps, artillery, 5 regiments. In addition there were 1 sapper battalion, 1 engineer park, 1 telegraph section, 2 war schools, 1 naval school, 1 school of musketry, 1 school for fencing, 1 medical school, and 57 schools for soldiers. Since 1914 the Army has been continuously on a war footing and the Reserve has disappeared. The nominal strength of the Army in 1920 was 119,000, but it is probable that not more than half this number of effectives would be counted on by the Government.

The infantry is armed with 7 mm Mauser rifle, the cavalry with a carbine of the same type, artillery with Q F guns (Saint Chaumont Mondragon and Schneider Canet).

Attention has been paid to aviation, the machines employed are of Mexican design and construction. There are 2 engineering parks, 2 telegraph stations. Military education is compulsory in all schools throughout the country.

The Navy, which is little more than a police force, consists of the gun boats Bravo, Morero, Vera Cruz, Tampico, Democrata, General Guerrero, and Zaragoza. There are five torpedo boats, a couple of armed transports, and a few smaller vessels.

Production and Industry.

Mexico is well suited for agriculture. Within a radius of 300 miles may be produced the crops of the Tropical, Semi-tropical, and Temperate Zones, owing to the varying altitude, the land rising rapidly from the coast to the centre of the country. The soil is rich in all sections. In the tropical regions, in the mountain valleys, and on the great central plateau are millions of acres of virgin soil and millions more which have been barely skimmed by the antiquated methods of agriculture in vogue.

Cultivated lands, 30,027,500 acres, pastoral lands, 120,444,200 acres, forest lands, 43,933,200 acres. Principal products are maize (1,930,121 tons in 1918), cotton (79,653 tons in 1918), henequen (158,066 tons in 1918), wheat (387,522 tons in 1919), coffee, beans. There is a large output of sugar (140,000 tons in 1919) and molasses, valued at about 2,600,000l annually, and the production of spirits is on the increase. There are 1,226 tobacco factories in the Republic.

Timber lands are estimated to extend over 25,000,000 acres and to contain pine, spruce, cedar, mahogany, logwood, and rosewood.

Live stock in 1920. Cattle, 2,162,984, horses, 929,385, mules, 354,351, asses, 287,989, sheep, 1,089,976, goats, 1,987,869, and pigs, 1,654,089.

The chief Mexican oil fields may be grouped in five districts—(1) The Ebanio district, about 40 miles west of Tampico (largely the property of the Mexican Petroleum Company), (2) The Panuco district, including the Topile region, (3) The Huasteca district, south of Tampico, in which the famous 'Casiano', 'Cerro Azul', and 'Potrero del Llano' wells occur, (4) The Tuxpan district, including the Furbero region, south west of Tuxpan, and (5) The Tehuantepec Tabasco district, in the neighbourhood of Minutlan. In 1917 petroleum wells to the number of 79 were bored in the principal oil zones of the Republic, 43 of which are producing. The potential production of these wells is 235,250 barrels per day. The total number of productive wells in the Republic is (1919) 343. The potential production of all the wells of the Republic is 1,337,012 barrels daily. On December 31, 1919, there were in existence the following constructions for storing petroleum.—382 steel tanks, with a capacity of 4,125,821 cubic meters, 4 concrete tanks with a capacity of 43,718 cubic meters, 15 earthen reservoirs with a capacity of 3,508,654 cubic meters, and one cement reservoir, with a capacity of 136,740 cubic meters. On the same date there were existing 113 pipe lines with a total length of 1,420,970 meters and a conducting capacity of 457,216 cubic meters.

Petroleum was produced as follows — In 1912, 16,538,215 barrels, in 1913, 25,696,291 barrels, in 1914, 26,235,403 barrels, in 1915, 33,910,508 barrels, in 1916 40,545,712 barrels, in 1917, 55,292,770 barrels, in 1918, 3,838,326 barrels, in 1919, 92,402,055 barrels.

Mining is the principal industry in Mexico. It is carried on in 24 of the 31 States and Territories, nearly all the mines yielding silver either alone or in combination with other ores. The following table shows the quantities of mineral products for 1918, 1919, and 1920 —

Metals	1918	1919	1920

Coal is produced only in the State of Coahuila. The output is estimated at 900,000 tons annually. Opals are mined in Queretaro.

Shipping and Communications

The most important ports are Vera Cruz and Tampico, both on the Gulf of Mexico

In 1909 the main railway lines of Mexico were united in one corporation —The National Railways of Mexico Since 1914 this system and practically all the private lines have been taken over and worked by the government under the name of the Constitutionalist Railways of Mexico The National Railways of Mexico own 6,818 miles of track and control an additional 1,220 miles The Mexican Railway has 520 miles of track The Tehuantepec Railway owns the line (184 miles of track) between Puerto Mexico on the Atlantic to Salina Cruz on the Pacific The Mexico North Western Railway owns 512 miles of track The Southern Pacific Railway of Mexico has about 1,000 miles of track The United Railways of Yucatan have a length of 500 miles A railway between Toluca and Zitacuaro (81 miles) has been commenced

On December 31, 1918, the Federal telegraph and telephone lines were 110,530 miles There were other lines belonging to individual States and private persons totalling 5,199 miles in length There were on December 31, 1918, 528 telegraph offices, 12 telephone offices and 21 wireless stations Number of messages, 108,024,029

In 1919 there were 2,463 post offices The post carried in 1919 60,027,536 inland and 12,496,678 international letters, postcards and packets Post office receipts 1919, 11,590,854 pesos, expenditure, 11,343,675 pesos

A new wireless station has been established on the Island of Lobos, off the coast of Tampico, largely for the purpose of affording the various petroleum companies facilities for communicating with vessels while at sea It is provided with powerful apparatus and is able to communicate with the wireless stations at Mexico City, Tuxpam, Tampico, Vera Cruz, Progreso, Frontera, Mazatlan, Santa Rosalia, La Paz, Queretaro, Monterrey, Saltillo, Poiteon, and by way of Habana with various stations in the United States

Banking and Credit

An executive decree of January 31, 1921, provided for the return to their owners of the banks declared in liquidation by the decree of December 14, 1916

On December 31, 1919, the liabilities of all the banks in the Republic amounted to 410,763,459 pesos, including notes in circulation of 129,984,148 pesos

It is proposed to set up a Central Bank of issue with a capital of 200 million pesos and the right to issue paper currency to the amount of 30 million pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By an executive decree of November 13, 1913, the monetary unit is the gold peso or dollar, the legal value of which has been fixed at 75 grammes of pure gold. There are 20 peso (called aztecas), 10-peso, and 5 peso gold coins, 200 fine and 100 copper, weighing respectively 164.3333 and 4.1666 grammes. In 1919 American gold coin was decreed to be legal tender at the fixed rate of 1 dollar for 2 Mexican gold pesos. An executive decree of October 27, 1919, provides for the issue of new silver and copper coins. The silver coins are in denominations of 1 peso, 50 and 20 centavos, with a fineness of 720 milligrams of silver and 280 of copper. The copper coins are to be in denominations of 10 centavos, weigh 12 grams, and have a composition of 95 per cent copper, 2.5 per cent tin, and 2.5 per cent zinc. These coins are restricted legal tender up to 20 pesos for the silver coins and 2 pesos for the copper coins. Bronze coins are 2- and 1-centavo pieces, 95 parts copper, 4 tin, and 1 zinc. There are 5 centavo nickel coins. In July, 1920, the coinage of Mexican money in the Republic consisted of 1,800,000 gold pesos, 3,730,000 silver pesos, and 50,000 pesos in copper coins, or a total of 5,580,000 pesos. The value of the gold peso or dollar in peace time was 24.58 pence.

An enormous quantity of paper money was in circulation, but it has been gradually withdrawn, and on October 1, 1920, 106,787,862 pesos remained in circulation.

The weights and measures of the metric system were introduced in 1884 and their use is enforced by law of June 19, 1895, though the old Spanish measures are still in use. The old weights and measures were —

Weight	1 libra = 0.46 kilogramme = 1.014 lb avoirdupois
	1 arroba = 25 libras = 25.357 lb avoirdupois
For gold and silver	1 marco = $\frac{1}{2}$ libra = 4,608 granos
	1 ochava = 6 tomines
	1 tomin = 12 granos
	20 granos = 1 French gramme
Length	1 vara = 0.837 metre = 2 ft 8 $\frac{1}{8}$ English in
	1 legua comun = 6,666 $\frac{2}{3}$ varas

MONACO.

Prince Albert, born November 13, 1848, succeeded his father, Prince Charles III, September 10, 1889, married (1) to Lady Mary Douglas Hamilton, September 21, 1869,<sup>1</sup> (2) to Alice Duchess-Dowager de Richelieu, Oct 31, 1889. Son by first wife, Prince Louis, born July 12, 1870.

Monaco is a small Principality on the Mediterranean, surrounded since 1860 by the French Department of Alpes Maritimes except on the side towards the sea. From 968 it belonged to the house of Grimaldi. In 1715 it passed into the female line, Louise Hippolyte, daughter of Antony I, heiress of Monaco, marrying Jacques de Goyon Matignon, Count of Thoirgnny, who took the name and arms of Grimaldi. Antony I died in 1731, Louise Hippolyte reigning only ten months and dying in 1732. She was succeeded by her husband under the name of Jacques I, who also succeeded Antony I as Duc de Valentinois, and was in his turn succeeded by his son Honorius III. This Prince was dispossessed by the French Revolution in 1792, and died in 1795. In 1814 the Principality was re-established, but placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna (1815).

In 1848 Mentone and Roccabruna revolted, and declared themselves free towns, in 1861 Charles III ceded his rights over them to France, and the Principality thus became geographically an enclave of France, when the Sardinian garrison was withdrawn and the Protectorate came to an end.

The Prince was an absolute ruler, there having been no elective representation within the Principality. But on January 7, 1911, a Constitution was promulgated, which provides for a National Council elected by universal suffrage and scrutin de liste. The Government is carried out under the authority of the Prince by a Ministry assisted by a Council of State. The legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of 21 members elected for four years. The territory of the Principality is divided into three communes, administered by municipal bodies, in the election of which women are entitled to take part.

In 1819 the Government adopted a code founded upon the French codes and a Court of First Instance, as well as a Juge de Paix's Court. The Principality has its own coinage (it issues only 100 franc pieces) which is current since 1876 in all the States of the Latin Union, it also issues its own separate postage-stamps, and has its own flag.

The small harbour, absolutely sheltered, has an area of 42 acres, depth at entrance 90 feet, and alongside the quay 24 feet at least. The Customs duties are the same as in France.

The area is eight square miles. Population (census January 9, 1913), 22,956. Towns Monaco, 2,247, La Condamine, 11,082, Monte Carlo, 9,627.

There has been since 1887 a Roman Catholic bishop. A semi military police force has taken the place of the 'guard of honour' and troops formerly maintained. The value of the commerce of the Principality is not stated. Imports are coal and wine, olive oil, oranges, citrons, and perfumes are exported. The industries and trade are unimportant, and the revenue is mainly derived from the gaming tables. The annual grant for the concession was 80,000*l* in 1917, in 1927 it will be 90,000*l*, and in 1937 100,000*l*.

MOROCCO.

(MAGHRIB-EL AKSA — EL GHARB)

Reigning Sultan

Mulai Yusef, G C M G, son of Mulai Hassan, was proclaimed Sultan on August 18, 1912, on the abdication of his brother, Sultan Mulai Abd el Hahd, who received a lump sum of 400,000 francs and an annual pension of 350 000 francs

The present Sultan of Morocco is the seventeenth of the dynasty of the Alides, founded by Mulai Ahmed, and the thirty sixth lineal descendant of Ali, uncle and son in law of the Prophet His five predecessors were —

Sultan	Reign	Sultan	Reign
Mulai Abderrahman	1822-1859	Mulai Abd el Aziz	1894-1903
Sidi Mohamed	1859-1873	Mulai Abd el Hafid	1903-1912
Mulai Hassan	1873-1894

The Sherifian umbrella is hereditary in the family of the Filali Sharifs of Tahlelt Each Sultan is supposed, prior to death, to indicate the member of the Sherifian family who, according to his conscientious belief, will best replace him This succession is, however, elective, and all members of the Sherifian family are eligible Generally the late Sultan's nominee is elected by public acclamation at noonday prayers the Friday after the Sultan's death, as the nominee has probably possession of imperial treasure, and is supported by the bodyguard, from among whom the large majority of court officials are selected

Government

In April, 1912, a treaty was signed at Fez by which the Sultan formally accepted the French Protectorate

The form of government of the Sultanate, or Empire of Morocco, is in reality an absolute despotism, unrestricted by any laws, civil or religious The Sultan—who is known to his subjects under the title of 'Emir el Mumenin,' or Prince of True Believers—is chief of the State, as well as head of the religion As spiritual ruler, the Sultan stands quite alone, his authority not being limited, as in Turkey and other countries following the religion of Mahomet, by the expounders of the Koran, the class of 'Ulema,' under the 'Sheik-ul-Islam' Since the establishment of the French Protectorate, however, the Sultan has to follow the advice of the French Resident General (an office created April 28, 1912) in all matters. The Resident General holds the appointment also of Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Officer Commanding the French troops is Minister of War. There is a Grand Vizier; Sid Mohammed El Mokri (August 20, 1917), who has to act under the control of the Resident General. The Moorish Minister of Finance acts under the control of the French Director General of Finance and the Minister of Justice under that of the French Secretary General of the Sherifian government.

The capitals of Morocco are Fez, Fasilat, Marakesh, and Rabat, in each of which towns the Sultan has palaces, and in each of which the Sultans of Morocco have always resided from time to time. At present the Sultan has delegated a portion of his authority to three Khalifas, who reside respectively in each of the three first named capitals. The seat of Government, for the present is Rabat. Consequently the Sultan generally resides there, and the public offices are at Rabat, where the Resident General has his residence. The Resident General has residences also at the other capitals and at Casablanca.

The negotiations between France and Spain as to their respective rights in Morocco came to an end in the Franco Spanish Treaty of Madrid, signed on November 27, 1912. In this France acknowledged the right of Spain to exercise its influence in the Spanish zone, the extent of which was clearly defined (See map STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1913). The north Spanish zone lies along the Mediterranean for some 200 miles in length, with an average breadth of 60 miles but varying in depth. It extends from the Algerian border to the sea, and westward to the town of El Kasar el Kebir, and then by a straight line to the Atlantic. The zone is administered, under the control of a Spanish High Commissioner, by a Calipha (whose headquarters are at Tetuan) chosen by the Sultan from a list of two candidates presented by the Spanish Government. It was further agreed that Tangier and its district should be excluded from the Spanish zone, and become a special zone, some 140 square miles in extent.

French Resident General — General Lyautey (held office from April 28, 1912, to December 13, 1916. Re appointed April 7, 1917).

Spanish High Commissioner — General Damaso Berenguer, appointed January 25, 1919.

Calipha of the Spanish Zone — Mulai El-Mehdi, appointed April 19, 1913.

Area and Population

According to the most recent investigation, the area is about 231,500 English square miles. Of this Spain claims 10,000 square miles for the north zone and 960 for Ifni on the west coast (see under SPAIN). The French Service des Renseignements estimated (July, 1919) the native population of the French zone at 5,400,000, the urban population being put at 484,772, of whom 357,314 are Mussulmans, 76,505 Jewish natives and 50,953 Europeans, of whom 1,338 are British, 30,981 French, 11,859 Spanish and 4,418 Italian. The population consists of Berbers, Tuaregs, Shella Berbers, and Arabs, and a considerable number of Jews and Negroes. By adding to the 5,400,000 of the French zone, 600,000 for the Spanish zones and Tangier (which can only be taken as a rough estimate), we get 6,000,000 as the total population of Morocco. Probably the total population does not fall far short of six million, but as stated above this is at best but a rough estimate Official estimates (July 1, 1919) of the populations of the principal towns are given thus —

French Zone						Spanish Zone <sup>1</sup>
	Total	Euro pean		Total	Euro pean		Total	Euro pean
Rabat	32,453	6,468	Meknes	37,217	2,202	Tetuan	30,000	1,000

<sup>1</sup> Melilla, Ceuta and other Spanish possessions are not included Melilla, created a municipality by decree of December 14, 1918, has a total population of 42,590

An agreement (July 20, 1901) makes the valley of the Wad Gir the boundary between France and Algeria, and to the east of this only those who acknowledge French authority will be permitted to dwell A French and Moroccan Commission is entrusted with the formation of police arrangements in the region The number of Christians is estimated at about 87,800, of whom about 11,000 are at Tangier and 41,500 at Casablanca The total number of Europeans in Morocco, exclusive of French and Spanish troops, is probably about 87,800 The Sultan and his subjects are of the Malekite sect of Sunnite Mohammedans

The most important languages are French, Spanish and Arabic

Instruction

The number of schools in the French zone has increased from 37 in 1912 to 201 in 1920 (89 French, 72 French Arabic, 40 French Jewish) In 1920, there were in the high schools, 21 teachers, 345 pupils, in secondary schools, 121 teachers, 2,405 pupils, primary schools, 589 teachers, 18,317 pupils, professional schools, 62 teachers, 695 pupils, evening schools, 2,297 pupils Total, 793 teachers, 24,059 pupils The Spanish Administration has opened numerous schools, not only in the principal towns, but also in some of the most populous districts Total number of pupils (October, 1920) 2,180

Justice

In November, 1913, French Law Courts (Court of Appeal, Courts of Assize, and Petty Courts, civil and criminal) with a special code of laws were established for the needs of Europeans Courts of Appeal, both civil and criminal, have been established for natives, and the administration of justice by the Governors and codes is controlled Native judges are the *cadi*s, religious magistrates who administer justice according to the Koran

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure of the French zone for 5 years —

	1917 (May to December)	1918 <sup>1</sup>	1919 <sup>1</sup>	1920 <sup>1</sup>	1921 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue	2,225,185	3,480,286	4,097,488	7,258,500	10,800,000

The estimated revenue of the Spanish zone for the year 1920-21 was 566,640/, and the expenditure was 566,640/. Cost to Spain of the Spanish Zone —(1920-21) Foreign Office, 9,836,900 pesetas, Ministry of War, 147,893,469 pesetas, Ministry of Marine, 5,392,460 pesetas, Ministry of the Interior, 2,148,467 pesetas, and Ministry of Public Works, 3,692,000 pesetas, making a total cost to Spain of 168,963,296 pesetas.

The Moroccan debt consists of French loans (1904, 1910, 1914) amounting to 16,224,960/, and French and Spanish war indemnities, 5,300,000/. The French Government, however, decided not to require the Moorish Government to pay the annuities on their war indemnity (2,800,000/) until its financial position enables it to support the charge. The 1904 loan amounted to 2,500,000/ and bears interest at 5 per cent. The 1910 loan was for 4,044,960/ and also bore interest at 5 per cent. The 1914 loan, guaranteed by the French Government, was for 6,810,000/, and is to be issued at a rate of interest not exceeding 4.6 per cent. By a law dated March 25, 1916, the 1914 loan was increased to 9,680,000/, thus bringing the total Moroccan debt to 16,224,960/ for loans.

Defence

The Sherifian army is under the supreme command of the Resident-General. The military forces in Morocco are divided into five areas. Rabat, Casablanca, Meknes, Fez, Marrakesh and Taza. Each area is commanded by a General Officer, who, except at Rabat and Casablanca, is in charge of the troops, the civil service and the municipality. The total number of troops on March 1, 1920, was 72,297, made up as follows:—(a) Metropolitan troops—Staff and general services, 380, staff and special services, 974, metropolitan infantry, 17,481, cavalry, 3,419, artillery, 3,092, engineers, 1,912, aviation, 743, train and automobile services, 4,961, administrative troops, 707, gendarmes, 257, goums, 4,619, makhzens, 2,987, partisans, 565, mehallas, 1,825, and Moroccan auxiliary troops, 14,129. (b) Colonial troops—Staff and services, 42, infantry, 12,217, and artillery, 1,987.

The Spanish zone is divided for military purposes into two zones, under the command of a general stationed at Tetuan.

In addition to the regular native forces, the Caliph of the Spanish zone has a bodyguard of about 1,000 men the cost of which to Spain is 1,448,335 pesetas.

Production and Industry

The interior of Morocco, although generally open to travellers, is not permanently occupiable as yet on account of lack of security to both life and property. Immigration is confined principally to the towns and especially to the ports and neighbouring districts. Morocco, therefore, is still in the rudimentary stages of both economic and commercial development, though great progress has recently been made, particularly in the French zone, where measures have been adopted to encourage colonisation, land being sold to Europeans at a comparatively low price for farming purposes on condition that Europeans settle thereon and farm by European methods. Several experimental farms and nursery gardens have been established by the French and Spanish Protectorate Authorities.

The soil is capable of agricultural production, but the methods in use are somewhat primitive. The yield of crops (in metric quintals of 220 pounds) in 1919 is given as follows—barley, 5,746,681, wheat, 4,460,931, beans, 316,915, oats, 29,170. In 1919 the number of animals in the French zone was 6,700,000 sheep, 1,628,874 goats, 1,322,173 cattle, 366,495 asses, 173,664 horses and mules, and 73,513 camels. The vine is of ancient growth in Morocco. In the regions of Fez, Mequinez, Rabat and Donkkala, there are 14,247 acres of vineyards under native cultivation. European vineyards are of recent establishment, the first having been planted near Casablanca in 1908, their total area was 2,581 acres in 1919. A great variety of fruit is grown. In 1919 there were in the French zone 1,761,118 olive trees, 1,743,206 fig trees, 89,078 orange and lemon trees, 76,259 palm trees, and 76,355 almond trees. In February, 1911, cotton was introduced. Fish of all kinds abound in Moroccan waters, more especially sardines and tunny. Eggs form one of the principal exports from the Spanish zone, in 1919, 4,245 tons were exported (3,520 tons to Great Britain).

In addition to its agricultural resources, rich mineral deposits of copper, iron, lead, antimony, sulphur, silver, gold, and petroleum are also said to exist in various parts of the country. In 1919, 339,000 tons of iron ore were exported from the Spanish zone, 1,172 tons of lead ore.

The Moorish Government have now established a postal service under French management. Postal services have long been maintained by the British, French, German and Spanish Governments, with offices at all the ports and at Fez, Mequinez, Alcázar and Marrakesh, but the French have now suppressed their services in the French and Spanish zones, and the Spanish postal service has been suppressed in the French zone. During the war all German offices were closed in the French zone, but not in the Spanish zone. The British services continue. Regular couriers serve all the places named, mails being also sent by all the steamers. There is a daily post to Europe via Cadiz and Algeciras; also parcel post and money order systems, and an aerial convey service every day between Toulouse and Rabat.

The Moroccan Post Office received letters as follows — 1917, 5,263,584, 1918, 4,017,190, 1919, 10,655,518 and despatched letters in 1917, 4,930,334, in 1918, 4,842,528, in 1919, 12,300,500

There are telegraphic submarine cables from Tangier to Cadiz (Eastern Telegraph Co.), Tarifa (Spanish Government), and Oran (French Government), and a cable from Brest to Casablanca, also wireless telegraphic stations belonging to the Moorish Government at Tangier, Rabat, Casablanca, Fez, Mariakesh and Mogador. Land telegraph lines have been laid from Tangier to Arzila, Larache, Alcazar, Arbaoua, Mehedia, Rabat, Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi and Mogador, and from Rabat to Taourirt and Oran. Lines also exist to Fez, Mequinez and Marrakesh and other places in the interior of the French zone. A fairly extensive network is being established in the Spanish zone. The total length of the telegraph lines open to the public on December 31, 1919, was 4,320 miles, carrying 9,037 miles of wire. In 1919, 611,314 telegrams were received and 575,976 were dispatched.

The following railway lines are being worked — Oudja to Taza, Touahar and Fez, 223 miles, from Algerian frontier to Oudja, 9 miles, from Fez to Rabat and Casablanca, 210 miles, from Casablanca to Marrakesh, 171 miles. Branch lines are from Guercif to Fritissa, 7 miles, from Taza to Giradot, 2 miles, from Ber Rechid to Oued Zem, 82 miles. The following lines are nearly completed — Branch line from Meknes to Azron and Ain Leab, 74 miles, and from Fritissa to Outat el Hadj, 66 miles.

In the Spanish zone there is a metre gauge railway from Ceuta to Tetuan, and a small military railway from Rio Martin to Tetuan.

Telephone systems are now in operation in Tangier, and in all the towns of the French Protectorate. Tangier, Arzila and Larache are connected by telephone. Casablanca, Rabat, and Kenitra have also inter urban telephone communication and connections are being effected between Casablanca, Rabat, Fez, and Mariakesh. There are telephones also at Sallé, Mazagan, Ber Rechid and Sellit, and inter urban lines connecting them all. In 1919 there were in the French zone 2,176 subscribers, who sent 2,488,865 messages.

On January 1, 1920, there were 1,561 miles of main roads and 422 miles of secondary roads in the French zone. In the Spanish zone, in the Mehilla district, the Ceuta Tetuan road is open (26 miles), and roads are now under construction from Tetuan to the frontier of the Tangier zone and from Larache to Alcazar, and in other directions. A main coast road runs from Kenitra to Mogador, whilst from Rabat and Salé a road runs via Meknes, Fez, Taza, and Oujdah to Algeria. From Meknès a road runs south to Azrou and Timhadit on the middle Atlas Plateau, and is the beginning of the Imperial Road to Tahlaelt. Further south Marrakesh is connected with the coast by roads running to Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi, and Mogador. A further road runs from Casablanca to Kasba Tadla, and a minor network of military roads (pistes aménagées) run all over the country.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

In the French zone French and Moorish coins are used. The Hassani or native silver coinage comprises dollars,  $\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{4}$  dollars, and dirhems and  $\frac{1}{2}$  dirhems (1 dollar = 10 dirhems). On October 8, 1917, the Moorish dollar was officially fixed as equal to the franc, but in October, 1919, the Hassani was set free, as owing to the rise in the price of silver its intrinsic value became greatly enhanced. It is proposed to introduce one system of currency into French Morocco. At Tangier European goods are paid for in Spanish coin or French coin, French coin is much used at Casablanca (Dar al Baida) and other ports in the French zone, in other parts of Morocco Moorish coin is now almost exclusively used. On July 27, 1914, the new bronze Hassani coinage was issued. The Rial Makhzan is to be divided into 500 mouzounis, so that the mouzouni may represent a hundredth part of a Hassani peseta. Coins of 2 5 and 10 mouzounis have been struck. They are of the same type, differing only in size and the figure indicating their value. Spanish notes of 20 pesetas are in circulation in the Spanish zone.

The metric system of weights and measures are current in the French zone, the metric and native systems in the Spanish zone and the Tangier zone. Native measures.—The Kantar, used for the produce of the country sold by weight, contains 100 Rotals, and is generally equal to about 168 lb, but varies in different districts. The Kantar, 100 Rotals, equal to 112 lb English. The Drah, 8 tomnis, about 22 English inches. The Tangier Mudd, 8 tomnis, equal to  $1\frac{1}{4}$  English bushel. Oil is sold, wholesale, by the kula, that of Tangier actually weighs 28 rotals, 47 lb English, and is equal to about  $5\frac{2}{3}$  British imperial gallons.

NEPAL

An independent Kingdom in the Himalayas, between 26° 25' and 30° 17' N. lat., and between 80° 6' and 88° 14' of E long., its greatest length 500 miles, its greatest breadth about 150, bounded on the north by Tibet, on the east by Sikkim, on the south and west by British India

The sovereign is His Majesty Maharajahadhiraja Tribhubana Bir Bikram Jung Bahádur Shah Bahádur Shumshere Jung, who was born on June 30, 1906, and succeeded his father on December 11, 1911. The Prince Royal and Heir apparent was born on June 11, 1920. The government of Nepal is a military oligarchy. All power is in the hands of the Prime Minister, to whom it was permanently delegated by the Maharajahadhiraja Surendra Bikram Shah under pressure of the Bharadars or nobles of the State in 1867. The present Prime Minister is His Excellency Maharaja Sri Chandra Shumshere Jung, Bahadur Rana, G C B, G C S I, G C M G, G C V O, D C L, who was appointed on June 26, 1901. He holds the rank of General in the British army.

The Gurkhas, a Ráput race originally from Udaipur in Rajputana, who had settled in the province of Gurkha in Nepál, overran the whole country during the latter half of the eighteenth century, and have maintained their supremacy ever since. A commercial treaty between India and Nepal was signed in 1792, and a British Resident was sent to reside at Katmandu, but was recalled two years later. A frontier outrage, in 1814, compelled the Indian Government to declare war, and a British force advanced to within three marches of the capital. Peace was concluded and the Treaty of Segowhie signed on December 2, 1815. Since then the relations of the British with Nepál have been friendly. In 1854 hostilities broke out between the Nepalese and Tibetans, and in 1856 a Treaty was concluded between the Nepalese and Tibetan Governments by which the Tibetans bound themselves to pay an annual tribute of Rs 10,000 to Nepal, to encourage trade between the two countries, and to receive a Representative of Nepál at Lhasa. Besides, trade agents are maintained at Gyantse, Kuti, Kerrong, and other trade marts in Tibet.

The Prime Minister of Nepal practically placed the main power of the State at the disposal of the Government of India during the great war. Besides arranging for the enlistment of special battalions of Gurkhas for the Indian Army (in excess of those normally maintained), the Nepal Government sent to India large contingents of their own troops to replace troops sent abroad. In recognition of help freely rendered, an annual payment of ten lakhs of rupees is made by the Government of India to the Nepal Government.

In accordance with the treaty of Segowhie, which amongst other things provides that accredited ministers of each shall reside at the Court of the other, a British Envoy, with a small escort of Indian sepoy, lives at the capital, but he does not interfere in the internal affairs of the State.

Area and Population.—Area about 54,000 square miles, population estimated at about 5,600,000. The estimated gross revenue is 15,000,000 rupees. The races of Nepál, besides the dominant Gurkhas, include earlier inhabitants of Tartar origin, such as Magars, Guraugs, and Bhutias. The Newars, who came from Southern India, live in the valley or adjacent to it.

Capital, Katmandu, population about 80,000, and of the surrounding valley 300,000.

Religion — Hinduism of an early type is the religion of the Gurkhas, and is gradually but steadily overlaying the Buddhism of the primitive inhabitants The people are in general prosperous Charitable hospitals have been built at Katmandu and other towns, and charitable dispensaries are established, two in each of the districts east and west

Defence—There is a standing regular army of about 30,000, organised in battalions and armed with Lee Enfield and Martini-Henry rifles An irregular force, nearly as numerous, is armed with old Snider and Enfield rifles The artillery force has about 250 guns, two batteries being light field pieces, fairly modern, but the rest old smooth bore muzzle loading guns

Trade—The trade of Nepal with British India during three years ending March 31, 1920, has been as follows (merchandise and treasure) —

From or to Nepal	1917-18	1918-19	1919-20
Imports into India	2,563,000	3,180,884	2,005,720
Exports from India	1,405,000	1,520,489	3,494,475

The principal articles of export are cattle, hides and skins, opium and other drugs, gums, resins and dyes, jute, wheat, pulse, rice and other grains, clarified butter, oil seeds, spices, tobacco, timber, saltpetre The chief imports are cattle, sheep and goats, salt, spices, sugar, tobacco, drugs and dyes, petroleum, leather, brass, iron and copper wares, raw cotton, twist and yarn, silk, cotton and woollen piece goods Nepal possesses very valuable forests in the northern part of the country

The silver mohar is valued at 8 annas and 8 pies of British Indian currency Copper pice, of which 50 go to a silver mohar, are also coined The Indian rupee passes current throughout Nepal

NETHERLANDS (THE)

(KONINKRIJK DER NEDERLANDEN)

Reigning Sovereign

Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Maria, born August 31, 1880, daughter of the late King Willem III, and of his second wife, Princess Emma, born August 2, 1858, daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck, succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, November 23, 1890, came of age August 31, 1898, and was crowned September 6 of that year, married to Prince Henry of Mecklenburg Schwerin, February 7, 1901. Offspring Princess Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, born April 30, 1909.

The royal family of the Netherlands, known as the House of Orange, descends from a German Count Walram, who lived in the eleventh century. Through the marriage of Count Engelbrecht, of the branch of Otto, Count of Nassau, with Jane of Polanen, in 1404, the family acquired the barony of Breda, and thereby became settled in the Netherlands. The alliance with another heiress, only sister of the childless Prince of Orange and Count of Châlons, brought to the house a rich province in the south of France, and a third matrimonial union, that of Prince Willem III of Orange with a daughter of King James II, led to the transfer of the crown of Great Britain to that prince. Previous to this period, the members of the family had acquired great influence in the United Provinces of the Netherlands under the name of 'stadthoudeis,' or governors. The dignity was formally declared to be hereditary in 1747, in Willem IV, but his successor, Willem V, had to fly to England, in 1795, at the invasion of the French republican army. The family did not return till November, 1813, when the fate of the old United Provinces, released from French incorporation, was under discussion at the Congress of Vienna. After various diplomatic negotiations, the Belgian provinces, subject before the French revolution to the House of Austria, were ordered by the Congress to be joined to the Northern Netherlands, and the whole to be erected into a kingdom, with the son of the last stadthouder, Willem V, as hereditary sovereign. In consequence, the latter was proclaimed King of the Netherlands at the Hague on the 16th of March, 1815, and recognised as sovereign by all the Powers of Europe. The union thus established between the northern and southern Netherlands was dissolved by the Belgian revolution of 1830, and their political relations were not readjusted until the signing of the treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which constituted Belgium an independent kingdom. King Willem I abdicated in 1840, bequeathing the crown to his son Willem II, who, after a reign of nine years, left it to his heir, Willem III. This king reigned 41 years, and died in 1890, in default of male heirs, he was succeeded by his only daughter Wilhelmina.

The Sovereign has a civil list of 600,000 guilders. There is also a large revenue from domains, and in addition an allowance of 50,000 guilders for the maintenance of the royal palaces. The family of Orange is, besides, in the possession of a very large private fortune, acquired in greater part by King Willem I in the prosecution of vast enterprises tending to raise the commerce of the Netherlands.

Government and Constitution.

I CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

The first Constitution of the Netherlands after its reconstruction as a kingdom was promulgated in 1815, and was revised in 1848, in 1887 and in 1917. According to this charter the Netherlands form a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture—in default of male heirs, the female line ascends the throne. In default of a legal heir, the successor to the throne is designated by the Sovereign and a joint meeting of both the Houses of Parliament (each containing twice the usual number of members), and by this assembly alone if the case occurs after the Sovereign's death. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18 years. During his minority the royal power is vested in a Regent—designated by law—and in some cases in the State Council.

The executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, while the whole legislative authority rests conjointly in the Sovereign and Parliament, the latter—called the States General—consisting of two Chambers. The Upper or First Chamber is composed of 50 members, elected by the Provincial States. Members of the First Chamber not residing in the Hague, where the Parliament meets, are allowed 10 guilders (16s 8d) a day during the Session of the States General. The Second Chamber of the States General numbers 100 deputies, who are elected directly. Members are allowed 3,000 florins (250l) annually, with travelling expenses. Members of the States General must be Dutch subjects, men or women, and recognised as such.

First chamber (elected 1913) 17 Catholics, 19 Anti Revolutionists, 4 Protestant Party, 9 old Liberals, 6 Liberal Union, 2 Democrats and 3 Socialists, and 13 others.

Second chamber (elected 1918) 4 old Liberals, 6 Liberal Union, 30 Catholics, 13 Anti Revolutionists, 7 Protestant Party, 5 Democrats, 22 Socialists, and 13 others.

The electoral reform act, passed December 12, 1917, provides for universal suffrage and proportional representation. The Members of the Second Chamber are, according to the Electoral Reform Act, passed August 9th, 1919, directly elected by citizens of both sexes who are Dutch subjects not under 23 years. Criminals, lunatics, and certain others are excluded, for certain crimes and misdemeanours there may be temporary exclusion. It is stipulated, however, that until further regulations are introduced, the Members of the Second Chamber will be elected only by the male citizens of the Kingdom who are 25 years of age. The electoral body numbered May 15, 1920, 3,250,247 voters, i.e. 97.6 per cent of the number of citizens of 25 years and older.

The members of the Second Chamber are elected for 4 years, and retire in a body, whereas the First Chamber is elected for 9 years, and every 3 years one third retire by rotation. The Sovereign has the power to dissolve both Chambers of Parliament, or one of them, being bound only to order new elections within 40 days, and to convoke the new meeting within two months.

The Government and the Second Chamber only may introduce new bills, the functions of the Upper Chamber being restricted to approving or rejecting them without the power of inserting amendments. The meetings of both Chambers are public, though each of them, by the decision of the majority, may form itself into a private committee. The ministers may attend at the meetings of both Chambers, but they have only a deliberative vote unless they are members. Alterations in the Constitution can be made only by a bill declaring that there is reason for introducing those alterations, followed by a dissolution of the Chambers and a second confirmation by the new States-General by two thirds of the votes. Unless it is expressly declared, the laws concern only the realm in Europe, and not the Colonies. The executive authority, belonging to the Sovereign, is exercised by a responsible Council of Ministers. The names of the members of the Ministry are —

1 President of the Council of Ministers and Minister of the Interior — Jonkheer Dr Ch J M Ruys de Bierenbroul born December 1, 1873, appointed September 9, 1918

2 The Minister of Foreign Affairs — Jonkheer Dr H A van Karnebeek, born August 21, 1874, appointed September 9, 1918

3 The Minister of Finance — Dr S de Vries, appointed September 9, 1918

4 The Minister of Justice — Dr Th Heemskerk, appointed September 9, 1918

5 The Minister of the Colonies — S de Graaff, appointed November 13, 1919

6 The Minister of War — General W F. Pop, appointed March 31, 1920

7 The Minister of Public Works (Waterstaat) — Dr A A H W Konig, appointed September 9, 1918

8 The Minister of Agriculture, Commerce and Industry — H A van Ysselstein, appointed September 9, 1918

9 The Minister of Marine (ad interim) — General Pop

10 The Minister of Labour — Dr J P M Aalberse, appointed September 25, 1918

11 The Minister of Instruction, Science, and Arts — Dr J Th de Visser, appointed September 25, 1918

Each of the above Ministers has an annual salary of 18,000 guilders, or 1,500l. The Minister of Foreign Affairs enjoys besides 10,000 guilders for representation.

There is a State Council — 'Raad van State' — of 14 members, appointed by the Sovereign, of which the Sovereign is president, and which is consulted on all legislative and a great number of executive matters.

II LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The territory is divided into 11 provinces and 1,110 communes (January 1, 1920). Each province has its own representative body, 'the Provincial States'. The members are elected for 4 years, directly from among the Dutch inhabitants of the province who are 25 years of age. Except that they must be inhabitants of the province, the electors are the same as for the Second Chamber. The members retire in a body and are subject to re-election. The number of members varies according to the population of the province, from 82 for Holland (South) to 35 for Drenthe. The Provincial States are entitled to make ordinances concerning the welfare of the province, and to raise taxes according to legal precepts. All provincial ordinances must be approved by the Crown. The Provincial States exercise a right of control over the municipalities. They also elect the members of the First Chamber of the States-General. They meet twice a year, as a rule in public. A permanent commission composed of 6 (in Drenthe 4) of their members called the 'Deputed States,' is charged with the executive power in the province and the daily administration of its affairs. This committee has also to see the common law executed in the province. Both the Deputed as well as the Provincial States are presided over by a Commissioner of the Sovereign, who in the former assembly has a deciding vote, but in the latter named only a deliberative vote. He is the chief magistrate in the province. The Commissioner and the members of the Deputed States receive an allowance.

Each of the communes forms a Corporation with its own interests and rights, subject to the general law. In each commune is a Council, elected for four years directly, by the same voters as for the Provincial States, provided they inhabit the commune. All the Dutch inhabitants 23 years of age are eligible, the number of members varying from 7 to 45, according to the population. The Council has a right of making and enforcing by laws concerning the communal welfare. The Council may raise taxes according to rules prescribed by common law, besides, each commune receives from the State Treasury an allowance proportioned to the total number of its inhabitants and to the share which its non-contributing inhabitants have failed to pay towards local taxes. All by laws may be vetoed by the Sovereign. The Municipal Budget and the resolutions to alienate municipal property require the approbation of the Deputed States of the province. The Council meets in public as often as may be necessary, and is presided over by a Mayor, appointed by the Sovereign for 6 years. The executive power is vested in a college formed by the Mayor and 2—6 Aldermen (wethouders), elected by and from the Council, this college is also charged with the execution of the public law. The Municipal Police is under the authority of the Mayor, as a State functionary the Mayor supervises the actions of the Council, he may suspend their resolutions for 30 days, but is bound to inform the Deputed States of the province.

Of the total on December 31, 1919, 3,401,348 were males and 3,429,883 females.

According to the result of the census taken December, 1920, the country had a population of 6,841,155.

The area, including the interior waters, amounted in 1909 to 13,196 square miles, whilst the total area, including gulfs and bays, amounted in 1909 to 15,760 square miles

On June 14, 1918, a law was passed for the purpose of forming a new province by the draining of the Zuiderzee to the extent of 523,000 acres. The work is expected to take 15 years, and the total outlay for the first stage is calculated at 66,250,000 florins

Religion.

Entire liberty of conscience is granted to the members of all religious confessions. The royal family and the majority of the inhabitants belong to the Reformed Church. The State Budget contains fixed allowances for the different churches, for Protestant Churches, about 1,388,000 guilders, for Roman Catholics, about 576,000, and for Jews, about 14,000

The number of adherents of the different churches in the various provinces, according to the census of 1909, was Dutch Reformed Church, 2,588,261, Other Protestants, 746,186, Catholics, 2,053,021, Jansenists, 10,082, Jews, 106,409, and other creeds or those of none, 353,158

The government of the Reformed Church is Presbyterian. At the end of 1912 the Dutch Reformed, Walloon, English Presbyterian, and Scotch Churches had 1 Synod, 10 provincial districts, 44 classes, and 1,362 parishes. Their clergy numbered about 1,640. The Roman Catholic Church had one archbishop (of Utrecht), 4 bishops, and 1,133 parishes. The Old Catholics had 1 archbishop, 2 bishops, and 27 parishes. The Jews had about 171 parishes.

Instruction.

Public instruction (primary) is given in all places where needed, religious convictions being respected. Instruction was made obligatory by the Act of 1900, the school age is from 6 to 13.

In 1806, and more expressly in 1848, secular instruction was separated from religious or sectarian instruction. The law on the point of the year 1879 is still in force. By a modification of the Act of 1887 public instruction is diminished and a greater share in education is left to private instruction, if approved as efficient by the State, in which case it is paid for out of public funds. The cost of public primary instruction is borne jointly by the State and the communes, the State contributing to the salaries of the teachers and being responsible for 25 per cent of the costs of founding or purchasing schools. Important modifications of the law took place in the years 1901, 1905, 1910, 1912, 1917 and 1918.

The Secondary Education Act dates from the year 1863, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Superior instruction is given in the larger communities in public or private schools. Private schools may be endowed by the State, private professional schools also by the province and the community. The Higher Education Act dates from the year 1876, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Higher education is given at Universities, in high schools, and grammar schools, either public or private. Private institutions may be endowed by the State. Tuition in Kindergarten has not been regulated by law.

Besides the schools named in the table, there is a great number of special schools, mostly technical. Since 1908 there is also a Government school to train functionaries of the colonial service for superior posts.

In 1917 the State spent on education 3,461,000/, the provinces 48,000/, the Communes, 2,032,000/.

Of the conscripts called out in 1913, 0.6 per cent could neither read nor write, the percentage being highest in Drenthe, 1.5. Of the persons married in 1918, 0.22 per cent of the males and 0.41 per cent of the females could not sign the marriage certificate. Of the convicts in 1911, 4 per cent could neither read nor write. Of the total number of children from 7 to 13 years (school age) on January 15, 1919, 4.71 per cent received no elementary instruction.

Justice and Crime

Justice is administered by the High Court of the Netherlands (Court of Cassation), by 5 courts of justice (Courts of Appeal), by 23 district tribunals, and by 101 cantonal courts, trial by jury is unknown in Holland. The Cantonal Court, which deals with minor offences, is formed by a single judge, the more serious cases are tried by the district tribunals, formed as a rule by 3 judges (in some cases one judge is sufficient), the courts are constituted of 3 and the High Court of 5 judges. All Judges are appointed for life by the Sovereign (the Judges of the High Court from a list prepared by the Second Chamber). They can be removed only by a decision of the High Court.

The number of persons convicted was —

Year	By the Cantonal Courts		By the District Tribunals
	Male	Female	Male	Female
1915	181,575	13,810	12,387	1,520
1916	145,742	15,373	17,606	3,687
1917	127,459	15,481	21,779	4,534
1918	111,981	15,807	29,029	5,680

The number of inmates in the 28 prisons during the years 1917, 1918, and 1919 was respectively, 12,730, 12,165, and 10,146 males, and 985, 978, and 1,247 females, in the 27 houses of detention, 24,425, 20,812, and 18,682 males, and 2,098, 1,787, and 1,520 females. There are also 5 State work establishments, three of which (two for males and one for females) are meant for drunkards, beggars and vagabonds, two for smugglers (males), of which one was transformed in December, 1918, into an establishment where a trial is being given to the system of imprisonment spent in common agricultural labour. The numbers of inmates of the first three establishments were respectively in the years 1917, 1918, and 1919, 1,891, 2,674, and 2,679 males, and 196, 412, and 356 females, in the five establishments for smugglers there were respectively 6,347, 9,611, and 3,498 inmates (males), in the establishment where a trial is being given to the system of imprisonment spent in common agricultural labour, there were in the year 1919, 3,676 males.

In 1901 an Act was passed reforming State reformatories for the education of juvenile criminals and establishing disciplinary schools for juvenile criminals and for children admitted by request of parents or guardians (correction paternelle). The number of inmates during the years 1917 and

1918 in the 6 State reformatories was 1,327, 1,394 boys, and 116, 118 girls, in the 5 disciplinary schools 880, 1,145 boys, and 158, 173 girls

There are both State and communal police. The State police consists of field constables and cavalry. The former are spread over the country, the latter guard the frontiers (eastern and southern). The cavalry police (maréchaussée) numbers about 25 officers and about 1,018 men. There are about 1,339—appointed and paid by the Government—field constables, divided into numerous brigades. Besides each commune has its own field constables or police force.

Pauperism and Social Insurance

The relief of the poor is largely effected by the religious societies and organised private charity. The State does not interfere, except when no relief is to be obtained from private charity, in that case the pauper must be supported by the commune where he is living. There is no poor rate in the Netherlands. Mendicity and vagabondage are treated as offences, and persons so convicted can be placed in a State work establishment. Workhouses for the poor are found in very few communes.

Number of poor relieved in the Kingdom during the year 1918—Heads of families, 183,607, other persons, 53,388, lunatics and idiots, 14,113, women in child-bed, 7,891, in asylums (almshouses), 68,862, in hospitals, 79,497, in workhouses, 3,925.

The amount spent on outdoor relief in 1918 was 21,526,937 florins, for lunatics and idiots 7,399,534 florins, for maternity cases 63,672 florins, for asylums 11,389,607 florins, for hospitals 8,671,102 florins, and for workhouses 274,227 florins.

On September 19, 1916, a Government scheme for unemployment insurance was set up in Holland.

The amount of the chief taxes per head of the population was, in 1919 97.69 guilders

The expenditure of the 'Department for the Colonies' entered in the budget estimates only refers to the central administration. There is a separate budget for the great colonial possessions in the East Indies, voted as such by the States-General. The financial estimates for the year 1921 are distributed between the colonies and the mother country in the following proportions —

	Guilders		Guilders
Expenditure in the colonies	600,666,822	Revenues in the mother country	38,824,170
Home Government expenditure	218,646,142	Revenues in the colonies	711,366,986

During the years 1850–1920, 459,007,691 guilders have been devoted to the redemption of the public debt

The rateable annual value of buildings was given at 224,740,754 guilders in 1919, and of land, 98,232,269 guilders

The various provinces and communes have their own separate budgets, the provincial expenditure for 1917 was 29,264,350 guilders, the revenue at 30,089,522 guilders, the communal expenses in 1917 amounted to 473,042,000 guilders, whereof 149,796,000 guilders for debt. The communal revenues were, in the same year, 483,290,000 guilders

Defence.

I FRONTIER

The Netherlands are bordered on the south by Belgium, on the east by Germany. On the former side the country is quite level, on the latter more hilly, the land frontier is open all round. The frontiers are defended by few fortresses. The scheme of defence adopted in 1874 contemplates concentration of the defensive forces in a restricted area, known as the 'Holland Fortress'. This comprises the provinces of North and South Holland, with parts of Zeeland and Utrecht. Two-thirds of the area is surrounded by the sea. On the land side, to the East and South, are lines of more or less permanent works, which can be rendered very difficult of attack by inundations. There are also strong works on the coast, notably the Helder group, barring access to the Zuiderzee, and the Hollandsch Diep and Volkerak position, while the entrances to the Amsterdam and Rotterdam ship canals are defended by powerful forts. The citadel of the whole is Amsterdam, which is well fortified. Here also inundations would almost preclude a successful attack. The coast defences are in good order and are to be further strengthened, but the defences on the land side, except the position of Amsterdam, have of late years been neglected. Moreover, the control of the inundations is not entirely in military hands.

Apart from the Holland Fortress are the works on the Western Schelde. These have hitherto been unimportant, but a plan has been adopted to augment them by entirely new works at Flushing.

II. ARMY

According to an Act of 1912, service in the army is partly voluntary and partly compulsory, the voluntary enlistments bear a small proportion to the compulsory. Every Dutch citizen and, in certain circumstances, every other resident in the Netherlands, is liable to personal service in the army (or navy) from the age of 19 up to 40. Actual service in the ranks is determined by lot, but substitution is not permitted. The maximum strength of the annual contingent is fixed at 25,500 (including 600 for the sea service).

The conscripted militiamen belong to the active army for 6 years for the unmounted corps, and 8 years for the mounted corps (sea service 5 years). The 'full' training time is  $8\frac{1}{2}$  months in the infantry, engineers, and garrison artillery (under certain circumstances  $6\frac{1}{2}$  months), and 24 months in the cavalry, horse and field artillery. A certain proportion of the full course men of the infantry and garrison artillery (between 3,800 and 4,500 men, designed by lot) are retained for an additional 44 months. The full course men are called up in two batches, two thirds in January (March), one third in October.

With regard to further training, men belonging to mounted corps are liable to be called out once in their army service for 4 weeks, the others, once for 4 and the second time for 3 weeks.

After having fulfilled their active service the militiamen pass to the 'landweer' for 5 years, they can be called out once in their 5 years, for 6 days. Men of mounted corps and of the navy are excused from landweer service. Men after they have completed their landweer service belong to the 'landstorm' up to the age of 40, together with all men who have not passed through the ranks.

The landweer forces are organised in units corresponding to those of the first line, except that there are no mounted troops. Cadres are maintained in time of peace for the landweer formations.

The field army consists of 4 divisions and an independent cavalry brigade. A division contains 3 brigades of infantry each consisting of 2 regiments of 3 battalions, 1 squadron, a field artillery regiment (16 three gun batteries, 48 guns), a group of 2 four gun batteries of heavy artillery, 2 companies of cyclists, 54 machine guns, and 2 companies of engineers. The total strength of a division in the field, with staff, would be about 20,000 officers and men. The cavalry brigade has 4 regiments, each of 3 squadrons, 4 companies of cyclists and 4 three gun batteries of horse artillery. There are also 66 battalions of army troops, of which 48 are landweer battalions. The landweer troops, with the fortress artillery of the active army, would hold the fortresses.

The peace strength of the Netherlands army, including the 'landweers,' was on April 2, 1920, 7,961 officers and 262,304 men, and comprises 137,856 rifles, 156 field and 42 heavy guns. There are 156,000 additional trained men, and 250,000 untainted men available for mobilisation. Military budget for 1921 was 73,701,075 florins. A Bill has been passed to spend about two millions sterling on the coast defences, including armament.

The Netherlands infantry is armed with the Mannlicher magazine rifle, model 95. Cavalry and engineers carry the Mannlicher carbine. The field artillery, including the horse batteries, is armed with a shielded Q F Krupp gun of 7.5 cm.

III. NAVY.

The Navy is maintained for a double purpose—viz the protection of the Dutch waters and coast, and the defence of the East Indian possessions. These latter contribute to the maintenance of that division of it known as the Indian Marine.

Following is a list of the principal ships of the Dutch Navy

Name	Displacement, Tons	Armour water line	Max Armour on gun	Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-power	Normal Speed Knots	Designed

There are also 3 armoured gunboats, and 4 others of little value in home waters, and about 9 in the East Indies, 20 small destroyers, 14 submarines, a submarine depot ship and 12 mine layers. A British submarine interned was bought by the Dutch Government and taken over in June, 1917, as O8.

A naval crisis took place in February, 1919, when the Minister of Marine resigned. The future of the navy has been under the consideration of a Fleet Committee.

Production and Industry

I AGRICULTURE

The surface of the Netherlands was divided in 1919 as follows (in hectares 1 hectare = 2.47 acres) — Uncultivated land (heath) 487,653, water and morass, 126,714, dykes and roads, 58,253, untaxed land, 74,858, building land, houses, &c., 54,951. Total, 802,429. Cultivated land arable land, 908,622, pasture, 1,209,743, gardens and orchards, 93,692, forest, 249,056. Total, 2,461,112.

Large estates prevail in the provinces of Zeeland, South Holland, Groningen, and North Holland, small estates in North Brabant, Guelders Limburg, and Overijssel.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, were as follows —

Products	1918	1919	1920	Products	1918	1919	1920
	Acre	Acre	Acre		Acre	Acre	Acre
Winter wheat	101,982	141,840	188,957	Brown mustard seed	1,220	607	1,692

According to the live stock census of March 5, 1919, Holland possessed 362,011 horses, 1,968,609 cattle, 437,075 sheep, and 449,829 pigs

II MINING AND MANUFACTURES

A few coal mines are found in the province of Limburg, most of them belong to the State. The quantity of coal extracted in 1919 was 3,401,346 metric tons, valued at 70,909,000 guilders. In 1919 the private mines produced 1,925,249 tons, and the State mines, 1,476,297 tons, total for 1919, 3,401,346 tons. There is one salt mine at Bockelo.

There are no official returns of all the manufacturing industries. According to the last reports there were, in 1919 354 distilleries, 10 sugar refineries, 20 beet sugar refineries, 28 salt works, and 271 breweries.

III FISHERIES

In 1919, 6,239 vessels of all kinds were engaged in the fisheries, with crews numbering about 22,450. The produce of the herring fishery in the North Sea was valued at 36,675,168 guilders in 1919. The quantity of oysters produced in 1919 amounted to 3,916,248 kilos.

Commerce

The Netherlands is a free trading country. A few duties are levied, but they have only a fiscal or statistical, not a protectionist, character.

Treaties of commerce and navigation between the Netherlands and Great Britain were signed in 1837, 1851 and 1889, and (having special reference to the colonies) in 1815, 1827, and 1871, providing, amongst other things, for the 'most favoured nation' treatment. The treaties of 1837, 1851, and 1889, are terminable on a year's notice, with exception of that of 1851, which is terminable on six weeks' notice, when the privileges granted by the Netherlands law of 1850 may be withdrawn. For the treaties of 1815, 1827 and 1871 no time of notice has been stipulated.

The following are the returns of the imports for home consumption and the export of home produce for six years (in thousands of guilders) —

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
1915	2,111,000	1,749,000	1918	608,360	381,210

Shipping and Navigation

The number of vessels in the mercantile navy at the end of 1919 was — Sailing vessels 283, of 27,713 English tons, steamers 570, of 804,307 English tons

The following table gives the number and tonnage (in English measure ment) of vessels which entered and cleared the ports of the Netherlands —

Year	Entered
	With Cargoes		In Ballast		Total

Internal Communications

I CANALS AND RAILWAYS

The total extent of canals is about 2,000 miles, of roads about 3,000 miles

In 1919 the total length of the principal tramway lines was 1,830 miles, 306,787,000 passengers were carried, and 1,385,000 kilogrammes of goods. Their revenue amounts to 36,606,000 guilders.

In 1919 the 2 principal railways had a length of 2,377 miles. The breadth of the railway gauge is 1.50 metres, or 4 ft 11 in. In 1919 60,248,000 passengers and 13,819,000 metric tons of goods were carried on the railways. The revenue was 152,733,000 guilders, and the expenditure 112,641,000 guilders. All railway companies are private; there is a State railway company, only so named because the road is owned by the State. A project is on foot for bringing the four railway companies under one control.

II POST AND TELEGRAPHS

The postal traffic was as follows in 2 years —

—	Letters	Post Cards	Newspapers and Printed Matter	Parcels	Letters with Money Orders
1918
Internal	173,480,000	167,240,000	373,158,000	10,568,000	864,981
Foreign	26,759,000	13,443,000	19,926,000	552,000	72,966
1919
Internal	193,189,000	157,794,000	405,789,000	13,083,000	826,206
Foreign	45,085,000	13,402,000	22,270,000	1,097,000	135,236

The receipts of the Post Office in 1919 were 30,121,000 guilders, the expenditure in 1919 42,797,000 guilders.

There are several private telegraph lines, but most of the lines are owned by the State. The length of State lines on Dec 31, 1919, was 5,124 miles, the length of wires 29,345 miles. The number of State offices was, on December 31, 1919, 1,421. The number of paid messages by State and private lines in 1919 was 10,250,200. The receipts of the State amounted in the same year to 8,669,000 guilders, and the ordinary expenses in 1919 to 9,707,000 guilders.

In 1919 the interurban telephone system had 2,228 miles of line and 66,921 miles of wire, and is administered by the State, 10,653,218 interurban and 275,580 international conversations were held. The receipts were in the same year for interurban and international intercourse 11,101,000 guilders, the total expenses in 1919 6,942,000 guilders. •

Money and Credit

The money in general circulation is chiefly silver. Before 1875 the Netherlands had the silver standard, but a bill which passed the States General in the session of 1875 allowed an unrestricted coinage of ten-guilder pieces in gold, whereas the coinage of silver was suspended for an unlimited time.

Value of money minted during the following years (in thousands of guilders) —

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper and Nickel	For the East and West India Colonies	Total value	Total number of pieces
1881-1900	8,564	13,710	1,310	10,834	34,418	452,342,090
19 — 1910	992	33,870	2,005	15,230	52,097	400,679,000
1914-1918	11,385	47,100	1,593	14,858	110,531	488,438,476
1919	—	6,000	110	3 420	9,530	73 200,000

The Bank of the Netherlands is a private institution, but it is the only one which has the right of issuing bank notes. This right, granted in 1863 for 25 years, was prolonged in 1888 for 15 years, and prolonged again for the same term in 1903, with some alterations in the conditions, e.g. all the paper money is to be issued by the Bank. In 1918 the Charter was once more prolonged for a further 15 years. The Bank does the same business as other banks, only with more guarantees. Two fifths of the paper money in circulation must be covered. It has agencies in all places of importance.

Year	Notes in Circulation, March 31	Total Exchanges years ending March 31	Stock of Gold, March 31	Stock of Silver, March 31
			1,000 guilders	1,000 guilders
1919	1,023,175,000	1,805,287,045	671,041	7,532

1921	1,039,316,000	—	621,038	16,687

The capital amounts to 20,000,000 guilders, the reserve fund in 1915 to 5,000,000 guilders. The Bank keeps the State Treasury and the cash of the State Postal Savings Bank and of other institutions. It receives  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent of the clear gains, the remainder is divided between the State and the Bank in proportion of 2 : 1.

There are many savings banks, all private. Besides these there is a State postal savings bank, established in 1881. The following table gives some particulars of both —

Year	Number of Savings Banks	Amount deposited (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Amount withdrawn (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Total Deposits at end of year (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Number of Depositors at end of year	Amount per inhabitant Gldrs

Money, Weights, and Measures

MONEY

The standard coin is the 10 florin piece weighing 6 720 grammes, 900 fine, and thus containing 6 048 grammes of fine gold. The unit of the silver coinage is the gulden or florin, weighing 10 grammes, 945 fine and containing 9 45 grammes of fine silver.

Gold is legal tender, and the silver coins issued before 1875

The principal coins are —

The gulden, guilder or florin of 100 cents = 1s 8d, or 12 g = £1

The rijksdaalder = 2½ guilders

The gold piece of ten guilders and of five guilders

½ guilder, ¼ guilder (kwartje), ⅙ guilder (dubbeltje)

Cent coins are of nickel, 5 cents, of bronze, 1 cent, ½ cent, and 2½ cents

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The metric system of weights and measures, and, with trifling changes, the metric denominations are adopted in the Netherlands

Colonies.

The colonial possessions of the Netherlands, situated in the East Indies and the West Indies, embrace an area of about 783,000 English square miles. The total population, according to the last returns (December 31, 1917), was, approximately, 47,149,903, or nearly eight times as large as that of the mother country.

DUTCH EAST INDIES

The Dutch possessions in Asia, forming the territory of Dutch East India (Nederlandsch Oost Indie), are situated between 6° N and 11° S latitude, and between 95° and 141° E longitude.

In 1602 the Dutch created their East India Company. This Company conquered successively the Dutch East Indies, and ruled them during nearly two centuries. After the dissolution of the Company in 1798 the Dutch possessions were governed by the mother country.

Government and Constitution.

Politically, the territory, which is under the sovereignty of the Netherlands, is divided into (1) Lands under direct government, (2) Subject native States.

With regard to administration, the Dutch possessions in the East Indies are divided into residencies, divisions, regencies, districts, and dezzas (villages). They are also very often divided into (1) Java and Madura, (2) the Outposts—Sumatra, Borneo, Riau Lingga Archipelago, Banca, Billiton, Celebes, Molucca Archipelago, the small Sunda Islands, and a part of New Guinea.

Java, the most important of the colonial possessions of the Netherlands, was formerly administered, politically and socially, on a system established by General Johannes Graaf Van den Bosch in 1832, and known as the 'culture system'. It was based in principle on the officially superintended labour of the natives, directed so as to produce not only a sufficiency of food for themselves, but a large quantity of colonial produce best suited for the European market. To day, however, the old system no longer exists.

The whole of Java—including the neighbouring island of Madura—is divided into seventeen residencies, each governed by a Resident, assisted by several Assistant Residents and a number of subordinate officials, called Contrôleurs. The Resident and his assistants exercise almost absolute control over the province in their charge, not, however, directly, but by means of a vast hierarchy of native officials. The Outposts are administered by functionaries with the titles of 'Governor,' 'Resident,' 'Assistant Resident,' 'Contrôleur,' &c.

The superior administration and executive authority of Dutch India rest in the hands of a Governor General. He is assisted by a Council of five members, partly of a legislative, partly of an advisory character. The members of the Council, however, have no share in the executive. The Governor General and the members of the Council are nominated by the Queen. In 1917 a 'Volksraad' was installed to discuss the budget.

Governor-General—Dr D. Fock, appointed September 28, 1920.

The Governor General represents not only the executive power of government, but he has a right of passing laws and regulations for the administration of the colony, so far as this power is not reserved to the legislature of the mother-country. However, he is bound to adhere to the constitutional principles on which the Dutch Indies are governed, and which are laid down in the 'Regulations for the Government of Netherlands India,' passed by the King and States-General of the mother-country in 1854, and altered many times since.

The total number of Europeans and persons assimilated to them was, in 1905, 80,910, of these 38,812 males and 34,982 females were Dutch, of whom 32,026 males and 32,288 females were born in the East Indies, of the remainder, 1,406 were German, 184 French, 312 English, 197 Swiss, 315 Belgians. Of the remaining population about 563,000 were Chinese, 29,000 Arabs, and 23,000 other Orientals, and about 37,200,000 natives. In 1917 the population was estimated as follows 138,875 Europeans, 46,232,127 natives and 832,667 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs.

The whole population of the colony is legally divided into Europeans and persons assimilated with them, and natives and persons assimilated with these. The former generally live under the same laws as the inhabitants of the mother country, while in the government of the latter the Indian customs and institutions are considered. The Governor General however, is, in agreement with the Council, authorised to make individual exceptions to this rule.

Religion

Entire liberty is granted to all religious denominations. The Reformed Church counted, in 1920, 37 ministers and 30 assistants, the Roman Catholic 31 curates and 82 priests, not salaried out of the public funds. In 1920, about 559 missionaries of various societies were at work.

The bulk of the natives are Mohammedans, there are also some millions of converted Christians and Animists, and a small number of Buddhists.

Instruction

There are public (Government) primary schools, where instruction is given through the medium of the Dutch language for (1) Europeans and persons assimilated with them (a 7 years' course), (2) Chinese ('Dutch Chinese schools,' with a 7 years' course), and (3) Natives ('Dutch Native schools,' with a 7 years' course). Public schools where instruction is given through the medium of a native tongue are (1) the 'second class' schools (with a 3, 4, or 5 years' course), and (2) 'Désa schools' (with a 3 years' course of extremely elementary instruction). Besides, there are schools with an extended primary instruction (in the Dutch language) with a 3 years' course, open to all, without distinction of race. Side by side with the public schools, there are various private schools.

For secondary education there are public secondary schools. In addition to the Government institutions there are private secondary schools for girls with a 3 years' course. Higher education is given at the Technical High School at Bandoeng, erected in 1920.

The following table shows the number of schools, the school attendance, the teaching staff, and the expenditure on education in 1920 —

Furthermore, there were in 1920 the following training schools —Four public schools for training in engineering, architecture, and mining (4 years course) and one trading school (3 years course), with 111 teachers and 1,720 pupils, one private trade school (3 years' course), with 15 teachers and 102 pupils, one 2 years' and one 3 years' commercial school with 115 pupils, one 2 years navigation course with 6 pupils, two training schools for physicians (9 years' course) with 47 teachers and 321 pupils, a training school for native jurists (6 years' course) with 9 teachers and 64 pupils, a training school for civil service officers, a training school for police officers, 9 training schools for native officials (7 years' course) with 80 teachers and 988 pupils, 6 training schools for European teachers (2 and 3 years course) with 133 pupils, and 12 private schools with 274 pupils

For native teachers there are the following schools with instruction in the Dutch language 8 (1 for girls) public training schools (6 years course) and two higher training schools (3 years' course) with 816 pupils (76 girls) with instruction in the native tongue, 16 (4 for girls) normal schools (4 years course, 1,007 pupils, 135 being girls), 17 normal classes (2 years' course, 688 pupils), and 30 classes (2 years course) for native teachers for Dusa schools. Besides there are 3 private training schools with the Dutch language (6 years course 204 pupils), and 17 with a native tongue (4 years' course, 776 pupils)

For Chinese teachers there is a school with instruction in the Dutch language (66 pupils)

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice for Europeans is entrusted to European judges, while for natives their own chiefs have a large share in the trial of cases. There is a High Court of Justice at Batavia—courts of justice at Batavia, Samarang, Soerabaya, Padang, Medan and Makassar—Resident courts and police courts for Europeans, native courts, police courts, Regent courts, district courts, and courts of priests for natives

Finance

The local revenue is derived from land, taxes on houses and estates, from licences, customs duties, poll and income taxes, and a number of indirect taxes, from the Government monopolies of salt, pawnshops, and opium, rail ways, and from the sale of Government products

Revenue and expenditure —

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Surplus or Deficit

1921	718,796,156	780,239,373	- 61,443,217

The sources of revenue in 1921 are stated as follows (in guilders)

Receipts in the Netherlands from sales of cinchona, 943,400, railways, 280,000, share of the State in the profits of the Bilton Company, 5,000,000, various, 23,870,770. Receipts in India from sales of opium 44,035,000, import, export, and excise duties, 107,095,000, land revenues, 24,277,500, sales of salt, 17,896,280, forests, 22,877,600, railways, 80,640,000, coal, 28,887,500, income tax, 44,000,000, from all other sources, 318,993,106

Public debt on December 31, 1919, was 426,508,102 guilders

Defence.

The Dutch forces in the East Indies constitute a colonial army which is entirely separate from the home army. The colonial army consists of about one quarter Europeans to three quarters Natives, and comprises 31 battalions and 4 dépôt battalions of infantry, 4 machine-gun companies, 2 companies of cyclist-soldiers, 6 squadrons, 1 dépôt squadron of cavalry, 9 field batteries, 3 mountain batteries, 2 howitzer batteries, 8 motor batteries, 6 fortresses and coast companies of artillery, 4 field companies, 1 railway and telegraph company, and 1 dépôt company of engineering troops, and a flying corps with 25 officers and 40 aeroplanes. In 1918 compulsory service was introduced in the militia for Europeans between 19 and 32 years of age, and in the landstorm between the ages of 33 and 45. It is calculated that this will yield 25,000 men.

In most battalions there are 4 companies composed either of Europeans or of Natives, the greater part of the officers, and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers, are Europeans. The artillery has European and Native gunners and Native drivers. The Europeans (except the militia) and Natives are recruited by volunteers. The strength of the colonial army in 1920 was 1,308 officers, 38,033 volunteers, of whom 6,870 were Europeans and 6,500 militiamen.

Besides the Army there are different armed troops, viz (1) The Legion of the Native Prince Mangkoe Negara, consisting of infantry, numbering 3,600 men. In case of war this Legion would be placed at the disposal of the Government. (2) The Barisan, being a native infantry of Madoera, 2,833 men, designed to maintain peace in the island and to participate in campaigns in case of war. (3) The police soldiers, numbering about 9,600 men. (4) Different voluntary corps, composed of Europeans and Natives, to assist in case of war or insurrection.

The expenditure for defence (army and navy) estimated for 1921 amounts to 129,718,750 guilders.

The Netherlands Navy in the East Indies numbers 187 officers and 980 European and 1,453 native non-commissioned officers and sailors, and consists of 30 men-of-war, many of them old and unserviceable. There is, besides, the Colonial Navy, consisting of 22 smaller ships of no naval value, with 173 Europeans and 811 natives, employed for civil service duties.

Production and Industry.

The greater part of the soil of Java is claimed as Government property, and it is principally in the residencies in the western part of Java that there are private estates, chiefly owned by Europeans and by Chinese. The bulk of the people are agricultural labourers. Formerly the Government or private landowners could enforce one day's gratuitous work out of seven, or more, from all the labourers on their estates, in 1882 the greater part of these enforced services for the Government was abolished, in return for the payment of one guilder per head yearly, and the remainder were abolished in 1914 in return for an increased poll tax.

The cultivated area under various 'native' cultures (first and second) in Java and Madura were as follows, in acres, at the end of 1919: rice, 8,465,269, maize, 4,784,086, cassava, 1,794,193, arachis, 428,554, soya beans, 391,577, and other secondary crops, 1,348,952, sugar cane, 35,189, tobacco, 245,795, indigo, 13,303, capsicum, 37,641.

Owing to the 'agrarian law' (1870), which has afforded opportunity to private energy for obtaining waste lands on hereditary lease (emphyteusis) for seventy-five years, private agriculture has greatly increased, as well in Java as in the Outposts. In 1919 were ceded on lease in Java by the Government to 891 Companies and Europeans, 1,280,514 acres, to 146 foreign Orientals, 62,882 acres, to 6 natives, 2,073 acres—total, 1,345,469 acres. In 1919, the lands, now the property of Companies, had an extent of 4,603,690 acres, of which 2,816,733 acres were in Java, and 1,786,957 acres in the Outposts.

The production of cinchona, in kilogrammes, in Java was as follows in 1919 — 1,046,120 on government plantations, 6,528,245 on estates on Emphyteusis, and 197,799 on private estates, making a total of 7,772,164 kilos. The production of tobacco, in kilogrammes, was as follows in 1919 — 38,956,435 in Java and 5,785,861 in Sumatra total 44,742,296 kilos.

The production of tea in Java, in kilogrammes, was as follows 1915, 46,183,334, 1916, 117,028,000, 1917, 43,271,000 (estimated), 1918, 34,406,064, 1919 40,392,323.

The production of cacao in Java was (in kilogrammes) 1915, 1,643,440, 1916, 1,209,650, 1917, 1,189,790, 1918, 978,717, 1919, 1,019,729.

The tin mines of Banca are worked by the Government, those of Biliton and Riau by private enterprise. Their total yield was, in tons 1915, 20,845, 1916, 22,231, 1917 21,504, 1918, 19,703, 1919, 20,724.

The yield of the principal coal mines in Java, Sumatra and Borneo was, in tons 1915, 610,010, 1916, 748,815, 1917, 332,129, 1918, 535,154, 1919, 947,915.

The production of the principal mineral oil enterprises was in thousands of kilogrammes 1914, 1,564,927, 1915, 1,643,503, 1916, 1,730,180, 1917, 1,790,610, 1918, 1,764,203.

Commerce.

No difference is made between Dutch and foreign imports and vessels. There is a tariff on certain goods, on some articles there is a small export duty, including tobacco.

At the end of 1919 the total length of railways (State and private) and tramways was about 3,923 miles (3,130 in Java and 793 in Sumatra), the gross receipts (1918) about 79,070,090 guilders, working expenses, 42,550,106 guilders, number of passengers about 134,617,698

The Government telegraphs extended in 1919 over 6,822 miles, the Government telegraph cables over 6,260 miles, together over 13,082 miles. The number of post and telegraph stations in 1919 was 645 for Java and Madura, and 390 for the other islands, while the numbers of telegrams were 2,610,468 (internal) and 937,232 (foreign intercourse). Internal letters and postcards carried in 1919, 32,063,921, while there were 25,105,163 newspapers, &c., for the interior.

The Government telephone aerial lines extended in 1919 over 22,565 miles, the Government telephone cables over 21,711 miles. At the end of 1919 there were 228 telephone exchanges and 21,841 telephones, while the number of the long distance calls in that year was 977,241.

Money and Credit

The 'Java Bank,' established in 1828, has a capital of 6,000,000 guilders, and a reserve on March 31, 1920, of 3,002,109 guilders. The Government has a control over the administration. Two fifths of the amount of the notes, assignats, and credits must be covered by specie or bullion. In March, 1920, the value of the notes in circulation was 320,812,220 guilders, and of the bank operations 218,292,580. There are some other Dutch and Chinese banks, besides branches of British, American, and Japanese banks.

In the savings banks, including the Postal savings bank, there were in 1917, about 180,000 depositors, with a deposited amount of 25,000,000 guilders.

Weights and Measures

The Amsterdamsch Pond	= 1 09 lb avoirdupois
Pikol	= 133½ " "
Catty	= 1½ " "
Tjengkal	= 4 yards

The legal coins of 10, 5, 2½, 1 and ½ guilders, as well as the weights and measures, of Dutch India, are those of the Netherlands. But the country has coins of its own, viz., 25, 10, 5, 2½, 1, and ½ cent pieces.

Consular Representatives.

British Consul General at Batavia — W N Dunn (on leave), J Crosby (Acting)

Commercial Agent — H A N Bluett

There are also consular officers at Samarang, Sourabaya, Makasser, Medan, Padang, and Koepang

DUTCH WEST INDIES

The Dutch possessions in the West Indies are (a) Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, and (b) the colony Curaçao

Surinam or Dutch Guiana

Dutch Guiana or Surinam is situated on the north coast of S America between 2 and 6° N latitude, and 53° 50' and 58° 20' E longitude, and bounded on the north by the Atlantic Ocean, on the east by the river Marowijne, which separates it from French Guiana, on the west by the river Corantyn, which separates it from British Guiana, and on the south by inaccessible forests and savannas to the Tumuc Humic Mountains

At the peace of Breda, in 1667, between England and the United Netherlands, Surinam was assured to the Netherlands in exchange for the colony of New Netherlands in North America, and this was confirmed by the treaty of Westminster of February, 1674. Since then Surinam has been twice in the power of England, 1799 till 1802, when it was restored at the peace of Amiens, and in 1804 to 1816, when it was returned according to the Convention of London of August 13, 1814, confirmed at the peace of Paris of November 20, 1815, with the other Dutch colonies, except Berbice, Demerara, Essequibo, and the Cape of Good Hope

The administration and executive authority is in the hands of a governor assisted by a council consisting of the governor as president, a vice president and three members, all nominated by the Queen. The Colonial States form the representative body of the colony. The members (13) are chosen for 6 years by electors in proportion of one in 200 electors

Governor — Baron van Heemstra Appointed December, 1920

Dutch Guiana is divided into thirteen districts

Area, 46,060 English square miles, population (January 1, 1920) 109,810, exclusive of the negroes and Indians living in the forests. Capital, Paramaribo, 36,038 inhabitants

Principal exports in 1919 — Sugar, 5,138,687 kilogs, rum, 234,908 litres, cocoa, 1,669,617 kilogs.

The communication between several districts of the colony is carried on by vessels and small steamers. A Colonial steamship service extends to British Guiana.

Vice Consul at Paramaribo — Rev. W. L. Kissack

Vice Consul at Nickerie — Chr. Spence

Curacao.

The colony of Curacao consists of two groups of islands about 500 miles apart. One group is made up of the first three islands in the following list, the other of the last three —

—	Square Miles	Population Dec 31, 1919
Curacao	210	34,021
Bonaire	95	7,051
Aruba	69	8,934
St. Martin <sup>1</sup>	17	2,552
St. Eustache	7	1,350
Saba	5	1,741

There is a Governor, assisted by a Council composed of a vice-president and three members, nominated by the Sovereign. There is also a Colonial Council consisting of thirteen members nominated by the Sovereign. The different islands, except Curacao, are under officials called 'Gezaghebbers,' nominated by the Sovereign. In 1919 there were 49,465 Roman Catholics, 5,979 Protestants, 558 Jews. Schools in 1919 about 44 with about 7,085 pupils. In 1919, 1,663 births were registered, 298 marriages and 910 deaths.

The revenue is derived from import, export, and excise duties, taxes on land, and some indirect taxes. In the Budget for 1921 the revenue is estimated at 1,116,329 guilders, and the expenditure at 2,407,118 guilders, the difference is supplied by the mother country.

The militia (Schutterij) of the Isle of Curacao consisted at the end of 1919 of 24 officers and 435 men, the garrison of 8 officers and 164 men.

The imports of Curacao and the other islands in 1919 were valued at 8,691,367 guilders, the exports of Curacao and the other islands at 2,765,479 guilders. The chief products are maize, beans, pulse, cattle, salt, and phosphate of lime. The chief industry is oil-refining.

There entered the ports of the different islands in 1919, 3,168 vessels of 1,671,478 tons net.

Vice Consul at Curacao — I. H. Laing

NICARAGUA.

(REPUBLICA DE NICARAGUA )

Constitution and Government

THE Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua is that which came into operation on April 5th, 1913. This is the same as was promulgated on March 12, 1912, with the exception of Articles 168 and 170. Previous constitution was that of March 30, 1905. It vests the legislative power in a Congress of two houses consisting of 40 deputies elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, and 13 Senators elected for 6 years. The Executive power is with a President appointed for 4 years.

President —Dr. Diego Manuel Chamorro (Inaugurated January 1, 1921. Term of office expires December 31, 1924.)

The President exercises his functions through a council of responsible ministers, composed of the heads of the departments of Foreign Affairs and Public Instruction, Finance, Interior, Justice, and Police, War, and Marine, Public Works.

The Republic is divided into 13 departments and 2 comarcas, each of which is under a political head, who has supervision of finance, instruction and other matters, and is also military commandant. The Mosquito Reserve now forms a department named Bluefields. The Indians in this region were long under the protection of Great Britain, but under the treaty of April 19, 1905 (ratified August 24, 1906), the treaty of 1860 was abrogated, and Great Britain agreed to recognise the absolute sovereignty of Nicaragua over the territory.

The judicial power is vested in a supreme Court of Justice, three chambers of second instance, and judges of inferior tribunals.

On February 18, 1916, a treaty between Nicaragua and the United States was ratified, under which the United States in return for 3 million dollars acquires the canal route through Nicaragua and also a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca on the Pacific coast and Corn Island on the Atlantic coast. Ratified by Nicaragua on April 7, 1916.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 49,200 English square miles, and it has a coastline of about 300 miles on the Atlantic and of about 200 miles on the Pacific. The estimated population on December 31, 1917, was 746,000, as against 689,891 on December 31, 1913. At least 75 per cent of the inhabitants live in the western half of the country. The two halves of the Republic differ greatly in many respects and there is little communication between them, the journey by trail and river being so slow and difficult that passengers usually go by way of Costa Rica, while the small amounts of merchandise shipped from one side to the other are sent mainly by way of Panama.

The people of the western half of the Republic are principally of mixed Spanish and Indian extraction, though there are a considerable number of pure Spanish descent and many Indians. The population of the eastern half is composed mainly of Mosquito and Zambo Indians and negroes from Jamaica and other islands of the Caribbean, with some Americans and a comparatively small number of Nicaraguans from the western part of the Republic.

There are within the Republic 105 municipalities of which 28 have from

2,000 to 30,000 inhabitants The capital of the Republic and seat of government is the town of Managua, situated on the southern border of the lake of the same name, with (1920) 60,342 inhabitants Leon, formerly the capital, has a population of 73,520, Granada, 20,133, Matagalpa, 15,749, Masaya, 13,023, Jinotega, 13,899, Chinandega, 10,542, Esteli, 8,281, Matapa, 8,279, Somoto, 8,182, Boaco, 10,581, Jinotepe, 9,317, Diriamba, 8,000, Bluefields, 4,706 Other towns are Corinto, and San Juan del Sur on the Pacific

Religion and Instruction

The prevailing form of religion is Roman Catholic In 1914 the Republic constituted one archbishopric and ecclesiastical province (Nicaragua) The Seat of the Archbishop is Managua There are three bishoprics, Leon, Granada and Matagalpa, the Bishop of Matagalpa being coadjutor to the Archbishop at Managua

There are about 356 elementary schools and ten secondary schools Secondary education is neither obligatory nor free, the secondary schools being carried on not by the state, but by private individuals Nicaragua has three universities, in the cities of Managua, León, and Granada, called respectively, Universidad Central (Central University), Universidad de Occidente y Septentrión (Western and Northern University), and Universidad de Oriente y Mediodía (Eastern and Southern University) There are also a number of state normal schools

A national Industrial, Commercial, and scientific Museum has been established at Managua

Defence

The active army consists of 2,000 men, in war it may rise to 7,000 Military service is obligatory between 17 and 55 years of age The period of active service is a year The marine consists of one very small boat, on the Pacific coast, capable perhaps of carrying a machine gun and 25 men

Production and Industry

The agricultural, timber and mining industries are the principal source of national wealth The area of cultivation in Nicaragua has extended in recent years and would probably extend still further but for the scarcity of labour The banana is the principal agricultural product of the eastern part of the Republic Coconuts are also of some importance, and a few plantains, oranges, and pineapples, and some yucca are raised Rice is grown to a small extent, and some wheat in the hilly Nueva Segovia district, while tobacco is cultivated round Masaya The products of the western half are much more varied, the most important being coffee, sugar cane, cacao, corn, and beans The annual average coffee crop is estimated at 22,500,000 lbs

With the exception of bananas, plantains, and yucca or cassava, the greater part of the food supply of the eastern section is imported from the United States. The western half of the country produces much of its own food, and occasionally exports small quantities of beans, corn, cheese, lard, and sugar to the neighbouring Republics.

The forests contain mahogany and cedar, which are largely exported, many valuable timber trees, dye woods, gums, and medicinal plants. They are worked both from the Atlantic and Pacific.

There are 1,200,000 cattle in Nicaragua.

There are several gold mines, worked by American and British companies, one having also silver. The gold export amounted in 1917 to 185,125*l*. The mines towards the east coast in Mico, Tunkey, Cucuina and Pizpiz districts are showing increased activity. Copper and precious stones are also found.

Commerce

The foreign trade of Nicaragua was as follows in 5 years —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	631,843	950,519	1,278,613	1,185,961	1,582,930

Shipping and Communications

Western Nicaragua has two seaports, Cominto and San Juan del Sur, through which pass approximately 64 per cent of the imports and 86 per cent of the exports of the Republic. The eastern ports are Bluefields, Cape Gracias a Dios, Las Perlas (Pearl Lagoon), and San Juan del Norte (Greytown). In 1919, 1,005 ships of 320,299 tons entered the five ports of Nicaragua, and 1,016 of 320,348 tons cleared.

There are few good roads in the country, but contracts have been made for roads and transport from Momotombo to Matagalpa, 79 miles, and for 3 roads leading respectively from Matagalpa, from New Segovia, and from the Pizpiz mines in the Cape Gracias district to the head of steamboat navigation on the Cuco Wanks river, about 160 miles from its mouth. A good cart road has recently been completed between Matagalpa and Jinotega, about 24 miles. There is also a road between Puerto Diaz and Juigalpa, of which 7 miles have been constructed, a highway from the capital to Sierras de Managua, 3 miles constructed, there will be two branches from this road, one leading to la Cuchilla and the towns to the south by way of Camino del Ventarron, and the other to Cuchilla and the Pacific coast by way of Camino de Chiquilistagua. There will also be a highway from Tipitapa to Matagalpa, of which the last 2 miles are the most difficult of all the stretch of road in the Tamarindo region. Improvements are being made on the roads from Granada to Nandaime, Boaca to Tipitapa, Masaya to Tipitapa, and from Leon to the Pacific coast. For the repairing and making of roads a tax varying from 1 peso (about 22¢) to 10 pesos is imposed on all male inhabitants over 18 years of age.

The Pacific Railroad of Nicaragua is the only line in the republic, having a total length of 171 miles. The line runs from Corinto to Leon, Managua, Granada, and Diriamba, with branches to El Viejo and Monotombo. There are 20 miles of private railway on the Atlantic coast near the Rio Grande, and, on the west side of Lake Nicaragua, 3 private steam tramways aggregating 3 miles in length. A contract for the construction of a railway from El Bluff (Bluefields) to Lahone Grande (a small place on the line from Managua to Granada), passing through Matagalpa, was entered into by the Government with a New Orleans Syndicate in 1918. The term of the lease is 99 years, but the entire line must be built within 10 years, otherwise the concession lapses.

The national railways have been sold to an American company for two million dollars, 51 per cent of stock being owned by Brown Bros and J. W. Seligman and Co of New York, and 49 per cent by the Government, but held on escrow by American bankers for a loan of 1,060,000 dollars due.

There are 3,637 miles of telegraph wire, and 130 offices, also 805 miles of telephone wire and 29 telephone stations. Between December 1, 1915 and October 31, 1916, 351,786 telegrams were sent, and 3921 cablegrams. Receipts 30517.

The Government has contracted for the installation of wireless telegraph stations at Managua, Granada, San Carlos, San Juan del Norte and Castillo.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Nicaragua, with a capital of over 100,000 dollars, was established in Managua in 1912. Other banks are the Commercial Bank of Spanish America and the Anglo Central American Commercial Bank, Ltd.

In 1912 a new monetary unit was introduced, the gold cordoba, equivalent to the American dollar, containing 1.672 gr. of gold nine-tenths fine, and divided into 100 equal parts. Other gold coins provided for by the monetary law of 1912 are 10, 5 and 2½ cordobas, but no gold coins have ever been struck. As the National Bank suspended the sale of gold drafts on the United States in October, 1914, the monetary reform has fallen to pieces as there is presumably no gold reserve at all behind the circulation of 2 million paper cordobas. No statements are published either by the Bank or by the Government, and very little silver is in circulation. The country again has an unconvertible paper currency, and exchange keeps at 2 to 5 per cent on account of general shortage of currency. On October 31, 1919, there were in circulation 3,559,100 cordobas.

The silver coins are the silver cordoba, containing 25 grammes of silver nine tenths fine, the half and quarter cordoba, 10 cents, a coin containing  $2\frac{1}{2}$  grammes of silver eight tenths fine, 5 cents, a coin three-quarters of copper and one of nickel 1 cent, ninety-five parts of copper and 5 of zinc,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent, in same proportion. 300,000 dollars' worth of cordobas in silver were coined at Birmingham in 1912. There are also paper cordobas.

Since January 7, 1893, the metric system of weights and measures has been in use.

NORWAY

(NORGE)

Reigning King

Haakon VII, born August 3, 1872, the second son, Carl, of Frederik King of Denmark, elected King of Norway by the Storting, November 18, 1905, accepted the crown through his grandfather, the late King Christian of Denmark, November 18, 1905, landed in Norway November 25, 1905, married, July 22, 1896, to Princess Maud, born November 26, 1869, the third daughter of the late Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland

Son — Prince Olav, Crown Prince, born July 2, 1903

According to the Constitution, Norway is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the king may propose a successor to the Storting, but this assembly has the right to nominate another, if it does not agree with the proposal.

By Treaty of January 14, 1814, Norway was ceded to the King of Sweden by the King of Denmark, but the Norwegian people declared themselves independent and elected Prince Christian Frederick of Denmark as their King. The foreign Powers refused to recognise this election, and on August 14 a convention was made proclaiming the independence of Norway in union with Sweden. This was followed on November 4 by the election of Karl XIII as King of Norway. Norway declared this union dissolved, June 7, 1905, and after some months' negotiation, a mutual agreement for the repeal of the union was signed, October 26, 1905. The throne of Norway was offered to a prince of the reigning house of Sweden, but declined, and, after a plébiscite, Prince Carl of Denmark was formally elected King. In October, 1907, a treaty guaranteeing the integrity of Norwegian territory was signed at Kristiania by the representatives of Norway, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia, and on January 8, 1908, received the unanimous approval of the Storting.

The following is a list of the Sovereigns of Norway since the year 1204, with the date of their accession:

Inge Baardsson	1204	Erik af Pommern	1380
Haakon Haakonsson	1217	Kristofer af Bayern	1442
Magnus Lagabøter	1263	Karl Knutsson	1449
Erik Magnussøn	1280	Same Sovereigns as in Denmark
Haakon V Magnussøn	1290		1450-1814
Magnus Eriksson	1319	Kristian Fredrik	1814
Haakon VI Magnussøn	1355	Same Sovereigns as in Sweden
Olav Haakonsson	1381		1814-1905
Margræta	1388	Haakon VII	1906

The King has a civil list of 700,000 kroner, or 38,546*l*

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Norway, called the Grundlov, bears date May 17, 1814, with several modifications passed at various times. It vests the legislative power of the realm in the Storting, the representative of the sovereign people. The royal veto may be exercised twice, but if the same bill pass three Stortings formed by separate and subsequent elections, it becomes the law of the land without the assent of the sovereign. The King has the command of the land and sea forces, and makes all appointments, but except in a few cases, is not allowed to nominate any but Norwegians to public offices under the crown

The Storting assembles every year. The meetings take place suo jure, and not by any writ from the King or the executive. They begin on the first weekday after January 10 each year, and the Storting can sit as long as it may find it necessary. Every Norwegian citizen of twenty-three years of age (provided that he resides and has resided for five years in the country) is entitled to elect, unless he is disqualified from a special cause. Women are, since 1913, entitled to vote under the same conditions as men, and since 1915 are eligible as members of the Cabinet. The mode of election is direct, and the method of election is proportional. Every third year the people choose their representatives, the total number as from the next election being 150. The country is divided into districts, each electing from three to eight representatives. Representatives must not be less than thirty years of age, must have resided in Norway for ten years, and be voters in the district from which they are chosen. Former members of the Cabinet can be elected representatives of any district of the Kingdom without regard to their residence. At the election in 1918 the number of electors was 1,201,312 or 45.64 per cent of total population, while 717,446 votes, or 59.72 per cent of the whole number, were recorded.

Storting (1920) Liberals 52, Conservatives 39, Moderate Liberals 10, Socialists 18, Agricultural Party 3, Democrats 3, Independents 1.

The Storting, when assembled, divides itself into two sections, the 'Lagting' and the 'Odelsting'. The former is composed of one-fourth of the members of the Storting, and the other of the remaining three-fourths. The Ting nominates its own presidents. Questions relating to laws must be considered by each section separately. The inspection of public accounts and the revision of the Government, and impeachment before the Rigsret, belong exclusively to the Odelsting. All other matters are settled by both sections in common sitting. The Storting elects five delegates, whose duty it is to revise the public accounts. All new laws must first be laid before the Odelsting, from which they pass into the Lagting to be either accepted or rejected. If the Odelsting and Lagting do not agree, the two sections assemble in common sitting to deliberate, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters. The same majority is required for alterations of the Constitution. The Lagting and the ordinary members of the supreme court of justice (Hoiesteret) form a High Court of the Realm (the Rigsret) for the impeachment and trial of Ministers, members of the Hoiesteret, and members of the Storting. Every member of the Storting has a salary of three thousand kroner per annum, besides travelling expenses, and, in recent years, an additional grant to cover the higher cost of living. For 1919 this amounted to 3,500 kroner.

The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through a Cabinet called a Council of State (Statsraad), composed of a Prime Minister or Minister of State (Statsminister), and at least seven ministers (Statsraader). The ministers are entitled to be present in the Storting and to take part in the discussions, but without a vote. The following are the members of the Cabinet, originally appointed June 21, 1920:

Premier and Minister of Justice — Otto Bahr Halvorsen
Ministry for Foreign Affairs — Christian Fredrik Michelsén
Ministry for Finance — Edvard Hagerup Bull
Ministry for Social Affairs — Odd Sverresson Klungenberg
Ministry for Agriculture — Gunder Anton Jahren

Ministry for Commerce, Navigation, Industry and Fishery —Gert Meyer Bråten

Ministry for Defence —Carl Wilhelm Wefring

Ministry for Worship and Instruction —Nils Riddervald Jensen

Ministry of Public Works —Cornelius Middelthon

Ministry for Provisioning —Johan Henrik Rye Holmboe

II LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The administrative division of the country is into twenty districts, each governed by a chief executive functionary (Fylkesmann), viz, the town of Kristiania and Bergen, and 18 Fylker (counties). There are 42 towns, 28 'Ladesteder,' and 640 rural communes (Herreder), mostly parishes or sub parishes (wards). The government of the Herred is vested in a body of representatives (from 12 to 48), and a council (Formannskap), elected by and from among the representatives, who are four times the number of the 'Formannskap'. The representatives elect conjointly every third year from among the 'Formannskap' a chairman and a deputy chairman. All the chairmen of the rural communes of a Fylke form with the Fylkesmann the Fylkesting (county diet), which meets yearly to settle the budget of the Fylke. The towns and the ports form 63 communes, also governed by a council (5 to 21), and representatives (four times the size of the council). The members of the local governing bodies are elected under the same conditions as those of the Storting. Since 1910 women are entitled to vote and to be elected, under the same conditions as men.

III PRINCIPAL TOWNS

At the census taken December 1, 1910, the number of towns with a population of above 100,000 was one, above 20,000 four, above 10,000 ten, above 5,000 seven. The estimated population of the principal towns, January 1, 1920, was —

Kristiania	263,713	Kristiansand	16,960	Tonsberg	12,276
Bergen	90,960	Skien	6,380	Larvik	11,090

Drainmen	26,000	Kristiansund	16,000	Sarpsborg	11,200
Haugesund	16,780	Fredrikshald	11,100

Religion and Instruction

The evangelical Lutheran religion is the national Church and the only one endowed by the State. Its clergy are nominated by the King. All religions (except Jesuits) are tolerated. Ecclesiastically Norway is divided into 6 Bispedømmer (bishoprics), 87 Prostier (provostships, or archdeaconries), 514 Prestegjeld (clerical districts). In 1910 there were 62,553 dissenters, including 2,046 Roman Catholics, 10,986 Methodists, 7,659 Baptists, 714 Mormons, 143 Quakers. The Roman Catholics are under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Kristiania.

Education is compulsory, the school age being from six and a half in towns and seven in the country to fourteen. In 1916-17 (the latest date for which there are statistics) there were in the country 5,980 public elementary schools with 284,259 pupils, and in towns 4,182 classes with 98,366 pupils, the amount expended on both being 30,313,225 kroner, of which 12,242,046 kroner was granted by the State, the rest being provided locally. There are 93 secondary schools: 14 public, 61 communal, 24 private, with 25,459 pupils, in 1916-17. Most of the secondary schools are mixed. Besides these, 83 communal and private schools have 4,017 pupils. There were in 1916-17, 6 public normal schools and 4 private, with 1,351 students. Norway has one University, viz. at Kristiania (founded 1811), attended in 1916-17 by 1,500 students. In the financial year 1917-18 it had its own income, 534,460 kroner, and a State subsidy of 2,571,948 kroner. There is one technical high school at Trondhjem, attended in 1918-19 by 697 students, and one agricultural high school in Aas, with 697 students in the same year. There are also many special schools.

There are 10 schools for abnormal children, deaf, blind, and feeble minded. There are 9 reformatory schools for neglected children. The number of children in reformatories in 1917 was 498 boys and 331 girls. There are, besides, 4 communal compulsory schools, established mainly for children neglecting the ordinary school.

Norwegian is an independent language side by side with Danish and Swedish. As to the written language, there exists two idioms ('riksmaal' and 'landsmaal') and both may be officially used.

Justice and Crime

For civil justice Norway is divided into 110 districts, each with an inferior court. There are 3 superior courts, having each one chief justice and two other justices, and one supreme court for the whole kingdom (Hovesteret), consisting of 1 president and at least 6 other justices. There is a court of mediation (Forlikskommission) in each town and Herred (district), consisting of two men chosen by the electors, before which, as a rule, civil cases must first be brought.

According to the law of criminal procedure of July 1, 1887, all criminal cases (not military, or coming under the Rigsret—the court for impeachments) shall be tried either by jury (Lagmandsret), or Meddomsret. The Lagmandsret consists of three judges and 10 jurors. The Kingdom is divided into 4 jury districts (Lagdommer), each having its chief judge. Each district is divided into circuits, in which courts are held at fixed times. The Meddomsret consists of the judge and is held in the district of the inferior court, and 2 assistant judges (not professional) summoned for each case. The Lagmandsret takes cognisance of the higher classes of offences, and is also a court of appeal. The Meddomsret is for the trial of other offences, and is also a court of first instance.

There are four convict prisons, inmates, June 30, 1920, 361 males and 16 females. There are 137 local prisons, in which were detained, June 30, 1920, 388 males and 21 females.

Pauperism.

The relief of the poor is mostly provided for by local taxation by the State. The number of persons receiving relief amounted to 66,828 in 1918.

Defence

The most important fortresses of Norway are Oscarsborg, Tonsberg, Kristiansand, Bergen, and Agdenes, the old fortresses, Karljohansvaern, Akershus in Kristiania, Bergenhus in Bergen, Munkholmen near Trondhjem, and Vardøhus, are of no importance

ARMY

The army of Norway is a national militia. Service is universal and compulsory, liability commencing at the age of 18, and continuing till the age of 55. The men are called out at 21, and for the first 12 years belong to the line, then for 12 years to the landværn. Afterwards they pass to the landstorm, in which they remain until they have attained 55 years of age. The initial training is carried out in recruits schools, it lasts for 48 days in the infantry and garrison artillery, 62 in the mountain batteries, 72 in the engineers, 92 in the field artillery, and 102 in the cavalry. As soon as their courses are finished the men are passed to the units to which they will permanently belong, and with them go through a further training of 24 days. Subsequent training consists of 24 days in the second, third and seventh years of service.

The line is now organised in 6 divisions of all arms, besides which there is the garrison artillery. There are 55 battalions of infantry, 5 companies of cyclists (skiers), 3 regiments of cavalry (19 squadrons), 27 four gun field batteries, 3 batteries of mountain artillery, 9 batteries of heavy artillery, and 1 regiment and 2 battalions of engineers. The Flying Corps is organised in 3 divisions. The divisions are of unequal strength, according to the importance of the district in which they are recruited. In event of war, each division would mobilize 2 or 3 regiments of infantry (of 3 battalions), 3 or 4 squadrons of cavalry, a battalion of field artillery (of 3 batteries), a battalion of heavy artillery, a sapper company, a telegraph company, a medical company and a company of train. Each regimental district also forms one battalion of landværn (of 6 companies), and the other arms would form landværn units in the same proportion. The total peace strength is 118,500 men and comprises 71,836 rifles, 228 field and 36 heavy guns. The additional numbers available on mobilisation amount to 282,000 men.

The Norwegian infantry is armed with the Krag Jorgensen rifle of 6.5 mm. The field artillery has Erhardt Q.F. guns of 7.5 cm.

The budget of the army for 1920-21 is 2,307,000.

NAVY

The principal vessels of the Norwegian navy are —

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	H.P.	Max Speed
			Belt	Big Guns
1896	Harald Haarfagre	3,900	7	8	2 8in., 6 4 7in.	4,500	17
	Tordenskiold
1899	Norge	4,300	6	8	2 8in., 6 6in.	5,200	17
	Eidsvold

There are also 20 gunboats, 4 destroyers, 26 torpedo boats, 4 submarines and 10 minelayers.

The only modern vessels in the Norwegian navy are 3 first class torpedo boats and 10 mine layers.

The navy numbers about 190 officers on active service and about 160 in the reserve, and about 1,000 petty officers and seamen on permanent engagement. All seafaring men between the ages of twenty and forty-four are enrolled on the lists of the active fleet, and are liable to the maritime conscription. The conscripts (about 1,000) have to go through a training of at least 6 months.

Production and Industry.

I AGRICULTURE

As Norway is a barren and mountainous country, there is little opportunity for agriculture. The arable soil is found in comparatively narrow strips, gathered in deep and narrow valleys and around fjords and lakes. Large continuous tracts fit for cultivation do not exist. Of the total area, 74.7 per cent. is unproductive, 21.9 per cent. forest, and 3.4 per cent. under cultivation. On January 1, 1918, there were 216,545 real estates separately registered, and the number of farms was 261,484. The 241,484 farms were classified as follows according to their cultivated area —

Without cultivated area (not including gardens)	19,495
Up to 2 hectares "	162,608
2 01-10 " "	64,046
10 01-50 " "	15,079
	<hr/> 261,484

The 19,495 farms without cultivated area are most of them special estates of gardens, and not cultivated meadow land.

The acreage and products of the principal crops for 3 years were as follows

Crops	Acreage			Produce (quarters)
	1917	1918	1919	1917	1918	1919

On June 20, 1918, the country possessed live stock as follows —Horses, 221,062, cattle, 1,049,642, sheep, 1,207,923, goats, 203,099, swine, 215,305

The value of cereals imported (including flour) was 172,577,500 kroner in 1919, the principal articles being rye, wheat, maize, barley, wheat and rye-flour. The imports of animal products amounted to 150,843,400 kroner in 1919, and their exports to 204,546,800 kroner in 1919

II FORESTRY

The forests and the fisheries are the two chief natural sources of wealth. The total area covered with forests is estimated at 27,434 square miles, of which 75 per cent is under pine trees. The State forests occupy about 3,259 square miles. The value of unwrought or partly wrought timber exported from Norway in 1918 and 1919 was respectively 67,496,000 and 77,840,900 kroner, and of wrought timber (mostly wood pulp) 133,616,700 in 1918, and 113,048,100 kroner in 1919

III MINES AND MINERALS

The pyrite is the most important mineral product for both its sulphur and copper content. Iron ore deposits occur in many places, but there is a shortage of coal for smelting. The total value of mineral products in 1917 was 42,824,000 kroner (10,834,000 in 1907), of furnace products, 17,030,000 kroner (8,135,000 in 1907). The chief mineral products are silver, 980,000 kroner in 1917 (560,000 in 1907), copper ore, 4,905,000 kroner, pyrites, 20,655,000 kroner, iron ore, 8,380,000 kroner, feldspar, 188,000 kroner (512,000 in 1907), nickel ore, 2,250,000 kroner. Of the smelting products in 1917, silver was valued at 920,000 kroner, copper, 7,530,000 kroner, nickel, 2,650,000 kroner. At the end of 1917 there existed about 106 mining establishments employing 8,518 workpeople, and 13 smelting furnaces with 804 workpeople

IV FISHERIES

Fish and fish products comprise about a third of Norway's total annual export values. The number of persons in 1917 engaged in cod fishery was 69,888, in summer-herring fishery, 12,989, and in mackerel fishery, 5,517

The value of the fisheries in kroner in 1917 was cod, 45,712,181, herring, 63,905,437, mackerel, 6,087,040, salmon and sea trout, 1,768,213, other fisheries, 16,914,952, lobsters, 791,891, total, 135,179,214

Other fisheries are the cod and herring fisheries on the coast of Island, and the whale, walrus, seal, and shark fisheries which in 1917 produced a total of about 41,652,000 kroner

Whale oil production in metric tons, 1917, 38,500, 1918, 21,330, 1919, 23,654

V MANUFACTURES

Though the country lacks coal and is dependent entirely on imported supplies, it possesses an enormous amount of water power, which produces motive power for manufacturing industry. The chief manufacturing use of this power has been for the production of electrochemical products, which is becoming a more and more important Norwegian industry. The principal products are ammonium nitrate, calcium nitrate, sodium nitrate, sodium nitrate, calcium carbide, and ferrosilicon.

The numbers of establishments and workers in the principal industries on December 31, 1919, were as follows —

The total power of engines in 1919 amounted to 1,737,934 h p, whereof the hydraulic power was 1,563,688 h p. The electrical power hired amounted to 277,815 h p.

The total amount of the import duties collected in 1918 was 44 1 millions of kroner, for the year ending June 30, 1920, 131 1 millions of kroner. The value of imports subject to duty (1918) was 442,817,400 kroner and of duty-free 809,746,500 kroner.

Under the treaty of 1826 there is the 'most-favoured nation' treatment between the United Kingdom and Norway.

The recorded values are calculated according to information supplied by Exchange Committees and merchants. Those of imports include the invoice price, freight, packing, and insurance, but not duty, those of exports give the price free on board in Norwegian port, excluding freight and insurance, but including packing and Norwegian commercial profit. The returns of quantities are compiled from the officially controlled declarations of importers and exporters. These declarations stated prior to 1909 the countries from which the articles were directly imported and to which they were directly exported. An article coming, for example, from the East Indies via London was recorded as coming from England. From January 1, 1909, the declarations state the countries from which the articles are bought and to which they are sold. The recorded imports include all articles imported, whether for consumption inland or for re-exportation, but not the direct transit goods. The exports are divided into exports of Norwegian articles (special trade) and exports of foreign articles.

The 'Norges' Bank is a joint-stock bank, of which, however, a considerable part is owned by the State. The bank is, besides, governed by laws enacted by the State, and its directors are elected by the Storting except the president and vice-president of the head office, who are nominated by the King. It is the only bank in Norway that is authorised to issue bank notes for circulation. The balance-sheets of the bank for 1919 show the following figures—Assets at the end of the year—bullion, 147,723,675 kroner, out standing capital, mortgaged estates, foreign bills, &c, 416,213,124 kroner, total, 563,936,799 kroner Liabilities—notes in circulation, 454,281,034 kroner, the issue of notes allowed was 293,917,222 kroner, deposits, cheques, unclaimed dividends, unsettled losses, &c, 141,326,371 kroner (of which the deposits amounted to 105,651,546 kroner), dividends payable for the year, 4,200,000 kroner, 12 per cent, total, 595,607,405, balance, 31,670,606

The 'Kongeriget Norges Hypothekbank' was established in 1852 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage The capital of the bank is mostly furnished by the State, and amounted to 32,000,000 kroner in 1919 At the end of 1919 the total amount of bonds issued was 251,541,360 kroner The loans on mortgage amounted to 223,927,700 kroner

The Norwegian 'Arbeiderbruk og Boligbank' was established in 1903 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage from labourers and small proprietors The capital of the bank is furnished by the State, and amounted to 7,200,000 kroner in 1919 On June 30, 1919, the total amount of bonds issued was 32,664,200 kroner The loans on mortgage amounted to 42,236,335 kroner This bank will shortly be replaced by the 'Norske Stats Småsnik og Boligbank,' which was established in 1917 Its capital amounted to 6,000,000 kroner in 1919, on June 30, 1919, the total amount of bonds issued was 20,000,000 kroner The loans on mortgage amounted to 14,123,270 kroner

There were at the end of 1919, 195 private joint stock banks reported, with a collective subscribed capital of 529,951,930 kroner and a paid up capital of 517,933,856 The reserve funds amounted to 340,771,183 The deposits and withdrawals in the course of the year amounted to 8,936,659,307 kroner and 8,674,762,365 kroner respectively Deposits at the end of the year 2,972,287,044 kroner, of which 207,763,548 kroner deposits on demand, and 2,764,523,496 kroner on other accounts

All savings banks must be chartered by royal licence Their operations are regulated, to a considerable extent, by the law, and controlled by the Ministry of Finance In 1919 their number was 555 depositors 1,626,202, with 1,827,436,495 kroner to their credit at the end of the year

Money, Weights, and Measures

By a treaty signed October 16, 1875, Norway adopted the same monetary system as Sweden and Denmark The Norwegian krone, of 100 ore, is of the value of 1s 1½d, or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling The gold 20 kroner piece weighs 8.960572 grammes, 900 fine containing 8.0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krone weighs 7.5 grammes, 800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver The standard of value is gold National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 kroner are legal means of payment, and the Bank is bound to exchange them for gold on presentation In 1920 the duty of the bank to pay the notes in gold was temporarily suspended

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory

SPITSBERGEN

An archipelago lying about 500 miles to the north of Norway between 76° 20' and 81° N lat Bear Island, about 130 miles south, is included in Spitsbergen

Spitsbergen was discovered by the Dutch navigator Barents in 1596, and was visited by the British explorer Henry Hudson in 1607 For some time there were Dutch, British, and Danish claims to sovereignty—from 1614 to about 1670 British sovereignty was effective over the south western bays Thereafter the archipelago became 'No Man's Land' But on September 29, 1919, the Peace Conference agreed to place the archipelago under the sovereignty of Norway Claims to land by nationals of other Powers are fully protected by the Treaty

Total area about 25,000 square miles The chief islands are West Spitsbergen or Mainland, North East Land (about half the former), Prince Charles Foreland, Edge Island, and Barents Island The climate is essentially arctic, tempered by the warm current coming from the Atlantic For over 300 years the islands have been frequented by sailors of various nationalities engaged in the whale and seal fisheries, and hunters in search of fur bearing animals Within recent years Spitsbergen has attracted much greater interest than before on account of the discovery of its extensive mineral resources The principal mineral is coal, which occurs in several formations and of various qualities Carboniferous coal is estimated to extend over 240 square miles with a total content of 6,000 million tons The Jurassic coalfield is estimated to cover 230 square miles, containing about 750 million tons, and is of poor quality The Tertiary coal, of excellent quality, covers 460 square miles, with a content of probably more than 2,000 million tons All these coalfields are in the island and are being worked by British, Norwegian, Swedish, and Russian companies, the British having much the larger claims Iron ores are also reported to be plentiful, though mostly of low grade, also copper, zinc, molybdenum, asbestos, gypsum, reported to be one of the principal minerals, and oil shale with a possibility of free oil Much yet remains to be done before the mineral resources are fully investigated Initiated by an American company now in Norwegian hands, much work has been carried out in the development of these mines, mainly coal, by the various companies concerned, especially the British and Norwegian, This enterprise is likely to increase The total coal exports in 1919 were 80,000 tons There are five or six mining camps scattered over the mineral area, several of them inhabited all the year round The largest is Longyear 'City' in Advent Bay, with one wide street lined with villas for foremen, engineers, and doctors, and barracks for the miners Cows, poultry, pigs, and ponies are kept Spitsbergen is in wireless connection with Europe, and there is a postal service There are good harbours, wire ropeways, and tramways from the mines, and loading jetties

OMAN.

An independent State, in South-eastern Arabia, whose integrity has been guaranteed by Great Britain and France. Oman extends along the southern shore of the gulf of that name from the entrance into the Persian Gulf to the extreme eastern point of Arabia, and thence S W as far as Ras Sajir, lat  $16^{\circ} 8''$  N. The coast line is nearly 1,000 miles long. Inland Oman is bounded on the S W by the great desert. Area, 82,000 square miles, population, estimated at 500,000, chiefly Arabs, but there is a strong infusion of negro blood, especially along the coast. The towns of Muskat and Muttrah hardly contain an Arab, being inhabited almost entirely by Baluchis and Negroes. The capital, Muskat, and the adjacent town of Muttrah have together about 24,000 inhabitants. Muskat was occupied by the Portuguese from 1508 to the middle of the seventeenth century. After various vicissitudes it was recovered in the eighteenth century by Ahmed bin Sa'eed, of Yemenite origin, who was elected Imam in 1741, and whose family have since ruled. Since 1913, the last year of the reign of the late Sultan, the interior of Oman proper has been in rebellion. The tribes have elected an Imam whose authority, assisted by a council of Shaikhs, is paramount, and the Sultan's power extends practically only along the sea coast. He has, however, control of the Customs and the ports. The interior has at all times been turbulent and upset, and the power of the Sultans shadowy. The title of Imam, which has a religious signification, has fallen out of use during the last three generations.

The present Sultan is Seyyid Taimur bin Feysal, eldest son of the late Seyyid Feysal bin Turki, who succeeded his father October 5 1913.

In the beginning of last century the power of the Imam of Oman extended over a large area of Arabia, the islands in the Persian Gulf, a strip of the Persian coast, and a long strip of the African coast south of Cape Guardafui, including Socotra and Zanzibar. On the death of Sultan Sa'eed in 1856, one son proclaimed himself Sultan in Zanzibar and another in Muskat. Eventually the rivals agreed to submit their claims to the arbitration of Lord Canning, Viceroy of India, who formally separated the two Sultanates. Subsequent troubles curtailed the area of the state in Asia. The island of Kishm or Tawilah, near the entrance of the Persian Gulf, formerly belonging to the Imam of Oman, is now under Persian government and is ruled by a Shaikh, but the port of Basidu at the western extremity of the island is British. Further south on the Persian coast of the Gulf of Oman is the Port of Jask, formerly belonging to Oman, but now Persian. The closest relations have for years existed between the Government of India and Oman and a British Consul and Political Agent resides at Muskat.

The revenue of the Sultan amounts to about 7,00,000 rupees. It has decreased considerably owing to the fall in the Customs revenues during the war and to the disturbances in the interior. The population is poor, inland the Sultan's authority is merely nominal and there is little security for life and property. In some coast regions there is the possibility of considerable agricultural development. Inland camels are bred in large numbers by the tribes, and these are said to be the best breed in Arabia, but in size and strength they are inferior to those of north-western India. As to the mineral resources of the country little is known.

Commerce is mostly by sea, statistics being given only for the ports of Muskat and Muttrah, but large caravans under protection carry on traffic with the interior.

Total exports 1918-19, Rs 36,34,848, chiefly dates Rs 18,37,363, fruit, Rs 28,655, fish, Rs 2,95,291, limes, Rs 26,025, cotton goods, Rs 88,800, hides and skins, Rs 42,750. Total imports for 1918-19, Rs 48,49,471, chiefly rice, Rs 18,04,769, coffee, Rs 3,57,081, sugar, Rs 1,05,349, piece goods, Rs 2,44,558, silk and silk goods, Rs 4,000; twist and yarn, Rs 16,116, wheat and other grain, Rs 1,13,597.

Total imports from India, Rs 42,68,823, Persia, Rs 54,000. Trade is mainly in the hands of British Indians, and the imports and the exports are mostly from and to India. All imports are subject to 5 per cent ad valorem duty. There are no export duties, imports for re-export by the importer within 6 months are not subject to transit duty.<sup>1</sup>

The number of vessels that cleared at the port of Muskat in 1918-19, including the native craft, was 174, of 70,580 tons. The Arabs of Sur, near Ras el Hadd, maintain a large coasting trade, and also traffic in native craft with India, and the East African coast and islands.

There is a mail weekly from and to Bombay, and Muskat is connected by cable with the Indo-European telegraph system.

The common medium of exchange is the Maria Theresa dollar. On the coast, but not in the interior, the rupee circulates (rupee exchange 100 dollars equal to from Rs 212 to Rs 254 in 1918-19). There is one Omani copper coin, which fluctuates in value. The muhammadi of 20 gaj (1 dollar = 11½ muhammadi) is only money of account. The weights in use are 1 Kujas = the weight of 6 dollars or 5.9375 oz., 24 Kujas = 1 Maskat Mannd, 10 Mannds = 1 Farāsala, 200 Mannds = 2 Bahar. Rice is sold by the bag, other cereals by the following measures — 40 Palis = 1 Farrah, 20 Farrahs = 1 Khandi.

PANAMA.

(REPUBLICA DE PANAMA )

Government—Panama, formerly a department of the Republic of Colombia, asserted its independence on November 3, 1903, and the de facto Government was on November 13 recognised by the Government of the United States, and soon afterwards by the other Powers. In 1914 Colombia, in virtue of the Treaty of Bogota entered into with the United States (see under Colombia), undertook to agree to recognise the independence of Panama. This Treaty has been ratified by Colombia but not by the United States.

The Constitution, adopted February 13, 1904, and amended on December 26, 1918, provides for a Chamber of Deputies of 33 members (one for every 10,000 inhabitants), which meets biennially on September 1, and for a President of the Republic, elected by direct vote for 4 years, and not eligible for the succeeding term. Neither is the President who has been called to exercise the executive power owing to the death or resignation of a President eligible for re-election if he has exercised the power during any of that time. Nor is the President eligible for re-election if he has been called to exercise the executive power on account of the accidental or temporary absence of the titular President, and remains in power during any part of the six months immediately preceding the date of election for the new President. Beginning with 1924, elections of deputies are to be held every four years.

President of the Republic—Dr. Félix Belisario Porras. Assumed office October 1, 1920.

There are three Vice Presidents, and a Cabinet of five Ministers. The Republic is divided into eight provinces, each under a Governor.

A treaty for the demarcation of the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica was signed on behalf of the respective Governments on March 17, 1910, and has been ratified by the congresses of both countries. By this treaty the question of what is the true boundary line was submitted to the arbitration of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, who gave his decision in 1914. Panama, however, refused to accept the award, and the controversy is still pending.

Area and Population.—Extreme length is about 480 miles, breadth between 37 and 110 miles, total area is 32,380 square miles, population according to the census of 1920 (excluding the Canal Zone), 401,428. The inhabitants are of a mixed race, comprising Spanish, Indian, and Negro elements, with a small number of temporary immigrants from the United States and European countries. Chinese subjects are estimated at 3,500. There are about 55,000 British subjects in the Republic, chiefly from the West Indies. There are 8 provinces as follows (the capitals in brackets)—Bocas del Toro (Bocas del Toro), 14,408 inhabitants, Coclé (Penonomé), 47,146 inhabitants, Colón (Colón), 40,886 inhabitants, Chiriquí (David), 70,846 inhabitants, Herrera (Chitré), 28,737 inhabitants, Los Santos (Las Tablas), 34,944 inhabitants, Panamá (Panamá), 104,003 inhabitants, Veraguas (Santiago), 60,458 inhabitants. The capital, Panamá, founded in 1518, on the Pacific coast, has (1917) 61,369 inhabitants (33,559 males and 28,810 females), and Colón on the Atlantic coast, (1917) 26,076. Smaller ports on the Pacific are Aguadulce, Pedregal, Montijo, and Puerto Muñiz, on the Atlantic Bocas del Toro, Portobello, and Mandinga (opened September 26, 1916).

Movement of population for three years .—

Year	Births					Marriages	Deaths
	Total	Boys	Girls	Legitimate	Illegitimate
1917	10,898	5,617	5,281	3,887	7,511	1,114	6,107
1918	11,283	5,938	5,345	3,613	7,770	354	5,649
1919	10,718	—	—	—	—	356	5,403

Religion—The religion of the country is Catholicism, but other denominations are represented and have a fair following. In the Canal Zone Protestantism chiefly prevails. There are 71 Catholic churches and 58 parishes, served by 70 priests of various nationalities (20 are Panamanians, 27 Spaniards, 5 Italians, 4 French, 1 English, 3 North Americans, 3 Germans, 4 Colombians, 2 Venezuelans, and 1 Swiss).

Education—Elementary education is obligatory for all children from 7 to 15 years of age. The Government maintains 398 public schools throughout the eight provinces (1917), and 22,000 children (excluding 1,721 children enrolled in the Canal Zone public schools) received free instruction in 1917, from 315 teachers. A University (Instituto Nacional) has been opened in buildings constructed at a cost of about 300,000/. In addition there are about a dozen private institutions. Many young men and women are being educated in Europe and the United States at the cost of the Panama Government.

Justice—The laws have been codified and took effect on October 1, 1917, with the exception of the Administrative Code which was brought into force on November 15, 1918. These codes—civil, penal, commercial, judicial, administrative, fiscal, and mining—are designed to meet national needs and modern conditions, and will replace the old Colombian laws that have been in use since the separation of Panama. The death penalty has been abolished.

Finance—All the revenue collected on importations into the Republic or zone belongs to the Panama Government, but the United States reserve the right to import supplies of all descriptions required for canal construction and for the use of their employees free of all taxes.

The national revenue and expenditure for 5 years were as follows —

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	675,067	729,802	793,882	646,752	1,490,385
Expenditure	635,820	1,164,600	732,170	707,464	1,490,385

Estimates

The actual revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, was 1,204,840/ (4 86 dollars=1/).

The finances of the Republic have been reorganised by a fiscal agent of the United States. Under the new regime, the budget is for the triennial period, July 1, 1919, to June 30, 1921.

The Republic has 1,260,000/ in United States banks and 410,000/in the National Bank The foreign debt consists of bonds to the value of 556,600*l* issued in the United States for railway construction, &c The internal debt amounts to 119,400*l*

The Republic has no army or navy to support The National Police Force numbers 69 officers and 750 men

Production—The soil of Panama is of great fertility Of the whole area about five eighths are unoccupied, and of the remainder only a small part is properly cultivated Immigration is encouraged, and land is offered to small farmers on favourable terms The most important product is the banana Caoutchouc (about 130 tons annually) is collected by the Indians of the Cordillera, or is obtained from trees planted by Europeans near the coast Coffee (about 500,000 bushes) is grown in the province of Chiriqui, near the Costa Rican frontier In the province of Coclé (Atlantic coast) there is one large agricultural undertaking, begun in 1894 with German capital Here about 75,000 cocoa trees, 50,000 coffee bushes, and 25,000 caoutchouc trees have been planted and are now beginning to yield returns Other products of the soil of Panama are coconuts, mahogany and other woods, copaiba, sarsaparilla and ipecacuanha Sugar and tobacco growing are assuming importance The total production of sugar for 1918 is estimated at 40,000 quintals The country has great timber resources Cattle rearing is carried on successfully, and hides form an important article of export In 1916 the live stock was estimated at 200,000 head of cattle, 15,000 horses, 2,000 mules, 30,000 pigs, and 5,000 goats

Pearl fishing is carried on at the Pearl Islands in the Gulf of Panama, and at Coiba Island to the west Turtle shell is also exported to a considerable amount It is claimed that Panama possesses nearly every common mineral except coal

Commerce, Shipping, Communications—The imports and exports (excluding the Canal Zone) for 6 years are shown as follows —

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1914	1,977,095	1,082,600	1917	1,921,490	1,153,413
1915	1,861,095	609,652	1918	1,609,395	1,067,923
1916	1,879,473	1,141,345	1919	2,281,376	785,711

Of the total imports in 1919, 82 per cent came from the United States (exclusive of canal materials), 7 per cent from the United Kingdom, 4 per cent from China, 2 per cent from Japan, and 1 per cent from France. The principal exports in 1919 were bananas, coconuts, balata, hides, and gum

Total trade between Panama and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for 5 years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Panama to U K	34,346	20,248	84,731	250,261	289,545
Exports to Panama from U K	254,797	243,586	173,246	211,588	509,839

The Isthmus on both sides is in communication with European and American countries by several lines of steamers. All the maritime traffic (International commerce) for Colón and Panama now runs through the Canal Zone ports of Cristóbal and Balboa, Bocas del Toro remains for the provincial trade. The new port of Mandinga, about 80 miles from the city of Colón, was opened on September 26, 1916.

A railway, 47 miles (first built in 1850-55), connects the ports of Colón and Panama. It belongs to the Panama Railroad Company (United States Government). A branch line extends from Pedro Miguel to Las Cascades, crossing the Canal on a swinging pontoon bridge at Paraiso. In the Province of Bocas del Toro the United Fruit Company (American) owns about 140 miles of track with branches, which is used to transport bananas and passengers to the port of Almirante in the Chiriqui lagoon. At present the line extends into Costa Rica for a distance of about 30 miles. This line is being extended towards Port Limón (Costa Rica) and its terminal is now distant from that port 30 miles. The Chiriqui line is 65 miles long, and is being extended for 16 miles more. A concession was granted in 1917 for the construction of a railway on the Atlantic Coast of Panama, starting from the mouth of the river Chagres and running south west to Almirante for at least 31 miles.

There are telegraph cables from Panama to North American and South American ports, and from Colón to the United States and Europe. Roads are being constructed throughout the country. There are 96 post offices and 37 telegraph offices.

Money and Credit—The monetary unit is the gold Balboa weighing 1.672 grammes 900 fine, to which the United States gold dollar is legally equivalent. Silver coins are the peso (of 25 grammes 900 fine), and the half, fifth, tenth and twentieth peso pieces and nickel coins of 2½ cents. There is no paper money. Two silver pesos of Panama currency are taken as equivalent to one U.S. gold dollar. Altogether four millions of silver dollars of the new currency have been coined and placed in circulation. In November, 1916, the sum of 1,000,000 pesos was withdrawn from circulation by the Canal Zone Government, and in August and September of 1917, the local banks withdrew 952,000 pesos, total amount withdrawn 1,952,000 pesos, equal to 976,000 dollars U.S. currency.

Part of the 10,000,000 dollars (canal money) paid by the United States has been applied to the establishment of a real estate loan bank, part to public improvements in the several provinces, and 6,000,000 dollars have been invested in the United States.

The Panama Canal and the Canal Zone

On November 18, 1903, a treaty between the United States and Panama was signed, providing facilities for the construction and maintenance of the inter-oceanic Canal. In this treaty, Panama granted in perpetuity the use of a zone (Canal zone) five miles wide on each side of the Canal route, and within this zone the exclusive control for police, judicial, sanitary and other purposes. For subsidiary canals other territory was ceded and, for the defence of the Canal, the coastline of the zone and the islands in Panama Bay were also ceded. The cities of Panama and Colón remain under the authority of Panama, but complete jurisdiction was granted to the United States in both the cities and in their harbours in all that relates to sanitation and quarantine. In return for these grants the United States paid 10,000,000 dollars on the ratification of the treaty, and is paying 250,000 dollars yearly, beginning after nine years. The treaty was ratified on February 23, 1904, and in July, 1904, the provisional delimitation of the boundaries of the United States territory on the Isthmus was signed. According to this agreement the city of Panama is, for all practical purposes, left without a seaport for foreign commerce, as the anchorage of vessels at Flamenco Island and the wharves at Balboa, both lie within the territory of the zone. Moreover, a similar port was opened on the Atlantic entrance to the Canal, called Cristobal.

Governor of Canal Zone — Brigadier-General Chester Harding (U S Army, retired). Appointed January 11, 1917.

The area of the Canal zone within the limits of 5 miles on either side of the centre line of the canal, including land and water, but not including the area within the 3 mile limit from the Atlantic and Pacific ends, is 441.4 square miles made up of: Land area, 332.35 square miles; Gatun Lake, 106.5 square miles; Miraflores Lake, 1.9 square miles; and the area of the channels from the coast to Gatun and Miraflores Locks, 0.85 square mile. Including all the waters of Gatun Lake, over which and its shores to the elevation of 100 ft above the sea level the Panama Canal has absolute control, the total area of the Canal Zone is 502.5 square miles, plus the territory between the 85 and 100 foot contours, the area of which has not been computed. The area of Gatun Lake, when its surface is at its normal elevation of 85 feet above sea level, is 164 square miles. The civil population of the Canal Zone on June 30, 1920, was 21,650, of whom 8,514 were Americans. Of the total population, 3,454 American men and 5,632 men of other nationalities (chiefly British West Indian negroes), were employed by The Panama Canal and Railroad. There are in the Canal Zone 2,406 American women and 2,536 American children, and 2,736 women and 3,962 children of other nationalities. The Zone has been depopulated of landowners in order to make it a military reservation, and therefore no private individuals or traders are permitted to settle or to acquire land.

The Canal has a summit elevation of 85 feet above the sea. It is 43.84 nautical miles in length from deep water in the Caribbean Sea to deep water in the Pacific Ocean. The distance from deep water to the shore line in Limon Bay is about 4 miles, and from the Pacific shore line to deep water is about 4½ miles, hence the length of the Canal from shore to shore is approximately 35½ miles. The channel ranges in width from 300 to 1,000 feet. The average bottom width of the channel in this project is 649 feet, and the minimum width is 300 feet. The Canal has a minimum depth of 41 feet. The average time of passage through the Canal is from 7 to 8 hours. The record passage is 4 hours 10 minutes. The maximum traffic capacity of the Canal is estimated at 36 ships per day.

The Gatun dam along the crest is 8,000 feet long, including the spillway, or about 1½ miles, and 2,100 feet wide at its greatest width. The crest of the dam is at an elevation of 105 feet above sea level, or 20 feet above the normal level of Gatun Lake, and 100 feet wide. The width of the dam at the normal water level of the lake, i.e., 85 feet above sea level, is about 388 feet. The length of the cut through the Continental divide (Culebra, now Gaillard Cut), is 6.97 nautical miles. The minimum bottom width of the cut is 300 feet. The bottom is 40 feet above sea level, giving a normal depth of 45 feet.

The cost of the construction of the Canal to June 30, 1920, including the balance available for expenditure, was $67,151,696 dollars. This amount includes 40,000,000 dollars paid to the new French Canal Company and 10,000,000 dollars to the Republic of Panama for property and franchises. It does not include 4,600,000 dollars spent and to be spent for colliers and barges to carry coal to the Isthmus, 2,093,000 dollars for a new pier at Cristobal, and 720,000 dollars for repairing steamships. The current expenses of operation and maintenance in 1920 were 6,548,272 dollars. In the period from the opening of the Canal to June 30, 1920, the total expenses of operation and maintenance amounted to 36,657,767 dollars, while the revenue amounted to 34,426,675 dollars, leaving a deficit of 2,231,092 dollars.

The Canal was informally opened to commerce by the passage of the 9,000-ton steamer Ancon on August 15th, 1914, with specially invited guests. The journey was made without mishap in ten hours. The Canal has been in use since, except that owing to landslides in the Gaillard Cut the channel was interrupted for various short periods in 1915 for traffic, and from September 23, 1915, to April 16, 1916, the channel was entirely blocked and only a few vessels used the Canal. Since April 16, 1916, traffic has moved with only slight delays, save only that in the latter part of August, 1916, Cucaracha slide became active, causing a suspension for six days, and Culebra slide caused a stoppage on January 10 and 11, 1917. Since that time the Canal has been handling vessels drawing up to 33 feet without delay, until March, 1920, when slides occurred frequently, and shipping was held up during that month and the previous month for a day or two.

The President of the United States proclaimed the official and formal opening of the Canal on June 12, 1920.

Particulars of the traffic through the Canal are given as follows:—

Of the total number of commercial ships that passed through the Canal during the year ended June 30, 1920, 1,129 were American, 751 British, 106 Norwegian, 118 Japanese, 79 Chilean, 75 Peruvian, 60 French, 41 Spanish, 29 Dutch, 19 Swedish, and 17 German.

The (Hay-Pauncefote) treaty between Great Britain and the United States signed November 18, and ratified by the United States Senate December 16, 1901, provides for the use of the Canal on equal terms by vessels of all nations. On August 24, 1912, the United States Congress passed the Panama Canal Act whereby privileges were given to certain classes of American shipping using the canal. The British Government lodged a protest against some of the provisions which it regarded as involving violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. After much discussion and many suggestions, President Wilson, on March 5, 1914, requested Congress to repeal that provision of the Act which discriminates between American and other vessels, holding that the exemption was 'in plain contravention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the Canal concluded on November 19, 1901' The repealing Bill was signed on June 15, 1914

PARAGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA DEL PARAGUAY)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Paraguay gained its independence from Spanish rule in 1811, and after a short government by two consuls, the supreme power was seized, in 1815, by Dr Jose Gaspar Rodriguez Francia, who exercised autocratic sway as dictator till his death, September 20, 1840. Dr Francia's reign was followed by an interregnum, which lasted till 1842, when a National Congress, meeting at the capital, Asuncion, elected Don Mariano Roque Alonso and Don Carlos Antonio Lopez joint consuls of the Republic. Another Congress voted, March 13, 1844, a new Constitution, and, March 14, elected Don Carlos Antonio Lopez sole President, he was continued by another election, March 14, 1857. At the death of Don Carlos, September 10, 1862, his son, Don Francisco Solano Lopez, born 1827, succeeded to the supreme power. President Lopez, in 1864, began a dispute with the Government of Brazil, the consequence of which was the entry of a Brazilian army, united with forces of the Argentine Confederation and Uruguay, into the Republic, June, 1865. After a struggle of five years, in which Paraguay lost probably 500,000 men, Lopez was defeated and killed at the battle of Cerro Cora, March 1, 1870.

A new Constitution was proclaimed on November 25, 1870, whereby the legislative authority is vested in a Congress of two Houses, a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies, the executive being entrusted to a President, elected for the term of four years, with five ministers. There is also a non active Vice-President, who is at the same time President of the Senate. The Senate and Chamber of Deputies are elected directly by the people, the former in the ratio of one representative to 12,000 inhabitants, and the latter one to 6,000 inhabitants, though in the case of the sparsely populated divisions a greater ratio is permitted. The new electoral law of November 30, 1916, provides for 20 Senators and 40 Deputies. The Senators and Deputies receive each 3,000 dollars per month.

President of the Republic—Senor Manuel Gondra. Born January 1, 1872. (Term of office, August 15, 1920, to August 14, 1924.)

The President exercises his functions through a cabinet of responsible ministers, five in number, presiding over the departments of the Interior, of Finance, of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction, of War and Marine, and of Foreign Affairs. The President receives a salary of 15,000 dollars per month, and each of the ministers 8 000 dollars. The total administrative expenses are estimated (year ending December 31, 1919) at 1,132,502 dollars gold and 76,034,770 dollars currency (together 1,071,332). The apparent large increase of expenditure over that estimated for the year 1917-18, which was 577,182, is due to the appreciation of the paper currency.

The country is divided into 2 sections—the 'Oriental,' east of Paraguay river, and the 'Occidental,' west of the same river. The Oriental section is divided into 12 departments, subdivided into 93 'partidos', the Occidental section is divided into 3 'comandancias militares'.

The 12 departments are Concepcion, San Pedro, Caraguatay, Villarrica, Yhu, Caazapa, Encarnación, San Tynacio, Quiindy, Villeta, Paraguari and Pilar. The capital, Asunción, formed a district subdivided into 'secciones policiales'. The civil authority is exercised by a jefe politico in each of the latter, who is subject to the control of Government delegados, or comisionados, 12 in number, among whom are included the military commanders of the 5 military zones.

Area and Population

The approximate area of Paraguay proper, which is situated between the rivers Paraguay and Alto Paraná, is estimated at 196,200 square kilometres, or 75,673 square miles. An area officially stated to be 100,000 square miles in extent, lying between the rivers Paraguay and Pilcomayo, known as the Chaco, is claimed by Paraguay, whose rights, however, are disputed by Bolivia. In 1917 the total population was estimated at 1,000,000, not including the Chaco Indians, roughly estimated at 50,000. The population of Paraguay proper consists of people of Guaraní Indian, European (chiefly Spanish) and Negro blood, the Guaraní largely predominating. Of foreigners in Paraguay, in 1916, there were probably upwards of 60,000, including 25,000 to 30,000 Argentines, 10,000 to 15,000 Italians, 1,400 Brazilians, 7,000 Spanish, 3,000 German, 800 to 1,000 French, 1,000 Uruguayans, 400 English. On September 30, 1920, the population of the capital, Asuncion (founded 1537), was 99,836. Other towns are Villarrica, 26,000, Concepcion, 15,000, Encarnacion, 12,500, San Pedro, 8,700, Luque, 15,000, Carapegua, 15,000, Paraguari, 10,000, Villa del Pilar, 10,000. These figures include the surrounding districts in each case, and the figures are estimated.

In 1913 the immigrants assisted by Government numbered 1,512, in 1914, 1,116, in 1915, 366, and in 1916, 298. Very little land is now national property, most of it having been transferred to private ownership, much of it in very large tracts.

In 1916 the number of marriages was 2,526, of births, 29,381 (13,256 legitimate, and 16,125 illegitimate), of deaths, 8,273.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice

The Roman Catholic Church is the established religion of the State, but the free exercise of other religions is permitted. Asuncion, Suffragan to Buenos Aires, is the only Paraguayan Episcopal See. The law of civil marriage came into force on August 1, 1899. Roman Catholic and other religious marriage ceremonies are allowed, but the civil ceremony alone gives validity to a marriage.

Education is free and nominally compulsory, but schools are not everywhere available. In 1919 there were 1,268 government primary schools with 78,399 pupils (44,137 boys and 34,262 girls). The teachers numbered 1,808 (653 men and 1,155 women). There were also 74 private schools, with 4,021 pupils (2,173 boys and 1,848 girls). There are National Colleges (i.e., high schools) at Asuncion, Villarrica, and Pilar. The aggregate number of students is 740 and of teachers 46. There is also a University which grants degrees in law, medicine, and social sciences, and certificates to notaries public and practitioners in pharmacy and obstetrics. Number of students in 1919, 247, of professors, 34. There are also 6 normal schools (Asuncion, Villarrica, Concepcion, Encarnacion, Barrero Grande, and San Juan Bautista), with 27 male and 195 female students. Besides contributions from general taxes, there is a special Government fund for education consisting of a proportion of the proceeds of land sales, customs dues, &c. A national library, the national archives, and a natural history museum and botanic zoological garden are under the care of the department of Public Instruction.

Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, two courts of appeal (one for civil causes and another for commercial and criminal causes), a court of jurymen, 10 judges of First Instance, and (at the capital) 3 police magistrates. The functions of magistrates are exercised in the provinces by upwards of 100 jueces de paz (all laymen), who are at the same time registrars of births, deaths, and marriages.

Finance.

The revenue is derived from import and export duties, inland revenue, transit dues, post and telegraph and other dues. The estimated revenue and expenditure for six years are given as follows —

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914	821,883	768,605	1917 18 <sup>2</sup>	523,311	577,182

On December 31, 1919, the outstanding external debt (London Loan, 1871 2, 3,412,450 pesos gold, Argentine National Bank Loan, 68,227 pesos gold, loan according to the Law of November 27, 1912, 2,172,300 pesos gold) amounted to 1,130,595<sup>1</sup>, and the acknowledged internal debt to 617,751<sup>1</sup> (not including the paper currency, viz., 125,000,000 dollars). The war debt to the Argentine and Brazil (the portion due to Uruguay was condoned) is not included in Government accounts. It may be said to exist only as a political weapon in the hands of those countries, and is by some considered an effective guarantee of the independence of Paraguay.

Defence

The small army of Paraguay is drilled and trained and aimed on the German model. Total about 100 officers and 2,500 men, distributed at 5 centres. In the event of war the National Guard is called to the colours. Service is compulsory in the ranks for 2 years, but the law is not enforced. The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military zones.

The navy consists at present of a flotilla of 3 small converted merchant vessels armed with modern guns. The largest is about 200 tons gross register (three larger vessels having been sold).

Production and Industry

Of the total area of the Republic, which is officially given at 111,250,000 acres, 57,231,250 acres are utilised in various ways, and 54,018,750 acres are unexploited land. The utilised land comprises 80,000,000 acres of grazing land, 7,031,250 acres of yerbales land, and 20,000,000 acres of timber land.

The soil of Paraguay is productive and the climatic conditions favourable to the cultivation of many sub-tropical products. But in its present condition much of the country is admirably suited to pastoral purposes. Excellent grazing land is abundant in Paraguay proper and in the Chaco region. The cattle census of 1915 showed that there were in the Republic 5,249,043 cattle, 600,000 sheep, 478,000 horses, 17,000 mules, 18,000 asses, 61,000 pigs, and 87,000 goats. The meat packing and curing industry is encouraged by Government, hides, jerked beef,* and other animal products are exported. Yerba maté, or Paraguay tea, which is a natural product of the virgin forests, is one of the chief articles of export, in 1918, 11,032,758 kilos were produced. The cultivation of the tree from seed is being undertaken on an extensive scale in many parts of the country, particularly by Germans, and is liable within a few years to revolutionise the industry. The total export of yerba in 1919 was 3,516,462 kilos. Tobacco is also one of the principal products. The normal output is about 220,000 cwts., of which about 60 per cent was (before the war) exported to Europe, chiefly to Germany. Paraguay also produces quebracho extract, in 1919 the output amounted to 32,976 tons. Fruit growing, especially oranges, is general, 103,252,000 oranges were exported in 1919. The export of petit grain oil, the essential oil made from the leaves of the sour orange, amounted in 1919 to 37,976 kilos. The total area devoted to sugar cultivation (largely for the manufacture of spirit) is about 11,120 acres, estimated sugar production in 1920, 5,230 tons, 1919, 2,504 tons. There are 7 sugar refineries in Paraguay, the most important of which is at Tebicuary. Roots (chiefly mandioca, sweet potatoes, and ground nuts), maize, beans, rice, &c are grown for local consumption, but agriculture is primitive. The cultivation of cotton is encouraged by the authorities, but has not yet assumed commercial importance for want of labour.

Iron, manganese, copper, and other minerals are encountered in abundance. The Ibicui iron mines were worked as early as 1863. The Quiquio and Ibicui manganese mines contain ore deposits estimated at 60,000,000 tons. Copper has also been found at San Miguel and Quiquio.

Commerce

The following is the value of the imports and exports (5 dollars = £1) —

	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports <sup>1</sup>	481,174	930,305	1,021,240	2,210,324 <sup>2</sup>	3,167,194	1,302,705
Exports	1,778,200	961,492	1,300,040	1,234,261	3,588,204	1,508,002

Import duties (estimated) in 1916, 230,576*l*, in 1917 18, 235,657*l*, in 1919, 444,500*l*. The export duties were estimated in 1916 at 122,600*l*, in 1917 18, at 179,890*l*, in 1919 at 163,000*l*.

The chief imports are textiles, provisions, hardware, wines and spirits, drugs, and fancy goods. The chief exports are hides (238,954 kilos), yerba (3,516,482 kilos), oranges, tobacco (10,261,078 kilos in 1919), timber, canned and preserved beef, cattle, petit grain oil, and quebracho extract. Of the imports in 1919, the most important were foodstuffs, 884,499*l*, hardware, 452,636*l*, and textiles, 11,511,265*l*. Of the total exports in 1919, goods to the value of 2,211,876*l* went to Argentina, whence the bulk is re-exported. The imports from Great Britain (chiefly consisting of textiles and hardware) amounted in 1919 to 786,386*l* or only 26 per cent of the total. The exports from Paraguay to the United Kingdom were valued at 146,684*l*. The 'most favoured nation treaty' of 1884 between Great Britain and Paraguay is in force. A free trade treaty was signed in 1916 between Paraguay and Argentina, but has not yet been ratified.

The trade between Paraguay and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for 5 years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Paraguay to U.K.	18,617	390	320	1,250	2,413
Exports to Paraguay from U.K.	124,412	144,388	245,919	294,882	168,840

Communications.

In 1919, 4,385 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 341,681 tons, entered at the port of Asuncion, and 4,966 with a tonnage of 366,993 cleared. These figures include sailing vessels. The principal company engaged in the river service is the Argentine Navigation Company (Nicolas Mihanovich), Ltd., the controlling interest in which is British.

There is a railway (the Paraguay Central Railway) from Asuncion to Encarnacion, on the Rio Alto Parana, a distance of 232 miles. The change of gauge from 5½ ft. to the standard 4 ft. 8½ ins., was effected in 1910 and a through train service without break of bulk from Asuncion to Buenos Aires was opened in 1911. Opposite Encarnacion is Posadas, to which an Argentine line is extended, and the two lines are connected by a train ferry (opened October 10, 1913). El Ferrocarril del Norte, owned by a Paraguayan company, runs from Concepcion as far as Horqueta, a distance of 43 kilometers (26 miles). This road is projected to run as far as Pedro Juan Caballero on the Brazilian border. The Azucarera Paraguaya, in the Department of Itytym, has 13 kilometers (8 miles) of its line open to the public. It is owned by Paraguayan capital. The country roads are in general mere bullock tracks, and transport is difficult and costly.

There is a line of telegraph at the side of the railway. The national telegraph (915 miles of line and 1,440 miles of wire) connects Asuncion with Corrientes and Posadas in the Argentine Republic and thus with the outside world. There are altogether 1,436 miles of telegraph line and 61 telegraph offices in 1919. Number of messages in 1918, transmitted, 127,892; received, 100,378. The telephone at Asuncion was destroyed by fire in 1913. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Asuncion, Encarnacion, Concepcion, and Paraguari. They are said to have a radius of 500 kilom. by day and 1,000 kilom. by night. Paraguay joined the postal union in 1881, in 1917 the number of post offices was 385. In 1919 the total number of pieces of mail matter handled was 5,028,896.

Money and Credit

The principal banks in Paraguay are the Bank of the Republic, opened in June, 1908 (capital, 4,000,000 dollars gold), the Mercantile Bank, established 1891, with a capital of 25,000,000 dollars paper, the Banco de España y Paraguay, with a capital of 5,300,000 dollars paper, the Banco Constructor, with a capital of 2,000,000 dollars paper, and the Agricultural Bank, established 1887, with a capital of 35,664,468 currency dollars advanced by Government. The currency was increased in 1916 to 125,000,000 dollars. Of this total, on December 31, 1917, 45,818,480 dollars were in circulation, 13,694,240 dollars in the Government conversion office, and 6,548,728 dollars in the banks. The total gold credit, chiefly in Buenos Aires banks, was 2,830,555 dollars.

There is no gold and silver current, and paper is the only circulating medium with the exception of a few small nickel coins. The average rate of exchange in 1919 was about 93 dollars paper to 17. The exchange is subject to fluctuation and transactions are frequently made in Argentine gold or paper dollars. On January 20, 1916, a law was passed establishing an Office of Exchange or Conversion. For the purpose of buying gold currency the office had placed at its disposal (1) 10,000,000 pesos paper currency, (2) the amounts received from the sale of gold currency, and (3) the available funds in hand at the Agricultural Bank. The Office of Conversion had on December 31, 1918, a capital of 1,394,356 gold pesos and 1,017,211 pesos paper.

Weights and Measures

The 1 Cuadra	= 100 varas (97 yards, about)
„ 50 Cuadras	= 1 league (2½ miles, about)
„ 1 cuadra cuadrada	= 2 acres (nearly)
„ Legua cuadrada	= about 7½ sq miles

The weights and measures of the metric system are also in general use

Reigning Shah.

Sultan Ahmed Shah, born January '20, 1898 (27th Shaban 1315), succeeded his father, Muhammed Ali Shah (who abdicated) July 16, 1909, under regency of Ali Reza Khan, Azud el Mulk, chief of the Kajar tribe. Azud el Mulk, the Regent, died September 22, 1910, and on the 25th of the same month the National Council elected Abu'l Kassim Khan, Nasser el Mulk, who was then in Europe, as his successor. The Regent arrived in Teheran on February 8, 1911, and definitely assumed the functions of Regent by taking the oath before the National Council on March 4. The coronation of the Shah took place on July 21, 1914.

The Royal Family is very numerous there are some thousands of princes and princesses

The Shah of Persia—by his official title, 'Shâhinshâh' (a corruption of Shâhân Shâh), or King of Kings—was until 1906 absolute ruler within his dominions, and master of the lives and goods of all his subjects. The whole revenue of the country being at their disposal, recent sovereigns of Persia were able to amass a large private fortune, but that of the present occupant of the throne is small.

The present sovereign of Persia is the seventh of the dynasty of the Kajârs, which took possession of the crown after a civil war extending over fifteen years from 1779 to 1794. The date of accession of each of the sovereigns of the dynasty was as follows --

- |                                     |           |                                |               |
|-------------------------------------|-----------|--------------------------------|---------------|

| 2 Fath Ali, nephew of Agha Muhammed |           | ed dîn                         | 1896-1907     |
|                                     | 1797-1834 | 6 Muhammed Ali son of          |               |
| 3 Muhammed, grandson of Fath Ali    |           | Muzaffar ed dîn                | 1907-1909     |
|                                     | 1835-1848 | 7 Sultan Ahmed, son of Mu      |               |
| 4 Nâsr ed dîn, son of Muhammed      |           | ammed Ali                      | July 16, 1909 |
|                                     | 1848-1896 |                                |               |

According to the Constitution the Shah must belong to the Shi'ah faith and his successor must be his eldest son, or next male heir in succession, whose mother was a Kajâr princess.

Constitution and Government

The form of government in Persia up to the year 1906 was, in its most important features, similar to that of Turkey. The Shâh, within the limitations imposed by the Mohammedan religion, was an absolute ruler, but had to reckon with the power of the leading doctors of law (Muytahids), who resided at Najaf and Kerbela in Mesopotamia. Unlike the Sultan of Turkey he had no religious standing. In 1905, the Persian people demanded representative institutions, and in January, 1906, the Government announced that the Shâh had given his consent to the establishment of a National Council (Mejlis i Shorâ i Milli). But the Mejlis was never properly constituted, though attempts were made to set it working. Since November,

1915, it has ceased to exist as a legislative or administrative body (For a history of the struggle see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1916, p. 1220.) The government of the country is in the hands of the Cabinet, which was formed on March 1, 1921, as follows —

Prime Minister and Minister of the Interior — Seyed Ziaed Din

Minister for Foreign Affairs — Modirel Molk

Minister of War — Reza Khan

Minister of Education — Nayerol Molk

Minister of Finance — Mirza Eissa Khan

Minister of Justice — Mansures Sultaneh

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs — Mochir Moazam

Minister of Public Health and Charity — Moadebod Dowleh

Minister of Public Works — Movaghared Dowleh

The country is divided into thirty three provinces, which are governed by governors-general, who are directly responsible to the central Government, and can nominate the lieutenant-governors of the districts comprised in their own governments. Some of the governments are very small, and do not bear subdivision into districts, &c., others are very large, and comprise several provinces. Governors-general and governors are generally called Hâkim, the former also often have the title of Wâli. Every town has a mayor or chief magistrate called Kalântar, or Darogha, or Begler begi. Every quarter of a town or parish, and every village, has a chief who is called Kedkhodâ. These officers, whose chief duty is the collection of the revenue, are generally appointed by the governors, but sometimes elected by the citizens. Most of the governors have a vizir or a pishkar, a man of experience, to whom are entrusted the details of the government. The chiefs of nomad tribes are called Ilkhanî, Ilbeggi, Wâh, Seidâr, Sheikh, they are responsible for the collection of the revenues to the governors of the province in which their tribes reside.

A law of May, 1907, provides for the election of rural and town councils. In these elections practically all subjects have a right to vote, and it is intended that the councils should be in direct communication with the National Council.

An agreement was concluded between Great Britain and Persia on August 9, 1919, in which the British Government (1) reiterated the past undertakings to respect absolutely the independence and integrity of Persia, (2) undertook to supply whatever expert advisers may be necessary for the several departments of the Persian administration, (3) also to provide such officers, munitions and equipment as may be adjudged necessary by a joint British and Persian Military Commission for the formation of a uniform force for the maintenance of order in the Country and on the Frontiers, (4) to provide a substantial loan to finance the reforms in 2 and 3, (5) to co operate in railway construction and other forms of transport, (6) to appoint a joint Committee to revise the existing Customs Tariff. The agreement was on February 27, 1921, denounced by the then Prime Minister, Seyed Ziaed Din.

Area and Population

Persia, which has an area of about 628,000 square miles, lies between 25° and 40° north latitude and between 44° and 63°30' east longitude, and measures 1,385 miles in length and 863 miles in breadth. A vast portion of this area is an absolute desert, and the population is everywhere so scanty as not to exceed, on the average, fifteen inhabitants to the square mile.

The population is estimated at between 8 and 10 millions, but all figures are largely conjectural. It is estimated that the country contains some three million nomads. Of these, 260,000 are Arabs, 720,000 Turks, 675,000 Kurds and Leks, 20,700 Baluchis and Gipsies, 234,000 Lurs. These figures, however, are merely round numbers, and estimates vary.

The number of Europeans residing in Persia does not exceed 1,200. There are about 600 British subjects resident in Persia (exclusive of British Indians).

The principal cities of Persia are —Teheran, with over 220,000 inhabitants, Tabriz, with 200,000, Ispahan and Kermanshah, 80,000 each, Meshed and Keiman, with 70,000 to 80,000 each, Yezd, with 45,000, Barfurush, and Shiraz, with 50,000, Hamadan, Kazvin, Kom, Kashan, Resht, each with 30,000 to 40,000 inhabitants.

Religion.

Of the population about 8½ millions are Mahometans of the Shi'a sect, and of that branch of it known as the Ithna 'Ashariyya, who recognise twelve Imams or spiritual successors of the Prophet Mahomet, 850,000 are of the Sunni sect, 10,000 are Parsis (Guebres), 40,000 Jews, 50,000 Armenians, and 30,000 Nestorians.

The Mahometans of the sect called Shi'a differ to some extent in religious doctrine, and more in historical belief, from the Moslems of the Turkish Empire, who are called Sunni. The Persian priesthood (ulemâ) is very powerful. Any person capable of reading the Koran and interpreting its laws may act as a priest (mullâ). As soon as such a priest becomes known for his just interpretation of the divine law, and for his knowledge of the traditions and articles of faith, usually gained by many years of study at Najaf and Kerbela, he is called a mujtahid, or chief priest. There are many mujtahids in Persia, sometimes several in one town, there are, however, only four or five whose decisions are accepted as final. The highest authority, the chief priest of all, is the leading mujtahid, who resides at Najaf or Kerbela, near Baghdad, and some consider him the vicergerent of the Prophet, the representative of the Imâm. The Shah and the Government have no voice in the matter of appointing the mujtahids, but the Sheikh ul-Islâm, chief judge, and the Imâm i-Jum'ah, chief of the great mosque (Masjed-i-Jâm'ah) of a city, are appointed by Government. Under the Imâm i-Jum'ah are the ish namâz or khatib (leader of public prayers and reader of the Khutbeh, the Friday oration), the mu'azzin (crier for prayers), and sometimes the mutavali (guardian of the mosque), this latter as well as the mu'azzin, need not necessarily be a priest. All mosques and shrines have some endowments (wakf), and out of the proceeds of these are provided the funds for the salaries of the priests attached to them. The shrines of some favourite saints are so richly endowed as to be able to keep an immense staff of priests, servants, and hangers on.

The Gregorian National Armenians form two dioceses, each under a bishop. One bishop resides at Tabriz, the other at Ispahan. There are also a few thousand Roman Catholic Armenians in Persia who have a bishop of their own rite at Ispahan, the bishop of the Latin rite residing at Urumiah. There is a wide tolerance exercised towards Armenians and Nestorians, Jews, and Parsis in cities where Europeans reside, in other places, however, they occasionally suffer oppression from Mussulmans belonging to the lower classes.

Instruction.

In recent years many schools of various degrees, entirely on European lines, have been established, the Ministry of Education has undergone radical reforms, and female education has been greatly advanced. There are probably some 180 schools in Persia with an aggregate of 10,000 pupils of both sexes.

There are many colleges (medresseh), supported by public funds, in which students are instructed in religion and Persian and Arabic literature, as well as in a certain amount of scientific knowledge, and many schools for children, while private tutors are very common, being employed by all families who have the means. A polytechnic school with a number of European professors, opened in Teheran in 1849, has done much towards introducing the knowledge of Western languages and science into Persia. There are also military colleges at Teheran and Tabriz. At Teheran there is a French school supported by the Alhance Française. But the bulk of the population are taught only to read the Korân. A 'political college,' Medresseh i Siyasi with about 50 pupils, was opened in 1900, and prepares candidates for service in the Foreign Office, which pays 133,000 kians per annum for its maintenance. Some 40 new schools have been opened at the cost of all who draw pay from the Government, regardless of class, who have to pay 1 per cent on their emoluments for the upkeep of these schools. Medical schools have also been started under the supervision of French doctors.

Justice.

The Minister of Justice, assisted by an Advisory Council, composed of a legal adviser, the Attorney General, Chief of the High Court of Appeal, and three of the chief directors of the Ministry of Justice, endeavours to supervise the organisation and the proper function of justice in Persia. The 'Jurisconsult' of the Ministry of Justice is a Frenchman, who has now also been made the Chief of the "École des Droits".

There are in every town of Persia police magistrates, and in big towns tribunals which deal with cases coming within the sphere of public and criminal law. There are also courts of appeal in big towns and a High Court of Appeal in Teheran which is similar to the Cour de Cassation in France.

Finance

The revenue for 1911-12 amounted to 2,042,850*l*, and the expenditure to 1,608,600*l*. In 1912-13 the revenue amounted to 1,055,792*l*, and in 1913-14 to 1,480,778*l*. These are the latest available figures.

More than half of the revenue consists of payments in cash or kind raised by assessments upon towns, villages, and districts, each of which has to contribute a fixed sum, the amount of which is changed from time to time by tax-assessors (mumayiz) appointed by the Government. Almost the entire burthen of taxation lies upon the labouring classes.

No arrangement has yet been made regarding the refunding of Nos 5, 7, 8 and 9. No 10 has not yet been obtained. It is the loan concluded, according to Article 1 of the loan agreement, which is payable by instalments. After the British Financial Adviser shall have taken up the duties of his office at Teheran.

Defence

Prior to the Russian Revolution there was at the capital the 'Cossack Brigade,' of 8 squadrons, 1 infantry battalion, and a battery of 6 (Krupp) guns. The men are Persians, organised and trained by Russian officers. In 1912, Russia obtained the formal consent of the Persian Government to the formation of a similar Cossack Brigade at Tabriz under Russian officers, the consent of the Persian Government was conditional on the withdrawal of Russian troops in Azerbaijan. The 'Cossack Brigade' was in the hands of Russia until the Bolsheviks came into power. The two brigades were in 1919 formed as the Cossack Division and consisted of 56 Russian officers, 202 Persian officers and 7856 Persian rank and file. The chief expense of maintaining the Division is borne by Britain, the balance of rather more than one third being paid by Persia. In October, 1920, the Russian officers of the Cossack Division were dismissed, and British officers were being chosen to replace them.

At the end of 1920 there were two brigades of South Persia Rifles (47 British officers, 190 Persian officers, 256 British and Indian non commissioned officers, and 5400 Persian rank and file), with headquarters at Shiraz and Kerman respectively, also a regiment at Bunder Abbas. This force, in which was incorporated a part of the Swedish gendarmery, is recruited locally and officered and trained by British officers, and forms the only efficient Persian force in Southern Persia.

In January, 1921, there was in north west Persia a force of about 7,000 British and Indian troops. This force was in process of withdrawal.

The Anglo Persian Agreement of August 9th, 1919, provides for the formation of a uniform Military Force under the command of British officers. An Anglo Persian Military Commission recommended in April, 1920, that the Persian Government should take over the South Persia Rifles and the Cossack Division and that the future military forces, including the existing formations, should consist of 43,000 men. British officers and staffs are to be lent for this force for a period of four years. After the Persian staffs have been trained the British will be withdrawn. It is further recommended that an air force should be started with British instructors and material. These recommendations had not been carried out by the end of 1920, and await ratification of the Anglo Persian Agreement by the Persian Mejlis.

The navy is quite unimportant. The two boats of which it consists are normally used for Customs purposes.

Production and Industry

Besides great quantities of wheat, barley, rice, fruits, gums, drugs, wool, cotton, &c., Persia produces much silk. The opium industry, as well as the production of gums, chiefly tragacanth, are increasing. The wool of Khorassan is the best, and much of it before the War reached Bradford and Batum. Persian carpets, of which there are many kinds, are all made by hand. The principal centres of the industry are Tabriz, Hamadan, Sultanabad, and Kerman.

The mineral deposits of Persia are considerable but undeveloped. The zones producing minerals are (1) the Province of Azerbaijan, (2) the slopes of the Elburz range, (3) Khorassan, (4) Keiman, (5) the districts around Ispahan and Nain, and (6) the region of Persian Gulf. In Azerbaijan, iron, lead, and copper ores exist in abundance. Lead is found in Khalkal region. The slopes of the Elburz are rich in deposits of coal and iron. Turquoise mines are found in Khorassan, and also copper, coal and salt. Keiman produces copper, lead, manganese, marble, borax, turquoises, iron, mercury, nickel, and cobalt. In the southern region along the Persian Gulf the chief minerals found are naphtha, rock salt, and iron ochre. A rich oil-bearing district is reported on the S. E. shore of the Caspian.

Commerce.

A new Customs tariff, with a considerably increased scale of Customs duties, came into force on April 1, 1920, as a result of the revision of the Customs tariff hitherto in force. This revision was provided for in Article 6 of the Anglo Persian Agreement of Aug. 9, 1919.

The principal centres of commerce are Tabriz, Teheran, Hamadan, and Ispahan, the principal ports, Bender Abbas, Mohammerah, and Bushire on the Persian Gulf, and Astara, Enzeli, Meshedissar, and Bandergeuz on the Caspian. On March 21, 1899, the Government abolished the farm system in Azerbaijan and Kermanshah, and one year later in all other provinces, establishing at the same time a uniform duty of 5 per cent ad valorem on imports and exports. However, the districts of Mohammerah (with imports and exports valued at about 300,000*l.* per annum), of the Karun River and of Kurdistan on the western frontier, that of Seistan on the eastern frontier, and some of the smaller ports on the Persian Gulf, were then not interfered with, and the greater part of the Persian Gulf pearl trade also escaped the authorities until the following year.

According to the statistics published by the Minister of Finance the values of the imports and exports for the six years were as follows —

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1913-14	11,766,683	8,287,998	1916-17	14,552,100	12,761,000

Banking and Credit

The Shah in 1889 granted a concession to Baron Julius de Reuter for the formation of a State Bank of Persia, with head office at Teheran and branches in the chief cities. The bank was formed in the autumn of the same year, with the title "The Imperial Bank of Persia," and incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 2, 1889. The authorised capital is 4 millions sterling, which may be increased. The bank started with a capital of one million sterling, of which the greater part was remitted to Persia at the then reigning exchange of 32-34. In consequence of the great fall in silver and the rise in the exchange, to 50 or more, the capital was reduced in December, 1894, to 650,000/. The bank has the exclusive right of issuing bank-notes—not exceeding 800,000/ without the assent of the Persian Government. The issue of notes is on the basis of the silver krān. In virtue of one of the articles of the concession the cash reserve for the first two years was 50 per cent, and afterwards 33 per cent. The bank had the exclusive right of working throughout the Empire the iron, copper, lead, mercury, coal, petroleum, manganese, borax, and asbestos mines, not already conceded. There is also established at Teheran the Russian 'Banque d'Escompte,' formerly 'Banque des Prêts de Perse' (which is connected with the Russian State Bank and floated the loans of 1900 and 1902 to Persia). A concession for a National Bank was signed, February 6, 1907.

Communications

By the Agreement of August 9, 1919, the British Government will co-operate with Persia in the construction of railways and other forms of transport. In January, 1920, the Persian Government granted to the Persian Railways Syndicate (Ltd.) an option for the construction of a railway line from Khamkin to Teheran, via Kermanshah, Hamadin and Kazvin, which was being surveyed in 1920.

A small railway from Teheran to Shah Abdul azim (six miles) was opened in July, 1888, and is in the hands of a Belgian company, 'Société des chemins de fer et tramways de Perse.' A Russian company has also constructed a railway from Julfa (Perso Russian frontier) to Tabriz (opened March 7, 1916) 85 miles long, and another from Pinebazar to Resht, 7 miles long. In southern Persia a military railroad, about 52 miles in length, has been constructed from Bushire to Borazjan, in the direction of Shiraz. The railroad from Quetta to Nushki, in India, has been extended to Durdab. Total railway mileage, 150.

The river Karun at the head of the Persian Gulf has been opened to foreign navigation as far as Ahwaz. It is served by a fortnightly steamship service subsidised by the British Government.

Until 1903 the only carriageable roads in Persia were Teheran-Kom and Teheran-Resht, the former 91 miles, the latter about 220 miles, and on both mails and travellers were conveyed by carts. Since then good roads have been made from Tabriz to Julfa (Russian frontier), Kazvin to Hamaden, Meshed to Ashabad, Kom to Sultanabad, and others. Mails and passengers are now conveyed by carts on them and some other roads, but the latter, only slightly improved and being practically as nature made them, are somewhat difficult for wheeled traffic. A concession for the construction of a cart road with the option of changing it later for a 'chaussée,' or macadamised road, from Kazvin to Enzeli on the Caspian was granted to a Russian firm in 1893, and the Russian Government having aided with capital and guarantee, construction was begun in 1897 and the road opened for traffic in August, 1899. The concession includes the road from Kazvin to Teheran, which has been open for wheeled traffic since 1880, and a branch from Kazvin to Hamadan. All these are in good working order now. During the last three years tracks have been made, passable by motor cars, between Ispahan and Shiraz, and thence to Nims, Saidabad, Kerman, and Bam.

In 1898 Messrs. Lynch took over a concession granted to a Persian subject for a caravan road between Ahwaz and Ispahan, with rights of levying tolls, and opened the road for traffic in the autumn of 1900. In 1903 Messrs. Lynch acquired the concessionary rights of the Imperial Bank of Persia for the roads 'Teheran Kom-Ispahan, Kom Mohammereh, and formed the 'Persian Road and Transport Company,' which started construction on the Kom-Ispahan section in the summer of 1904.

Persia has a system of telegraphs consisting of 6,312 miles of line, with 10,754 miles of wire, and 131 stations—(1) 1,706 miles of line with 5,318 miles of wire are worked by an English staff, and form the 'Indo European Telegraph Department,' a British Government department, established in virtue of a number of conventions from 1863 to 1901 between the British and Persian Governments. The last convention was for the construction and working by the British Government of a three wire line from Kashan to British Beluchistan via Yazd, Kerman, and Bam. Telegraphic communication with India was effected in May, 1904. (2) 457 miles of line with three wires, 1,871 miles of wire between Teheran and Julfa on the Russo-Persian frontier, are worked by the Indo-European Telegraph Company, Limited, according to its concession of 1868. (3) About 8,600 miles of single wire lines belong to the Persian Government, and are worked by a Persian staff.

The first regular postal service, established by an Austrian official in Persian employ, was opened January, 1877. There are 218 post offices. In 1902 the post office was joined to the Customs Department worked by Belgian officials. In August, 1909, posts and telegraphs were placed in charge of a Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, who is a member of the Cabinet but as to the number of letters, post cards, parcels, &c., conveyed, and telegrams transmitted, very few statistics are obtainable. During the year 1912-13, about 284,000,000 letters, post cards and newspapers, of which 4,000,000 were registered, were delivered in Persia, and there were 320,000 parcels delivered from Europe via Russia.

Money, Weights, and Measures

Persia has nominally a double monetary standard, but in practice the finances of the country are on a silver basis. The monetary unit is the kran, a silver coin, formerly weighing 28 nakhods (88 grains), then reduced to 26 nakhods (77 grains), now weighing only 24 nakhods (71 grains) or somewhat less. The proportion of pure silver was before the new coinage (commenced 1877) 92 to 95 per cent, it was then fixed at 90, but occasionally coins with only 89½ have been turned out from the Mint. In 1874 a kran had the value of a franc, 25 being equal to 17. The value of a kran was (September, 1910) about 8d.

The coins in circulation, with their values calculated at exchange 1l = 50 kran, are —

Copper		Silver
Pal	0 12d	Ten Sháhís = $\frac{1}{2}$ Kran	2 40d
Sháhí = 2 Pal	0 24d	One Kran = 20 Sháhís	4 80d
Four Sháhís = (1 Abbássi )	0 96d	Two Kran	9 60d
Five Sháhís = 10 Pal = $\frac{1}{4}$ Kran	1 20d	Five Kran	2s 0 00d

Copper is out of circulation. In consequence of an excess of coinage by a former mint master the copper money greatly depreciated in value since 1896 and was circulating at less than its price of copper, viz 80 to 83 copper shahis (weighing about  $\frac{1}{8}$  lb) to one silver kran ( $4\frac{1}{2}$ d). The Government then decided to introduce a nickel coinage instead, great quantities of five and ten centime pieces, of same size and weight as those current in Belgium, and of the nominal value of  $\frac{1}{20}$  and  $\frac{1}{10}$  kran, were coined at Brussels and put into circulation in the autumn of 1900.

Gold coins are  $\frac{1}{4}$  Toman,  $\frac{1}{2}$  Toman, 1 Toman, 2, 5 and 10 Tomans, but they are not in circulation as current money, because of their ever varying value in Kran (silver) and no coins of the higher values have been struck for some years. They are a commodity and are used for presents and hoarding. A Toman in silver is the equivalent of 10 kran (now worth 3s 4d), but a gold Toman has a value of 22 Kran (7s 4d).

Accounts are reckoned in dinârs, an imaginary coin, the ten-thousandth part of a toman of ten krans. A kran therefore = 1,000 dinârs, one shâhi = 50 dinârs.

The unit of weight is the miskâl (71 grains), subdivided into 24 nakhods (2 96 grains) of 4 gandum (74 grain) each. Sixteen miskâls make a sir, and 5 sir make an abbâssi, also called wakkeh, kervânkeh. Most articles are bought and sold by a weight called batman or man. The mans most frequently in use are —

Man-i-Tabriz = 8 Abbâssis	= 640 Miskâls = 6 49 lbs
Man-i-Noh Abbâssi = 9 Abbâssis	= 720 „ = 7 30 „
Man-i-Kohne (the old man)	= 1,000 „ = 10 14 „
Man-i-Shâh = 2 Tabriz Mans	= 1,280 „ = 12 98 „
Man-i-Rey = 4 Tabriz Mans	= 2,560 „ = 25 96 „
Man-i-Bender Abbâssi	= 840 „ = 8 52 „
Man-i-Hâshemt = 16 Mans of	720 „ = 116 80 „

Corn, straw, coal, &c, are sold by Kharvâr = 100 Tabriz Mans = 649 142 „

The unit of measure is the zar or gez, of this standard several are in use. The most common is the one of 40 95 inches, another, used in Azerbaijan equals 44 09 inches. A farsakh theoretically = 6,000 zar of 40 95 inches = 3 87 miles. Some calculate the farsakh at 6,000 zar of 44 09 inches = 4 17 miles.

The measure of surface is jerib = 1,000 to 1,066 square zar of 40 95 inches = 1,294 to 1,379 square yards.

PERU.

(REPUBLICA DEL PERU )

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Peru, formerly the most important of the Spanish Viceroyalties in South America, issued its declaration of independence July 28, 1821, but it was not till after a war, protracted till 1824, that the country gained its actual freedom from Spanish rule. The Republic is politically divided into departments, and the departments into provinces. According to the Constitution of January 18, 1920, the legislative power is vested in a Senate (35 members) and a House of Representatives (110 members), and renewed totally every five years. The number of senators and deputies can only be altered by reform of the Constitution. An organic law designs the departmental and provincial electoral districts, and the number of senators and deputies which corresponds to each of them. Both senators and deputies are elected by a direct vote. Congress meets annually on July 28, and sits for 90 to 120 days. It may be summoned as often as necessary, but no extraordinary session may last more than 45 days.

The executive power is entrusted to a President, elected for 5 years and not re-eligible till after another 5 years. He receives 30,000 soles ($3,000) a year and an amount for administration expenses, fixed by Congress each year. There are two Vice Presidents, who take the place of the President only in case of his death or incapacity, and they are elected for 5 years. The Vice Presidents receive no salary as such. The President and Vice-Presidents are elected by direct vote.

President —Señor Augusto B. Leguía, who assumed the Presidency by means of a coup d'état on July 4, 1919. His position was afterwards confirmed and legalised by Congress, and the President took the oath on October 15, 1919, for the term 1919-24.

The President exercises his executive functions through a Cabinet of six ministers, holding office at his pleasure. The ministers are those of the Interior, War, Marine, Foreign Affairs, Justice, with Worship and Instruction, Finance and Public Works. Each minister receives 12,000 soles (1,200) a year. None of the President's acts has any value without the signature of a minister.

The departments are divided into provinces (113 in all), and these are subdivided into districts (873 in all). Each department is administered by a Prefect, and each province by a Sub-Prefect. There are three regional congresses in the country, one in the north, a second in the centre, and the third in the south. Deputies to these legislatures are chosen by the provinces. Municipal councillors are elected by direct vote, and foreigners are eligible.

Area and Population.

There has been no enumeration of the population in recent years. The census returns of 1862 showed a total population of 2,487,216, that of 1876 put the number at 2,660,881, of whom about 13.8 per cent. were white, 1.9 per cent. negroes, 57.6 per cent. Indian, 24.8 per cent. mestizos (Cholos and Zambos), and 1.0 per cent. Asiatic, chiefly Chinese. An estimate in 1908 gives the population in that year as 4,500,000. An Act of the Peruvian Congress, dated October 30, 1920, authorises the Executive to take a general census.

The population of the capital, Lima, according to the municipal census of 1908, was 140,884, in 1919 it was estimated at 175,000, Callao 34,346 (in 1905), Arequipa 35,000 to 40,000, Cuzco 10,000 to 15,000, Iquitos district 12,000, Ayacucho 14,346, Huaras 7,646, Huacho 6,283.

The Republic (including Tacna) is divided into 19 departments and 3 provinces (Callao, Tumbes and Moquegua), the areas of which, according to estimates supplied by the Lima Geographical Society, are given below with the population, according to the census returns of 1876 (the latest official one) and an estimate for 1896. The estimate, however, is not to be accepted as satisfactory, grave doubts being entertained whether the population is increasing. (The chief towns are shown in brackets) —

There are, besides, many uncivilised Indians, but their numbers are absolutely unknown. The Peruvian Government encourages immigration of properly qualified persons, but would-be settlers entirely destitute of capital are mentioned as undesirable.

As a result of the war with Chile, the latter country has annexed the province of Tarapacá. The Chileans have also, under the treaty signed in 1888 and ratified in 1884, occupied the provinces of Tacna and Arica since

1883 A popular vote should in 1894 have decided to which country they are to belong, but owing to the failure of negotiations for arriving at a modus operandi, the decision was deferred

As to the boundary dispute with Bolivia an arrangement has been come to by direct negotiations between Bolivia and Peru. The frontier line between them was fixed from the mouth of the Heath to that of the Yavijña (1912), and finally demarcated by a joint commission. Those with Colombia and Ecuador were referred to the King of Spain. The question at issue concerned the possession of over 100,000 square miles of land rich in rubber, timber, and probably gold lying about the head waters of the Amazon. The King, on the evident unwillingness of Ecuador to decide the dispute by arbitration, renounced his functions as arbitrator in November, 1910. The United States then intervened, and hostilities were for the moment averted by the agreement of the disputants to accept the mediation of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil. A definite arrangement has been made with Brazil as to boundary, favourable, on the whole, to Peru.

The region north of the Marañon from the Pongo de Manseriche is claimed by Ecuador and Colombia and Peru. This region formed in the Spanish Colonial days the Comandancia de Maynas, and was allocated to the Virreynato of Santa Fé, then to the Audiencia of Quito, and for religious and ecclesiastical purposes subject to the Archbishop of Lima. It has been occupied by Peru since 1840.

Religion.

By the terms of the Constitution there exists absolute political and religious liberty. The Roman Catholic religion is the religion of the State. There is a Roman Catholic archbishopric (Lima, dating from 1545), 13 bishoprics, 2 Apostolic Vicarages, and 2 Apostolic Prefectures. The churches and convents are the property of the State. In 1919, 22,158 were voted for public worship, and 660 for missions. In 1897 an Act was passed enabling non Catholics to contract civil marriages. In 1903 an Act was passed giving still greater facilities for the marriage of non Catholics.

Instruction, Justice

Elementary education is by law compulsory for both sexes, but the law is not enforced. It is free in the public schools that are maintained by the Government. In 1919, there were in Peru 3,006 primary schools with 4,301 teachers and 181,211 pupils. There were also in 1918, 27 Government high schools, with 6,231 pupils and 364 teachers. High schools are maintained by the Government in the capitals of the departments, the pupils paying a moderate fee. There is in Lima a central university, called 'Universidad de San Marcos,' founded by Charles V. in 1551, it had in 1918, 1,480 students in five faculties. There are also universities at Arequipa (founded in 1827), Cuzco, and Trujillo. Lima possesses a school of mines and civil engineering, created in 1874, with good collections and laboratories, a national agricultural school, and a school of arts and trades recently established. There are in the capital and in some of the principal towns private high schools under the direction of English, German, and Italian staffs. There are also a military and a naval school. Lima has also a public library, besides that of the university and school of mines.

Justice is administered in the Supreme Court at Lima composed of 11 judges and 3 fiscals, and in Superior and Minor Courts at Lima and 11 other

Finance

For the collection of the dues on alcohol, opium, tobacco, stamped paper for official uses, legacy and property transfer dues, etc., a new syndicate was formed under Government approval called the Compañía Recaudadora de Impuestos (the Tax Collecting Company), which began operations on the 1st April, 1913, making a loan to the Government, as a condition of its contract, of 1,245,000/, which sum is to earn 7 per cent interest per annum. The Company retains 115,000 for administration expenses as also 1 per cent of the profits.

Salt is a Government monopoly created originally (1896) for the purpose of raising a fund for the ransom of the Provinces of Tacna and Arica. Latterly, however, the Compañía Recaudadora de Impuestos has undertaken, as one of the stipulations of its contract, to furnish the Government at any given moment with the necessary sum to make the service of amortization and interest of a loan it may contract for the ransom of the Provinces mentioned. This monopoly produced a net revenue of 295,447/ in 1918.

The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (ended May 31) were as follows (10 soles = 1/ ) —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	3,424,326	3,942,383	4,510,435	4,892,461	6,154,171
Expenditure	3,582,223	3,193,609	3,330,483	4,693,843	5,799,981

The foreign debt of Peru was made up of two loans, contracted in England in 1870 and 1872, amounting to 32,688,320/. In 1876 Peru was forced to suspend payments on its external debt, and in 1889 the debt, including arrears of interest, amounted to 55,209,133/. In January, 1890, by the signing of the Grace Donoughmore contract, the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders assumed all responsibility for the foreign debt of Peru, and in return the Peruvian Government granted that organisation certain concessions (rights over guano deposits, mines, and lands) and the control of all State railways, for a period of 66 years. The Peruvian Corporation was then created by the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders to administer these concessions. In 1907 a new contract was effected between the Peruvian Corporation and the Peruvian Government by which certain disputes were adjusted and under which the railway lease was extended for an additional 17 years, during which time the Government was to receive 50 per cent of the net profits resulting from the operation of the railways after the service of the corporation's railway bonds had been met. The Government extended the contract with the Peruvian Corporation for 10 years from September 11, 1911.

The total debt of Peru (June 30, 1920) amounted to 6,088,740/, of which the internal debt amounted to 3,969,216/, the loans to 980,587/, bank obligations to 680,391/, debts to the Tax Collecting Company 1,302,000/, sundry loans 14,558/, floating debt 41,988/.

In 1919 a law was passed authorising the President to issue at par bonds of the International Consolidated Debt of a nominal value of 2,000,000 Peruvian pounds redeemable in 31 years by semi yearly drawing, bearing interest at the rate of 7 per cent per annum.

Defence.

Military service in Peru is compulsory and universal. The terms are 2 years in the active army, 7 years in the first reserve, 5 in the second reserve, and 15 years in the National Guard. The country is divided into 5 military districts, each furnishing a complete division. Each division contains 2 or 3 regiments of infantry of 2 battalions each (1 machine gun company per regiment), 1 group (2 batteries) field artillery, 1 regiment mountain artillery, 1 cavalry regiment of 2 squadrons, 1 railway company, 1 labour company, 1 topographical section, 1 medical section, 1 commissariat section. The General Staff is quartered at Lima, and is composed of 3 sections, a geographical department, commissariat, medical, and engineer services. The centres of instruction comprise (1) military school to obtain rank of 2nd lieutenant, (2) special school, for lieutenants of all arms, (3) general staff academy, for captains qualifying for staff. The peace establishment of the army is 11,000. Police and gendarmerie amount to 8,000, distributed amongst civil guards and squadrons of mounted police. There is an ammunition factory. The infantry are armed with the 1912 Peruvian model of the Mauser rifle, cavalry with carbine of same type and model, artillery with the Schneider Canet gun. The civil schools (technical, secondary, and state provided) are organised in military fashion, and receive their military instruction from a permanent staff appointed by the General Staff. Shooting is compulsory for all coming within the terms of the military service law. There are also 17 State aided rifle clubs under military control, with a roll of 16,000 marksmen. The Civil Guard numbered in 1918, 2,771 officers and men.

The Peruvian navy now consists of 6 vessels: the Lima, a cruiser of 1,700 tons displacement, which has been re-boilered, and is to be re-armed. Two cruisers, the Almirante Grau and the Coronel Bolognesi, 3,200 tons and 24 knots speed, were launched at Barrow in April, 1906. There are also 2 submarines, Ferre and Palacios, and one torpedo destroyer, Teniente Rodriguez (built in France and stationed at Callao).

Peru possesses a river flotilla on the Amazon, composed of the following vessels — America, Iquitos, Cahuapana, Orellana, Requena, Puno, and Cuzco.

Agriculture and Industry.

The country may be divided into three zones: the coast strip, with an average width of 30 miles, the Sierra, or Uplands, lying between the coast range of mountains and the Andes proper, and the forest or wooded region, called the Montaña. The chief agricultural productions of Peru are cotton, coffee, and sugar. The cotton area in 1916-17 (latest available statistics) is 158,224 acres, cotton production in 1918 was 24,603 tons. The chief coffee-growing districts are those of Chanchamayo, Perené and Paucartambo in Central Peru, where the Peruvian Corporation has done much useful colonising work. Coffee is also grown in the Huanuco district. The concession to the Corporation comprises about 2,750,000 acres, but the labour and transport difficulties in the tropical forest region are serious, much less than half the area conceded for colonisation is as yet occupied. The sugar industry, the most important in the country, is carried on chiefly in the coast region. The area devoted to cane cultivation was given in 1918 as 124,610 acres, and the number of labourers in the industry as 23,456. In 1918, 283,190 tons were produced, in 1917, 310,000 tons. Cocoa cultivation is extending, about 200,000 cocoa trees having been recently planted in the Perené region. Wheat in 1918 was grown on 220,740 acres, which produced 62,115 tons. Rice is extensively grown, in 1918 the area was 77,405 acres, the production in 1918 was 40,274 tons, in 1917, 47,939 tons. The quality is excellent, but the quantity is insufficient to meet local wants. There are about 20 rice mills in the country. Tobacco, wines and spirits, olives, ramie, and maize, are also produced. In 1909 the Government created a tobacco monopoly for the manufacture, importation and sale of tobacco. This industry is conducted by an organisation known as the Compañía Recaudadora de Impuestos, Estanco del Tabaco, at Lima. Silk culture is being tried in the coast region. The most important coca growing district is in the province of Otuzco in the department of La Libertad, where there are several cocacultes. Cocaine is manufactured in Lima, Otuzco, and several other towns. Besides, there are in the country dyes, cinchona, and other medicinal plants. There is a large export of alpaca, sheep, and llama wool. Thousands of square miles of healthy and fertile land on the eastern slopes of the Andes are available for colonisation. Rubber is collected in large quantities and shipped down the Amazon from Iquitos.

The guano deposits on Huancillos, Punta Lobos, and Pabellon de Pica, which had been delivered over to the Peruvian Corporation, reverted to the Chilean Government on February 2, 1901, they contained 40 or 50 thousand tons of guano, but those on the island of Lobos de Afuera, and at some places on the coast, still remain in possession of the Corporation. In 1919 a new company was set up by the Government for the administration of guano. In the 1919-20 season 55,030 Spanish ton loads of guano were extracted.

All the lines are standard gauge railways (4 ft 8½ in.), with the exception of the Trujillo Railway (75 miles long) between Salaverry and Ascope, and the Chimbote Railway (36 miles) between Chimbote and Tablones, which are 3 ft gauge, and the Guaqui to La Paz Railway, which is a metric gauge line. A small Government line connecting up Lima with the Port of Chilca, a short distance south of Callao, is being constructed.

There were 303 telegraph offices in 1918. The length of State telegraph lines in 1917 was 7,849 miles. Number of telegrams (1918) 1,041,667 despatched and 1,049,346 received. Three submarine telegraph cables connect Peru and Chile, and one connects Peru and the Republics to the north. Wireless communication between Iquitos and Masisea, and between Iquitos and Puerto Hermudez was inaugurated July 8, 1908. In 1919 Peru had 19 wireless stations. Total length of telephone wire (1914), 182,900 miles.

In 1917 there were 646 post offices, letters and packets handled, 23,908,987 in the home service and 5,011,181 in the international service.

Money and Credit

A decree was issued by the President of the Republic on January 10, 1898, to give effect to the law of December 29, 1897, establishing a gold currency. By Act of December 14, 1901, gold became the only standard. The national gold coin, the libra, is of the same standard and weight as the pound sterling, which is also legal tender, 10 soles = 17 sterling. Silver is legal tender up to 100 soles. Peru has no paper currency issued by the Government, but since the outbreak of the European War (1914) an issue in notes has been made by a number of banks with the sanction of Congress, the total on December 31, 1918, being 5,109,369½ of which 3,532,623 are in circulation.

These notes (10s, 12, 5½ and 10½) are guaranteed by the several banks with 20 per cent bullion and 80 per cent in approved bonds, shares and other securities deposited by them in their vaults and subject to Government supervision, they are by law declared legal substitute for the gold £. The actual amount of gold coin held in deposit on December 31, 1918, was 4,609,090½.

The scarcity of silver coins made it necessary to issue paper notes of the value of 50 cents, or 1s. These have been issued against full gold deposits as follows: Government 12,250 banks, 10,100½, the public generally 7,220½.

On December 31, 1919, the currency of the Republic was as follows: Gold on hand in the banks, 496,474 Peruvian pounds, silver on hand, 325,753 soles, gold certificates, 6,646,321 pounds, nickel, 1,909,261 soles, and copper, 338,500 soles. The total amount, therefore, to 7,142,795 Peruvian pounds in gold and 3,073,514 soles in silver, nickel, and copper.

In Peru the commercial banks are the Bank of Peru and London (capital, 500,000½), the Italian Bank, the International Bank of Peru, the American Mercantile Bank (founded in 1916), and the Banco Popular, the Caja de Depositos y Consignaciones, the Banco Alemán Transatlántico, and the Caja de Ahorros de la Beneficencia de Lima, a savings bank with deposits amounting to over 200,000*l*. The Anglo-South American Bank and the National City Bank of New York opened branches in Peru in 1919. On June 30, 1920, the paid-up capital of all the banks amounted to 1,860,000*l*, the reserves to 688,000*l*, and the deposits to 17,121,862*l*.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The gold coin is the Libra=the English sovereign. The coinage of gold 5 sol pieces (equivalent to half sovereigns) has been authorised. Silver coins are the Sol (10 soles=1 libra),  $\frac{1}{2}$  sol,  $\frac{1}{4}$  sol,  $\frac{1}{8}$  sol,  $\frac{1}{16}$  sol. Bronze coins are 1 and 2 centavo pieces (100 centavos=1 sol). Nickel coins are also in circulation.

POLAND.

(RZECZPOSPOLITA POLSKA)

POLAND was an independent State until the end of the eighteenth century. The Poles are Slavonic in race and Roman Catholic in religion.

During the seventeenth century the position of Poland rapidly declined, and eventually, by the three partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, the Polish Commonwealth, as it was then called, was divided between Prussia, Russia and Austria.

In 1807, Napoleon formed a part of the Old Commonwealth into a semi-independent State under the title of the Duchy of Warsaw and endowed it with a very liberal constitution, but in 1815, at the Congress of Vienna, this was undone, and Poland was re-partitioned between Prussia, Austria and Russia, except the small district of Cracow, which was constituted an independent republic and remained such until 1835, when it was annexed by Austria, despite a guarantee of neutrality by Prussia, Austria and Russia.

At the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, only one portion of Poland enjoyed autonomous government, viz., that annexed by Austria. Austrian Poland was governed by the Galician Diet at Lwow (Lemberg), under the control of the Central Government in Vienna.

During the war Russian Poland was invaded by the Germans and Austrians, and by the end of 1915 the whole country was occupied by the Austro-German forces.

On November 5, 1916, the German and Austrian Emperors, in a joint manifesto, proclaimed the independence of Poland, but neither the boundaries nor the constitution of the State were defined. Shortly afterwards a Provisional Council of State, consisting of 25 members, all Poles, was summoned in order to draft the constitution of the new State, but this body did not exist for long. In September, 1917, a new Supreme Authority, the Regency Council, consisting of three members, was appointed, and under their auspices a Ministry was formed and a new Council of State summoned. It was composed partly of elected and partly of appointed members, 110 in all. In October, 1918, this Council of State was dissolved by the Regency Council and the convocation proclaimed a Constituent Assembly to determine the constitution of the Polish State and take over the supreme authority.

On November 9, 1918, the Independence of Poland was solemnly proclaimed. On November 14, General Pilsudski, freed from the Magdeburg prison, returned to Poland, assumed Supreme Power and convoked the Constituent Assembly (Sejm Ustawodawczy), which confirmed him in his office. On June 28, 1919, the Treaty of Versailles recognised the Independence of Poland.

President — Joseph Pilsudski, Marshal, Commander in Chief of the Polish army, born December 5, 1867, in Zulow, Wilna, assumed office, November 14, 1918, re-elected February 20, 1919.

Constitution and Government

The Constitution of the Polish Republic adopted by the Sejm (Parliament) on April 8, 1921, contains the following fundamental principles. The franchise will be universal for both sexes, the voting age being 21. Soldiers and Government officials are excluded from voting. There are two chambers, a Diet and a Senate, both elected by general suffrage. The President (Naczelnik Państwa) convenes, opens, prorogues and closes the Sejm. It is the President's duty to convene the Sejm for an ordinary session each year before the month of November. The President is the Supreme Commander of the army, except in time of war. He is elected for a term of seven years by the Diet and Senate united in a National Assembly. He can make treaties with foreign Powers. In the case of the President's death, his duties are to be assumed by a council of three, composed of the Speaker of the House, the Prime Minister, and the President of the Supreme Court. Any Polish citizen of 41 years of age may be elected President. The President is not responsible either politically or personally. The Constitution also provides for a Senate.

The decree of November 28, 1918, divides Poland into 70 electoral districts, returning altogether 524 deputies. Of this number 241 are returned by Congress Poland, 171 by what was formerly Austrian Poland, and 112 by the former Prussian Provinces. In certain of the districts elections have not yet been held, and the Sejm is at present composed of 395 deputies, distributed as follows among the different parties:—Polish People's Party, 107, National People's Union, 71, National Party, 71, Polish Socialist Party, 35, National Christian Workers' Party, 29, Constitutional Group, 18, National Workers' Union, 14, Middle Class Union, 13, Polish People's Party (left), 11, Jews, 10, Catholic Party, 5, Radical Peasants' Party, 2, Germans, 2, Independents, 7.

The executive (appointed August 21, 1920) called the Council of Ministers (Rada Ministrów) consists of the following departments:—

Prime Minister—Wincenty Witos

Minister for Foreign Affairs—Eustachy Prince Sapieha

Minister of Commerce and Industry—Wiesław Przanowski

Minister of Finance—Dr. Jan Kanty Steczkowski

Minister of the Interior—Leopold Skulski

Minister of Communications—Zygmunt Jasziński

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs—Władysław Skulowiec

Minister of Agriculture—Josef Raczynski

Minister of Art—Jan Heurich

Minister of Labour—Jan Jankowski

Food Minister—Bolesław Grodzinski

Minister of Justice—Stanisław Nowodworski

Minister of Public Works—Gabriel Narutowicz

Minister of War—General Gosulowski

Minister of Education—Maciej Rataj.

Minister of former Prussian Province—Władysław Kucharski

Minister of Health—Witold Chodźko

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Local government, municipal as rural, has not yet (March, 1921) been unified. In the transitional period preceding the unification of the administrative system of the three portions of Poland, the old Austrian and Prussian institutions are still in being. As regards Congress Poland, a provisional decree of local autonomy was issued on February 4, 1919, on democratic lines giving autonomy to the different districts.

Area and Population.

The area of the Polish State cannot be strictly defined until its boundaries are determined by the Peace Treaty with Russia and Lithuania and by the plebiscite in Upper Silesia. The Peace Treaty with Russia, the Treaty of Riga, was signed on March 18, 1921, and ratifications were exchanged on May 2, 1921. The Treaty of Peace with Lithuania is being negotiated (May, 1921), while as regards Upper Silesia, no decision as to its final status had been taken by the Supreme Council by May, 1921.

According to a recent estimate, Poland at present has an area of 149,042 square miles, and a population of (1920) 24,272,349. Of this Congress Poland (i.e., the Poland as delimited and handed over to Russia by the Congress of Vienna, 1815) had 12,789,226 inhabitants, Galicia, 8,257,505, and Former Prussian Poland, 3,225,618. The territories separated from Russia and ceded to Poland by the Treaty of Riga comprise an area of 43,908 square miles, with 3,683,568 inhabitants. The area of the Polish territory within the frontiers of the Curzon line and the Treaty of Versailles comprises about 96,796 square miles, with a population of 3,882,000.

The density of population in the whole country is 188 per square mile, while within the Curzon line it is 246.5 per square mile. The racial percentage is as follows (the percentage within the Curzon line is given in brackets): Poles, 65.3 per cent (70.8 per cent), Ukrainians, 16.7 per cent (15.8 per cent), Jews, 7.4 per cent (6.8 per cent), Germans, 5.2 per cent (6.0 per cent), White Russians, 3.1 per cent, Ruthenians, 0.5 per cent, Lithuanians, 0.4 per cent, Aborigines, 0.6 per cent, others, 0.8 per cent. (0.6 per cent).

The territory of Congress Poland is divided into 5 counties (województwo): Warsaw, Lodz, Lublin, Kielce and Białystok, comprising 83 districts (powiat). The former Prussian Provinces are divided into two counties: Posen and Pomerelia, comprising 55 districts. Galicia is divided into 4 counties: Cracow (24 districts), Lwów (28 districts), Stanisławów (16 districts), Tarnopol (17 districts).

Population of principal towns —

Warsaw	980,000	Częstochowa	101,200	Wrocław	54,000
Lodz	429,775	Białystok	80,300	Kalisz	50,000
Leuberg (1910)	206,113	Lublin	78,000	Dąbrowa	49,904
Vilna	205,000	Radom	70,000	Pabjanice (1912-18)	48,000
Cracow	176,463	Brest Litowski	68,000	Thorn (1910-11)	46,000
Posen	166,691	Bromberg	57,696	Kielce	44,000
Sosnowiec	119,000	Przemysł	54,078	Zawiercie	42,700

No recent statistics of births, deaths and marriages are available, in 1912 (including the territories of the former kingdom of Poland, Galicia, Pomerania and West Prussia) there were: Marriages, 172,144, births (living), 898,819, deaths, 488,193, surplus of births over deaths, 410,626.

Before the war, emigration was chiefly to the United States. The Polish population in America is estimated to be over 4,000,000.

Religion.

The great majority of the population profess the Roman Catholic faith, but there is no established church in Poland and all denominations enjoy equal rights, though Article 117 of the Constitution declares Roman Catholicism to be the dominant religion. The figures relating to the proportion of people professing different religions are as follows —

Territories	Roman Catholics	Greek Catholics	Protestants	Greek Orthodox	Jews	Others
Former Russian Poland (1913)	9,842,428	—	698,804	484,249	1,954,644	75,088
Galicia (1910)	3,731,569	3,379,613	37,144	—	371,895	5,454
Duchy of Posen (1910)	1,423,238	—	646,580	—	26,512	4,501
West Prussia (1910)	882,695	—	789,081	—	13,954	17,744

The percentage of the different religions in the whole territory in the above table is as follows (the figures in brackets refer to the territory within the Curzon line) — Roman Catholic, 62·2 per cent (66·8 per cent), Greek Catholic, 12·1 per cent (14·1 per cent), Greek Orthodox, 9·3 per cent (2·2 per cent), Jews, 11·0 per cent (5·4 per cent).

Poland is divided into the following Catholic Dioceses: the Metropolitan Archbishopric of Warsaw, the Archbishoprics of Lemberg and Posen, the Bishoprics of Cracow, Włocławek, Płock, Lublin, Sandomir, Kielce, Sejny, Przemyśl, Tarnobrzeg, Vilna. The Archbishoprics of Warsaw and Posen are Cardinals. There are 3,071 churches and 5,448 priests in the former Russian and Austrian Poland alone. The Greek Catholic Church has an Archbishopric in Lemberg and two Bishoprics, Przemyśl and Stanisławów, there are 2,443 churches and 3,318 priests. The province of Teschen Silesia is under the Bishopric of Breslau (Germany).

Instruction

The educational system of Poland has not yet been unified. Elementary education is free and compulsory. Of schools there were in former Russian Poland (figures for 1914) 6,867 elementary, with 461,474 pupils, and 289 secondary, with 67,400 pupils, in Galicia (figures for 1912), 6,151 elementary, with 1,336,407 pupils, and 130 secondary, with 42,250 pupils, in Posen (figures for 1911), 3,116 elementary, with 424,281 pupils, and 40 secondary, with 13,500 pupils, in West Prussia (figures for 1911), 3,100 elementary, with 316,000 pupils, and 56 secondary, with 1,700 pupils. There were also 318 technical schools, with 24,807 pupils, and 11 high schools, with 5,657 pupils, in Russian Poland (1913), 493 technical schools, with 45,259 pupils, in Galicia (1912), and 747 technical schools in Posen (1912).

There are 5 universities, viz., Cracow (founded 1384), Warsaw (1816), Lemberg (1661), Posen (1612 and 1919), Lublin (1919), 2 Polytechnics, at Warsaw and Lemberg, an Academy of Fine Arts at Cracow, 2 Veterinary Academies at Warsaw and Lemberg, 2 Academies of Agriculture at Dublan and Pulawy, Academy of Forestry at Lemberg, 2 Academies of Commerce at Cracow and Lemberg, an Academy of Mines at Cracow, and a purely scientific institution, the highest in Poland, the Academy of Science at Cracow.

Justice and Crime,

Each of the three component parts of Poland still has its separate judiciary organisations. The unification of the courts of justice will be worked out by the Codification Commission appointed in November, 1919.

In Galicia the old Austrian courts were taken over by the Polish Ministry of Justice on January 1, 1919. In Posen the courts have the old German organisation, which is being taken over by the Special Department of Justice in the Ministry of Prussian Poland. The highest court in Poland with 3 judges sitting, is the Supreme Court in Warsaw, divided into 5 chambers : 1 Civil, 2. Criminal, both for Congress Poland 3 Civil and Criminal for Galicia 4 Administrative which took over the functions of the Supreme Administrative Tribunal in Vienna), and 5 Civil and Criminal for Posen

The lowest courts in Poland are County Courts (Sady okręgowe) and Courts of Peace (Sady pokoju) There are 19 County Courts and 1,518 (297 urban, 1,221 rural) Courts of Peace in Congress Kingdom

In Galicia there are 17 County Courts (Sady okręgowe) and 170 District Courts (Sady powiatowe)

From these courts an appeal lies to the superior Appellation Courts (in Warsaw, Lublin, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, and Thorn) in which there are sitting 3 judges for civil affairs and 2 judges with 3 puisne judges for criminal affairs

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions

In the respective provinces of the Polish Republic there are still the same regulations and the same institutions as before the war in Russia, Prussia and Austria

There are numerous private charitable institutions, such as asylums for aged and infirm, crèches for children, workhouses, eating houses for poor, etc., all over the country In the Grand Duchy of Posen, West Prussia, East Prussia and Upper Silesia every inhabitant in distress must be relieved by the commune in which he becomes destitute, the costs are defrayed from the funds of the commune to which he belongs In Galicia the funds for the support of the poor are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, etc., if these funds are insufficient the commune to which the destitute belongs must make provision In the Kingdom of Poland the care for the poor is left entirely to private charity, in cases of hospital treatment the commune to which the patient belonged was obliged to refund the costs

Insurance in case of illness has been widened and unified by the law of January 11, 1919 It extends the obligation of insurance to all persons belonging to the wage earning classes and establishes a uniform organisation of illness-insurance Officers in every district

Finance

By a provisional agreement of the Sejm, the financial year is to begin on the 1st April of each year The project of the Budget covers two periods, one from July 1, 1919, to the end of March, 1920, the second from April 1 to the end of December, 1920 The Budget itself is divided into two parts, one for the former Russian and Austrian Territories, the other for the former Prussian territories

The figures are as follows (in Polish marks) —

	July 1, 1919, to March 31, 1920	April 1 to Dec 31, 1920
	Russian & Austrian Territories	Russian & Austrian Territories	Prussian Territories
Revenue	2,752,140,000	3,060,594,213	306,579,000
Expenditure	14,828,721,000	15,158,562,000	829,840,000
Deficit	12,074,581,000	12,097,967,787	523,261,000

The public debt of Poland has been incurred in part by the war expenses, relief of starving populations and expenses connected with the organisation of an entirely new administration of the State.

The deficit in the ordinary budget of 1921 is expected to equal 7,500,000,000 marks, and in the extraordinary budget 58,111,000,000 marks, making a total of 60,611,000,000 marks

The national debt at present consists of Debt to the Polish Loan Bank 50,000,000,000 marks, reconstruction loans 8,700,000,000 marks, and premium loan 700,000,000 marks, making a total of 57,400,000,000 marks

Besides this, in 1920 Poland contracted a debt of 17,000,000 dollars on the United States markets and received goods on foreign credit to the amount of, more or less, 3,000,000,000 French francs These foreign debts, reckoned in Polish marks, come to upwards of 100,000,000,000

Defence

The Polish army is at present on war footing, although demobilisation is in progress (March, 1921) Every able bodied Polish subject is liable to serve in the army The organisation of the army will, after the conclusion of peace, be based on conscription and universal service, and its size will be dependent on the future frontiers of Poland The Polish army has at present French, German, Austrian and Italian arms Actually there are about 14,000 officers and 700,000 men of all arms in the field

The country is divided into 9 General Military Districts Warsaw, Lublin, Kielce, Lodz, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, Grodno, Pomerania

There are the following fortresses in Poland in the west, Thorn and Posen, in the south, Cracow and Przemyśl and armed camps, in the east, Brest Litowsk, Grodno, Osowiec, in the interior, Warsaw, Modlin, Deblin

A small British mission has been advising the Polish Government on dock organisation, maritime traffic, mine sweeping, fishery protection, &c Poland hopes to have a small force of cruisers on the Vistula She has received six ex German torpedo boats for police purposes

Production and Industry

Agriculture—Poland is essentially an agricultural country The division of the territory of Poland, according to the principal forms of cultivation, was as follows —

District	Total Area in Hectares	Percentage of the Total Area of the Country
		Arable Land	Meadows and Pastures	Forests	Gardens, Parks, etc	Uncultivated or not de- scribed
Kingdom of Poland (1909)	12,284,786	56.3	14.8	18.0	3.9	7.0
Galicia (1912)	7,849,252	48.5	20.9	25.7	1.4	3.5
Posen (1918)	2,889,800	68.7	10.4	19.9	6.0
West Prussia (1918)	2,555,800	56.1	11.6	22.9	9.4
Regency of Olsztyn (1918)	1,208,000	50.5	15.6	21.6	12.3
Duchy of Teschen (1897)	226,000	47.4	16.2	13.1	2.2	3.1

About 85 per cent of the total area of Poland is productive Of the productive area, about 25 per cent is forest, and of the remainder, less than one half is arable and the rest pasture and meadows By a law of July, 1919, all the forests became the property of the State

The following table shows for the districts named the area and crop of the principal agricultural products in 1919 and 1920 —

Other important crops are sugar (168,000 tons in 1920 21) beet, hemp, hops, tobacco and chicory.

On July 16, 1920 a law was passed by the Sejm by which it was decided to limit the size of the larger estates, and to diminish the size of holdings situated in the neighbourhood of large towns. The first measures for putting this law into practice are now being taken. The maximum has been fixed at 60 hectares for estates situated in industrial districts, at 400 hectares for Posen, Podolia, Volhynia, &c, and at 180 hectares for the other parts of the Polish Republic.

In 1912 Poland possessed 2,847,000 horses, 6,918,000 cattle, 2,389,000 sheep, and 5,185,000 pigs.

Industry—There are four industrial centres in Poland, viz, Warsaw, Lodz, Dabrowa, and Czestochowa.

The damage done to the coal industry by the Germans during the occupation of Poland has for the present greatly lowered the output and seriously affected other industries. The total output of coal in Congress Poland and Galicia in 1919 was 6,145,027 tons, only 68 per cent of the output in 1913, of brown coal 173,000 tons, or 112 per cent as compared with 1913. The output of ore in 1919 was 830,640 tons, as compared with 107,000 in 1913. The output of iron and steel in 1919 was 16,180 tons. In March, 1920, there were 8 furnaces, with a monthly output of 9,700 tons, compared with 42 furnaces and a monthly output of 87,000 tons in 1913, rolling mills in March, 1920 4 rolling mills, with monthly output of 2,400 tons, as compared with 9 in 1913, and output of 39,000 tons. The production of mineral salt in 1920 was 282,673 tons, the supply is said to be nearly inexhaustible, the production of rock oil in Galicia in 1910 was 1,766,000 tons, of potassium salts in Galicia in 1911, 37,000 tons. Galicia produces about 5 per cent of the total petroleum output of the world. In the textile industry in 1920 there were 485 works, with 750,580 spindles and 12,922 looms, employing 46,800 workmen. Other important industries are paper manufactures of various kinds, and the chief that of paper bag products, which are gradually recovering from the effects of the war. In 1920 only 34 per cent, of the workmen employed before the war were at work.

Commerce

The value of goods which passed through the custom houses of the Kingdom of Poland was, in 1911, 1,941,536,000 francs, exports represented the sum of 730,093,000 francs or 37.1 per cent of the total, and imports 1,211,443,000 francs. Approximately one half of the goods imported were destined for the Kingdom itself, the rest passed in transit to Russia.

So far (March, 1921), the only official figures for the trade of Poland are for the periods from November 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920, and from April 1 to July 1, 1920, as follows —

	November 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920	April 1 to July 31, 1920
	Kilos	Kilos
Imports	156,571,692 <sup>1</sup>	431,609,435
Exports	8,017,089	82,342,526

The chief imports for the second period were Raw material, 302,471,337 kilos, articles of consumption, 86,739,111 kilos, manufactured goods, 40,078,316 kilos, partly manufactured goods, 2,185,703 kilos.

The principal raw materials imported were Coal, 237,688,340 kilos, salt, 28,197,347 kilos, vegetable products, including cotton, 7,706,872 kilos, building material, 7,844,734 kilos, phosphorous manure, 7,060,767 kilos. The principal articles of consumption imported were corn and flour, 61,368,350 kilos.

Chief exports for the second period Articles of consumption, 34,600 tons, raw material, 22,736 tons, manufactured goods, 15,799 tons, partly manufactured goods, 7,356 tons.

The principal articles of consumption exported were Vegetables and root crops, 33,609,407 kilos. Principal raw materials Timber 10,746,354 kilos, coal, 8,386,768 kilos, oil, 2,746,354 kilos. Principal manufactured goods Oil by products, 11,436,757 kilos, metal goods, 2,120,576 kilos, wood and basket work manufactures, 1,320,443 kilos. Principal partly manufactured goods Cement, 6,297,465 kilos, and finished wood, 1,031,458 kilos. Three fourths of the total of imported goods (302,247,343 kilos) came from Germany. From other countries Poland imported U.S.A., 74,954,066 kilos, Austria, 20,067,529 kilos, Czecho Slovakia, 19,080,147 kilos, Holland, 9,699,066 kilos, England, 6,288,787 kilos. The exports during the second period were directed to Germany, 46,474,810 kilos, Austria, 14,826,639 kilos, England, 8,725,393 kilos, Czecho Slovakia, 4,611,313 kilos.

Internal Communications

On January, 1 1920, Poland proper had 30,070 miles of road. In 1919 there were 7,295 miles of railways open for traffic in the Republic. All are property of the State.

At the end of 1919 there were in Poland (excluding Prussian Poland) 1,005 Post and Telegraph offices, 1,537 Post Offices, 545 Telephone Exchanges with 29,423 apparatus, while the railway telegraphs had 618 offices. The length of telegraph lines was 51,645 miles, of telephone lines 7,674 miles, of telephone and telegraph lines, 4,347 miles. Of navigable waterways Poland has 1,876 miles, of which 298 miles are accessible for vessels of over 400 tons.

Shipping and Navigation.

Poland is engaged (April, 1921) in realising the programme of her commercial fleet as approved by Parliament, which provides for 220,000 gross tons, including 20 vessels of 8,000 tons each and 10 vessels of 3,000 tons each, besides other smaller vessels for coast traffic

Money and Credit.

Poland has no national currency. The temporary monetary unit is the "Marka Polska" of 100 pfennigs, or nominally about 20 Polish marks to the £. The notes in circulation of Russian Roubles, German Marks and Austrian Kronen were converted into Polish Marks issued by the Polish State Loan Bank. On December 31, 1920, there were notes to the value of 49,361,485,439 Polish marks in circulation.

The Bank of Poland, created by Act of Parliament, has not yet (April 1921) commenced its functions, which are being performed by the Polish State Loan Bank in Warsaw. The position of this Bank, on December 10, 1920, showed that its assets and liabilities balanced at 67,059,745,613 Polish marks.

An arrangement is being made by the Polish Government to take over and transport to Warsaw the County Bank at Lemberg. It will take the name of "State Bank," as its activities will extend throughout the whole country. It will acquire the right to issue banknotes, which so far has been the privilege of the Polish Loan Bank. The capital will be raised to 100 million marks. The Polish State will in future be responsible for every guarantee formerly given by the late Galician Diet.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

PORTUGAL.

(REPUBLICA PORTUGUESA )

PORTUGAL has been an independent State since the twelfth century, until 1910 it was a monarchy. The last King was Manoel II of the house of Braganza Coburg, born November 15, 1889, younger son of King Carlos I and Queen Mary Amélie, daughter of Philippe Duc d'Orleans. Manoel II succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father and elder brother, Prince Luiz Philip, February 1, 1908. On October 5, 1910, the republic was proclaimed, after a short revolution, and a provisional government established with Dr Theophilo Braga as the Provisional President (October 5, 1910, to August 24, 1911). The first President of the Republic was Dr Manoel de Arriaga (August 24, 1911, to May 27, 1915).

On August 20th, 1911, a new constitution was adopted. This provides that there shall be two Chambers. In the first, which is called the National Council, the members (164) shall be elected by direct suffrage for three years. The Second or Upper Chamber (71 members) shall be elected by all the Municipal Councils, and shall be renewable half at a time every three years. The President of the Republic is elected by both Chambers with a mandate for four years, but he cannot be re-elected. The President must be at least 35 years of age. He appoints Ministers, but these are responsible to Parliament. The President may not be present in the Chambers at debates. He is to receive a yearly salary of 2,600*l*, with 1,300*l* for allowances, or a total of 3,900*l* yearly. The Constitution may be revised every ten years.

The Powers formally recognised the Republic on September 11, 1911.

President of the Republic — Dr Antonio José de Almeida (Born 1866 Elected August 6, 1919)

The Cabinet, which was formed on March 2, 1921, is as follows —

Premier and Minister of the Interior — Dr Bernardino Machado

Minister of Foreign Affairs — Domingos Pereira

Minister of Finance — Antonio Maria Silva

Minister of Justice — Lopes Cardoso

Minister of War — Alvaro Castro

Minister of Marine — Fernando Breda i de

Minister for the Colonies — Paiva Gomes

Minister of Commerce — Antonio da Fonseca

Minister of Education — Julio Martins

Minister of Labour — Domingues dos Santos

Minister of Agriculture — S. Durao

Religion.

There is freedom of worship in Portugal, the predominant faith is the Roman Catholic. Portugal, including the Azores and Madeira, is divided into three ecclesiastical provinces, with their sees severally at Lisbon, Braga and Evora. The Archbishop of Lisbon (Patriarch since 1716) has seven suffragans, of whom only two are on the European mainland, while the Archbishop of Braga (the oldest see in Portugal) has five, and the Archbishop of Evora two. The Azores, Madeira, and the Portuguese colonial possessions of West Africa, continental and insular, with five episcopal sees, constitute part of the ecclesiastical province of Lisbon. In East Africa there is also the province of Mozambique. In Asia there is a province of Goa with suffragan sees (Macao included).

The total income of the upper hierarchy of the Church is calculated amount to 300,000 milreis. In 1900 the number of Protestants in Po was 4,491, and that of Jews 481. The Republican government has separated the Church from the State, and State payments for the maintenance and expenses of worship have now ceased. The conventual establishments of Portugal were suppressed by decree of May 28, 1834, and their property confiscated for the benefit of the State. Notwithstanding, several establishments of this nature were formed in later years, they were suppressed by the provisional government, which enforced the law of 1834.

Instruction

Education in Portugal is of three kinds—primary, secondary, higher and special. Primary education is compulsory, and is rigorously enforced by a decree of the Provisional Government of March 29, 1911. In 1915 there were 6,706 public elementary schools with 342,763 pupils (203,374 males, 139,389 females). In 1919 there were 32 secondary schools (with 11,791 pupils in 1917). For higher education there are 3 Universities, at Lisbon (founded in 1858), Coimbra (founded 1290), and Oporto. The Technical School at Lisbon provides instruction in engineering, chemistry, etc. There are also special colleges for music, art (Lisbon and Oporto), commercial schools, a military academy at Lisbon, and a naval school.

Justice and Crime.

The Republic is divided for judicial purposes into 193 comarcas, in every comarca there is a court of first instance. There are two courts of appeal (Tribunaes de Relação) at Lisbon and Oporto, and a Supreme Court in Lisbon.

The internal debt on June 30, 1920, amounted to 1,113,601,347 escudos

Defence

The Army of Portugal is a militia raised by conscription. It is in three categories, the active army, the reserve and the territorial army. All adult males are liable to be called out from the age of 17 to 45, but, practically, service only begins at the age of 20. 10 years are passed in the active army, 10 in the reserve, and 8 in the territorial army, which latter also includes surplus men from other categories. In the active army, recruits undergo from 15 to 30 weeks' preliminary training, according to the arm of the service, afterwards there is a fortnight's training during the annual mobilisation. The country is divided into 8 territorial districts, each supposed to produce a division. The active army consists of 35 regiments of 3 battalions, 11 cavalry regiments of 4 squadrons, 8 field artillery regiments, comprising 63 batteries, 2 horse batteries, 9 mountain batteries, 20 garrison batteries, and engineer units. Batteries have 4 guns.

The peace establishment of the active army has been fixed of late years at 30,000 men. There are about 2,800 officers, all told.

The reserve army was to consist of 35 regiments of infantry, 8 squadrons of cavalry, and 24 field batteries, with other units.

The territorial army has no cadres

The Republican Guard, and the Fiscal Guard, are civil corps recruited from the army, the men of which can be employed in the field in war time. The Republican Guard is a military police, numbering about 5,000 men, of whom about 800 are mounted. The Fiscal Guard is a preventive service about 5,200 strong.

The arm of the Portuguese infantry is the Mauser Vergueiro, a magazine weapon, calibre 6.5 mm. The field artillery is armed with 7.5 cm Schneider Canet guns.

With regard to over sea garrisons, 2 line regiments of infantry (of 2 battalions) are normally stationed in the Azores, and 1 at Madeira. The latter has also a battalion of garrison artillery, and there are 2 in the Azores. Besides these troops, the Portuguese have a separate Colonial Army, partly European and partly Native, which garrisons their possessions on the West Coast of Africa, in Mozambique, India, &c. The force consists of about 700 officers, about 3,000 European non commissioned officers and men, and 9,000 natives, the Europeans being enlisted voluntarily, the natives compulsorily.

During the war 65,062 officers and men were sent to France. The casualties in France amounted to 1,862 killed, 5,224 wounded, and 6,678 prisoners. 31,500 European troops served in Angola and Mozambique, including natives, 150,000 troops were mobilized. The military estimates for 1919-1920 amount to 44,228,346 Escudos.

The navy of Portugal comprises — 3 protected cruisers, Almirante Reis (4,253 tons), Adamastor (1,757 tons), São Gabriel (1,772 tons), four gunboats for Mozambique, a variety of old gunboats, a mine layer, 4 transports, 2 training ships, the former royal yacht, 5 de Outubro (1,365 tons), some sloops, bought from the British Navy in 1920, 5 destroyers, 7 torpedo boats, 4 submarines, 1 steamer for torpedo and mine service.

The naval personnel is about 6,000.

Production and Industry

Of the whole area of continental Portugal 26.2 per cent is annually cultivated under cereals, pulse, pasture, etc., 3.5 per cent is under vineyards, 3.9 per cent under fruit trees, 17.3 per cent under forest, 43.1 per cent is waste. In Alemtejo and Estremadura and the mountainous districts of other provinces are wide tracts of waste lands, and it is asserted that many hectares, now uncultivated, are susceptible of cultivation.

The chief cereal and animal produce of the country are — In the north, maize and oxen, in the mountainous region, rye and sheep and goats, in the central region, wheat and maize, and in the south, wheat and swine, which fatten in the vast acorn woods. The production of wheat in 1919 was 4,767,665 bushels, of rye, 1,785,838 bushels, of oats, 3,037,831 bushels, of barley, 1,009,780 bushels. Throughout Portugal wine is produced in large quantities. The area of vineyards in 1917 was 781,000 acres (720 acres in 1916), and the vintage for 1919 amounted to 96,641,160 gallons. Olive oil (area covered by olive trees about 825,000 acres, annual production about 12,760,000 gallons of oil), figs, tomatoes are largely produced, as are oranges, onions, and potatoes. The production of wool in 1918-19 amounted to 6,244,634 pounds.

The forests cover 19 per cent of the total area of the country, pines extending to 1,909,663 acres, oaks, 898,833 acres, corks, 817,081 acres, chestnut, 210,345 acres, Pyrenean oak, 169,150 acres total, 4,005,072 acres. Cork is one of the principal sources of wealth, the annual production is estimated at 176,368,000 pounds.

Portugal possesses considerable mineral wealth, but coal is scarce, and, for want of fuel and cheap transport, valuable mines remain unworked. The most important mineral is wolfram, others are iron, copper, manganese, antimony, lead, tin, and gold.

Portugal had in 1918, 36,673 persons and 11,922 vessels of 37,609 tons engaged in fishing. The exports of sardines and tunny fish are considerable. The centre of the sardine industry is at Setubal, about 10 miles south of Lisbon. The value of the fisheries in 1918 was 20,205,996 escudos, including sardines, 13,018,082 escudos.

A characteristic industry of Portugal is the manufacture of azulejos or porcelain tiles. This was inherited from the Moors, and tiles are used extensively for interior and exterior decoration of public and private buildings. At Sacavem, near Lisbon, a large factory makes tiles and china-ware. In Peniche, an old fishing village on the coast north of Lisbon, there is a local pillow lace industry, and at Guimaraes famous embroidery is made.

Shipping, Navigation, and Internal Communications

The commercial navy of Portugal on January 1, 1911, contained 66 steamers of 70,193 tons in the aggregate, and 259 sailing vessels of 43,844 tons

In 1916, 7,284 vessels of 9,778,211 tons entered the ports of Portugal. Portugal has two State owned railways, 733 miles in length, and five privately owned lines, 1,314 miles in length, total railway mileage on December 31, 1918, 2,047, and on December 31, 1920, 2,128 miles. The railways have a gauge of 5ft 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ in, except two lines, one of which has a 3ft 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ in gauge, and the other a 2ft 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ in gauge.

The number of post offices at the end of 1913 was 4,266, the number of letters, newspapers, &c, carried in the same year was letters, 54,623,000, post cards, 23,667,000, printed matter, circulars, &c, 47,549,000. The number of telegraph offices at the end of 1915 was 628. There were at the same date 5,945 miles of line and 13,415 miles of wire. The number of telegrams in 1915 was internal, 1,412,040, international, 706,569, transit, 2,146,629, service, 184,731, total, 4,449,969.

Money, Weights, and Measures

The Government financial institution is the Bank of Portugal. The cash on hand of the bank on March 6, 1921, was gold, 8,576,696 escudos, silver, 19,022,631 escudos. The notes in circulation amounted on March 6, 1921, to 632,161,233 escudos.

There are 18 other banks registered in the Republic with a nominal capital of 47,000,000 escudos, and total deposits on December 31, 1919, of 331,465,000 escudos.

The gold coinage of Portugal issued since 1854 amounts to the nominal value of 7,967,002, and the silver coinage to 37,934,523 escudos.

The Decree of the Provisional Government of May 22, 1911, established a new monetary system. The unit is the gold escudo, of 100 centavos, which is equivalent to the 1 milreis gold piece, and is worth normally about 4s 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d (but the rate varies, average for 1918, 2s 7d), 1,000 escudos are called a conto. Gold coins are 2, 5, and 10 escudo pieces, silver coins are 1 escudo (0.835 fine) and 50, 20, and 10 centavos pieces, there are bronze and nickel coins of 4, 2, 1, and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -centavo. The gold coins and the silver escudos are .900 fine, the other silver coins are .835 fine. The English sovereign and half sovereign are legal tender for 4 $\frac{1}{2}$  and 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  escudos respectively.

Owing to the disappearance of practically all gold and silver in Portugal, the country is on a paper basis. New notes of 5, 10, and 50 centavos have been issued by the Bank of Portugal. Small coins of 1 and 4 centavos have been placed in circulation to relieve the scarcity of small change.

On January 1st, 1912, the legal time for Portugal was placed in accordance with the Greenwich meridian.

The metric system of weights and measures is the legal standard The chief old measures still in use are —

The Libra	= 1 012 lb	avoirdupois
„ Almude { of Lisbon	= 3 7	imperial gallons
„ „ Oporto	= 5 6	„ „
„ Alqueire	= 0 36	„ bushel
„ Moro	= 2 78	„ quarters.

On August 15, 1914, partial autonomy was granted by the Home Government to all Portuguese colonies giving each the right to establish its own code of laws for civil and financial Government

Portuguese India consists of Gôa, containing the capital, Panjim, or Nova Gôa, on the Malabar coast, Damão, on the coast about 100 miles north of Bombay, and Diu, a small island about 140 miles west of Damão. In 1915 there were 142 schools with 9,546 pupils (6,066 boys and 3,480 girls). In Gôa there are 501 salt works employing 1,968 men, the annual production amounting to about 12,200 tons. In Damão there are 11 salt works, and in Diu 5. In 1906 deposits of manganese were discovered near Mormugão and about 6 concerns with about 20 mines are at work. The military force consists of not less than 1,082 men (786 natives). The Mormugão railway (51 miles) connects this port with the lines of British India. The estimated revenue of Gôa, &c., in 1917-18 was 1,591,022 escudos, expenditure, 1,810,977 escudos. The trade is largely transit. In 1919 the imports by sea and land amounted to 4,554,987 escudos, the exports to 1,626,647 escudos. Chief exports are coco-nuts, fish (fresh and salted), spices, caju nuts, salt, and copra. There are in Portuguese India 18 telegraph offices and 167 miles of telegraph line.

Macao, in China, situated on an island of the same name at the mouth of the Canton River, forms with the two small adjacent islands of Taipa and Colôane, a province, the city being divided into two wards, one inhabited by Chinese and the other by non Chinese, each having its own administrator. The population, according to the census of December 31, 1910, is 74,866 (42,263 males and 32,603 females). There are 2,171 Portuguese, 71,021 Chinese and 244 of various nationalities. Estimated revenue in 1917-18, 1,917,881 escudos and expenditure 1,783,072 escudos. The military force contains at least 488 men (164 natives). The trade, mostly transit, is in the hands of Chinese. Imports in 1919, 6,943,658 escudos, exports, 6,398,176 escudos.

Portuguese Timor consists of the eastern portion of the island of that name in the Malay Archipelago, with the territory of Ambeno and the neighbouring isle of Pulo Cambing. By treaty of 1859 the island was divided between Portugal and Holland, by convention of October 1, 1904, ratified in 1908, a boundary arrangement was made between the two Governments, certain enclaves being exchanged and the possession of other territories settled. This possession, formerly administratively joined to Macao, was in 1896 made an independent province. Population in 1915, 377,815 (201,121 males and 176,694 females). Estimated public revenue and expenditure for 1917-18, 480,064 escudos. Military force not less than 323 men (212 natives). Imports (1919) 987,026 escudos, exports, 549,271 escudos. Chief exports are coffee, sandal wood, sandal root, copra, and wax. The port is Dilly.

The Cape Verde Islands, fourteen in number, are administered by a Governor, whose seat is at Praia, the capital. The population according to the census of December 31, 1912, is 149,793 (69,001 males and 80,792 females) including 295 foreigners, and its distribution is as follows: whites, 4,799; coloured, 87,621; negroes, 51,509. Military force not less than 264 men (168 natives). The chief products are coffee, medicinal produce, hides, and millet. The estimated public revenues and expenditures in 1917-18, 776,799 escudos, imports in 1919, 3,493,802 escudos, exports, 749,709 escudos.

Portuguese Guinea, on the coast of Senegambia, is bounded by the limits fixed by the convention of May 12, 1886, with France, and is entirely enclosed on the land side by French possessions. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagoz, with the island of Bolama, in which the capital of the same name is situated. Estimated population, 289,000. The chief commercial products are rubber, wax, oil seeds, ivory, hides. Estimated public revenues for 1917-18, 723,418 escudos, and expenditures, 708,700 escudos. Military force not less than 247 (143 natives). Imports in 1919, 4,661,404 escudos, exports, 4,327,272 escudos. The chief port is Bissau. There are 100 miles of telegraph lines.

The islands of S Thomé and Príncipe, which are about 125 miles off the coast of Africa, in the Gulf of Guinea, were discovered in 1471, and now constitute a province under a Governor. In 1914 the population of the two islands was 58,907 in S Thomé and 4,938 in Príncipe, and its distribution was as follows: whites, 1,570, natives, 57,337. The islands are hilly, the soil volcanic, and the vegetation rich and various. The chief commercial products are cacao, coffee, rubber and cinchona. Area of cacao plantations, 125,000 acres, production in 1916, 629,450 bags (of between 132 to 140 pounds). Estimated revenue for 1917-18, 1,370,737 escudos, and expenditure, 1,285,258 escudos. Military force, at least 240 men (181 natives). Imports at S Thomé and Príncipe (1919), 6,575,206 escudos, exports, 18,759,705 escudos. On S Thomé a railway of 9 miles is open for traffic.

Angola (Portuguese West Africa), with a coast line of over 1,000 miles, is separated from French Congo by the boundaries assigned by the convention of May 12, 1886, from the Congo by those fixed by the convention of May 25, 1891, from British South Africa in accordance with the convention of June 11, 1891, and from Southwest Africa in accordance with that of December 30, 1886. The colony has belonged to the Portuguese since 1575, with the exception of the years 1641 to 1648, when it was held by the Dutch. It is under a High Commissioner, who resides at Loanda, and is vested with large powers, it is divided into nine districts: Congo, Guanza Norte, Guanza Sul, Benguella, Mazico, Mossamedes, Ilua, Cubango, and Lunda. The capital is S Paulo de Loanda, other important towns being Cabinda, Ambriz, Novo Redondo, Benguella, Mossamedes, and Port Alexander. The indigenous population numbered 2,121,361 in 1914. There are said to be 52 Government schools, and 7 municipal and 2 private schools, with altogether about 2,410 pupils. Various missions are at work in the country. The military force varies between 2,721 men (1,976 natives) and 4,731 (3,602 natives). Estimated revenue in 1917-18, 13,435,221 escudos, and expenditure 16,418,413 escudos. The chief products are coffee, rubber, wax, sugar (for rum distilleries), vegetable oils, coco nuts, ivory, oxen and fish. Rubber supplies are now becoming exhausted, cotton growing, formerly remunerative, has been neglected but is now increasing, tobacco is grown and manufactured for local consumption, petroleum and asphalt are worked by a British syndicate. The province contains large quantities of malachite and copper, iron, petroleum, and salt. Gold has also been found. Imports, exclusive of Congo (1919), 10,208,893 escudos, exports exclusive of Congo, 11,718,322 escudos. The chief imports of the province are textiles, and the chief exports are coffee and rubber. Dried fish are exported in considerable quantities. The trade is largely with Portugal. In 1914 there entered the port of Loanda, 195 vessels of 293,531 tons, and cleared 187 vessels of 270,917 tons. The Portuguese National Navigation Company has most of the carrying trade to and from Europe, the steamers of 3 British lines and one German line visit ports of the Colony. The length of railways open for traffic, is 818 miles, made up as follows: Loanda-Lucalla line, 226 miles (metre gauge), Lucalla-Malanje line, 149 miles (metre gauge), which it is intended should link up with the Central African Railway, Canhuca-Golungo Alto, 9 miles, Lobito-Chinguar, 323 miles, and Mossamedes-Chela Mountains, 111 miles. In July, 1918, the Government purchased the Trans African railway. Angola is connected by cable with East, West, and South African telegraph systems.

Mozambique (Portuguese East Africa) is separated from British Central and South Africa by the limits of the arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal in June, 1891. It is separated from late German East Africa, according to agreements of October and December, 1886, and July, 1890, by a line running from Cape Delgado at 10° 40' S lat till it meets the course of the Rovuma, which it follows to the point of its confluence with the 'Msinje, the boundary thence to Lake Nyasa being the parallel of latitude of this point. In accordance with the Treaty of Versailles the Peace Conference on September 23, 1919, allotted to Portugal 'as the original and rightful owner' the territory south of the Rovuma, known as the "Kionga Triangle" (formerly part of German East Africa).

Portuguese East Africa, with an area of 428,132 square miles, comprises three distinct entities: (1) the Province of Mozambique (295,000 square miles), (2) the Companhia de Moçambique (59,840 square miles), and (3) the Companhia do Nyassa (73,292 square miles). The first, which is ruled by a High Commissioner, with his seat at Lourenço Marques, is divided into 6 districts: Lourenço Marques, Gaza, Inhambane, Quilimane, Tete and Mozambique, each with its own Governor. Lourenço Marques (population 13,154 in 1912) is the capital of the Province. There is a Government Council composed of officials and elected representatives of the commercial, industrial and agricultural classes, and a Provincial Council with the attributions of an administrative and account tribunal. The existing organisation of the province is that which was established by decree of May 23, 1907, with some modifications. The Manica and Sofala region is administered by the Mozambique Company, which has a royal charter granting sovereign rights for 50 years from 1891. Under the Company's administration the country on the Zambezi has become settled, there is convenient transport by river, and facilities are granted for securing titles and working mines. The Nyasa Company, with a royal charter, administers the region between the Rovuma, Lake Nyasa, and the Lumo. Estimated population, about 3 million natives, 10,500 whites, and 1,100 Asiatics and half castes. The military force of the Colony varies between 2,250 men (1,379 natives) and 3,904 men (2,468 natives). For 1917-18 the actual revenue was 9,440,665 escudos.

The chief products of the Colony are sugar, coco nuts, bees wax, and mining products. Important gold bearing reefs have been discovered on the Upper Zambezi, and extensive coal deposits in the Tete region.

The principal ports are Mozambique (population, 1910, 472 Europeans, 895 Asiatics, and about 361,367 natives), Ibo, Quilimane, Chinde (population 1,690, of whom 218 European), Beira (population, 3,420, of whom 738 white), Inhambane (population, 3,330, of whom 100 European and 250 Asiatic), and Lourenço Marques (9,849, of whom 4,691 European).

The trade registered (exclusive of coin and bullion) at the following ports in 1918 is given below —

—	Imports	Exports	Re exports	Transit	Total
	Escudos	Escudos	Escudos	Escudos	Escudos
Lourenço Marques	10,988,466	2,850,772	7,677,247	23,394,101	44,910,586

Mozambique	3,346,780	667,533	420,770	—	4,435,389
Tete	345,112	25,376	—	76,142	446,630
Beira	3,121,834	3,420,180	13,955,078	5,028,361	25,925,448
Ibo	808,335	322,904	9,776	5,851	1,146,896
Grand Total	23,017,816	8,124,069	23,392,700	30,346,031	84,829,616

The chief articles imported into the colony are cereals, foodstuffs, cement, cotton, alcoholic liquors, and animals. The exports are mainly sugar, rubber, various ores, wax, and ivory. The Zambezi is navigable for stern wheelers as far as Tete. At the port of Lourenço Marques there entered in 1918 498 vessels and cleared 499 vessels. At the Port of Beira 340 vessels arrived and 336 departed in 1919. At the port of Ibo, 2,104 vessels arrived in 1919, and 2,100 departed.

The Delagoa Bay railway has a length of 57 miles in the colony, and is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. The commercial relations and transit of goods by this railway between the Portuguese and British possessions are regulated by the agreement signed April 1, 1909. A new line from Lourenço Marques to the Swaziland border is under construction, 44 miles being open for traffic, including the Umbeluzi branch. The Gaza railway, from Chai Chai to Manjacaze has 32 miles open for traffic, and the line from Mutamba to Inharrime 25 miles. The Beira railway has a length of 204 miles in the colony, and is continued from the British frontier to Bulawayo.

The Government has been working on a definite plan, and the finished scheme for the Province south of parallel 22, the southern boundary of the Mozambique Co's territories, embraces the following lines: Moamba to Xinavane, 55 miles (completed). Xinavane via Chissane to Chai Chais 70 miles (not yet begun). Chai Chai via Manjacaze to Chigomo, 51 miles, (completed). Chigomo via Jinagai to Inharrime, 51 miles, projected, Inharrime to Mutamba, 40 miles (completed). Mutamba to Inhambane, 15 miles (under construction). Activities north of the Mozambique Co are represented by two lines of penetration, one from the port of Quelimane, which will tap what is said to be the richest region on the whole coast and whose interior terminal will connect with the existing railway in British Nyasaland, and the other from the port of Mozambique, capital of the district of that name and formerly capital of the Province.

Beira is connected by telegraph with Salisbury in Mashonaland, and Lourenço Marques with the Transvaal system. Quilimane has telegraphic communication with Chiromo. In 1915 there were 3,397 miles of telegraph line.

The Portuguese coinage is little used, the official value of the escudo is 4s 5d, or 45 escudos to the £. At Mozambique the currency is chiefly British-Indian rupees, on which an import duty of 10 per cent is levied. At Lourenço Marques English gold and silver coins are chiefly used.

ROME, SEE AND CHURCH OF.

For many ages until Pius IX's reign, with some comparatively short breaks, the Popes or Roman Pontiffs bore temporal sway over a territory stretching across Mid-Italy from sea to sea and comprising an area of some 16,000 square miles, with a population finally of some 3,125,000 souls. Of this dominion the whole has been incorporated with the Italian Kingdom. Furthermore, by an Italian law dated May 13, 1871, there was guaranteed to His Holiness and his successors for ever, besides possession of the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the villa of Castel Gandolfo, a yearly income of 3,225,000 lire or 129,000*l.*, which allowance still remains unclaimed and unpaid.

Supreme Pontiff — Benedict XV (Giacomo Della Chiesa), born at Genoa, November 21, 1854, Archbishop of Bologna, December 18, 1907, Cardinal, May 25, 1914, elected Supreme Pontiff, as successor of Pius X, September 3, 1914, crowned, September 6 following.

The election of a Pope ordinarily is by scrutiny. Each Cardinal in conclave writes on a ticket his own name with that of the Cardinal whom he chooses. These tickets, folded and sealed, are laid in a chalice which stands on the conclave altar, and each elector approaching the altar repeats a prescribed form of oath. Thereupon the tickets are taken from the chalice by scrutators appointed ad hoc from the electing body, the tickets are compared with the number of Cardinals present, and when it is found that any Cardinal has two-thirds of the votes in his favour he is declared elected.

From the accession of Innocent IX, 232nd in the usual list of Roman Pontiffs, to Benedict XV, 260th, the Popes (all Italian) have been as follows —

Name and Family of Pontiff	Year of Election	Name and Family of Pontiff	Year of Election
Innocent IX ( Facchinetti )	1591	Innocent XIII ( Conti )	1721
Clement VIII ( Aldobrandini )	1592	Benedict XIII ( Orsini )	1724

		Benedict XV ( Della Chiesa )	1914

The Roman Pontiff (in orders a Bishop, but in jurisdiction held to be by divine right, the centre of all Catholic unity, and consequently Pastor and Teacher of all Christians) has for advisers and coadjutors the Sacred

College of Cardinals, consisting, when complete, of 70 members, namely, 6 Cardinal-Bishops (holders of the suburbicary sees), 50 Cardinal-Priests, and 14 Cardinal-Deacons but hardly ever comprising the full number. In May, 1921, the Sacred College consisted of 6 Cardinal-Bishops, 47 Cardinal-Priests, and 8 Cardinal-Deacons<sup>1</sup> The following list gives the names, dates, and offices of these 61 Cardinals —

<sup>1</sup> The terms Cardinal Priest and Cardinal Deacon have for centuries ceased to imply severally the particular orders of priest or deacon. Nowadays in the Sacred College a presbyteral title is freely given to one in episcopal or diaconal orders, and a deaconry to a priest or even to a simple clerk.

Though primarily belonging to the local Roman Church, the Cardinals, drawn from every nation of Christendom, are now regarded as Princes of the Church at large. Originally they were simply the parish rectors of Rome, or the deacons of Roman deaneries. In 1586 their number was finally settled by Sixtus V at seventy. The Cardinals compose the Pope's Senate or Council and the various Sacred Congregations, govern the Church while the Apostolic See is vacant, and elect the deceased Pontiff's successor. They received the distinction of the red hat under Innocent IV, during the first General Council of Lyons, in 1246, and the title of Eminence from Urban VIII, in 1630.

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried on by a number of permanent committees called Sacred Congregations, composed of Cardinals, with Consultors and Officials. There are now eleven Sacred Congregations, viz, Holy Office, Consistorial, Discipline of the Sacraments, Council, Religious, Propaganda Fide, Index, Rites, Ceremonial, Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, Seminaries and Universities. Besides these there are several permanent Commissions, for example, one for Biblical Studies, another for Historical Studies, another for Preservation of the Faith in Rome, another for Codification of Canon Law. Furthermore, the Roman Curia contains three tribunals, to wit, the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signature, and the Sacred Roman Rota, and, lastly, various offices, as the Apostolic Chancery, the Apostolic Datary, the Apostolic Chamber, the Secretariate of State, etc.

The States wherewith the Holy See maintains diplomatic relations are Austria, Bavaria, Belgium, Czecho Slovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Yugo Slavia, Monaco, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Spain, and the United Kingdom (1914), together with most of the American Republics, except the United States and Mexico.

Within the British Empire the present number of Roman Catholic residential sees is 213, viz, 38 archbishoprics and 112 bishoprics, besides 54 apostolic vicariates (mostly held by Bishops of titular sees), and 9 apostolic prefectures, while the Roman Catholic population subject to King George V is estimated at 13,814,404 souls, of whom 1,923,784 are in Europe, 2,316,054 in Asia, 5,2,948 in Africa, 3,761,914 in British America, and 1,229,755 in Australasia. Throughout the world the Roman Catholic population is reckoned at 316,888,975 souls, of whom 309,718,779 are of the Latin Rite (Catholic Directory, London).

RUMANIA.

(ROMÂNIA)

Reigning King.

Ferdinand I King of Rumania, born August 24, 1865, nephew of the late King Carol, whom he succeeded on October 11, 1914. Married, January 10, 1893, to Princess Marie, daughter of the Duke of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, born October 29, 1875.

Children of the King —(1) Carol, born October 15, 1893, Crown Prince, married March 10, 1921, to Princess Helen of Greece, (2) Elisabeth, born October 11, 1894, (3) Marie, born January 8, 1900, (4) Nicholas, born August 18, 1903, (5) Ileana, born January 5, 1909.

The King has, in addition to revenues from certain Crown lands, an annual allowance of 2,500,000 lei, or 100,000*l*. The heir to the crown has an annual donation of 300,000 lei (12,000*l*).

The union of the two Principalities of Wallachia and Moldavia was publicly proclaimed at Bucharest and Jassy on Dec. 23, 1861, the present name being given to the united provinces. The first ruler of Rumania was Colonel Cuza, who had been elected 'Hospodar,' or Lord, of Wallachia and of Moldavia in 1859, and who assumed the government under the title of Prince Alexandru Ioan I. A revolution which broke out in February 1866 forced Prince Alexandru Ioan to abdicate, and led to the election of Prince Carol I. The representatives of the people, assembled at Bucharest, proclaimed Rumania's independence from Turkey, May 21, 1877, which was confirmed by Art. 43 of the Congress of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. King Carol I. reigned as Prince from 1866 to 1881, and as King from 1881 to 1914. In March, 1918, Bessarabia was joined to Rumania, Bukovina in November, 1918, and Transylvania in December, 1918.

Constitution and Government.

The Constituent Assembly elected in May and June, 1920, for United Rumania by universal, direct, and secret suffrage will have to unify the different constitutions of the Old Kingdom, Bessarabia, Bukovina, and Transylvania. The constitution of the Old Kingdom, which was voted in 1866 and twice modified, once in 1879 and again in 1884, provided for a Legislature of two Houses. The Senate consists (March, 1920) of 170 members (Old Kingdom, 82; Transylvania, 45, Bessarabia, 24, and Bukovina, 19), including 4 for the Universities and 19 Bishops. The Heir to the Crown is also a Senator. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 347 members (Old Kingdom, 168, Transylvania, 112, Bessarabia, 51, and Bukovina, 16). A Senator must be 40 years of age, and a Deputy 25. Members of either House must be Rumanians by birth or naturalisation, in full enjoyment of civil and political rights, and domiciled in the country. All citizens of 21 years, paying taxes, are electors. Both Senators and Deputies receive 160 lei per each day of actual attendance, besides 2000 lei per month and free railway passes. The King has a suspensive veto over all laws passed by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The executive is vested in a council of Ministers.

The elections held on June 6, 1920, resulted in the return of the following parties —Peoples' Party, 215, Federal Democrats, 34, Bessarabian Peasants, 25, Transylvanian Nationalists, 21, Socialists, 19, Independent Democrats, 6; other parties, 12.

The Cabinet (appointed June 21, 1920) is composed as follows —

Prime Minister — General Averescu
Minister of Foreign Affairs — Take Jonescu
Minister of the Interior — M. Argeteano
Minister of War — General Rascano
Minister of Finance — M. Titulesco
Minister of Justice — Michel Antonescu
Minister of Agriculture — M. Cudalbu
Minister of Public Works — M. Petrovici
Minister of Public Instruction — M. Niculescu
Minister of Fine Arts and Public Worship — Octavian Goga
Minister of Communications — General Valeano
Minister of Labour — Francoi Jassi
Minister of Commerce and Industry — Octavian Tagloianul
Minister for Transylvania — M. Mocsonyi
Minister for Bukovina — Baron Starcea
Minister for Bessarabia — Serghie Nitza

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

For purposes of local government Wallachia is divided into 17 districts, Moldavia into 13, the Dobrudja into 4, Bessarabia into 8, Bukovina into 11, and Transylvania (with Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh) into 24 districts, each of which has a prefect, a receiver of taxes, and a civil tribunal. In Rumania (1919) there are 735 districts and 5,864 communes, 129 urban and 5,735 rural. In the rural communes there are 15,593 villages and 1,048 hamlets. The appellations 'urban' and 'rural' do not depend on the number of inhabitants, but is given by law.

Area and Population

As a result of the Treaties of Peace of 1919 Rumania was enlarged, and the area and population of the New Kingdom is shown as follows —

Country	Area in sq miles	Population
		Males	Females	Total
Old Rumania	53,480	3,980,606	3,914,498	7,904,104 <sup>1</sup>
Bessarabia	17,146	1,198,900	1,145,900	2,344,800

Maramuresh	8,258	978,205	388,461	1,366,666
Banat	11,000	780,102	793,041	1,573,183
Total	122,282	8,762,092	8,631,057	17,393,149

The four historic divisions of Old Rumania were populated (1912) as follows — Moldavia, 2,145,464 (area, 14,710 square miles), Grand Wallachia (Muntania), 3,298,394 (area, 29,810 square miles), Oltenia, 1,413,897, Dobrudja, 381,306 (area, 8,969 square miles).

By the Treaty of Bucharest (August 7, 1918) between Bulgaria and Rumania, the former ceded to the latter 2,969 sq miles of territory, with a population of 278,090, mostly Turks. The new land was formed into two departments, Durostor and Caliacra.

Among Rumanians there are racial differences of which the Rumanian census takes no account. In Central Moldavia and East Transylvania there are thousands of habitants of Magyar descent (Changer and Szeklers), in South Transylvania and in the Banat there are thousands of Saxons and Swabes. In Bukovina and Bessarabia there are some German and Ruthenian colonies. The communes along the Danube have some inhabitants of Bulgarian and Serbian origin, in the Dobrudja there are many foreign elements—Bulgars, Russians, Germans, but the greatest part of them are Turks and Tartars.

The number of births, deaths, and marriages, with surplus of births over deaths, was as follows (for the Old Kingdom) for three years —

Years	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1913	309,625	191,689	67,430	117,936
1914	327,345	182,949	65,325	144,396
1915	319,544	193,574	56,314	125,970
1918	103,072	297,310	57,345	-194,238

In 1909 there were 2,651 divorces. In 1912, 2,998, in 1913, 3,217, in 1914, 3,433, in 1919, 865.

The principal towns in Greater Rumania are (population 1914) —Bucharest, the capital and seat of Government, 345,628 (on January 6, 1917, 308,987—119,958 males and 189,029 females), Chisinau, 114,100, Cernauti, 87,128, Ismail, 85,600, Iasi (Jassy), 76,120, Galatz, 73,512, Timisoara, 72,223, Braila, 65,911, Oradea Mar, 64,169, Arad, 63,166, Cluj, 60,808, Ploesti, 57,376, Cistioara, 51,877, Brasov, 41,056, Tughina, 36,400, Satul Mare, 34,982, Cetatea Alba, 33,600, Sibiu, 33,419, Botosani, 32,874, Buzeu, 29,483, Constantza, 27,662, Berlad, 25,367, Focsani, 25,287.

Religion, Instruction, Justice, &c

Of the total population of Rumania (in 1918) 9,695,714 belonged to the Orthodox Church, 1,456,147 were Greek Catholics, 1,483,929 were Roman Catholics, 1,344,970 Protestants, 17,596 Armenians, 834,344 Jews and 44,087 Mahometans. The government of the Orthodox Church rests with the four archbishops, the first of them styled the Primate of Rumania, the second the Archbishop of Moldavia, the third of Transylvania, and the fourth of Bukovina. Besides, there are, ten bishops of the National Church. In Transylvania there is a Greek Catholic archbishop and three bishops. In Rumania there are three Roman Catholic Bishops, two Protestant and one Unitarian. The clergy of the National Orthodox Church are paid by the State. The clergy of the other denominations are subventioned by the State. Full liberty of religion is assured to every creed or sect.

Education is free and compulsory 'wherever there are schools,' and it is improving from year to year. In 1909, according to a special census return, 60.16 per cent of the population over 7 years of age could neither read nor write; in 1909, 43.12 per cent, and in 1910, 41 per cent of the army recruits could neither read nor write. In 1918-19 there were 5,764 elementary schools with 11,088 teachers and 692,896 pupils.

The secondary schools in 1918-19 were, for boys, 56 (38 State and 18 private) lyceums, 13 gymnasiums and 7 seminaries, these 76 institutions having 1,287 teachers and 44,983 pupils, for girls 66 (12 State and 54 private) high schools with 1,051 teachers and 9,584 pupils, 12 normal schools for men with 181 teachers and 2,425 students, and 4 for women.

with 98 teachers and 1,435 students, 75 professional schools for boys with 334 teachers and 3,221 students, and 54 for girls with 535 teachers, 25 commercial schools with 216 teachers and 4,656 pupils, 25 agricultural schools with 59 teachers and 669 pupils, 11 schools of domestic economy for girls with 35 teachers and 201 pupils. There are 4 universities at Bucharest, founded in 1864 (289 professors and 4,644 students), Iasi (Jassy), founded in 1860 (172 professors and 952 students), Cluj (Kolozavar), in Transylvania, founded in 1919 (1,980 students in 1920), and Cernauti (Czernowitz), in Bukovina, founded in 1920.

Justice is administered by a court of cassation, 11 appeal courts, 64 tribunals, and 494 justices of the peace. The prison population in 1919 numbered 9,259 (6,815 men, 973 women, 1,367 boys and 104 girls). Assistance is given to the sick in 168 hospitals and hospices (departmental, communal, rural, and private).

Finance.

The following table shows (in sterling converted at pre-war parity) the estimated revenue and expenditure for years ending March 31 (old style) —

—	1917 18	1918 19	1919 20	1920 21	1921 22

The public debt of Rumania amounted on April 1, 1921, to 20,311,293,312 lei, of which 3,733,862,452 lei is the consolidated debt, and 121,500,000 lei the floating debt. This is exclusive of the proportions of the public debts of Austria-Hungary and Russia which have been assumed by Rumania, the total of which is estimated at 10,000,000,000 lei.

Defence

Military service in Rumania is compulsory and universal from the ages of 21 to 46. The normal terms of service are 2 years in the infantry and 3 years in the other arms, followed by 5, or 4, years in the reserve of the first line The men then pass to the second line, or reserve force, for 10 years, after which they are transferred to the territorial force at the age of 38, and remain in it 4 years, thus completing 21 years' service Young men exempted from service in the ranks, and those surplus to the annual contingent, are posted to a supplementary reserve

By the Treaty of Bucharest the army was reduced to 30,000 men, whilst material, &c, was controlled by the Germans A partial mobilisation was ordered on November 9, 1918, on the 10th an ultimatum was handed to the German commander demanding evacuation of occupied territory within 24 hours, and on the 18th the Allies entered Bucharest, which had fallen to the Germans on December 6, 1916 Some 400,000 men were again placed under arms A gradual reduction of this number was begun in 1919, and by January, 1921, the approximate strength of the army was 250,000 These were organised in 7 army corps Each army corps was composed of 3 divisions and army corps troops The division consisted of 2 brigades, each of 2 regiments of 3 battalions, and a battalion of chasseurs, 13 battalions in all, an artillery brigade of 2 regiments of field artillery and a group of howitzers, divisional cavalry and divisional engineers

There are 2 cavalry divisions in the army each composed of 2 brigades of 2 regiments, and 2 batteries of horse artillery

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher rifle, the Rumanian artillery is still largely armed with guns of the Krupp type, but a considerable number of batteries have the French type of 75 mm field guns and French medium and light howitzers, which date from the reorganisation of the army, with French assistance, during the war The Rumanian losses in killed and missing during the war amounted to 335,706

The navy consists of a small cruiser and a few other vessels, including 6 destroyers The Danube force comprises 5 gunboats, 5 sloops, 4 river monitors, and 4 small destroyers

Production and Industry

According to an estimate by Dr Colesco, the distribution of the soil of Rumania with respect to agriculture in 1914 was as follows —

	Acres		Acres
Ploughed lands	13,074,922	Water	2,018,250
Fallow lands	1,299,382	Other lands	5,591,842
Vineyards and orchards	468,870	Annexed territories	1,931,500
Meadows	1,436,960
Pastures	2,948,472	Total	34,475,750
Forests (less clearings)	5,705,750

About 80 per cent of the population are engaged in agriculture Of the cultivable land (arable, meadow, plantation, and orchard land) the distribution with respect to ownership is as follows —

Size of Properties	Proprietors	Area	Per cent of area
Acres	Number	Acres
24 7 and under	1,015,302	8,199,647	41 66
Over 27 4 " " 123 5	36,818	1,719,104	8 73
" 123 5 " " 247	2,381	408,876	2 08
" 247	4,471	9,854,864	47 53
Total	1,058,172	19,681,791	100 00

In 1919 and 1920 the chief agricultural crops were as follows —

Crop	Area cultivated		Production
	1919	1920	1919	1920
	Acres	Acres	Tons	Tons
Wheat	2,949,938	2,005,890	1,320,000	680,000
Rye	218,224	183,675	87,000	52,000
Barley	584,357	1,053,736	257,000	460,000
Oats	594,822	971,102	207,000	425,000
Maize	4,837,625	4,051,494	2,597,000	1,773,000

The tobacco area in Transylvania in 1920 was 11,250 acres (7,500 acres in 1919) and the yield 5,000 tons

The forests of Rumania have an aggregate area of 18,750,000 acres, of which 6,820,000 acres are in the Old Kingdom, 5,500,000 acres in Transylvania, 1,700,000 acres in Maramuresh, and 1,500,000 acres in the Banat

On February 15, 1917, Rumania had 299,402 horses, 1,049,702 cattle, 1,655,110 sheep, 84,197 goats, and 371,205 swine

The principal minerals are salt, lignite, iron and copper ores, and petroleum. Petroleum springs, both government and private, are worked at Prahova, Dambovitza, Bacau, and Buzau. The total output reached in 1900, 250,000 metric tons, in 1913, 1,885,619, in 1914, 1,783,957, in 1915, 1,673,145, in 1916, 1,244,093, in 1917, 517,491, in 1918, 1,214,219; in 1919, 919,847. The salt mines are situated in the region of the lower Carpathians, from Bukovina to the west of Oltenic, a stretch of over 250 square miles. Salt mining has been a state monopoly since 1863.

Industries of some importance are flour milling, brewing, and distilling. Sugar production in 1913-14 amounted to 32,928,560 kilograms. In 1915 there were 1,149 industrial establishments, with a capital of 805,472,618 lei, and employing 58,871 workmen.

Commerce.

The values of the imports into and exports from Rumania, exclusive of gold and silver (in sterling) were —

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1911	22,789,801	27,668,816	1914	19,969,922	17,896,666
1912	25,516,220	25,684,148	1915	13,183,828	22,581,469
1913	23,606,504	26,828,212	1919	143,317,325	4,115,647

A Treaty of Commerce and Navigation providing for the most favoured nation treatment between Rumania and Great Britain was signed at Bucharest on October 31, 1905.

Imports and exports are estimated in accordance with values settled by a Commission appointed from time to time.

In 1919 the chief imports and exports were as follows —

Shipping and Communications.

In 1919 the merchant navy of Rumania consisted of 158 vessels of 71,158 tons, including 17 steamers of 29,441 tons. Number of vessels entering Rumanian ports in 1919 was 10,546 of 2,991,095 tons.

The European Commission of the Danube, called into being in 1856, consisted before the war of 8 delegates one representing each of the following powers Austria Hungary, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Rumania, Russia, and Turkey. By article 246 of the Treaty of Versailles, only representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy and Rumania constitute the Commission at present. It has its seat at Galatz. Since November 24, 1904, it has existed, or will exist, for successive periods of 3 years unless denounced by one of the contracting powers a year before the conclusion of any such period. By the operations of the Commission the Danube below Braila and along the Sulina branch has been deepened and corrected, so that at Sulina the depth has been increased from 9 ft to 24 ft, and of the Sulina branch the minimum depth has been increased from 8 ft. to 18½ ft, while by canalisation and other works the navigation has been shortened from 45½ to 33½ nautical miles. The income of the Commission is derived entirely from taxes levied on shipping leaving the river.

In 1920 Rumania had 7,240 miles of railway. The State has the working of all the lines, and has, besides under the general railway direction, a commercial navigation service on the Danube and Black Sea. Several additional lines are projected or in course of construction.

Within Rumania there were 27,635 miles of metalled roads in 1915.

In 1915-16 there were 4,700 post offices, through which there passed 21,965,098 letters, 31,969,461 post cards, and 78,606,141 newspapers, samples, &c. In 1915-16 there were 8,612 miles of telegraph lines, and 18,801 miles of wire, on which 3,864,825 messages were forwarded. The number of offices was 3,143. In 1913-14 there were 7 urban telephone systems with 1,004 miles of line and 24,605 miles of wire, and 7,966 inter urban systems with 24,168 miles of line and 45,378 miles of wire. On the urban systems during the year there were 24,360,479 conversations, and on the inter-urban 1,689,596.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Rumania, with capital and reserves of 39,402,565 lei, had, on April 16, 1921, deposits amounting to 3,761,722,000 lei, and its notes in circulation were of the value of 10,979,085,000 lei. Other public credit institutions are Savings Bank, a Deposit and Consignment Bank, an Agricultural Loan Bank, 1,849 Popular Banks, a Rural Crédit Foncier, 2 Urban Crédit Fonciers (at Bucharest and Jassi), an Agricultural Bank, and a Cassa Rurala, an institution whose purpose is to buy properties and sell them in lots to peasants. There are also three private banking institutions.

Until August 1, 1920, there were four kinds of paper currency circulating in Rumania, viz., notes of the Rumanian National Bank (4,523,863,506 lei), notes issued during the German occupation by the Banque Générale (2,104,725,000 lei), Austro Hungarian banknotes (in the territories formerly part of the Dual Monarchy) (3,972,000,000 kronen), and Russian roubles (in Bessarabia) (1,000,000,000 roubles). A unified paper currency came into use on August 1, 1920.

The decimal system was introduced into Rumania in 1876, the unit of the monetary system being the leu (of 100 bani), equivalent to the franc. The gold leu is the monetary unit. Silver is legal tender up to 50 lei only. Gold coins are 20, 10, and 5-lei pieces. Nickel is coined in 5, 10, and 20-centime (bani) pieces. The metric system has been introduced, but Turkish weights and measures are, to some extent, in use by the people.

RUSSIA <sup>1</sup>

(RUSSIAN SOCIALIST FEDERAL SOVIET REPUBLIC)

On March 12, 1917, a revolution broke out, as a result of which the Emperor Nicholas II abdicated. A Provisional Government under Prince George Lvoff was set up by the Duma, which held office until May 16, 1917, when it was reorganised. On August 6, 1917, a new Cabinet under M. Alexander Kerensky was formed. This too was reorganised on October 8, 1917, and maintained itself until November 7, 1917, when the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet seized the government authority, and handed it over the next day to the All Russian Congress of the Councils of Workmen's, Soldiers', and Peasants' Deputies. On November 10, 1917, the following manifesto was issued — "The All-Russian Congress of the Councils of Workmen's, Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies decrees the form of the administration of the country pending the meeting of the Constituent Assembly. The Provisional Workers' and Peasants' Government is to be called the Council of People's Commissaries. The administration of the individual branches of State life is to be entrusted to Boards, the composition of which is to secure the carrying out of the programme proclaimed by the Congress in close contact with the organisations of workers, sailors, soldiers, peasants, and employees. The Government authority belongs to the Board and chairmen of these Commissariats, that is to the People's Commissaries, and the right of systematising them belongs to the All Russian Congress of the Councils of Workmen's, Peasants', and Soldiers' delegates, and its Central Executive Committee."

The Government is controlled by the Central Executive Committee of Soviets (elected by the All-Russian Congress). The Central Executive Committee, as well as the members of the Government, are elected for a period of 3 months, but the Commissaries can be recalled or superseded at any time by the Commissaries' Executive Committee. The Chairman of the Central Executive Committee is M. Kalsin.

The following is the constitution of the Council of People's Commissaries (May, 1921) —

- 1 President.—M. Vladimir Ilich Ulianov-Lenin
- 2 Foreign Affairs.—M. Ukhterin

On January 31, 1918, a decree was issued establishing the permanent character of the Workmen's and Peasants' (Soviet) Government. This government has not been recognised by the British Government.

On December 10, 1917, the Soviet Government abolished private ownership of land, declaring all real estate the property of the state, and on February 10, 1918, they issued a decree declaring all state loans, internal and foreign, contracted by previous governments to be null and void as from December 1, 1917, confiscating all maritime enterprises and all private banks to the state, and nationalising foreign trade (April 23, 1918).

On March 14, 1918, the People's Commissaries left Petrograd for Moscow, which thus became the centre of Government.

For the late Imperial Family and list of Tsars, see STATSMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1917, p. 1227.

The flag of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic is a red flag with the legend "R S F S R" in gold letters.

Constitution and Government

It is claimed by the Soviet authorities that the greater part of the former Russian Empire (including Siberia up to Lake Baikal) is under the rule of the Soviet Government. But a number of States have gradually evolved and are maintaining themselves on the borders of the old Empire. Five have received formal recognition and are properly established, viz., Finland, Poland, Esthonia, Latvia, and Georgia. Three others have received some measure of recognition, by the Allies, viz., Armenia, Azerbaijan, and Lithuania. The first two as well as Georgia have recently adopted the Soviet form of Government, and have entered into federal relations with Great Russia, as has also the Ukraine, definitely consolidated as a Soviet Republic in 1920 after the defeat of General Denikin. The territory from Lake Baikal to Vladivostok has been constituted as the Far Eastern Democratic Republic, governed by a Cabinet of Ministers (Premier, M. Krasnoschekov), with its seat at Chita. The Republic has concluded a treaty of amity with the Soviet Government.

So far as the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic is concerned, a Constitution was adopted by the fifth All-Russian Soviet Congress, the text of which was published on July 19, 1918, and amended and amplified by the seventh and eighth Soviet Congresses in December, 1919, and December, 1920. According to the Constitution, which has been declared a 'fundamental law' of the Republic, Russia is a Republic of Soviets of Workers', Soldiers', and Peasants' Delegates, and all central and local authority is vested in these Soviets. Private property in land is abolished, all land being the common property of the people, all forests, mines, waters having a national importance and all livestock and fixtures, model estates and agricultural concerns are all national property. The State owns all factories, mines, railways, and other means of production and transport.

Everybody is compelled to work, and the principal task of the Republic is to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat

The Russian Republic is a free Socialist community of all the labouring masses of Russia. Freedom of conscience, of opinion, of the press, and of meeting are guaranteed by the Constitution. In order to protect the conquests of the revolution, universal military service is incumbent on all citizens. The privilege of defending the Revolution with arms is, however, reserved for the labouring classes only, the non labouring sections of the population will discharge other military duties. The political rights of Russian citizenship will be granted without any formalities to foreigners residing on the territory of the Russian Republic for purposes of labour.

The highest authority in the State is the All Russian Congress of Soviets, which consists of representatives of town Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 25,000 inhabitants, and of Provincial Congresses of Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 125,000 inhabitants. The Congress elects an All Russian Central Executive Committee, consisting of 300 members, which constitute the supreme legislative, administrative, and controlling body in the Republic, and meets not less frequently than once in two months, current affairs being administered by a Standing Committee (Presidium). The Central Executive Committee also forms a Council of People's Commissaries for the general administration of the affairs of the Republic to consist of 18 People's Commissariats, viz., Foreign Affairs, War and Marine, Interior, Justice, Labour, Social Welfare, Public Instruction, Posts and Telegraphs, Nationalities, Finance, Transport and Communications, Agriculture, Food, Supreme Economic Council, Public Health, Workers' and Peasants' Inspection, Foreign Trade, and Extraordinary Commission for combating counter revolution. Each People's Commissary has a Board attached to him under his chairmanship.

The franchise is enjoyed irrespective of religion, nationality, residence, sex, etc., by all citizens over 18 years of age who earn their livelihood by productive labour, and soldiers and sailors in the Red Army and Navy.

Provision is also made in the Constitution for Local Government by means of Local Soviets in villages and towns, with district, provincial and territorial Congresses.

Area and Population

I. PROCESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The old Empire of Russia comprised one seventh of the land surface of the globe. Its area, without internal waters, was, since the treaty of Ports mouth, 8,417,118 English square miles (19,155,587.7 square versts).

Until 1897 there have been but various enumerations of the population called revisions. On January 28 (February 9), 1897, a census was taken over the whole of the country. The rapidity of growth of the population of the country (its acquisitions being included in the figures of population) is seen from the following —

Year	Population	Year	Population
1722	14,000,000	1859	74,000,000
1796	36,000,000	1897	129,209,297
1815	45,000,000	1914	178,378,800
1835	60,000,000	1915	182,182,600

Of the total in 1915, 131,796,800 were in European Russia, 13,229,100 in the Caucasus, 10,377,900 in Siberia, and 11,254,100 in the Central Asiatic Provinces.

The following table, omitting Poland and Finland, but retaining the other new States, shows the area and population of Russia according to the last issue of the Russian Central Statistical Committee (1915)

2 Extrapolations on the basis of the census of 1907 and the yearly increase of the population

A census was taken throughout the territories of the Russian Soviet Republic on August 20, 1920, and the preliminary returns show that the total population, in round numbers was 136,000,000, of whom 61,000,000 (47 per cent) were males, and 72,000,000 (53 per cent) females. The population of the same area at the 1897 census was 94,000,000, of whom 49.7 per cent were males, and 50.3 per cent females.

For the ethnical composition of the population as shown by the last census, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1919, p. 1189

II PRINCIPAL TOWNS

The great majority of the population of Russia are agriculturists, and dwell in villages. The number of towns and villages in Russia (before the war), grouped according to population, is given as follows —

Towns with population	Number	Villages with population	Number
Over 100,000	35	1,000—3,000	17,724
50,000—100,000	71	100—1,000	185,157
20,000—50,000	118	Under 100	521,705
10,000—20,000	315
3,000—10,000	3,032	Towns and villages	728,157

According to the preliminary data of the census taken in August, 1920, throughout the territories of the Soviet Republic, the distribution of population is as follows —

	1897	1920
	millions	millions
Cities and Towns	12 (12.4 per cent)	22 (16.5 per cent)
Other settlements (including factory settlements)	82 (87.6 per cent)	114 (83.5 per cent)
Total	94 (100 per cent)	136 (100 per cent)

The following are the populations of the chief towns of governments or provinces, and of the other towns having more than 30,000 inhabitants —

Religion

The Soviet Government has disestablished the Church and appropriated its property. Since the revolution of March, 1917, all religions may be freely professed in the Empire. The prevailing religion of the country is the Græco-Russian, officially called the Orthodox Faith. It has its own independent synod but maintains the relations of a sister Church with the four Orthodox patriarchates of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem. The Holy Synod, the board of government of the Russian Church, was established in 1721, to it was committed the superintendence of the religious affairs of the Empire. It was composed of the three metropolitan bishops, Petrograd, Moscow, and Kiev), the archbishop of Georgia (Caucasus), and several bishops sitting in turn.

It is estimated that there are more than 12,000,000 dissenters in Great Russia alone. The affairs of the Roman Catholic Church are entrusted to a Collegium and those of the Lutheran Church to a Consistory, both settled at Petrograd. Roman Catholics are most numerous in the former Polish provinces, Lutherans in those of the Baltic, and Mohammedans in Eastern and Southern Russia, while the Jews are almost entirely settled in the towns and larger villages of the western and south-western provinces.

Before the Revolution Russia was divided into 63 bishoprics (eparhiya), which were under 3 metropolitans, 14 archbishops, and 50 bishops, the latter had under them 37 vicars. All of them were of the monastic clergy. The management of Church affairs was in the hands of 62 'consistoria'. For Roman Catholics there was an Archbishop of Warsaw and another of Mohilev, each with six suffragan bishoprics. Of the suffragans of Mohilev one was of the Græco-Ruthenian rite, of which rite there was another bishop immediately subject to Rome.

Instruction.

According to official Soviet information, the highest educational authority in the country is centred in the Commissariat for Education, which has replaced the former Ministry of Popular Education and enlarged its scope so as to cover the whole field of popular education, having taken over (1) the State theatres, the Academy of Arts, the Imperial Musical Society, and various art and musical schools and institutions, (2) the educational institutions of a more or less specialised type which had been conducted by various other ministries and State departments, and (3) municipal and zemstvo schools. The Commissariat consists of three 'sections' and a few special 'departments,' the 'sections' being (1) The Pedagogical Section, which includes departments of 'the Unified Labour School,' 'school reform,' technical schools, pre school education, out of school education, and training of teachers, (2) the Scientific Section, which includes departments of scientific societies, higher educational institutions, and libraries, and (3) the Art Section, which includes departments of representative arts, preservation of monuments, music, theatres, and cinema.

One of the principal reforms carried out by the Commissariat of Popular Education has been the introduction of 'the Unified Labour School,' which has superseded the various types of elementary and secondary schools of the pre revolutionary period. The labour school has two grades, one for children from 8 to 12, and the other for children from 13 to 16.

Education is made obligatory and is provided by the State in all its schools and institutions free of charge. Children are also provided with hot lunches and all the necessary books and appliances.

The budget of the Commissariat for the first six months of 1919 amounted to 65 milliard roubles. By January, 1919, there were opened 10,000 new schools of the first grade, and about 1,000 schools of the second grade. Co education has been adopted in all schools. The principle of 'labour education' is applied differently in the schools of each grade, in the first grade children are taught to make their school self supporting, in the second technical work is conducted as a part of the general industrial life of the country.

A feature of the educational work of the Commissariat is the establishment of a large number of kindergartens, children's clubs and colonies.

In 1919 there were in the territory of the Soviet Republic 63,317 schools and 4,796,284 pupils (in 1911, 47,855 schools and 3,060,418 pupils).

By decree of December 28, 1917, the Government secularised all schools and educational institutions in Russia.

Previous to the revolution universities existed in the following places in the territory now included in the Soviet Republic and administered by the People's Commissariat for Education: Moscow (2), Petrograd, Kazan, Saratov, Tomsk, Perm, Irkutsk. The Universities of Dorpat and Warsaw, evacuated during the war, were reorganised in 1918 as the Voronezh and Don Universities, and in the same year another was set up at Nizhni Novgorod. In 1919 universities were established at Jiroslav, Smolensk, Kostroma, Tambov, Astrakhan, Tashkent, Samara, Simbirsk, Orel, in 1920, at Ekaterinburg, Ekaterinodar, and Veliki Ustvig.

In addition to the institutes of various descriptions—medicine, economic, archaeological, veterinary, philological—existing before the revolution in various larger towns, others have been established for the study of medicine (Moscow, Petrograd), economics (Petrograd, Moscow), archaeology (Caucasus and Don), veterinary science (Petrograd, Saratov, Moscow, Novocherkassk), geography (Petrograd), philology (Petrograd), and radiology (Petrograd).

The number of students in universities and places of higher education was 60,000 at the beginning of 1918, immediately after the revolution, and 117,000 in the autumn of 1919, but had fallen, for various reasons, to 85,000 by the beginning of 1920. It is now (April, 1921) about 120,000.

At the end of 1920 there existed in the Soviet Republic 57 higher pedagogical institutions with 10,305 students, 154 three year pedagogical courses (35 provinces) with 18,410 students, and 90 one year pedagogical courses (27 provinces) with 5,400 students. Of these 34,000 students, over 25,000 are maintained by the State.

In 1914 there existed 1,600 places of technical education, elementary and advanced, with 170,000 students, in 1919, 2,300 with 200,000 students, on Feb. 1, 1921, 3,758 schools with 298,263 students. These include 326 higher schools and polytechnics and 34 'workers' faculties' (preliminary courses attached to higher technical institutions) with 17,000 students.

Up to October 1, 1920, statistics covering 124 counties (uyezds) out of 598 showed that, out of a total of 5,769,956 illiterates, 325,083 had been taught to read and write in 22,017 special schools, set up under the decree for the liquidation of illiteracy at the beginning of 1920. It is estimated that about 2,700,000 in all were taught their letters in 1920.

In 1914 there existed about 1,700 secondary schools with approximately 400,000 pupils, in 1920 there were (37 provinces) about 4,000 schools with 550,000 pupils. This represents about 9 per cent. of the children of 'middle school' age.

Justice and Crime.

All judges are elected by direct vote. Local courts consist of one permanent judge (elected) and two assessors (elected) on rotation from a list prepared by the local Soviet. Appeals are made to the District and Government Congress of Local Judges.

Offences against the revolution, profiteering, sabotage of Government officials are dealt with by the All-Russian Extraordinary Commission. During 1918 this body suppressed 240 revolutions, 142 anti-revolutionary organisations, 12 brigand organisations, and 2 speculators' organisations.

All existing laws are deemed to be in force as long as they have not been repealed by decrees of the Council of People's Commissaries and are not in conflict with the revolutionary conscience and sense of right.

Finance

STATE FINANCE

The principal industries and the sources of raw material being nationalised and concentrated under the various economic Commissariats and departments of the Supreme Economic Council, State financial budgets, although still presented have largely lost their meaning, the distribution of raw and manufactured products between different departments of the State being reduced to a matter of book keeping. Since the last months of 1920, in addition, an attempt has been made on a large scale to abolish all payments for primary necessities—food, housing, lighting, clothing, theatres, &c.—by the employees of publicly owned enterprises, i.e. the majority of the town population. The enormous depreciation of the rouble, due to the colossal emissions of paper money, has also tended to eliminate the financial factor from daily life, except in so far as it becomes necessary to supplement insufficient State rations by illicit 'speculative' purchases.

Extracts from the State estimates for 1920 show the demands of the departments named—

Supreme Economic Council and Committee for Public Works	218.6	million	roubles
People's Commissariat for Food	175.1	"	"
War	122.8	"	"
Education	114.4	"	"
Health	80.0	"	"
Labour and Social Welfare	75.2	"	"

On September 1, 1917, the total indebtedness of Russia amounted to 32,800 million roubles, made up as follows —Pre war debt, 8,800 million roubles, seven internal war loans, 10,500 million roubles, loans contracted abroad, 8,000 million roubles, short dated loans, 5,000 million roubles

Defence.

I ARMY

In the declaration issued by the President of the Council of the People's Commissaries on November 15, 1917, it was stated that 'soldiers and sailors are delivered from the power of autocratic generals, because from henceforth generals will be elected and can be changed' All rank, outward distinction and titles have been abolished and all officers are to be elected

By a decree of February 1, 1918, the Government established a 'Workers and Peasants' Red Army of Volunteers, and under the pressure of military events the organisation and discipline of that army steadily improved. A large number of regular officers of the old Russian army joined the Bolshevik forces either voluntarily or under compulsion, an efficient general staff was organised for planning and executing military operations, and most of the former rules of military discipline were gradually reintroduced. Wherever former officers were suspected of lukewarm sympathies with their new position, a civilian 'political Commissary' was attached to them to supervise their work and organise political propaganda in the unit for which he was responsible. Many officers in the course of the civil war by their activities justified the withdrawal of the Commissary, in other cases the Commissary himself acquired the necessary military experience to enable him to take over command. There are still a large number of units, however, with the dual organisation in the Red Army. Under these arrangements the Soviet armies were conspicuously successful during the second half of the year 1919. The armies of Admiral Koltchak were annihilated and those of General Denikin had been driven back towards the Caucasus and the shores of the Black Sea. At the end of January, 1920, the Soviet Government controlled Siberia as far east as Lake Baikal and almost the whole of European Russia. The year 1920 was marked by a revival of military activity, after a brief period of peace, in April. A rapid Polish advance to Kieff was succeeded by an equally rapid Russian advance to Warsaw, checked and driven back about half way in its turn during the autumn. In October General Wrangel, General Denikin's successor in the Black Sea littoral, was finally defeated and forced to leave the country. By January, 1921, no hostile forces existed at any point on the territories of the former Russian Empire.

The Red Army is supplemented by the militia, organised on a basis of universal military service. Training begins at the age of 18, consisting of a preliminary course of 96 hours, lasting 1½ months, and a supplementary course of 280 hours, lasting 28 days. For militia purposes the territory of the Republic is divided into 93 regimental districts, subdivided into battalion, company, and platoon subdistricts. Each of the latter consists of several 'training points,' usually an urban centre or a factory. There are 28,000, of these in all.

II. NAVY

After the defeat of General Wrangel whatever remained of the Black Sea Fleet came under control of the Soviet Government. In the Baltic there are considerable forces, though the degree of their efficiency is uncertain.

There were four Dreadnoughts, Gangut, Poltava, Sevastopol, and Petropavlovsk, the last named seriously damaged by a British torpedo during Sir Walter Cowan's operations. Their present situation is unknown. In addition were three older battleships, 5 armoured cruisers, 8 light cruisers, and about 90 destroyers, 30 of them built since 1914. Of the pre war submarines only 5 remain, but 14 were built between 1914 and 1917.

In the Black Sea General Denikin began some naval reorganisation, and General Wrangel controlled the forces at Sevastopol, but in April, 1919, by the action of secret hostile agents the main machinery was wrecked by explosive means in five of the battleships. Big guns were dismounted from the ships for the landward defences, and probably 2 battleships and 6 light cruisers remain effective, with 16 destroyers and 2 pre war submarines, to which 6 have recently been added. Three of these were controlled by General Wrangel. The Soviet ships which fought in the Caspian were mostly armed merchantmen. At Vladivostok are about 4 destroyers.

The Caspian flotilla of 15 vessels surrendered and was interned by the Persians at Enzeli. In the early summer of 1920, Raskolnikov, commander of the Soviet Caspian Fleet, sailed the port and seized the flotilla.

State dockyards were at Nevsky, New Admiralty and Galernyi Ostrov, Petrograd, Kronstadt, Sevastopol, and Vladivostok. A semi private yard existed at the Baltic works (Petrograd). Guns were made at the Putiloff steel works.

The following table gives the ships recently remaining so far as is known, of the armour clad fleet and principal cruisers of the Baltic and the Black Sea fleets, the new names, where known, being inserted.

The economic system inaugurated by the Soviet Government is based on the conception of State ownership and control of the principal means of production, distribution and exchange. During the first eight months after the November revolution the nationalisation of various industrial and trading enterprises was effected largely by local Soviets, which followed no definite plan, and were inclined to nationalise every private undertaking within the territory they ruled. This led to a number of working undertakings being brought to a standstill, as the necessary administrative machinery was either entirely lacking or inadequate for coping with the immense task of setting up a public organisation of industry. To remedy the situation and introduce a greater unity and efficiency of method the Soviet Government issued a decree, dated June 28, 1918, which specified the conditions governing the nationalisation of private enterprises. Thus, only large and well-equipped factories and works were to be taken over by the State, the smaller undertakings being left in the hands of their owners. But even those liable to nationalisation were not to be taken over until a proper organisation for running them had been established. On April 1, 1920, out of 6,775 industrial establishments on the territory of Soviet Russia, employing 1,185,542 workpeople, there had been nationalised 4,141, employing 983,049 workpeople.

The industrial organisation of Soviet Russia is as follows. The highest economic authority in the country is the Supreme Economic Council, which includes representatives of the Central Executive Committee (i.e., the Government), trade unions, and various economic bodies, and consists of an executive of 11 members and about 50 departments. The subordinate organs are of two kinds. First, there are the Provincial and District Economic Councils, constituted similarly to the Supreme Council, and acting, except in the cases of small enterprises of local importance, as its executive organs. Secondly, there are Central Boards (called 'Centris' or 'Glavki') for each branch of industry, which also have their Government and district organs. A further subdivision of the Central Boards are the Syndicate (Kustovyy) Boards, which represent groups of undertakings of the same kind, such as machine building works, aeroplane factories, motor car works, chemical factories, electrical works, &c. The year's programme of production is worked out by the Supreme Council, which also finances the undertakings and controls the distribution of products. The Central and Factory Boards have the charge of and manage the undertakings according to the plans approved by the Supreme Council.

For statistics regarding industry in Russia for the period prior to the revolution, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1920, p. 1207.

Russia ranks third among the fish and deep sea food producing countries of the world. The total yield of fish amounted in 1914 to about 996,500,000 pounds (as against 1,292,500 in 1913).

Commerce

The following table gives the exports and imports of Russia for six years in the trade with Europe, Asia, and Finland (bullion not included), in millions of roubles —

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
1911	1,161.7	1,591.4	1914	1,098.0	936.1
1912	1,171.8	1,518.9	1915	1,114.0	304.2
1913	1,374.0	1,320.1	1916	2,700.0	375.0

After three years, in which there was no foreign trade, Russia's trade began again early in 1920, following the conclusion of peace with Esthonia. The principal exports were agricultural machinery, railway spare parts, drugs, cloth, and foodstuffs. The principal imports were timber, flax, hemp, and platinum.

A Trade Agreement between the British Government and the Government of Soviet Russia, was signed on March 16, 1921.

For pre war trade of Russia, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1920, pp 1208 and 1209

RUSSIAN DEPENDENCIES IN ASIA.

Bokhara and Khiva in Central Asia were before the Revolution under the suzerainty of Russia —

BOKHARA

A State in Central Asia, lying between N. latitude  $41^{\circ} 30'$  and  $36^{\circ} 40'$ , and between E. longitude  $61^{\circ} 40'$  and  $73^{\circ}$ , bounded on the north by the Russian provinces of Syr-Daria and Samarkand, on the east by the province of Ferghana, on the south by Afghanistan, and on the south west by the Russian Trans Caspian province and the Khanat of Khiva.

The modern State of Bokhara was founded by the Usbeks in the fifteenth century, after the power of the Golden Horde had been crushed by Tamerlane. The dynasty of Manguts, to which the present ruler belongs, dates from the end of the 18th century. Mir Muzaffar ed din in 1866 proclaimed a holy war against the Russians, who thereupon invaded his dominions, and forced him to sign a treaty ceding the territory now forming the Russian district of Syr Daria, to consent to the demand for a war indemnity, and to permit Russian trade. In 1873 a further treaty was signed, in virtue of which no foreigner was to be admitted to Bokhara without a Russian passport, and the State became practically a Russian dependency.

Amirs of Bokhara — Sayid Ameer Hyder, 1799-1826, Mir Hussein, 1826-1827, Mir Omir, 1826-27, Mir Nasrulla, 1827-60, Muzaffar ed-din, 1860-85, Amir Sayid Abdul Ahad, 1885-1911. Sayid Mir Alim Khan, 1911-1919.

On August 30, 1919, a revolution took place, the Amir being expelled and a Soviet Government (Council of People's Nazirs) being set up.

Area 83,000 square miles, population about 1,250,000. Chief towns — Bokhara, about 75,000, Karshi, 25,000; Khuzar, Shahr i Zabz, Hissar, 10,000, Charjui, Karakul, Kermine.

The religion is Mahomedan. The Amir is stated to have given 20,000 roubles for the foundation of a school.

The Amir has 11,000 troops, of which 4,000 are quartered in the city. A proportion of the troops are armed with Russian rifles and have been taught the Russian drill.

Bokhara produces corn, fruit, silk, tobacco, cotton, and hemp, and breeds goats, sheep, horses, and camels. Gold, salt, alum, and sulphur are the chief minerals found in the country.

The yearly imports of green tea, mostly from India, are said to amount to 1,125 tons. The imports from India also include indigo, Dacca muslins, drugs, shawls, and kincobs. Bokhara exports raw silk to India, the quantity exported in one year being estimated at 34 tons. By the treaty of 1873 all merchandise belonging to Russian traders, whether imported or exported, pays a duty of 2½ per cent ad valorem. No other tax or import duty can be levied on Russian goods, which are also exempt from all transit duty.

The Russian Trans Caspian Railway runs through Bokhara from Charjuï, on the Oxus, to a station within a few miles of the capital, and thence to Tashkent, the distance from Charjuï to the Russian frontier station of Katty Kurghan being about 186 miles. There is steam navigation on the Oxus.

There is a telegraph line from Tashkent to Bokhara, the capital.

Russian paper roubles are current everywhere. The Bokhara silver tenga is valued at 5d.

KHIVA

A State in Central Asia, lying between N. latitude 43° 40' and 40°, and E. longitude 57° and 62° 20'. Bounded on the north by the Aral Sea, on the east by the river Oxus, on the south and west by the Russian Trans-Caspian province.

Russian relations with the Khanate of Khiva—an Usbeg State, founded, like that of Bokhara, on the ruins of Tamerlane's Central Asian Empire—date from the beginning of the 18th century, when, according to Russian writers, the Khivan khans first acknowledged the Tsar's supremacy. In 1872, on the pretext that the Khivans had aided the rebellious Kirghiz, an expedition advanced to the capital, bombarded the fortifications, and compelled the khan to sign a treaty which puts the Khanate under Russian control. A war indemnity of about 274,000*l* was also exacted. This heavy obligation, still being liquidated by yearly instalments, has frequently involved the khan in disputes with his subjects, and Russian troops have more than once crossed the frontier to afford him aid and support.

A Soviet Government is at present (May, 1921) in power.

Area, 24,000 square miles, population estimated at 646,000, including 400,000 nomad Turcomans. Chief towns—Khiva, 4,000–5,000, New Urgenj 3,000, Hazar Asp, and Kungrad.

The religion is Mahomedan. Army, about 2,000 men.

The chief commercial products are cotton and silk.

ARMENIA.

(HYASTAN)

Constitution and Government—The Armenian Republic of Erivan was constituted in May, 1918, having, in common with the Georgians and the Tartars, persuaded the Turks and the Germans to recognise their independence. The territory of the Russian Armenian Republic consists of the south-eastern frontier districts of Transcaucasia, which formerly belonged to the Russian Empire.

In November, 1917, Transcaucasia refused to recognise the Bolsheviks and constituted a Transcaucasian Commission as the Supreme Authority in the country. In February, 1918, the 'Seim' or Diet, of Transcaucasia, convoked in the city of Tiflis, formed a Provisional Government. On April 22, 1918, the Transcaucasian Diet declared its de jure independence of Russia and called itself the Federal Democratic Republic of Transcaucasia. The three main peoples in Transcaucasia—the Armenians, the Georgians, and the Tartars—were parties to this Federation, each holding their own respective territories. This Federal Republic lasted only five weeks owing, mainly, to the divergent political tendencies of these three nationalities. On May 26, 1918, the Transcaucasian Republic was dissolved and Georgia declared its independence, as also did Armenia. Its de facto independence was recognised by the Allies in January, 1920, and its de jure recognition was embodied in the Treaty of Sevres signed in August, 1920, between the Allied Powers and Turkey. Armenia is one of the signatories of this Treaty.

The Armenian Republic has as yet no written Constitution, the task of drafting one being postponed till a Constituent Assembly shall meet to organise, not only the present Republic, but also those provinces of Turkish Armenia which are to be added in order to set up a United Armenia.

The Government of Russian Armenia consists of a Chamber of Deputies and a Cabinet of Ministers acting as its Executive. There is no President, the presidential functions being discharged partly by the Chamber, and partly by the Cabinet. The Chamber consists of 80 Deputies who were elected in June, 1919.

Area.—The territory of the Armenian Republic as constituted by the Treaty of Sevres and as delimited by ex President Wilson of the United States, has an area of 80,000 square miles. It contains the territory of the Armenian Republic of Erivan, to which ex president Wilson, in conformity to the request addressed to him by the Supreme Council at San Remo, added the ethnically Armenian regions of the vilayets of Van, Erzerum, Bitlis, and Trébizonde in Asiatic Turkey. The frontier thus defined begins at Trébol, 50 miles west of Trébizonde on the Black Sea, crosses west of Erzinjan, and then, curving eastwards, skirts the northern slopes of Armenian Taurus south of Mush, Bitlis, and the Lake Van, and ends on the Persian frontier.

As neither the League of Nations nor any of the Entente Governments can undertake a mandate for Turkish Armenia, the country is left to its own resources. As a result, the Turks and the Russian Bolsheviks have attacked the country, and on April 2, 1921, Erivan was taken by them for the fifth time. The Armenian Republic is practically divided between the Turks and Russians (May, 1921), excepting only the Zangezur district, which has not been occupied.

Population.—According to the Russian official statistics published at the beginning of 1917, the population of the present Armenian Republic amounted to 2,159,000, of which 1,416,000, or 66 per cent were Christians. 670,000, or 31 per cent were Mohammedans, and 73,000, or 3 per cent were of diverse religions. Since 1917, owing to the war, part of the Mohammedan population has left the Armenian Republic, and about 300,000 Armenians have returned within the frontiers of the Armenian territory. The total population of United Armenia in the widest extent claimed would be about 8,000,000.

The chief towns of Russian Armenia are Erivan with about 90,000 inhabitants, Alexandropol 50,000, and Kars, 35,000. The Supreme Council at San Remo in April 1920 decided to internationalise the port of Batum and make it a common outlet for Armenia, Azerbaijan, and Georgia.

Education—Since the Russian Revolution in 1917 all the state 'Gymnasias' in Armenia have been nationalised, and the language now used is Armenian. A system of compulsory primary education has been established within the Armenian Republic, and the old Church Seminaries and Technical Schools continue their work.

Finance—The sources of revenue are, direct and indirect taxes, monopolies, and property and other taxes. For the first five months of 1919, the average revenue and expenditure balanced at 1,950,000 francs.

Defence—The Armenian Army at present is formed on the old Russian system: it consists of all branches of service. Military service is not compulsory for the Mohammedans.

Production—The territories which may eventually form part of the United Armenian state are rich in mineral resources and industrial possibilities, and augur well for extensive commerce in the near future.

AZERBAIJAN

In October, 1917, the peoples of Transcaucasia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Armenia united to form a federation of republics under one Government, with a House of Representatives or Seim. Serious disagreement arose and the federation broke up, Azerbaijan declaring its independence on May 28, 1918. The National Council or Constituent Assembly formed a Government of twelve Ministers. The British Government recognised this Government as a de facto administration in January, 1920. In April, 1920, the Bolshevik party (the Azerbaijan Soviet Independent Republic) overthrew the existing Government and broke off all relations with the Entente and 'other enemies of Soviet Russia'.

It is claimed for Azerbaijan that it consists mainly of the two former Russian provinces of Baku and Yelisavetpol, and that as at present constituted the territory is bounded on the east by the Caspian Sea, on the north by Daghestan, Northern Caucasus and Georgia, on the west by Georgia and Armenia, on the south by Persia. The area is stated to be about 40,000 square miles.

The population, based on defective Russian statistics is estimated at 4,615,000, comprising 3,482,000 Azerbaijan Mussulmans, 795,000 Armenians, 26,580 Georgians, the remainder being Russians, Germans, Jews, &c. The racial basis of the population are Turco Tartars, who number about three millions. Mussulmans represent about 75 per cent of the population.

The capital of Azerbaijan is Baku (population 250,000) the centre of the great petroleum industry.

In the budget for 1919 the revenue is given as 685,000,000 roubles, ordinary expenditure, 415,000,000 roubles, extraordinary expenditure, 250,000,000 roubles. The Azerbaijan Government admits its liability for a portion of the Russian debt.

One of the most important industries of Azerbaijan is the petroleum industry of which Baku is the centre. Other industries capable of development are cotton, sericulture, fisheries, viticulture, cereals, cattle breeding.

There are railways crossing the country westward and northward from Baku, and others under construction to the south west.

LITHUANIA

(LIEŲVA)

Lithuania became a Grand Duchy in the early part of the thirteenth century. In 1386 the Grand Duke Jogaila embraced Christianity and married the Polish Queen Hedvig, thus becoming King of Poland. During the reign of Vytautas (Vitold) the Great (1392-1430) Lithuania reached the zenith of her power and prosperity, her frontiers extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea. After the death of Vytautas the Great, Polish influence gradually increased in Lithuania, and in 1569 the Lithuanians were forced to unite with the Poles at Lublin, the Lithuanians retaining their own treasury, laws, courts of justice, and army. Both countries elected the same king and had a common Seim (parliament).

At the end of the eighteenth century Lithuania shared the fate of Poland.

Greater Lithuania fell under Russian rule, and Lithuania Minor was annexed by Prussia. The Russian régime lasted till the Russian revolution of 1905, and partly up to the time of the war in 1914. From 1915 till the conclusion of the armistice Lithuania was under German occupation.

In 1917 a Lithuanian Conference of 200 representatives at Vilna elected a Lithuanian State Council (Taryba) and demanded the complete independence of Lithuania. The independence of the Lithuanian State was proclaimed on February 16, 1918.

The Lithuanian Government has been recognised by Great Britain, France, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Poland, Switzerland, and Finland as a de facto Government, and by Russia (Treaty of Peace of July 12, 1920) and Germany as a de jure Government.

Constitution and Government.—The provisional constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly on June 2, 1920, declares that the State of Lithuania is a Democratic Republic, the Constituent Assembly is the exponent of the sovereign power of Lithuania, and the Constituent Assembly makes laws, ratifies treaties with other States, approves the State budget and superintends the execution of the laws. The Executive Power is placed in the hands of the President of the Republic and of the Cabinet of Ministers. The President of the Republic is elected by the Constituent Assembly. The President chooses the Minister President (Premier), who forms the Cabinet. The President also appoints the higher military and civil officials of the State. Until the President of the Republic is elected, his duties are to be performed by the President of the Constituent Assembly. In case of the death, resignation or illness of the President, his place is to be taken by the President of the Constituent Assembly. All the acts of the President must be countersigned by the Premier or the proper Minister. The Cabinet of Ministers is responsible to the Constituent Assembly and resigns on an expression of a lack of confidence by the latter. The Members of the Constituent Assembly on entering the Cabinet of Ministers do not cease to be Members of the Constituent Assembly.

All the citizens of Lithuania, without distinction of sex, nationality or religion, are equal before the law, there are no classes or titles. All citizens are also guaranteed inviolability of person, homes, and correspondence, and freedom of religion, conscience, press speech, strikes, assembly and organisation. The penalty of death is abolished.

The Constituent Assembly of Lithuania was elected April 15, 1920, by universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage according to the proportional system, the electoral unit being one representative to about 15,000 inhabitants. There were elected 112 representatives, composed as follows—Christian Democrats, 59, Social Populist Democrats, 29, Social Democrats, 13, Jews, 6, Poles, 3, non party, 1.

Acting President of Lithuania—A. Stulginskis, President of Constituent Assembly (appointed 1920).

The present Cabinet of Ministers was formed on June 8, 1920, and is as follows—

Prime Minister—Dr. A. Grinius

Minister of Finance, Trade and Commerce, and of Communications,—E. Gaivanauskas

Minister for Foreign Affairs,—Dr. J. Purickis

Minister of National Defence,—Lieut.-Colonel K. Zukas

Minister of the Interior,—K. Skypitis

Minister of Education —K. Bizauskas

Minister of Agriculture and State Domains —J. Aleksa

Minister of Justice —V. Karoblis

Minister for Jewish Affairs —M. Solovick

Minister for White-Russian Affairs —D. Siemasko

For administrative purposes the non occupied territory of Lithuania is divided into 20 districts, of about 100,000 inhabitants each. The districts are divided into communities, with about 15 communities to each district.

Area and Population.—The Lithuanian Government claims that Lithuania consists of (1) the whole of the former Russian Province of Kaunas (Kovno), (2) the Province of Vilnius (Vilna), minus the districts of Disna and Vileika, (3) a part of the Province of Gardinas (Grodno), north of the Niemen River and the narrow hinterland of the city of Gardinas (Grodno) in the south, (4) the Province of Suwalki minus the southern parts of the districts of Suwalki and Augustovo, (5), part of the Province of Courland between the old German frontier and the Holy Aa (Sventoji) River by the Baltic Sea, and part of the district of Illuksta between the Dvina River and the boundary of the Province of Kaunas.

The eastern frontier of these territories is defined in the Treaty of Peace between Lithuania and Russia, signed July 12, 1920, at Moscow, and runs as follows: Beginning at the Dvina River westward from Druja (estate of Safronovo), along the Drujka River, along the eastern shore of Lake Drivyaty, southward through Koziany, Postavy, by the eastern shore of Lake Narocz, along the Narocz River, then it cuts in half the Molodecno railway junction, runs by Volozino, along the Beresina River, and further to the west along the Niemen to the Svislovis River, further on it circles the city of Gardinas at a radius of 15 to 20 versts to the south.

The northern frontier (with Latvia) almost coincides with the old boundary between the Provinces of Courland and Kaunas. A special arbitration convention was adopted by the Lithuanian and Lettish Governments on September 28, 1920, at Riga, according to which the British representative is to act as arbiter in finally fixing the details of this frontier and determining the corrections to be made.

In the south (in the region of the Province of Suwalki) the frontier with Poland has not yet been conclusively agreed upon by Lithuania and Poland. The line which was provisionally established by the Allied Supreme Council on December 8, 1919, gives over the territories to the south of it temporarily to Polish administration, but the Lithuanians object to this, suggesting that the Lithuanian-Polish frontier should run considerably to the south of the said line, leaving on the Lithuanian side the cities of Seiny, Punske, and Vizainy.

This territory had, according to the statistics of 1914, an area of 154,491 sq. kilometres (59,633 square miles) and 4,800,000 inhabitants, viz. the whole of the former Province of Kaunas, 20,260 sq. kilometres, and 1,857,100 inhabitants, 5 districts of the former Province of Vilnius, 29,818 sq. kilometres, and 2,075,700 inhabitants, 5 districts of the former Province of Suwalki, 101,913 sq. kilometres, and 718,000 inhabitants, also parts of the former Provinces of Courland and Gardinas, 2,500 sq. kilometres, and 150,000 inhabitants.

The Lithuanians form 70 per cent. of the total population, the Jews, 13 per cent., the Poles, 8 per cent., the Russians and White Russians, 7 per cent.; and other nationalities, 2 per cent.

The Lithuanians also lay claim Memel (area 1,080 square miles, popu lation, 145,000) But until the status of the Lithuanian State is determined, the Memel territory is temporarily placed under the administration of the Allied Powers

The rural and urban population in Lithuania in 1914 was as follows —

	Urban	Per cent	Rural	Per cent
Vilna	259,200	12.6	1,786,700	87.4
Kovno	195,100	10.5	1,662,000	89.5
Suvalki	97,900	18.4	620,100	81.6
	582,200	13.8	4,068,800	86.2

For every thousand males there are females in Vilna, 1,014, in Kovno, 1,077, and in Suvalki, 1,058, making an average of 1,049 for the whole country

The capital of Lithuania is Vilnius (Vilna), with a population of 214,600 in 1914. Other large towns were Kaunas (Kovno), 90,300, Gardinas (Grodno), 61,600, Kiaipeda (Memel), 32,000, Suvalkai (Suvalki), 31,600 and Siauliai (Shavli), 31,300

Religion—In the three districts of Vilna, Kovno, and Suvalki Roman Catholics form 75 per cent, Jews 12 per cent, Greek Orthodox 9 per cent, Protestants and Calvinists 4 per cent

Instruction—At present there are about 1,630 grammar schools, 31 secondary schools, 42 public high schools, and several technical and agricultural schools. It was intended to open an English grammar school in Lithuania in the autumn of 1920. In 1834 the Russian Government closed the University of Vilna, plans are being formed for its re opening

Finance—The budget for 1920 provided for a revenue of 684,000,000 marks, and an expenditure of 768,050,000 marks, leaving a deficit of 84,050,000 marks

Lithuania has come to an arrangement with a British banking group, in whose hands it will place its entire financial and commercial future. The British group is to advance the sum of 3 millions sterling for the foundation of the Lithuanian National Bank

The estimated value of State property in 1919 is given as follows — State forests, 47,415,500/, confiscated lands, 7,371,000/, State lands (lakes excluded), 8,840,000/, and lakes, open spaces in towns, and buildings, 10,000,000/, making a total of 71,656,500/

This figure does not include the value of State railways and other means of communication

By the recent Treaty of Peace of Moscow, Russia takes over, in place of an indemnity for the damage done by the Russian Army, the whole of the old Russian debt devolving on Lithuania, in addition, it was agreed to hand over to Lithuania 3,000,000 roubles in gold and to concede to Lithuania 100,000 hectares of forests

The arrangement in regard to debts between Lithuania and Germany is still under discussion. Germany during the war supplied Lithuania with merchandise and gave financial help to the value of about 100,000,000 marks. But, on the other hand, it assumed the right of issuing money, which it still exercises, and it exploited the resources of the country during the period of occupation. Besides, the Treaty of Versailles leaves open certain of the questions pertaining to the settlement of this debt.

After the war, Lithuania bought part of the American supplies in France. In this way, it took upon itself the obligation of paying to the United States of America in 1922 a sum of about 4,000,000 dollars, carrying an interest of 5 per cent.

The Parliament recently sanctioned an internal loan of 100,000,000 marks, at par, at 4.8 per cent interest, redeemable after 4 years.

The Government has floated a loan of 5 million dollars, at par, redeemable in 10 years, among its citizens who have emigrated to America.

Defence—The Lithuanian Army is approximately 50,000 men.

Production—Lithuania is an agricultural country, and preponderantly rural in character, the resources of the country consist of timber and agricultural produce. Of the total area, 45.8 per cent is arable land, 21.3 per cent meadow and pasture land, 20.3 per cent forests, 3.1 per cent unproductive lands, and 6.5 per cent waste land. In 1920 in the territory administered by the Lithuanian Government 5,200,000 hectares (about 13,000,000 acres), there was produced (in cwt.) rye, 10,000,000; wheat, 1,500,000; barley, 3,000,000; oats, 5,000,000; potatoes, 20,000,000; peas, 1,200,000; and flax seed, 700,000.

In 1920 the country possessed 380,000 horses, 865,000 cattle, 730,000 sheep and goats, and about 1,400,000 pigs. Poultry farming is considerably developed, particularly geese rearing. Bee keeping is also an important occupation, the figures for 1910 being as follows: Hives, 57,426; honey sold, 5,929 cwt., and wax, 1,304 cwt.

Forests cover 1,948,000 acres, of which 882,600 acres (or 45 per cent) belong to the State, 80 per cent of the forests consist of needle bearing trees, mostly pines, and the remainder of leaf bearing trees.

In the industries of the country there were in 1913 4,759 workshops and factories, the yearly output of which was estimated at 5,373,946, and their employees numbered 29,425. These figures include 142 distilleries, which consumed 272,000 cwt. of corn and 17,400,000 cwt. of potatoes, with a total output of 365,280 hectolitres of spirit, 46 breweries, with an output of 635,000 hectolitres, and 1,216 flour mills.

Commerce—The chief articles of export are corn, cattle, hams, poultry, eggs, butter, timber, flax, linseed, hides, and wool. The imports are chiefly manufactured articles, fertilizers and agricultural machinery. For the year 1920 the value of the imports was 428,728,541 marks, and of the exports 321,797,163 marks.

Internal Communications—In 1920 the total length of railways was 1,550 miles, of which 1,178 miles were broad gauge lines. The total cost of construction of these railways was 20,600,000.

There are about 980 miles of roads in the country, while of the waterways those navigable for steamboats extend to 117 miles, those for smaller craft to 458 miles; those for rafts to 1,450 miles, total, 2,020 miles. The river Niemen is navigable for about 270 days in the year.

Banking and Credit—The three principal banks are the Lithuanian Commercial and Industrial Bank (with a capital of 2,000,000 marks), the Lithuanian Bank of Commerce (4,000,000 marks); and the Agricultural Credit Bank (2,000,000 marks).

Money, Weights and Measures—The paper currency consists of Lithuanian marks ('ostmarks'), which originated during the German occupation. The Lithuanian mark, issued by a German Credit Bank in exchange for German marks, is guaranteed by the German Empire. It has an equal value with the German mark, and can be freely exchanged for the latter during commercial operations between Lithuania and Germany. The two currencies are legal tender, and both being guaranteed by Germany, they undergo identical changes. They maintain a circulation of about a billion marks. Besides this mark, roubles of all kinds (principally Czar-roubles) are to be found, and also all kinds of Polish marks, forced upon the people during the Polish occupations, but this currency has no legal tender. It is difficult to estimate the extent of this currency, but about 200 million Russian roubles and at least half a billion of Polish marks are said to be in circulation. A special financial commission is considering the question of a new monetary system for Lithuania.

The weights and measures are still Russian, but at the same time the metric system is used. Arrangements are being made for making the metric system obligatory.

UKRAINE

(UKRAINA)

It is claimed that the first Ukrainian State was founded in Kieff in the ninth century. In the fourteenth century the eastern portion was conquered by the Lithuanians and the western portion by the Poles. Eventually the whole of the Ukraine was incorporated with Poland. In 1648 the Ukrainians threw off the Polish yoke and in 1654 Chmelnitzki concluded the Treaty of Pereyaslav with the Muscovite Tsars, according to which Ukraine east of the Dnieper was united to Muscovy, while Galicia passed over to Austria in 1795. The Treaty of Pereyaslav formed the constitution of the Ukrainian State until the death of the Hetman Daniel Apostol in 1784.

The independence of Russian Ukraine was proclaimed on November 21, 1917, and that of Austrian Ukraine on November 19, 1918. On December 14, 1918, the Government of Ukraine, a Directory of five members, was established as a Provisional Government, with a Ministerial Cabinet of 14, until a Parliament representing the whole nation has been elected, and on January 3, 1919, the union of "Eastern" (Russian) and "Western" (Austrian) Ukraine took place.

In the Treaty of Riga (March 19, 1921), between Soviet Russia and Poland, both sides agreed to recognise the independence of the Ukraine. In 1920 a Soviet Government was established.

Area and Population—The territory claimed by the Ukrainians embraces a large section of Southern Russia extending from the Caspian in the east to the Black Sea, including Kuban, along the northern shore of the Black Sea to Odessa, with a section extending south to near the mouth of the Rumba, north west along the borders of Rumania, Hungary and Cheko-Slovakia, north to the Polish boundary, skirting Lithuania and White Ruthenia on the north, south-east to Kniisk and east to the country of the Don Cossacks, which borders it on the east, at Rostov the line much broken, proceeds east and south east to the Caspian at about 45° N. The area of this territory is stated to be 498,100 square miles, and the total population 46,000,000. Of these 32,662,000 are Ukrainians, 5,376,800 Russians, 2,079,500 Poles, 3,795,760 Jews, 871,270 Germans, 435,240 Rumanians, 32,960 Hungarians, and the remainder various nationalities.

Religion—The overwhelming mass of the people (30,652,860) belong to the Ukrainian Orthodox Church, which differs but slightly from the Russian Orthodox. There are besides 8,847,140 Greek Catholics, 4,500,000 Russian Orthodox, 3,800,000 Jews, 2,000,000 Roman Catholics, 800,000 Protestants, and 1,400,000 others.

Instruction—In 1918 there were 1,162 higher elementary schools where the course lasts four years. For secondary education there are 120 colleges and about a dozen normal schools. There are six superior institutions and 1,200 private schools, besides two Universities at Kiev and Kamenez-Podolsk.

Finance—The Budget of the Ukraine in 1918 was Revenue 80,644,000*l*, expenditure, 115,000,000*l*.

Production and Industry—The land may be divided as follows.—Arable land, 85 per cent, forests, 10 per cent, pasturage, 12 per cent; other productive soil, 6 per cent; and sterile soil, 6 per cent. The country produces wheat, barley, rye, oats, beet, and potatoes. The principal industry in the Ukraine is the manufacture of sugar.

COMMERCE—COMMUNICATIONS—BOOKS OF REFERENCE 1253

Commerce—Of the exports, cereals amounted to 64 per cent and sugar to 22 per cent. Almost the entire stock of corn is exported to Western Europe.

Manufactured goods (textiles) form more than half of the total of products imported into the Ukraine.

Internal Communications—There are approximately 11,070 miles of railway lines in the Ukraine. About two thirds of the railway system belongs to the State. About 2,500 miles are under construction.

SALVADOR.

(REPUBLICA DE EL SALVADOR)

Constitution and Government—In 1839 the Central American Federation, which had comprised the States of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, was dissolved, and Salvador became an independent Republic. The Constitution, proclaimed in 1824 under the Federation, and modified in 1859, 1864, 1871, 1872, 1880, 1883, and 1886, vests the legislative power in a Congress of 42 Deputies, 3 for each department. The election is for one year, and by universal suffrage. The executive is in the hands of a President, whose tenure of office is limited to four years.

President of the Republic—Jorge Meléndez. Term of office, from March 1, 1919, to March 1, 1923. Born April 15, 1871.

Vice President—Dr. Alfonso Quirón Molina.

The administrative affairs of the Republic are carried on, under the President, by a ministry of four members, having charge of the departments of—Foreign relations, Justice, and Instruction, War and Marine, Interior, Government and Agriculture, Finance, Charities, and Public Credit.

Area and Population—The area of the Republic is 34,155 square kilometres, or 13,183 English square miles, divided into 14 departments. Estimated population (Jan. 1, 1920), 1,336,442. Aboriginal and mixed races constitute the bulk of the population, Ladinos or Mestizos being returned as numbering 772,200, and Indians 234,648. The capital is San Salvador, with 80,100 inhabitants. Other towns are Santa Ana, population 59,817, San Miguel, 30,406, Nueva San Salvador, 23,291, San Vicente, 26,881, Sonsonate, 14,752.

On June 7, 1917, an earthquake and volcanic eruption did much damage to the capital, and partially destroyed the towns of Nejapa (6,012 inhabitants), Quetzaltepeque (15,804 inhabitants), and Armenia (13,291 inhabitants). A still greater earthquake overtook the city of San Salvador on April 28, 1919.

The number of births in 1919 was 50,597, the number of deaths 31,703, the number of marriages, 3,596. Of the births in 1919, 25,690 were males, and 24,907 were females, and 21,457 legitimate and 29,140 illegitimate. Of the deaths, 16,172 were males and 15,531 females.

Religion, Instruction and Justice.—The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and a bishop at Santa Ana and San Miguel respectively. Education is free and obligatory. There were in Salvador, in 1919, 971 primary schools, with 1,613 teachers and 51,305 enrolled pupils. There were also 27 higher schools (including 2 normal and 3 technical schools) with 2,345 pupils in 1916, and a National University with faculties of jurisprudence, medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, and engineering. Expenditure on public instruction in 1919, 134,850.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, one court of third instance (in the capital) and several courts of first and second instance, besides a number of minor courts. All judges of second and third instance are elected by the National Assembly for a term of 2 years, while the judges of first instance are appointed by the Supreme Court for a similar period. In 1916, 1,962 crimes of all kinds were committed in the Republic.

FINANCE—DEFENCE—PRODUCTION AND COMMERCE 1255

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years —

	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19	1919-20	1920-21 <sup>1</sup>
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	908,325	1,998,810	1,382,644	1,829,035	2,945,234
Expenditure	916,704	1,013,342	1,874,079	1,671,990	3,245,516

The total outstanding debt on December 31, 1920, was 3,655,290<sup>l</sup>

Defence—The army may be divided into three parts (1) available force, 78 officers, 512 petty officers, and 15,554 men, (2) forces that can be made available at short notice, 49 officers, 356 petty officers, and 4,000 men, (3) reserve force, 251 officers, 1,713 petty officers, and 15,554 men. Total, 378 officers, 2,611 petty officers, and 75,705 men. In case of war, military service is compulsory from 18 to 50 years of age.

Production and Commerce.—The population of Salvador is largely engaged in agriculture. The chief product is coffee, under which in 1919 there were about 174,000 acres, with some 100,000,000 trees. Other agricultural products are cheese, cacao, rubber, tobacco, sugar. Efforts are made towards wheat cultivation. In 1908 there were 284,013 head of cattle, 74,336 horses, 21,457 sheep, and 422,990 pigs. In the national forests are found dye woods and such hard woods as mahogany, cedar, and walnut. Balsam trees also abound. The mineral wealth of the Republic includes gold, silver, copper, iron, mercury. Mining operations of gold and silver are growing in importance, especially in the departments of Morazan, San Miguel, and La Unión.

The imports subject to duty and the exports have been as follows in five years (in pounds sterling) —

	1916	1916	1917	1918	1919
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	804,433	461,085	1,373,854	1,228,539	1,876,025
Exports	2,117,774	2,176,000	2,140,052	2,479,960	2,115,521

The trade is chiefly with the United States, the United Kingdom, and France. The chief imports in 1919 were cottons, hardware, flour, drugs and chemical products. The chief exports in 1919 were coffee, 33,052,910 kilos valued at 10,467,715 gold dollars, indigo 325,627 kilos valued at 769,051 gold dollars, sugar, 3,768,756 kilos, valued at 771,490 gold dollars. Other exports are silver, balsam, hemp, hides, rubber and henequén. Of the total coffee exported, 53.3 per cent went to the United States; 4.5 per cent to Norway, 2 per cent to Holland, 29 per cent to France, and 1.65 per cent to Great Britain.

Total trade between Salvador and the U.K. (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Salvador to U.K.	178,871	48,475	12,432	62,389	333,390
Exports to Salvador from U.K.	340,925	429,763	291,756	249,877	688,144

Shipping and Communications—In 1919, 329 steamers entered at the ports of the Republic, with a tonnage of 412,172

A railway connects the port of Acajutla with Santa Ana and La Ceiba, with this system San Salvador, the capital, is connected—a distance of 65 miles. Another line (the International Railways of Central America) runs from the eastern to the western boundary of Salvador. The first section (La Unión to San Miguel, 40 miles), was completed in 1912, the second (San Miguel to Zacatecoluca and San Vicente) in 1915, the third (San Vicente to Cojutepeque) in 1920. The length of the line is at present 133 miles, when completed it will be 151 miles. Another short railway connects the capital with Santa Tecla. Total length of railway open (1918), 213 miles all of narrow gauge. There are 1,476 miles of good road in the Republic.

In 1919 there were 162 post offices, which received 3,035,718 pieces of mail matter and despatched 1,318,139 pieces. In 1919 there were 229 telegraph offices and 2,351 miles of telegraph wire, over which passed 1,516,333 telegrams. There are 220 telephone stations and 1,321 miles of telephone line. Three wireless stations are in operation in San Salvador.

Money, Weights, and Measures

MONEY

There are 3 banks of issue, the Banco Salvadoreño (paid up capital, 3,500,000 pesos silver), Banco Occidental (paid up capital, 1,000,000 pesos silver), and Banco Agrícola (commercial (paid up capital, 1,300,000 pesos silver). On December 31, 1919, they had notes in circulation to the value of 14,635,848 dollars.

In August, 1897, a law was passed adopting the gold standard. The import of debased silver coin is prohibited. In October, 1899, the Salvador mint, formerly the property of a company, was transferred to the Government.

According to the law of July 16, 1920, the theoretical monetary unit of Salvador is the colon, a coin containing 836 milligrams of gold 900 milésimos fine. The colon, which represents 100 centavos, will be issued in denominations of 5, 10, 20, and 40 colones. Auxiliary silver coins are to be minted in denominations of 20, 50, and 100 centavos each, and nickel coins in denominations of 1, 3, 5, and 10 centavos each.

National gold coins and gold coins of the United States of all denominations are unlimited legal tender, the United States coins having a fixed value of 2 colones to the dollar. National and United States silver coins are legal tender in an amount representing up to 10 per cent of each payment, and national nickel coins in amounts up to 2 per cent of each payment.

The coinage of silver must not exceed 10 per cent of the total fiduciary circulation, and that of nickel must not be in excess of 5 per cent of said circulation, and in no case shall nickel be coined in an amount exceeding 1,000,000 colones.

With the exception of United States gold and silver coin, foreign money is not a legal tender in the Republic, and payments contracted for in such money shall be liquidated by the equivalent of the money in question tendered in United States gold, or in colones, at the rate of exchange of the place of payment on the date of settlement.

By a Decree of February 12, 1920, an Exchange office was established for San Salvador.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

On January 1, 1886, the metric system of weights and measures was made obligatory. But other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal are as follows —

Libra	= 1 043 lb av	Arroba	= 25 35 lb av
Quintal	= 104 3 lb av	Fanega	= 1 5745 bushel

SANTO DOMINGO.

(REPUBLICA DOMINICANA)

Constitution and Government—The Republic of Santo Domingo, founded in 1844, is governed under a Constitution bearing date November 18, 1844, re proclaimed, with changes, at various dates down to 1908. By the Constitution of 1908 the legislative power of the Republic is vested in a National Congress, consisting of a Senate of 12 senators and a Chamber of Deputies of 24 members. These representatives are remunerated at the rate of 4801 per annum each. Each province is represented by one senator and (in practice) by two deputies. Senators are elected for six years, one third retiring every two years, and deputies for a period of four years, one half retiring every two years. But the powers of the National Congress only embrace the general affairs of the Republic.

United States Military Governor—Rear Admiral Thomas Snowden.

The President is chosen by an electoral college for the term of six years, and receives a salary of 9,600 dollars per annum. There is no Vice-President. In case of death or disability of the President, Congress designates a person to take charge of the executive office.

The executive of the Republic is vested in a Cabinet composed of the President and seven Ministers, who are the heads of the departments of the Interior and Police, Finance and Commerce, Justice and Public Instruction, War and Marine, Agriculture and Immigration, Foreign Affairs, and Public Works and Communications.

The Republic is divided into 12 provinces.

This system of Government has been in abeyance since November 29, 1916, when a Military Government by United States naval officers was proclaimed. The Military Governor combines for the time being the functions both of the President and Congress. United States naval officers are administering the different Government departments. On January 1, 1920, a new Department of State for Sanitation and Benevolence was created.

Area and Population.—The area of Santo Domingo, which embraces the eastern portion of the island of Quisqueya or Santo Domingo—the western division forming the Republic of Haiti—is estimated at 19,332 square miles, with 1,017 miles of coast line and 193 miles of frontier line with Haiti, and a population estimated (in 1919) at 1,000,000 inhabitants. Births registered in 1919—34,223 (17,390 males, 16,833 females); deaths, 12,600; marriages, 5,184. Immigrants in 1919, 8,374.

The population contains some creoles of Spanish descent, but is mainly composed of a mixed race of European, African and Indian blood; there are, however, many Turks and Syrians, especially in Santo Domingo city, where the dry goods trade is mainly in their hands. The language used by the populace is Spanish, but on the Samaná Peninsula there are a few hundred farmers, descended from American negro immigrants of 1848, who speak corrupt English. The Haitian patois is spoken to a considerable extent along the frontier. The capital, Santo Domingo, founded 1496 by Bartolomeo Colombo, brother of the discoverer, on the left bank of the river Ozama, was destroyed in 1502 by a hurricane, and subsequently rebuilt on the right bank of the same river. According to the census of 1919 the City of Santo Domingo had 26,812 inhabitants and the City of Puerto Plata 7,370, Santiago de Los Caballeros 14,744 (1917), San Pedro de Macoris, 10,000, La Vega, about 8,000, Samaná, and Sanchez, about 2,000 each, Azua, Monte Cristi, San Francisco de Macoris and Moca have from 4,000 to 5,000 each.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the State is Roman Catholic, other forms of religion being permitted. There is a Catholic archbishopric with one suffragan see, viz, Porto Rico, now belonging to the United States. The Archbishop has been appointed Apostolic Delegate to both these countries (Santo Domingo and Porto Rico) and to Cuba.

Primary instruction is gratuitous and obligatory, being supported by the communes and by central aid. Expenditure on public instruction 1919-20, 943,890 dollars. The public or state schools are primary, secondary, technical schools, and normal schools. The Professional Institute was formed into a University by Presidential decree on November 29, 1914. In 1920 there were 972 public schools in the Republic (8 being secondary) with 105,000 pupils (51,585 in 1918), and 1,544 teachers. Under the Military Government steps have been taken to reform the system of public instruction, and some form of manual training or agricultural instruction is being introduced into the curriculum of the public schools.

Justice—The chief judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, which consists of a president and 6 justices chosen by Congress, and 1 (Procurador General de la Republica) appointed by the executive, all these appointments are only for 4 years, but may be prolonged indefinitely. The territory of the Republic is divided into 12 judicial districts, each having its own civil and criminal tribunal and court of first instance, and these districts are subdivided into 60 communes, each with a local justice (alcalde), a secretary and bench (alguacil). There are three appeal courts, at Santiago de los Caballeros, at Santo Domingo City, and at La Vega.

Finance—Up to the end of 1918 the revenue was derived chiefly from customs duties on imports and exports and from Internal Revenues. A property tax was inaugurated in 1919. The receipts and disbursements for 6 years were in United States dollars:—

	Revenue	Expenditure		Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1915	4,408,000	4,408,567	1918	7,111,818	4,971,375
1916	4,709,518	4,104,698	1919	8,717,257	7,922,229
1917	6,063,214	4,944,402	1920 1	12,000,000	8,160,000

1 Estimates.

Customs collections for the calendar year 1920 were estimated at 7,500,000 dollars. For 1919, 4,457,393 dollars ($91,462 1/2).

A Treaty between the Dominican Republic and the United States of America, ratified February 8, 1907, authorized the issue of 20,000,000 dollars in 5% bonds, secured as to principal and interest by a first lien on the customs revenues of the Republic. Under the Treaty the President of the United States of America appoints the General Receiver of Dominican Customs, a Sinking Fund is provided for the service of the loan which is in the hands of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York as Fiscal Agent, assets in the Sinking Fund December 31, 1919, 8,302,038 dollars, bonds drawn for redemption are held in the Sinking Fund until all have been redeemed; date due 1918-1958; interest dates February and August, interest and principal payable at New York, London, Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam.

Under authority of an Executive Order dated August 2, 1918, by the Military Governor of Santo Domingo, bonds under the title "Dominican Republic 5% Bonds Issue of 1918" were issued for the purpose of settling claims and indebtedness, both foreign and domestic, accumulated prior to the establishment of the Military Government, authorized amount of issue 5,000,000 dollars, actually issued, 4,161,300 dollars, bonds are issued to claimants in settlements of awards as they are made by the Dominican Claims Commission, they are secured as a second lien on the customs revenue of the Republic, from January 1, 1918, a sinking fund is provided for, to be applied to the retirement of bonds as drawn for redemption on each interest date, the sinking fund is in the hands of the Designated Depositary for the Dominican Government, at present the International Banking Corporation of New York, date due 1918-1938, interest dates, January and July, interest and principal payable at the offices of the Designated Depositary in the Dominican Republic and in New York City.

On July 31, 1920, the Public Debt of the Dominican Republic was as follows — 1908 issue of bonds due in 1958, 20,000,000 dollars, redeemed bonds held in the amortization fund 9,174,750 dollars, cash in the amortization fund on July 31, 1920, 618,221 dollars, amortized total, 9,792,971 dollars, leaving an unsettled balance of 10,207,029 dollars. Issue of bonds in 1918 due in 1938, 4,161,300 dollars, redeemed bonds, 1,113,200 dollars, cash in the amortization fund, 154,342 dollars total amortized 1,267,542 dollars, leaving an unsettled balance of 2,893,757 dollars, which, added to the above mentioned sums, leaves a total balance of 13,100,786 dollars unpaid.

Defence — Native constabulary officered by Americans is the only defence, apart from the American marine forces in the Republic, which consist of 1,150 men, divided into 14 companies.

The Republic has no navy.

Production and Industry — Agriculture is the principal source of wealth, and cattle raising is a promising industry. Of the total area about 15,500 square miles is cultivable, and about 3,000,000 acres suitable for grazing. Tobacco is grown in the northern part and cacao in the eastern. Sugar growing is a flourishing industry, production of sugar in 1920 21, 2,326,438 bags (of 320 pounds each), 1919 20 1,230,150 bags and 1918-19, 1,166,761 bags. Tobacco production in 1918, 33,139,648 pounds, in 1917, 17,250,000 pounds. The annual production of coconuts is about 1,500,000. Cocoa was exported in 1919 to the extent of 22,418,335 kilos, valued at 8,011,384 dollars, tobacco leaf, 20,362,095 kilos, valued at 6,661,033 dollars, sugar, 162,321,601 kilos, valued at 20,697,761 dollars, coffee, 2,209,446 kilos, valued at 947,421 dollars. The forest area of the Republic is 9,500,000 acres.

Minerals of almost every kind are found at various places in the Republic, principal among which are gold and copper. Iron is found in the form of black magnetic oxide of iron, and petroleum has been found in the Azua region. Coal of the lignite variety of little commercial value is found in considerable quantities, as well as some anthracite coal. Silver, platinum, and traces of quicksilver have been found, and rock salt near Neiba is found in inexhaustible quantities, there being several hills of native salt covered with only a thin layer of soil. For building purposes there is a large variety of limestone and sandstone.

COMMERCE—SHIPPING AND COMMUNICATIONS 1261

Commerce—The total imports into and exports from the Dominican Republic for 5 years were valued as follows in pounds sterling —

Shipping and Communications—The merchant marine of the Republic consists of 1 steamer of 263 tons, 8 schooners between 73 and 193 tons, and 20 schooners of less than 50 tons. These vessels are principally engaged in the coastwise trade.

In 1919, 344 steamers of 366,208 tons entered with cargo, 168 steamers of 186,064 tons in ballast, and 164 sailing vessels with a tonnage of 23,713 tons entered in the foreign trade of the Republic.

The interior is not well supplied with roads, though good roads are in course of construction between the principal cities of the Island, both on the north side and on the south side. A road is under construction from the capital, on the south side to La Vega, and Santiago on the north side. On the north side there is a road 165 kilometres long (103 miles) from Monte Cristi to La Vega, via Santiago and Moca. South of La Vega to Rincon which is part of the road across the island, the road is finished for a distance, 19 kilometres (12 miles). On the south side there is a road 60 kilometres long (37 miles) from San Pedro Macoris to Seybo, via Hato Mayor. From Santo Domingo City (the capital), there is a road running east to San Isidro 16½ kilometres (10 miles), which is now being continued to San Pedro de Macoris. One running west to San Cristobal 32 kilometres (20 miles) long, another running west through Baní to Azua 130 kilometres (81 miles) long, and one running north from the capital, eventually to connect with La Vega 40 kilometres (25 miles), which is now completed. There is a road running from Azua north-west to San Juan 92 kilometres (58 miles), and another running south-west from Azua to Barahona 80 kilometres (55 miles).

There are two railway lines in the Republic. (1) Samana Santiago line, belonging to an English company, runs from Sanchez on the Bay of Samana to La Vega (73 miles), it has two branch lines (under the same management, but different ownership) from La Jima to San Francisco de Macoris (8½ miles), and from Las Cabullas to Salcedo (8 miles), this last has been extended to Moca (7 miles) in order to join the other system, (2) a Government line, the Dominican Central railway, runs from Puerto Plata to Santiago and Moca (60 miles). Total length of line (1919) 153 miles. There are, besides, about 255 miles of private lines on the large estates.

On January 1, 1919, the postal and telegraph services were united. For year ending June 30, 1920, number of offices (postal and telegraph) 57, number of post offices, 32, total pieces of mail handled, 5,952,594.

The telegraph, in the hands of a French Telegraphic Company (Compagnie Française des Câbles Télégraphiques), is in operation between Santo Domingo, Puerto Plata, and Santiago, from Santiago to Monte Cristi, and along the railway from Sanchez to La Vega, total length, 311 miles. Several other inland lines are in project. There is an inter-urban telephone system owned and operated by the Dominican Government, with 918 miles of line in operation on June 30, 1920. Number of messages transmitted and received (1919-20), 543,978. Submarine cables belonging to the same French Company connect in the north Puerto Plata with New York and Puerto Rico, and in the south Santo Domingo with Puerto Rico and Curacao. The telephone system of the Republic is connected with that of Haiti.

Two small wireless stations are in existence at Santo Domingo and La Romana (a new port in the province of Seybo, declared open to foreign commerce in August, 1912) which can communicate with Porto Rico. There is another small station at San Pedro de Macoris which is only used for local transmission. Number of radiograms sent (1919-20), 10,134, number received, 13,087.

The Military Government has established other wireless stations for its own use.

Money, Weights, and Measures --On July 1st, 1897, the United States gold dollar was adopted as the standard of value. A small amount of debased silver coin circulates as small change at the ratio of 5 to 1, viz., 1 peso = 20 cents United States currency. There are no Dominican gold coins or paper money in circulation.

In 1912 the National Bank of Santo Domingo was established with a paid up capital of 500,000 dollars. The Royal Bank of Canada has branches at Santo Domingo City, San Pedro de Macoris, Santiago, Sanchez and

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES—BOOKS OF REFERENCE 1263

Puerto Plata The International Banking Corporation, of New York, has branches at Santo Domingo, and other places. There is also at Santo Domingo a branch of the Banco Territorial y Agrícola de Puerto Rico.

The metric system was adopted on August, 1, 1913. But English and Spanish units are quite common in ordinary commercial transactions.

SERB, CROAT, AND SLOVENE STATE

(KRALJEVINA SRBA, HRVAIA, I SLOVENACA )

Reigning King

Peter I, born June 29 (O S ), 1841, son of Alexander Kara Georgevitch, married, July 30 (O S ), 1883, to Princess Zorka, daughter of Prince Nikolas of Montenegro, widower March 4 (O S ), 1890, ascended the throne, June 2 (O S ), 1903

Children of the King —(1) Princess Helene, born October 23 (O S ), 1884 (2) Prince George, born August 27 (O S ), 1887, on March 27 (N S ), 1909, Prince George renounced his right of succession to the throne, to which Prince Alexander will succeed (3) Prince Alexander, heir apparent and Prince Regent, born December 4 (O S ), 1888

Brother of the King —Prince Arsène, born April 4, 1859, married, April 15, 1892, to Aurora Demidoff (divorced in 1896), offspring Prince Paul, born April 15, 1893

The founder of the dynasty was Kara George (i.e. Black George) Petrovitch, who, in 1804, was proclaimed Commander in Chief in Serbia, but was murdered in 1817, leaving two sons—Alexis, born 1801, and Alexander, born 1806. In 1842 Alexander was chosen reigning Prince by the Skupstina or National Assembly, and the title was confirmed by the Porte, but the dignity was not hereditary. In 1858 Alexander had to abdicate and was banished, and in 1885 he died in exile. King Peter is thus the third of his house who have ruled in Serbia. He succeeded to the throne on the murder of King Alexander of the Obrenovitch dynasty, was elected king by the Skupstina June 2 (O S ), and assumed royal rights and duties June 12 (O S ), 1903.

The independence of Serbia from Turkey was established by article 34 of the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878, and was solemnly proclaimed by Prince (afterwards King) Milan at his capital, August 22, 1878. The King's civil list amounts to 1,880,000 dinars.

After the Revolution in Austria-Hungary, Slovenia, Croatia, Dalmatia, and Bosnia declared their independence, and a movement commenced for the formation of the State of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (Yugo Slavia) by the union of the Austro-Serbian, Croatian, and Slovenian parts of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy with Serbia. In regard to Montenegro there was some doubt as to her position, but on the death of King Nicholas on March 1, 1921, the country was definitely joined to Greater Serbia.

On December 29, 1918, the first Ministry of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes was formed, representing all the Yugo-Slav provinces, and the Allied Governments were informed of the creation of the new State, which has received recognition. By the Treaty of Rapallo the boundaries of the new State were definitely determined.

Constitution and Government

Serbia is ruled according to the old laws, while in Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia, and Dalmatia the provincial governments continue with the existing laws. The Constituent Assembly, for which elections were held in November, 1920, will adopt a constitution for the new State. According to the draft constitution Yugo-Slavia is to be a limited monarchy with a two-chamber Parliament, in which the Senate will be an advisory chamber. The King is Commander-in-Chief of the forces, and can declare war and make peace. He summons Parliament and has the right of dissolving it. Parliament is elected for four years on the basis of one deputy for every 40,000 inhabitants The Senate consists of 100 members and is elected for nine years, though one third of its membership is renewed every three years.

Until the new Constitution is adopted the present administration of Serbia is based on the Constitution of that country passed on June 5, 1903, and the administration of the other provinces which form part of the kingdom on the local laws and the agreement arrived at on December 1, 1918 between the representatives of the kingdom of Serbia and those of the provinces which joined Serbia.

The elections for the Constituent Assembly, held in November 28, 1920, resulted as follows — 102 Radicals, 94 Democrats, 42 Communists, 51 Croatian Agrarians (Raditch Party), 33 Serb Agrarians, 25 Mahomedans, and 21 Catholic People's Party.

The Cabinet appointed February 19, 1921, is composed as follows —

Prime Minister — M. Stoyan Protitch (head of Old Radical Party)

Vice President of the Council and Minister of Communications — M. Koroshetz (head of Slovene Clerical Party)

Minister of the Interior — M. Trifkovich (Old Radical)

Minister of Foreign Affairs — M. Trumbitch

Minister of Commerce — M. Stoyan Riburatz (National)

Minister of Finance — M. Velisar Yankovitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Forests and Mines — M. Kovatchevitch (National State Club)

Minister of Agrarian Reform — M. Krsnitch (National Croatian Club)

Minister of Food — M. Stanichitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Public Health — M. Slavko Mihitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Social Affairs — M. Jouro Chotusmine (National Croatian Club)

Minister of Public Instruction — M. Trifunovitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Religion — M. Jankovitch (Slovene Clerical)

Minister of War — (Vacant May, 1921)

Minister of Public Works — M. Jovan Jovanovitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Agriculture — M. Frano Rohan (Slovene Clerical)

Minister of Justice — M. Nintchitch (Old Radical)

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs — M. Dinkovitch (National Croatian Club)

Minister without Portfolio — M. Spalevovitch

Area and Population

The estimated area and population of the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (1920) are shown as follows —

District	Area in sq. miles	Population
Serbia	42,098	4,955,631
Montenegro	3,536	248,423
Croatia	17,405	2,715,237
Bosnia and Herzegovina	20,709	1,931,502
Dalmatia	5,090	621,503
Slovenia	6,790	875,090
Total	95,628	11,337,686

According to the draft constitution of Yugo Slavia it is intended to create nine autonomous provinces, each with a Diet of its own. The provinces are Serbia, Old Serbia, Syrmia, the Banat, Backa, Croatia and Slovenia, Dalmatia (without Cattaro), Montenegro, and Herzegovina (with Cattaro).

The principal towns (1919) are Belgrade (Beograd) (the capital) with 120,000 inhabitants, Zagreb (Agram) 80,000, Ljubliana, 60,000, Sarajevo, 50,000, Novi Sad, 40,000, Speit, 30,000, Nish (1910), 24,949, Kragujevatch, 18,376, Sabac, 11,541, Bitolj, 48,370, Pristina, 18,174, Pirot, 10,737, Skoplje, 47,384, Prizren, 21,244, Novi Pazar (1913), 13,433, Ohrid, 11,038, Debar, 10,199

Religion

The State religion of Serbia is Serbian Orthodox. According to the census of 1910 there were of the total population in the old territory —Greek Orthodox, 2,881,220 Roman Catholics, 8,435, Protestants, 799, Jews, 5,997, Mohammedan Serbs and Gipsies, 14,335, other religions, 915. In the new territories are a large number of Roman Catholics, there are Roman Catholic bishops in Prizren and Skoplje. In May, 1914, Serbia concluded a concordat with Rome. Under the concordat a Roman Catholic Arch bishopric of Belgrade is to be established, with jurisdiction over Roman Catholics within the old frontiers of Serbia. After the union of all the Orthodox Serbs in the kingdom, the Church became a Patriarchate under the rule of the Patriarch and Holy Synod for ecclesiastical purposes.

The Serbian Orthodox Church is governed by the Synod of Bishops. All the ecclesiastical officials are under the control of the Minister of Public Worship. There is unrestricted liberty of conscience.

Instruction

Elementary education in Serbia is compulsory, and, in all the primary schools under the Ministry of Education, it is free. Of the total population in 1900, 423,433 (16.99 per cent.) could read and write. In 1919 there were 2,129 elementary schools with 3,867 teachers and 154,976 pupils. There were, of a higher grade, 49 colleges for boys, 5 for girls, and 2 modern schools, with 27,410 pupils (18,012 boys and 9,398 girls). There were 158 special schools for illiterates, and 9 higher elementary schools. Belgrade University, founded in 1838, had (1920) 80 professors and 7,250 students. In 1920 a University of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes was established at Ljubliana.

The Government has a Military Academy with 250 cadets, and 10 schools for non-commissioned officers. There are several private schools, elementary and other, and several orphanages supported by voluntary contributions.

For elementary schools the State pays the teachers' salaries, and the municipalities provide for all other expenditure. The cost of the other public schools is borne entirely by the State.

Justice, Crime, and Pauperism

The judges are appointed by the king and are irremovable. There is a court of cassation in Belgrade (for Serbia, Backa, Banat, Baranja, and Montenegro), the Supreme Court at Sarajevo (for Bosnia and Herzegovina), and a Jury of Seven at Agram (for Croatia, Slavonia, Dalmatia, and Slovenia).

There is no pauperism in Serbia in the sense in which it is understood in the West, the poorest peasants have some sort of freehold property, which cannot be sold. There are a few poor people in the large towns, but neither their poverty nor their number has necessitated an institution like a work house. There are free municipal hospitals.

Finance.

State receipts and expenditure for 6 years as follows —

On January 1, 1914, the public debt of Serbia amounted to 903,810,500 dinars; at the end of 1920 it stood at 2,838,236,750 dinars. This includes the debts owing by the united kingdom to foreign countries, as follows — To United States, 35,000,000 dollars; to France, 100,000,000 francs; to England and France together, 50,000,000 francs.

Defence

In 1919 the organisation of the army of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes was commenced. In peace time the strength of the army is 150,000. Compulsory service is in force for men between the ages of 21 and 45, and, as a last defence, men can be taken as fit to carry arms from the ages of 18 to 21 years and from 45 to 50 years.

The kingdom is divided into four army districts and 16 divisional districts, each divisional district has 3 infantry regiments of 3 battalions and 1 artillery regiment. Each army district has, besides, 1 cavalry regiment, 1 howitzer artillery regiment, and 1 heavy artillery regiment, and also 1 engineers' command composed of all engineering branches. For the whole army there is 1 cavalry division of 2 brigades and 2 regiments, and 1 railway transport command, 1 air force command, and 1 motor transport command.

The infantry is armed with quick firing rifles of French pattern and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary, the artillery with French quick firing guns (Schneider Canet system) and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary, which are of various models.

Production and Industry.

Serbia is an agricultural country, where almost every peasant cultivates his own freehold. The holdings vary in size from 10 to 30 acres mostly. Of the total area (11,930,740 acres) 21 per cent is arable land, 4 per cent is devoted to fruit and vine production and to gardens, 6.3 per cent is forest land, 11 per cent meadow, and the remainder is State property (mostly forest). Fruit products formed 13 per cent of the total exports before the war. The country produces wheat, barley, oats, maize, rye and beetroots. Plum marmalade and also fresh plums are exported in large quantities, spirits are distilled from plums, and various fruits are grown. Tobacco production of Greater Serbia in 1919, 15,000 tons. Silk culture employs a large number of persons. The total production of wheat in Yugo Slavia in 1919 was 24,694,726 cwt, of barley, 4,251,692 cwt, and of oats, 6,164,247 cwt, maize, 36,575,315 cwt, and potatoes, 15,136,749 cwt. In 1920 the output of sugar was 35,000 metric tons.

There were in Yugo Slavia 1,458,326 horses, mules and asses, 5,496,531 head of cattle, 9,771,985 sheep, 4,849,457 pigs, and 2,417,919 goats.

Almost half the total area of Yugo Slavia is forest. The State forests of Serbia had an area, 1910, of 1,375,000 acres, parish forests 1,625,000, church and monastery, 42,500 private, 750,000. The forests consist largely of beech, oak, and fir, but are less profitable than, with proper management, they might be.

Yugo Slavia has considerable mineral resources, including coal and lignite, iron, copper ore, gold, and cement. Copper and coal are the leading mineral products in Serbia. The best coal is to be found near Vrsika, Tchuka and in Yagodina, near Rishka, and Knjaevitz. The State mine of Senj furnishes the greatest production (nearly 200,000 tons per annum). It may be expected that the coal mines in Serbia that have been already opened, after the reparation of the damage sustained during the war, will yield about 600,000 tons of coal per annum, of the value of 9,000,000 francs. Gold, lead, silver, antimony, iron ore and pyrites are also mined. A capital of about 70,000,000 francs has been invested in Serbian mines up till now, with about 5,000 miners employed.

In Bosnia, coal and iron are mostly exploited. During recent years an average of 860,000 tons of coal were extracted from 11 mines. The most important iron undertaking is in Varazdin, average of 100,000 tons of ore. Among the other mines the most important are manganese and salt.

In Croatia and Slavonia only the coal mines are of special importance.

Coal, lead, and zinc are mined in Slovenia. Its brown coal yields 2,000,000 tons per annum, valued at 25,000,000 francs (pre war prices). The lead mines produced in recent years about 17,000 tons of pure lead, valued at 9,000,000 francs (pre war prices).

The total production of coal in Yugo Slavia was 2,491,258 metric tons, in 1913 it was 3,587,432 tons.

Of the industries, flour milling is one of the most important, there are 50 large flour mills in the country, especially in Bačka, brewing and distilling are extensively carried on, as are also weaving, tanning, boot making, pottery, and iron working. Carpet weaving is one of the oldest industries in Serbia. The product is manufactured principally at Piot, in south eastern Serbia, and the carpets are named after that place. The chief characteristics of these carpets are that they are made of pure wool, dyed with natural colours by local dyers, who pride themselves that the process of dyeing and colour mixing is a secret transmitted by father to son, and is known only to the inhabitants of Pirot Meat packing is also becoming important

Commerce

According to official reports, the imports to Yugo-Slavia in the first nine months of 1920 amounted to 2,577,709,123 dinars, and exports to 716,393,284 dinars

The principal imports are textiles, agricultural products, animal products, chemicals, leather and leather goods, metals, and machinery Exports Maize, wheat and oats, cattle and other animals, fruits, timber and timber goods The trade is mainly with Austria, Italy, and Czecho Slovakia

The treaty of June, 1893, provides for 'the most favoured nation' treatment in commerce and navigation between the United Kingdom and Serbia A new treaty, signed February 17, 1907 (for 10 years), provides for tariff reductions and for 'most favoured nation' treatment as regards commercial travellers, the acquisition and possession of property, and other matters

Imports from Serbia into U K	5170	—	—	—	10,000
Exports to Serbia from U K	1075	—	—	825,308	610,759

Communications

Yugo Slavia has (1920) 5,694 miles of railway, of which 3,732 miles are of normal gauge and 1,952 miles of narrow gauge With the exception of about 509 miles belonging to a private company, all the lines are State owned

Of highways there are 3,495 miles, many of them in a ruinous condition Total length of waterways, principally the Danube, the Sava, the Drave, and the Tisa 1,322 miles The navigation on the Danube and Sava is in the hands of the Navigation Syndicate of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes

There were (1920) 11,430 miles of telegraph line and 16,030 miles of telephones

There were 1,591 State post-offices and 2,195 communal post offices in 1919 In 1919 Yugo Slavia had 851 telegraph stations, 726 telephone stations, and 452 railway telegraph stations

Money and Credit

The principal bank is the National Bank of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, in Belgrade, with the nominal capital of 50,000,000 dinars To cover the issue of new bank notes the State has deposited with the Bank 30,000,000 dinars The Bank may issue notes equal to three times the amount of the metallic deposits it holds The Export Bank, with agencies abroad, assists in the exportation of Serbian produce The Uprava Fondova or Mortgage Bank, the only large State institution of the kind in Serbia, makes advances to a large amount for agricultural operations

Money, Weights, and Measures

Serbia accepted, by the law of June 20, 1875, the French decimal system for its moneys, weights, and measures. The Serbian dinar is equal to one franc. In circulation are bank notes of 1, 5, 10, 20, and 100 dinars, and 1, 2, and 10 kronen (4 kronen = 1 dinar).

The decimal weights and measures (kilogram, metre, &c.) have been in practical use since the commencement of 1883.

SIAM.

(SAYAM, OR MUANG-THAI)

Reigning King

Chao Fa Maha Vajiravudh, born January 1, 1881, eldest son of the late King Chulalongkorn I., succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, October 23, 1910, and was crowned on December 2, 1911. He is now styled King Rama VI, being the sixth sovereign of the present reigning dynasty. The royal dignity is nominally hereditary, but does not descend always from the father to the eldest son, each sovereign being invested with the privilege of nominating his own successor. On November 24, 1910, it was officially announced that until the new king has male issue, the succession will pass presumptively through the line of the Queen Mother's sons.

Government

The executive power is exercised by the King advised by a Cabinet consisting of the heads of the various departments of the Government: Foreign Affairs, Interior, Justice, Finance, Public Instruction, Public Works, War, Marine, Local Government, &c. Many of the portfolios are held by the King's half brothers and uncles. The law of May 8, 1874, constituting a Council of State, has now been superseded by the Royal Decree of January 10, 1895, creating a Legislative Council. The latter is composed of the Ministers of State (Senabodi) and others, not less than 12 in number, appointed by the Crown. The total membership is now 40. In the preamble of the Royal Decree it is stated that the object of this body is to revise, amend, and complete the legislation of the kingdom. It is to meet at least once a week, and it may appoint committees of 3 or 4 members, with the addition of competent outsiders who must not outnumber the members. An important article gives the Legislative Council power to promulgate laws without the Royal assent in the event of any temporary disability of the Crown. At other times the Royal signature is indispensable. This Council has shown considerable legislative activity.

The Siamese dominions are divided into 18 provinces (Monthons), of which 17 have each a Lord Lieutenant, deriving authority direct from the King, and having under him subordinate governors over the various parts of his district, the eighteenth comprises the capital and is under the authority of the Ministry of Local Government. Several of the tributary districts are nominally administered by their own chiefs, but of late years centralisation has greatly increased. Viceroys and Lords Lieutenant, chosen by the King, are now regularly sent from Bangkok to all of these tributary provinces, both to those in the north, as Chiangmai, and those in the south, as Singora, and others, with very full powers. The Monthon of Bangkok is under the control of the Minister of Local Government. The 18 provinces are subdivided into 78 muangs or changwats, 409 ampurs, and 5,042 tambons.

Area and Population.

Siam is called by its inhabitants Thai, or Muang-Thai, which means 'free,' or 'the kingdom of the free.' The word Siam is probably identical with Shan, applied in Burma to the Lao race, as well as to the Shan proper and the Siamese.

The limits of the Kingdom of Siam have varied much at different periods of its history, most of the border lands being occupied by tribes more or less independent. The boundary between Burma and N W Siam was delimited in 1891 By the Anglo French Convention of April, 1904, the agreement of 1896 was confirmed, and its provisions more clearly defined, the territories to the west of the Menam and the Gulf of Siam being recognised as in the British sphere, and those to the east in the French In 1904, the Luang Prabang territory to the west of the Mekong was acknowledged by Siam to belong to France, and the provinces of Maluprey and Barak (west of the Mekong) were also transferred to French rule, so that an area of about 7,800 square miles passed from Siamese possession On March 23, 1907, a new boundary in this region was accepted by Siam whereby the provinces of Battambang, (Siamese, Prutabong) Siem Rap, and Sisophon were ceded to France, while the strip of coast to the south with the port of Krat returned to Siam At the same time a rectification of the boundary was made in the Luang Prabang region, whereby a tract of the Laos country was restored to Siam It was agreed also that four ports on the Mekong are to be held by France on perpetual lease By these arrangements the territory of Cambodia is increased by about 7,000 square miles The treaty also provides for the future jurisdiction of the Siamese courts over all French Asiatic subjects and proteges in Siam, under certain conditions

A treaty for a modification of British extra territorial rights in Siam and for the cession of the Siamese tributary States of Kelantan, Trengannu and Kedah to Great Britain was signed at Bangkok on March 10, 1909 The three states have an area of about 15,000 square miles, and a population estimated at over 600,000, of whom about 300,000 are in Kelantan

The area of Siam is now about 195,000 square miles, about 45,000 being in the Malay Peninsula The first detailed census in Siam was taken in 1905, but included only 12 of the provinces or Monthons The first census of the whole country was taken in 1909 For 1915-16 the population of the country was given as follows —

Monthon	Population (1915-16)	Monthon	Population (1915-16)
1 Krung Tep (Bangkok)	941,526 <sup>1</sup>	11 Pitsanulok	274,625
2 Krung Kao	650,355	12 Baviab	1,277,105
3 Chantaburi	143,910	13 Petchabun	79,719
4 Surat (Chumporn)	176,791	14 Phuket	233,052
5 Nakorn Chaisi	306,007	15 Rajaburi	414,654
6 Nakorn Ratchasima	550,196	16 Roi Et	645,665
7 Nakorn Sawan	315,816	17 Ubon Rajatan	901,341
8 Nakorn Sitamarat	502,343	18 Udorn	756,494
9 Patani	294,806
10 Prachinburi	355,291	Total	8,819,686

The estimated population for 1918-19 is 8,924,000 In 1911-12 the total was given as 8,266,408 (4,122,168 males and 4,144,240 females)

Of the total population the 'Thai' number well over 7,000,000

In 1913-14 the immigrants numbered 70,152 (64,422 males and 5,740 females), and the emigrants 62,088 (55,803 men and 6,285 women)

The town of Bangkok includes 630,000 inhabitants, of whom it is calculated that 200,000 are Chinese The population of the island of Phuket is put at 179,600

In recent years the results of Western civilisation have to a considerable extent been introduced Much excellent work has been done by a General Adviser of American nationality (now styled Adviser in Foreign Affairs) and with the assistance of a British Judicial Adviser a French Legislative Adviser and Legal Advisers of various nationalities important progress has been made in the administration of justice in the native courts and in the International Court in which British and French Advisers assist in the trial of cases brought by Siamese against subjects of Treaty Powers and vice versa. The Penal Code has been completed, and came into force on September 21, 1908, work on other codes is being proceeded with. The Consular Courts exercise jurisdiction over their nationals, subject, in the case of Great Britain, France, and Denmark, to the Treaty modifications. The police administration of the Provinces is entrusted to the Provincial Gendarmerie, a force which includes a body of Danish instructors. The Provincial Gendarmerie and Metropolitan Police Forces have now been amalgamated and placed under the supervision of one central department at Bangkok. The European officers, both British and Danish, are no longer employed in an executive, but only in an advisory, capacity. For commercial purposes English is in general use.

Religion and Instruction

The prevailing religion is Buddhism, and in the country districts education is chiefly in the hands of the priests, of whose services the Government intends to make more effective use. All public schools are now, however, under the control of a Department of Education, and in Bangkok a number of normal and technical schools have been established, all with English head masters or assistants. In 1911-12 there were 6,972 Buddhist temples, with a total of 173,560 priests.

The Siamese language is firmly established as the official language over the whole country. The Minister of Public Instruction and Ecclesiastical Affairs has also under his charge several Government hospitals, which have been established by the King, besides a public museum, and all the royal monasteries in the capital. There is also a Pasteur Institute.

Schools are either Government schools, local schools or private schools. Government primary schools in Siam in 1916-17 numbered 329, teachers 828, pupils 25,798, non Government schools 3,134, teachers 4,131, pupils 135,062, Government secondary schools 116, teachers 440, pupils 8,316, non Government 159, teachers 516, pupils 9,220, special schools, Government 6, teachers 53, pupils 411. Besides the activities of the Siamese Government, the benevolent institutions of the American, English, and French missionaries also provide educational facilities for a large number of children. Further, in the Buddhist temples of Siam 41,317 priests assisted in teaching 154,053 resident pupils and 77,665 non resident pupils during 1916-17. The latest census showed that there were in the Provinces of Siam, not including that of Krung Tep (Bangkok), 833,972 literate males and 88,756 literate females.

The Chulalongkorn University was inaugurated at Bangkok, in 1917, for medicine, political science and literature, and engineering and natural science.

The principal sources of revenue in 1918-19 were customs duties, 524,381*l*, excise, 811,716*l*, land revenue and capitation taxes, 1,326 314*l*, railways 711,860*l*, posts, telegraphs and telephones, 841,923*l*, state lands and forests, 809,984*l*, opium, 1,649,570*l*.

On March 31, 1921, the total national debt amounted to 7,312,590*l*, made up as follows —3,880,000*l* owing to the Government of the Federated Malay States (loan of 4,750,000*l* borrowed in 1909), 3,432,560*l* out of the 1905 debt (1,000,000*l*) and the 1907 debt (3,000,000*l*). All these loans were made for, and spent on, works of public utility.

A British officer occupies the position of Financial Adviser, and there are numerous other British officers holding high advisory positions under the Government, more especially in the Finance and Audit, Revenue, Forests, Survey, Police, Justice, Customs, Mining, Mint, and Education departments. There are also a number of Europeans of other nationalities in various Departments. The financial position of the kingdom is favourable, the revenue is steadily increasing, and the expenditure is less than the revenue, and well under control.

Defence

Universal liability to military service on the European model is now in force in all the provinces including Bangkok, the terms are, from 18 to 20 in the active army, from 20 to 25 in the first reserve, from 25 to 35 in the second reserve and from 35 to 45 in the third reserve. Exemptions have been abolished, but personal service is not enforced in the case of the uncivilised tribes. The army is organised in ten divisions, each consisting in peace time of 2 regiments of infantry of 2 battalions, 1 cavalry regiment of 2 squadrons, 2 four gun batteries, divisional troops, engineers, transport, medical, etc. In war the division expands to consist of 2 regiments each of 3 battalions, 1 cavalry regiment of 3 squadrons, 3 batteries, 1 engineer, and 1 transport battalion. The infantry are armed with a special pattern of Mauser, the artillery with 75 mm quick firing mountain guns. The peace strength is over 20,000 men organised for administrative purposes into 3 Army Corps and 1 independent division. In war time the divisions are grouped into Army Corps according to strategical requirements. Aviation schools were started in 1914, and a Flying Corps has been formed.

To the small naval force, which includes a light cruiser and some gunboats, three modern dispatch vessels and the ex British destroyer Radant, renamed Pha Ruam, have been added. There are 5,000 men available for service apart besides a reserve of 20,000. The marine infantry, recruited from the inhabitants of the maritime provinces, between 18 and 40 years of age, numbers 15,000 in six shifts, besides a 1st and 2nd reserve 3,000 and 2,000 respectively.

At the mouth of the Menam River are the Paknam forts. The bar prevents ships of more than 13 feet draught from ascending to Bangkok. The naval arsenal dock has recently been reconstructed.

The military and naval expenditure for 1918-19 amounted to 1,401,677*l*.

Production and Industry

Forced labour is still exacted from the rural population, but recent enactments have made calls for it far less frequent, and a poll-tax, varying in amounts in the different districts, is now levied on all adult males with practically no exemptions. The cost of labour is probably higher than in any other Oriental country. Chinese coolies do the chief part of both skilled and unskilled labour in the south, especially in the mills and in mining, while in the north forest work is confined almost entirely to Laos, Burmese, Karens, and Khamus.

To the north of Bangkok, large tracts of land, formerly lying waste, have been opened up by an Irrigation Company, which has connected by a canal the Menam and Bangpakong rivers, and has constructed numbers of smaller canals. The chief produce of the country is rice (3,228,983 acres in 1920-21), which forms the national food and the staple article of export. For the Siamese Year (Buddhist Era) 2462 (April 1, 1919, to March 31, 1920), the rice export amounted to 441,039 tons, valued at 10,911,586/. In Siam mostly in Bangkok, there are 66 large rice mills, of which 10 are Siamese and 56 Chinese (13 of these Chinese mills being nominally British, 24 from Hong Kong or the Straits Settlements). Other produce is hides, sticklac, gamboge, pepper, salt, dried fish, cattle, and sesame while, for local consumption only, hemp, tobacco, cotton and coffee are grown. Fruits are abundant, including the durian, mangosteen, and mango, and a large selection of different varieties of oranges.

According to Siamese official statistics the number of all domestic animals in the Kingdom on April 1, 1919, was 4,593,156, including 2,108,072 buffaloes. The live stock in January 1916, consisted of 5,333 elephants, 105,078 horses and ponies, 2,336,936 cows, oxen, and calves, and 2,120,180 buffaloes.

Much of Upper Siam is dense forest, and the cutting of teak is an important industry, almost entirely in British hands. Siam teak wood is mainly produced in the north of Siam, the dry logs being floated by river to Bangkok during the rainy months of the year. In 1919-20 the exports amounted to 70,202 tons, valued at 1,189,801/. The forests are under the control of a British conservator, aided by several British officers. The export of rubber is now negligible, but planting of rubber trees is proceeding in the Malay Peninsula.

The mineral resources of Siam are extensive and varied, including tin, tungsten, wolfram, coal and iron, zinc, manganese, antimony, probably quicksilver. Tin mining on a considerable scale is pursued on the island of Puket (or Junk Ceylon) and also in the northern portion of the province of Puket at Renong on the mainland, and the ore is found in ever increasing quantities in other parts of the Siamese portion of the Malay Peninsula, where also wolfram is now being extracted in considerable quantity. The total output of tin in 1918-19 was 148,425 piculs (8,841 tons), in 1917-18, 153,782 piculs (9,153 tons).

Commerce

Exports	8,151,940	9,341,906	9,522,700	12,463,956	15,718,170

Nearly the whole of the trade is in the hands of foreigners, and in recent years many Chinese have settled in the country. The foreign trade of Siam centres in Bangkok, the capital, except the mining industry in the South.

For two years the distribution of Siamese trade through Bangkok by principal countries was as follows —

Imports from	1918-19	1919-20	Exports to	1918-19	1919-20

			Sweden	—	117,079

The principal imports in 1919-20 were cotton goods, 1,225,907*l*, food stuffs, 1,103,787*l*, metal manufactures, 691,863*l*, gunny bags, 529,789*l*, tobacco, 249,847*l*, sugar and molasses, 648,367*l*, petroleum, etc., 564,124*l*, silk, linen and woollen goods, 540,545*l*. The principal exports were rice, 10,911,586*l*, and teak, 1,189,861*l*.

There is a considerable trade on the northern frontiers with the British Shan states and Yunnan, carried on by hawkers.

Shipping and Communications

In 1919-20, 639 vessels of 581,390 tonnage entered the port of Bangkok. In 1917 a Siamese Company instituted a regular service between Bangkok, Hong Kong and the Southern China Ports, in competition with the China Navigation Co., Ltd. (Butterfield & Swire), a British company which has captured the shipping trade formerly done by the North German Lloyd Orient Line.

There were, at the end of March, 1919, 1,333 miles of State and private railways made up as follows — (1) Northern Line, 591 miles, (2) Southern Line, 677 miles, (3) private lines, 65 miles. The Northern Line is a normal-gauge railway system comprising the line from Bangkok to Koat (with a branch running North which has now gone beyond Nakawn Lampang, and is half way from there to Chiengmai) and a line from Bangkok to Patniew. These lines will shortly be converted to metre gauge. The Southern Line is likewise a State railway, but of metre gauge, and runs from Bangkok down the Malay Peninsula, to Tungswang, whence branch lines go to Singora, Nakorn Sritammarat and Trang (on the West Coast of the Peninsula), respectively. Connection has now been made with the Federated Malay States railways, and since July 1, 1918, it has been possible to travel from Bangkok to Penang, and thence to Singapore by train. The two lines have been amalgamated under one management. Private lines include those (worked by companies) from Bangkok to Paknam at the mouth of the Menam, and from Bangkok to Tachin and Meklong on the coast to the west of the Menam, together with a tramway connecting the Northern Line (northern branch) with Phrabat.

In 1919 there were 107 post offices and agencies, of which 31 were admitted for inland and 4 for the foreign money order service. The inland mail matter received at the different offices for delivery consisted of (1917-18) 892,740 letters, 372,918 post cards, 1,153,932 pieces of printed matter. For foreign countries the returns of mails despatched were letters, 326,699 post cards, 36,400, printed matter, 78,936 pieces, foreign letters received 577,705, post cards 61,906, printed matter 409,427, other matter 10,157.

There were (1919) 73 telegraph offices. Number of inland telegrams 113,659, of foreign telegrams, 108,032. Length of line, 4,532 miles, length of wire, 6,353 miles.

There were (1919) two telephone exchanges, and 958 instruments were installed at the premises of subscribers. A complete set of new instruments from Sweden for the telephone exchange in Bangkok were installed in 1919.

Two wireless stations on the Telefunken system have been erected, one at Bangkok and one at Senggora. They are both under the control of the Siamese naval authorities.

Money, Weights, and Measures

In Bangkok there are branches of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, the Chartered Bank of India, the Mercantile Bank of India and the Banque de l'Indo Chine. There is also a branch of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China at Phuket. A Siamese bank, formerly with a German but now with a British manager for its Foreign Department, has recently been established under Royal Charter and with the name of the Commercial Bank of Siam, Limited. The Government in 1902 began to issue currency notes (5, 10, 20, 100 and 1,000 ticals, and since October 1918, 1 tical and 50 tical notes). At the end of 1903 there was 267,623*l* worth of currency notes in circulation, on March 31, 1920, 8,353,592*l*. The currency notes are inconvertible.

In 1914 the Siamese Treasury Savings Bank was opened with 634 depositors. By March 31, 1919, the number was 4,905, with a total deposit of 107,365*l*.

The unit of the monetary system is the silver tical (officially called baht) weighing 15 grams. 900 fine. Its value (formerly varying with the price of silver) has, by the Gold Standard Act of 1908, been fixed at 1*s* 6½*d* or 13 ticals = 1*l*, the gold value of the tical being equal to that of 55.8 centigrams of pure gold. There will be a 10 tical gold piece or Dor weighing 6.2 grams. 900 fine and thus containing 5.58 grams of pure gold. By an amendment to the gold standard of 1908, dated Sept. 4, 1919, the value of the tical has been fixed at 1*s* 8*d* or 12 ticals = 1*l* sterling, the gold value of the tical being equal to that of 61 centigrammes of pure gold. In addition to the tical, the following coins are now actually in use—(silver) the salung — ½ tical, the 2 salung piece = ½ tical, (nickel) the 10 Salang piece, = 1⁄10 of a tical, the 5 Salang piece, = 1⁄20 of a tical, and (bronze) the Salang, = 1⁄100 of a tical. The Salung is of silver 800 fine. New 2 salung pieces have recently been coined and issued, of silver 650 fine.

There are no standard weights and measures in Siam. But the metric system has been adopted in many of the government departments and on the royal railways. The customary measures of weight are —1 Tical = 15 grams or approximately 53 oz, 4 Ticals = 1 Tamlung (60 grams or 2 1 oz), 20 Tamlungs = 1 Chang (12 kilograms or 2 lbs 10 3 oz), and 50 Chang = 1 Hap (60 kilograms or slightly over 132½ lbs).

The unit of length is the Wah. The measures of length are —1 Nue = 83 inches, 12 Nue = 1 Keub (10 inches), 2 Keup = 1 Sawk (20 inches), 4 Sawk = 1 Wah (80 inches). 20 Wah = 1 Sen (133 feet), 400 Sen = 1 Yote (10 miles, roughly). For square measure the unit is the Rai = 39 acres.

Government and Constitution

I CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

The present Constitution of Spain, drawn up by the Government and laid before a Cortes Constituyente, elected for its ratification, March 27, 1876, was proclaimed June 30, 1876. It enacts that Spain shall be a constitutional monarchy, the executive resting in the King, and the power to make laws 'in the Cortes with the King'. The Cortes are composed of a Senate and Congress, equal in authority. There are three classes of senators—first, senators by their own right, or Senadores por derecho propio; secondly, life senators nominated by the Crown—these two categories not to exceed 180; and thirdly, 180 senators, elected by the Corporations of State—that is, the communal and provincial States, the Church, the universities, academies, &c.—and by the largest payers of contributions. Senators in their own right are the sons, if any, of the King and of the immediate heir to the throne, who have attained their majority; Grandees who are so in their own right and who can prove an annual canta of 60,000 pesetas, or 2,400*l*, captain-generals of the army, admirals of the navy, the Patriarca de las Indias (the 'Patriarch of West Indies'), &c., the Primate of Spain (the Bishop of Si6n, head chaplain of the Royal Household) and the archbishops, the presidents of the Council of State, of the Supreme Tribunal, of the Tribunal de Cuentas del Reino, and of the Supreme Council of War and of the Navy after two years of office. The elective senators must be renewed by one half every five years, and by totality every time. The Monarch dissolves that part of the Cortes. The Congress is formed by deputies 'named in the electoral Juntas in the form the law determines,' in the proportion of one to every 50,000 souls of the population. According to a law of August 8, 1907, voting is compulsory for all males over the age of 25, with a few unimportant exceptions. This law further enacts that all such voters must be registered on the voting list, possess full civil rights, and must have been residents of a Municipal district for at least 2 years. Members of Congress must be 25 years of age; they are re-eligible indefinitely, the elections being for five years. Deputies to the number of 98 are elected by scrutin de liste in 28 large districts in which minorities may be duly represented. There are in all 417 deputies. The deputies cannot take State office, pensions, and salaries, but the ministers and State officials of a salary higher than 15,008 pesetas are exempted from this law. Since April 1, 1920, senators and deputies are paid 6,000 pesetas (240*l*) a year. Both Congress and Senate meet every year. The Monarch has the power of convoking them, suspending them, or dissolving them, but in the latter case a new Cortes must sit within three months. The Monarch appoints the president and vice-presidents of the Senate from members of the Senate only, the Congress elects its own officials. The Monarch and each of the legislative chambers can take the initiative in the laws. The Congress has the right of impeaching the ministers before the Senate.

State of the parties in the Senate (elected January 2, 1921) —Liberals, 58, Conservatives, 90, Regionalists, 6, Catholics and Jaimistas, 5, Reformists, 2, Republican, 1, Independents, 18.

State of parties in the Congress (elected Dec. 19, 1920) —Liberals, 111, Conservatives, 223, Republicans, 16, Socialists, 3, Reformists, 8, Regionalists, 20, Catholics and Jaimistas, 8, Independents, 11.

The Constitution of June 30, 1876, further enacts that the Monarch is inviolable, but his ministers are responsible, and that all his decrees must be countersigned by one of them. The Cortes must approve his marriage before he can contract it, and the King cannot marry any one excluded by law from the succession to the crown. Should the lines of the legitimate descendants of the late Alphonso XII become extinct, the succession shall be in this order—first, to his sisters; next to his aunt and her legitimate descendants, and next to those of his uncles, the brothers of Fernando VII, 'unless they have been excluded'. If all the lines become extinct, 'the nation will elect its Monarch'.

The executive is vested, under the Monarch, in a Council of Ministers (constituted March 13, 1921) as follows —

President of the Council —Manuel Allendesalazar

Minister of Foreign Affairs —Marquis de Lema

Minister of Justice and Worship —Señor Pinus

Minister of War —Viscount Eza

Minister of Marine —Fernando Prida

Minister of Finance —Manuel Arguella

Minister of the Interior —Count de Bujallán

Minister of Public Instruction —Señor Izquierdo

Minister of Public Works —Señor Latorre

Minister of Labour —Count Lizarraga

II LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The various provinces and communes of Spain are governed by the provincial and municipal laws. Since January 1, 1918, every commune has its own elected Ayuntamiento, consisting of from five to fifty Regidores, or Concejales, and presided over by the Alcalde, at whose side stand, in the larger towns, several Tenientes Aljaldes. The entire municipal government, with power of taxation, is vested in the Ayuntamientos. Half the members are elected every two years, and they appoint the Alcalde, the executive functionary, from their own body. Members cannot be re-elected until after two years. Each province of Spain has its own Assembly, the Diputación Provincial, the members of which are elected by the constituencies. The Diputaciones Provinciales meet in annual session, and are permanently represented by the Comision Provincial, a committee appointed every year. The Constitution of 1876 secures to the Diputaciones Provinciales and the Ayuntamientos the government and administration of the respective provinces and communes Neither the national executive nor the Cortes have the right to interfere in the established municipal and provincial administration except in the case of the action of the Diputaciones Provinciales and Ayuntamientos going beyond the locally limited sphere to the injury of general and permanent interests In the Basque provinces self government has been almost abolished since the last civil war, and they are ruled as the rest of Spain Notwithstanding the provisions of the Constitution pressure is too frequently brought to bear upon the local elections by the Central Government

Area and Population

Continental Spain has an area of 190,050 square miles, but including the Balearic and Canary Islands and the Spanish possessions on the north and west coast of Africa, the total area is 194,783 square miles The growth of the population has been as follows —

For the population of each of the provinces according to the 1910 Census see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1914, p. 1300

The population of Ceuta (23,907) is included in that of Cadiz. Besides Ceuta, Spain has, on the African Coast, the Alhucemas isles (pop. 406), the Chafarinas (736), Melilla (42,592), Peñon de la Gomera (400), Rio de Oro (495), and Nador (2,740). The North African possessions are no longer used as convict stations, the centuries old 'Presidios' having been suppressed by a recent Decree and the prisoners brought back to the Peninsula. The Basques in the North, numbering some 400,000, differ in race and language from the rest of Spain, there are 50,000 gypsies, and a small number of Jews.

The following were the estimated populations of the principal towns on December 31, 1918, viz. —

Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.
Madrid	652,157	Palma <sup>1</sup>	67,544	Coruña	60,178

1915	36,420	13,929	50,349	1917	32,976	9,075	42,051
1916	18,959	9,740	28,699	1918	26,377	9,877	36,254

Emigration from Spain is chiefly to Argentina, Cuba, Brazil, Uruguay, and Mexico.

Religion.

The national Church of Spain is the Roman Catholic, and the whole population of the kingdom adhere to that faith, except about 30,000, Protestants (about 7,000), Jews (about 4,000), Rationalists, etc. Within the Peninsula, apart from Portugal, there are 9 metropolitan sees and 47 suffragan sees, the chief being Toledo. The Constitution requires the nation to support the clergy and the buildings, &c., of the Church, and for this purpose the State expends annually about 41,000,000 pesetas. Efforts are being made for a reduction of the Church estimates. The relations between Church and State are regulated by the Concordat of May 6, 1851, and although it is laid down in this that only the orders of San Vicente de Paul, and Felipe Neri, with one other to be subsequently named, should be permitted in Spain, many other orders have been allowed to establish themselves. The third order referred to above, has never been named, and the conditions of this Concordat have never been rigidly adhered to. A law known as the 'Padlock Bill' was passed in December, 1910, prohibiting the establishment of any more religious houses, without the consent of the Government. This law lapsed on December 31, 1912, but its effect was prolonged by an order from the Pope to the Spanish Bishops. This temporary measure will be replaced by a definite arrangement which is at present being negotiated with Rome. Liberty of worship is now allowed to Protestants and all other religious bodies. The communities of the religious orders are numerous and influential in Spain. Many of them have schools, and about 5,000 of their members are engaged in teaching boys of the upper and middle classes, while, within many of their establishments, industries of all kinds are carried on. The number of religious houses in Spain is about 3,826, of which 804 are for men and 3,022 for women. Of those for men, 650 are devoted to education, 79 to charity, and 75 to the training of priests. The total number of monks is about 9,827 (including 1,294 foreigners). The orders for women comprise 1,322 for education, 895 for charity, and 805 for a contemplative life. The number of nuns is about 38,227 (including 2,418 foreign women). In 1918 there were in Spain 66 cathedrals, 20,407 parish churches, 17,424 chapels and sanctuaries, and 35,382 priests.

Instruction

The latest census returns show that a large proportion of the inhabitants are illiterate. In 1860 19.97 per cent of the population could read and write, 4.50 per cent could read only, and 75.52 per cent could neither read nor write. In 1910, 38.59 per cent could read and write, 1.77 per cent could read only, and 59.35 per cent could neither read nor write.

By a law of 1857 an elaborate system of primary education was ordained. Education was to be compulsory, there was to be a primary school for every 500 inhabitants, and instruction was to be on a rigidly uniform plan. This system has not been rigidly enforced, but various improvements have been effected, especially by a law of June 9, 1909, which made education obligatory. The country is divided into eleven educational districts, with the universities as centres. The public and primary schools are since 1902 supported by Government, the total sum spent in 1918 was 43,726,597 pesetas. Most of the children are educated free. The Royal Decree of July 1, 1902, regulates all schools, whether belonging to corporations or private persons, whether self supporting or in receipt of Government or municipal subventions. It requires schools to be authorised by Government authority, and provides for their periodical inspection for the enforcement of rules respecting sanitation and discipline, and for the appointment of properly qualified teachers.

There are 26,108 public schools, and 5,609 private schools, the total number of pupils being 2,604,308. Secondary education is conducted in 'institutions,' or middle class schools, there must be at least one of them in every province. There are at present 58 institutions with 52,498 pupils. These institutions prepare for the universities, of which there are eleven, attended by 23,586 students. The universities are at Barcelona, Granada, Madrid, Murcia, Oviedo, Salamanca, Santiago, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, and Zaragoza. Each university has two or more of the faculties of philosophy and letters, law, sciences, medicine, and pharmacy. There are, besides, a medical faculty at Cadiz in connection with the University of Seville, and in the Canary Islands an educational establishment dependent on the University of Seville. Government also supports various special schools. In 1918 the total sum expended on education and the fine arts was 76,758,479 pesetas.

Since 1902 the Government has sent scholars, teachers, and professors to foreign countries to study. Since 1910 there has existed a Board of Scientific Research (Junta para ampliación de estudios), which connects the work done abroad with the organisation of new laboratories in Spain, and publishes sets of books which show the results obtained. Since 1910 this Board has started the foundation of Halls of Residence for students where an important educational and a certain amount of scientific work is done. The total expenditure of this Board is 800,000 pesetas per annum.

Justice and Crime

Justice is administered by Tribunales and Juzgados (Tribunals and Courts), which conjointly form the Poder Judicial (Judicial Power). Judges and Magistrates cannot be removed, suspended or transferred except as set forth by law.

The Judicature is composed of—1 Tribunal Supremo (Supreme High Court), 15 Audiencias Territoriales (Divisional High Courts), 34 Audiencias Provinciales (Provincial High Courts), 521 Juzgados de Primera Instancia (Courts of First Instance), and 9,257 Juzgados Municipales (District Court, or Court of Lowest Jurisdiction held by Justices of the Peace).

The Tribunal Supremo consists of a President, three Courts of Justice and one for administrative purposes; it is empowered with disciplinary faculties, is Court of Cassation in civil and criminal trials, decides in first and second instance disputes arising between private individuals and the State, and hears criminal causes against Princes of the Royal Family, Cabinet Ministers, and Presidents of the Senate and Congress.

The Audiencias Territoriales have power to try in second instance sentences passed by judges in civil matters, and in first instance all criminal trials of the province.

The Audiencias Provinciales are Courts competent to try and pass sentence in first instance on all cases filed for delinquency. In the most important cases evidence is taken by a jury composed of twelve lay judges.

The Juzgados de Primera Instancia are presided over by one Judge acting in civil matters as Judge of First Instance, and in criminal matters as Juez de Instrucción (examining Magistrate).

The Juzgados Municipales are constituted of a Judge and two Deputy Judges. This Court is competent to try small civil cases not exceeding 500 pesetas (£20) in value, and petty offences.

Old Age Pensions

By a law dated February 27th, 1908, the 'Instituto Nacional de Previsión' was created for the purpose of granting Old Age Pensions, and administering a system of social insurance. The funds of the Institution are made up of an endowment, annual State subsidy, and private and public donations. The maximum annual pension obtainable is 1,500 pesetas (£60). The number of old age pensions granted up to December 31, 1919, was 87,953, and 141,422 for infants, a total of 229,375 pensions.

Defence.*ARMY.

Military service in Spain is compulsory. The total term of service is for 18 years. The law in force (1912) divides this period into the following — 1 year, recruits in deposit (‘Reclutas en Caya’), 3 years, active army (1st standing), 5 years, active army (2nd standing), 6 years, reserve, and 3 years, territorial reserve. There is at present no organisation for the ‘territorial reserve’.

In January, 1916, a central general staff of the army was appointed. The country is divided up into 8 territorial districts, each under a 'Captain General'. The 1st to 6th inclusive each furnish to the field army 2 divisions, the remaining two, 1 division. A division consists of 2 infantry brigades, each consisting of 2 regiments of 3 battalions, but the third battalion is only a cadre in peace time, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 regiment of field artillery of 6 batteries. The regiments of engineers have no fixed distribution. They consist of 6 regiments of sappers, 1 of telegraphy and 1 of railways, all of which are irregularly distributed among the different army corps. There are also 3 independent brigades of chasseurs, each of 6 battalions, 4 regiments of mountain artillery, making 16 batteries, and 1 regiment of horse artillery of 6 batteries, and a railway regiment of 8 active and 8 depot companies. Batteries have 4 guns. There is 1 permanent cavalry division of 2 brigades, and there are 3 permanent cavalry brigades. The Aeronautical Service consists of headquarters at Guadalajara, a balloon section, an aeronautic section and a depot. The peace establishment for the year 1920 was fixed at 216,649 men of all ranks, and the total strength of the field army would probably be about 300,000 combatants. The army is organized in 16 divisions, each of 2 brigades of infantry, and 1 of artillery.

For the units of the second line, or reserve troops, there are at present 116 battalion cadres, 14 squadron cadres, and 14 battery cadres. The second line troops are intended to provide 7 divisions of about 13,000 combatants each. Total about 90,000.

There are also the Guardia Civil and the Carabineros. The former is a constabulary, and the latter a military police used as Customs guard on frontier. Both are recruited from the army and under military discipline. The total strength of the Guardia Civil for 1918 is as follows -- Infantry, 17,842, cavalry, 2,316. Carabineros. Infantry, 13,218, cavalry 544.

Outside the Spanish peninsula, there are the 3 military commands of Melilla, Ceuta and Larache on the coast of Morocco, also the Balearic Islands and the Canary Islands, each of which forms a military district. The troops in the Balearic and Canary Islands are mostly recruited from the islands. In Africa the troops are Spanish, and are always on a war footing. A Commissioner General is invested with supreme military command in the Spanish zone. The corps of occupation consists of 11 regiments of infantry of 3 battalions, and 12 battalions of chasseurs (all battalions have 6 companies), 3 regiments of cavalry of 6 squadrons and 1 group of 3 squadrons, 2 regiments of field batteries, and 2 groups of batteries, 2 regiments of engineers, 1 group of 3 companies of sappers, and a section of telegraphy, 3 squadrons of aeroplanes for each separate command, situated at Zeluán (Melilla), Tetuán and Arcila (Larache), and the necessary subsidiary services. A native battalion of infantry and squadron of cavalry have been raised at Melilla, and 4 companies of native infantry and a 'mixed' company (horse and foot) have been raised to perform the duties of military police. A total of 60,735 men in Africa.

The Spanish infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle, model 1893. Calibre .275. The cavalry have the Mauser carbine. The field artillery gun is a Schneider Canet 14½ pr of 19 106.

A corps of aviators has recently been created. The military school of aeronautics is at Cuatro Vientos, 5½ miles from Madrid. In the last year large orders for aeroplanes have been placed abroad, and many French, British and Italian machines are now arriving. The service of military aviation is being reorganized on a large scale, and no official figures are obtainable for the number of machines now in use. The following wireless stations, Telefunken system, have been erected and are in charge of the military. Central station at Carabanchel, range 540 miles, Barcelona, range 430 miles, Melilla, Ceuta, Tetuan, Bilbao, Valencia, range 320 miles, Almeria, Larache, range 220 miles, also at Mahon (Balearic) and Coruña.

The peace establishment of the Spanish army including Guardia Civil and Carabineros amounts to 16,578 officers and 190,715 men. The budget for 1920 was 7,210,000/, exclusive of the charge for military activities in Morocco.

Spain has several fortresses which guard the frontiers and the coast. On the Western Pyrenees, Oyarzun and Pamplona. On the central Pyrenees, Jaca. And on the eastern Pyrenees, Gerona. On the Portuguese side, Badajoz (an old fortification). And finally on the coast, Ferrol, Cádiz, Cartagena, Mahon (Balearic Islands) and Ceuta (Africa).

There are 13 destroyers and 26 modern torpedo boats, and 12 gunboats.

A new programme for 6 years (approved in February, 1915) was as follows:—4 cruisers, 6 destroyers, 28 submarines, 3 gunboats, 18 coast defence vessels, and the acquisition of submarine mines, besides repair docks and works at Ferrol, Cadiz, and Cartagena, at a total cost of 11,000,000/. Only the three gunboats have been put in hand, but as part of this programme, in September, 1917, 3 submarines built in Italy were delivered, and 6 more were to follow, giving Spain a submarine flotilla comprising 10 boats. The tenth boat, the Peral, was built some years ago.

The Spanish dockyard at Ferrol is worked by a British syndicate, employing Spanish workmen.

A naval wireless telegraphic station, Telefunken system, with a range of 300 miles, is situated at San Fernando (Cadiz) There are also wireless stations at Cartagena and Ferrol

For 1920 the strength of the navy was fixed at 10,500 sailors and 4,222 marines Total number of officers in active service in the navy, including all departmental corps 1,373 Reserve 103

Production and Industry

Spain is a preponderatingly agricultural country Of the total number of inhabitants engaging in economic activities, 24.61 per cent are engaged in agriculture, 0.23 per cent in hunting and fishing, 0.42 per cent in mining, 5.02 per cent in manufacture, 0.73 per cent in transport, 0.74 per cent in commerce, and 3.16 belong to the labouring classes

Of the soil of Spain 88.45 per cent is classed as productive, of this 35.5 per cent is devoted to agriculture and gardens, 2.5 vineyards, 2.9 olive culture, 25.3 natural grass, 22.2 fruits

The soil is subdivided among a very large number of proprietors Of 3,426,083 recorded assessments to the property tax, there are 624,920 properties which pay from 1 to 10 reales, 511,666 from 10 to 20 reales, 642,377 from 20 to 40 reales, 788,184 from 40 to 100 reales, 416,546 from 100 to 200 reales, 165,202 from 200 to 500 reales, while the rest, to the number of 279,188, are larger estates, charged from 500 to 10,000 reales and upwards The subdivision of the soil is partly the work of recent years, for in 1800 the number of farms amounted only to 677,520, in the hands of 273,760 proprietors and 403,760 farmers

The area under the principal crops and the yield (for 3 years) were as follows —

In 1920, 3,289,714 acres were under vines (3,300,965 acres in 1919) and produced 9,576,528,864 pounds of grapes (7,914,252,192 pounds in 1919), yielding ordinary red and white wines to the extent of 706,756,116 gallons (543,904,788 gallons in 1919) Sherry, malaga, and generous wines were exported 3,929,772 acres (1919) under olives yielded 1,813,100 tons of olives and 336,393 tons of oil Other products are esparto, flax, hemp, pulse, oranges and hazel nuts are largely exported, and Spain has important industries connected with the preparation of wine and fruits Silk culture is carried on in Valencia, Murcia, and other provinces There are 28 (cane) sugar factories and 46 (beet root) sugar factories in Spain The production in 1919 of the former was 6,278 metric tons and of the latter 104,949 metric tons,

The number of farm animals in 1919 was estimated as follows —Horses, 594,351, mules, 1,069,408, asses, 1,014,026, cows, 3,396,573, sheep, 19,387,427, goats, 3,970,656, pigs, 4,228,964, camels (Canary Islands), 5,083

Spain is rich in minerals. Iron is abundant in the provinces of Vizcaya, Santander, Oviedo, Navarra, Huelva, and Seville, copper in the provinces of Seville, Córdoba, and Huelva, coal is found in Oviedo, Leon, Gerona, Valencia, and Córdoba, zinc in Santander, Murcia, Guipuzcoa, and Vizcaya, cobalt in Oviedo, lead in Murcia, Jaen, and Almería, manganese in Oviedo, Huelva, and Seville, quicksilver in Ciudad Real and Oviedo, silver in Guadalajara, sulphate of soda in Burgos, salt in Guadalajara, sulphur in Murcia and Almería phosphorus in Cáceres and Huelva. Platinum is reported to have been discovered in Spain in 1915.

In 1919 workers employed in connection with the mining industries were as follows: 131,015 men, 2,938 women, and 21 178 boys and girls under 18. The total value of the mineral output in 1919 was 499,662,644 pesetas at the pit mouth, there being 3,407 productive mining concessions covering an area of 310,969 hectares. Mining accidents caused 251 deaths. The quantities and values of the more important minerals in 1919 were as follows —

Spain has considerable manufactures of cotton goods, principally in Catalonia. In 1910 there were 742 undertakings employing about 68,300 looms, with 2,614,500 spindles; in woollen manufactures there are 8,800 looms with 662,000 spindles. There are in Spain about 144 paper mills (likewise in Catalonia) making writing, printing, packing and cigarette paper. There are 37 glass making factories. Corks are manufactured to a large extent, in 1913, 46,320 tons, of a value of 1,970,420*l*, in 1917, 59,073 tons, of a value of 2,303,847*l*.

In the Spanish fisheries the total number of boats employed was in 1917 about 15,293, of which 751 are steamers, fishermen, 86,287, and the value caught about 87,229,017 pesetas, representing a total weight of 135,607 tons. The most important catches are those of sardines, tunny fish, and cod. In Spain there are 677 factories, with 19,320 workmen, for the preparation of sardines and fish preserves. The value of their output in 1917 was 63,174,390 pesetas.

There is no formal treaty providing for 'most favoured nation treatment' between Great Britain and Spain, but, under an Act passed by the Spanish Cortes in 1894, imports from the United Kingdom into Spain are subject to the minimum tariff, and British merchants have all the advantages conceded to those of any European State. Under notes exchanged on December, 28, 1894, there is an understanding that commercial relations between the two countries will continue on this basis, subject to six months' notice on either side.

The special commercial treaty with Portugal was denounced on September 30, 1912, all franchises suppressed, and ordinary tariff rates will be henceforth applied to Portuguese exportations to Spain

Shipping and Navigation

The merchant navy of the kingdom contained on January 1, 1923, 522 steamers of 740,313 tons net, and 520 sailing vessels of 90,477 tons net. Bilbao and Barcelona are the chief maritime centres.

The shipping entered and cleared at Spanish ports in two years was as follows —

—	1918		1919
	No.	Tons	No.	Tons

Total	13,896	7,203,843	15,368	8,308,569

Of the vessels entered in 1919, 10,270 vessels of 3,494,034 tons (entered) and 10,969 vessels of 2,309,065 tons (cleared) were Spanish, and in 1918, 9,699 vessels of 5,607,185 tons (entered) and 11,120 vessels of 4,795,976 tons (cleared) were Spanish.

Internal Communications

The total length of the railways in Spain in 1919 was 15,727 kilometres (9,436 miles), of which 11,529 kilometres (6,917 miles) are of normal gauge (1.67 metres, or 5.48 feet), and 4,186 kilometres (2,512 miles) are of varying gauges, chiefly 1 metre (3.28 feet). The remaining 12 kilometres (7 miles) are cogwheel and tunicular lines. In 1919, 83,568,702 passengers were carried on the different lines, and 35,148,633 tons of goods transported. In October, 1919, the first underground electric railway service in Spain (on the model of the London 'tube') was inaugurated in Madrid, covering a distance of 5 kms (3 miles). In 1920 the total length of electric tramways in Spain was 611 miles.

The whole of the Spanish railways belong to private companies, but nearly all have obtained guarantees or subventions from the Government. These amounted in 1919 for all the different lines to 7,238,997 pesetas. The State tax on tickets and merchandise for the year 1919 amounted to 49,584,491 pesetas. The most important companies are those in the North, with 3,681 kilometres (2,209 miles), Madrid Saragossa Alicante (system Antigua and Catalana), 3,664 kilometres (2,198 miles), Andaluces, 1,305 kilometres (783 miles), Madrid Caceres Portugal and West, 777 kilometres (467 miles). South of Spain, 397 kilometres (238 miles), La Robla to Valmaseda and Luchana (narrow gauge), 312 kilometres (187 miles). Medina Zamora Orense and Vigo, 299 kilometres (179 miles), and Calatayud Teruel Valencia (Central de Aragon), 299 kilometres (179 miles). The official gauge of the principal Spanish railways has hitherto, for strategical reasons, been purposely kept different from that of France, and in consequence of this passengers are obliged to change trains at the frontier stations. The attempt made in 1882 to remedy this state of affairs was not successful. In January, 1914, however, a scheme was ordered to be drawn up for the construction of a standard gauge railway with a double track from Madrid to the French frontier.

The Post Office carried in 1918, in the inland service, 189,370,683 letters and post-cards, and 273,496,457 printed papers and samples, in the international service, 32,334,305 letters and post cards, and 10,212,670 printed papers and samples. There were 7,114 post offices. Receipts, 42,765,311 pesetas, expenses, 28,372,105 pesetas.

The length of lines of telegraphs in Spain in 1918 was 67,490 miles, the total number of interior messages sent and received was 19,806,989. International messages sent 587,250, received 604,391, transit 288,591. The number of telegraph offices was 2,645.

In 1918 there were 177 urban telephone systems and 214 interurban circuits, the total number of telephone stations was 67,069.

The 'Compañía Nacional de Telegrafía sin Hilos' holds the Government concession for the Public Service with ships, and between the Peninsula and the Canary Islands, and the International Service with England, Italy, Austria and Germany. They have 10 wireless stations of the Marconi system: one at Aranjuez equipped with two sets, one with 430 miles range for communication with the shore stations, and another with 1,000 miles range designed to carry out international commercial service with England and other countries. Three stations situated at Cadiz, Tenerife, and Melonara (Las Palmas), equipped with two sets each: one of 860 miles range to carry out the service between Spain and the Canary Islands, and another of 250 miles range for ship and shore traffic Two stations, one at Barcelona and another at Vigo, with two sets each one of 600 miles range to carry out international commercial service with England, Italy, and Austria, respectively, and another of 250 miles range for ship and shore traffic One station at Soller (Majorca) with 500 miles range to carry out international service and ship and shore traffic Finally, three stations with a range of 400 miles to communicate with ships at sea and with the central station at Aranjuez, which are installed respectively at Santander, Cabo de Pinos, and Cabo Finisterre

A royal decree ordains that all Spanish merchant vessels carrying passengers or mails, or subsidised by the Government, must be fitted with wireless telegraphy Since February, 1917, wireless telegraphy has been made compulsory by Royal Order, for all vessels from 500 tons upwards, excepting those in the coasting trade All Spanish men of war built in Spain since 1911 are also fitted up with Marconi wireless

The nominal value of the money coined in Spain from 1868 to 1907 was gold, 920,613,935 pesetas, silver, 1,330,589,807 pesetas In 1905-07 no gold was coined, in 1906-07, no silver was coined No coinage was struck during the years 1908 and 1909 In 1910, money coined to the value of 1,976,180 pesetas in 50 centime pieces (silver) to replace money retired from circulation In 1911, 286,843 pesetas of 50 centime pieces were coined, as well as 60,286 pesetas of bronze centime pieces In 1913, 1,429,149 pieces of 1 centime and 1,639,500 pieces of 2 centimes were coined No new coins have been struck since 1914

Money, Weights, and Measures

The Peseta of 100 Centes mos is of the value of a franc,  $9\frac{1}{4}$ , or 27 to 28 pesetas to the pound sterling, but the actual value is about 9d

Gold coins in use are 25, 20, 10, and 5 peseta pieces Silver coins are 5-peseta, 2 peseta, 1-peseta, and 50 centime pieces

Both gold and silver coins are of the same weight and fineness as the corresponding French coins Under a law of July 29, 1908, the Government is withdrawing from circulation the spurious 5 peseta pieces which had become common Gold coinage is not in general circulation

Theoretically, there is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being  $15\frac{1}{2}$  to 1 But of silver coins only the 5 peseta piece is legal tender, and the coinage of this is restricted

On January 1, 1859, the metric system of weights and measures was introduced in Spain But, besides these, the old weights and measures are still largely used. They are —The Quintal = 220 4 lbs avoirdupois, the Libra = 1 014 lbs avoirdupois, the Arroba, for wine =  $3\frac{1}{2}$  imperial gallons, for oil =  $2\frac{1}{2}$  imperial gallons, the Square Vara = 1 09 vara = 1 yard, the anega =  $1\frac{1}{2}$  imperial bushel

Colonies

The area and population of the colonial possessions of Spain are approximately as follows —

Colonial Possessions	Area English square miles	Population
Possessions in Africa
Rio de Oro and Adrar	109,200	195,000
Ifni	96	20,000
Spanish Guinea	9,470	200,000
Fernando Po, Annobon, Corisco, Great Elobey, Little Elobey	814	23,541
Spanish Morocco <sup>1</sup>	7,700	600,000
Total, Africa	128,14	844,339

For administrative purposes the Canary Islands are considered part of Spain. The area of the islands is 3,312 square miles, and their population 506,414

Rio de Oro and Adrar, stretching from the Wadi Draa  $29^{\circ}$  N and  $11^{\circ} 4'$  W to Cape Blanco  $20^{\circ} 46'$  N and  $17^{\circ} 3'$  W. Politically there are three zones:—(1) Colony of Rio de Oro,  $26^{\circ}$  N to  $20^{\circ} 46'$  N, an area of 65,500 square miles, (2) the Protectorate, between  $27^{\circ} 40'$  N and  $26^{\circ}$  N, bordered on the East by  $8^{\circ} 40'$  W, an area of 34,700 square miles, (3) the occupied territory, between  $27^{\circ} 40'$  N and the Wadi Draa, an area of about 9,000 square miles, settled by various treaties, 1900 to 1912. The Colonies are under the governorship of the Canary Islands, with a sub-governor resident at Rio de Oro. The capital of this colony is Villa Cisneros (lat.  $23^{\circ} 46' 55''$  N, long  $18^{\circ} 11' 13''$  west of Paris). There is no town called Rio de Oro, the name being applied to the arm of the sea and the colony generally.

Ifni was ceded to Spain by Morocco in 1860. By the Franco-Spanish agreement of 1912 it extends along the West Coast of Morocco to the north of Wadi Draa, from Wad Nun on the south to Wad Bu Sedra on the north, and a distance of 15 miles inland from the coast. The occupation is purely nominal. Area, 965 square miles, population, 20,000. There are several small harbours and villages, the population is engaged in fishing, and in cultivating dates and garden produce.

The Spanish territory on the Gulf of Guinea, extends from the Muni to the Campo river and the Cameroons, its eastern boundary being on the meridian of  $11^{\circ} 20'$  E of Greenwich. The capital is Santa Isabel, in the Island of Fernando Po, which has an area of 1,185 square miles. The principal mountain is known as the Pico de Santa Isabel, or Clarence Peak (10,190 feet). The island is considered one of the most fertile spots on the West Coast of Africa. The other possessions of Spain in the Gulf of Guinea comprise the Islands of Annobon ( $6\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), Little Elobey (35 acres), Great Elobey ( $\frac{1}{2}$  square mile) and Corisco ( $5\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), and the district of Rio Muni on the mainland (9,470 square miles), the principal town of which is Bata. The coast region is low and marshy and contains vast forests. The vegetation is luxuriant and at places along the coast there are Spanish, French, and English factories. But there are no harbours and the rivers are all inaccessible to vessels. The population of Fernando Poo is 12,108. There are about 250 to 300 Europeans in the island, about 30 of these being British. The population of Little Elobey is 222. Great Elobey is covered with bush, its population is 123. Corisco has a population of 815 and Annobon of 1,313, while the population of Rio Muni territory is estimated at 130 whites and 89,000 natives. All the colonies are under the control of a Governor General, resident at Santa Isabel. A Sub-Governor is appointed to the district of Bata and another to the district of Elobey, which includes the Islands of Corisco and Annobon. The aborigines of Fernando Po are called Bubi. Those of Elobey and Corisco are mostly of the Benga tribe, but like the people of Annobon they take the names of their respective islands. In Bata the Pamwe are the principal tribe. There are Catholic and American Presbyterian missions at work among the natives. Spain has given to France the right of pre-emption in case of the sale of any of these African colonies or the adjacent islands. Imports in 1917 from Fernando Poo to Spain, 6,261,379 pesetas, exports from Spain to Fernando Poo, 3,137,750 pesetas.

Constitution and Government

The fundamental laws of the Kingdom of Sweden are —1 The Constitution or Regeringsformen of June 6, 1809, 2 The amended regulations for the formation of the Diet of June 22, 1866 (modified under an act passed in 1909), 3 The law of royal succession of September 26, 1810, and 4 The law on the liberty of the press of July 16, 1812. The King must be a member of the Lutheran Church. His Constitutional power is exercised in conjunction with the Council of State or (in legislation) in concert with the Diet, and every new law must have the assent of the crown. The right of imposing taxes is, however, vested in the Diet. This Diet, or Parliament of the realm, consists of two Chambers, both elected by the people. The First Chamber consists of 150 members. Their election takes place by the members of the 'Landstings,' or provincial representations, and electors of six towns, not represented in the 'Landstings,' viz., Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping, Helsingborg and Gävle. The Constituencies are 19, arranged in 8 groups, in one of which an election takes place in September every year. The manner of the election is proportional and regulated by a special election law. All members of the First Chamber must be above 35 years of age, and must have possessed for at least three years previous to the election either real property to the taxed value of 50,000 kronor (2,777 l.), or an annual income of 3,000 kronor (166 l.). They are elected for the term of eight years. The Second Chamber consists of 230 members elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, every man and woman over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability having the right to vote. The country is divided into 56 constituencies, in each of which one member is elected for every 230th part of the population of the kingdom it contains. The method of election is proportional, and the voter may (or may not) indicate on the ballot paper the party to which the candidate he votes for belong. On the voting paper the names of the candidates must appear in vertical succession and these names may not exceed in number the number to be elected by more than two. In the counting of votes, papers with the indication of party are grouped according to parties and the order of candidates within each group determined, papers with no party indication are counted separately in a 'free group'. The places to be given to the different groups of voting papers are decided according to the d'Hondt rule. Representatives and their substitutes are chosen in the same election. The members of both Chambers obtain salaries, free of income tax, for their services, at the rate of 3,400 kr (21 kr a day) and 4,500 kr (32 kr a day) for members living in or outside the capital, for each ordinary session, or, in the case of an extra session, 24 or 32 kr a day, besides travelling expenses. The salaries and travelling expenses of the deputies are paid out of the public purse.

The executive power is in the hands of the King, who acts under the advice of a Council of State, the head of which is the Minister of State. The Ministry, appointed February 23, 1921, is composed as follows —

Minister of State (Premier) — Oskar F. von Sydow

Minister for Foreign Affairs — Count H. Wangel

Minister of Justice — B. Ekeberg

Minister of Defence — General O. G. W. Hammarskjöld

Minister for Social Affairs — H. Elmquist

Minister of Communications —Walter Murray

Minister of Commerce —G. Malm

Minister of Finance —K. J. Beshow

Minister of Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs —B. Bergqvist

Minister of Agriculture —N. Hansson

Ministers without Portfolio - K. Dahlberg and M. Ljunsson

All the members of the Council of State are responsible for the acts of the Government

The second chamber, elected 1920 70 Moderates, 29 of the two Agrarian Parties, 75 Socialists, 7 of the Socialistic Left, 47 Liberals, and 2 non party men. The upper chamber (totally renewed 1919, after having been dissolved by the Government) 37 Moderates, 19 of the Agrarian Parties, 41 Liberals, 49 Socialists, and 4 of the Socialistic Left

The provincial administration is entrusted in Stockholm to a High Governor, and in each of the 24 governments to a prefect, who is nominated by the king. As executive officers of the prefects there are 491 sub bailiffs (Landsfiskaler). The right of the people to regulate their own local affairs is based on the communal laws of March 21, 1862. Each rural parish, and each town, forms a commune or municipality in which all men and women who have paid the local taxes for at least one of the preceding three years from the calendar year following the completion of their 23rd birthday are voters. In small communes and towns the communal assembly may itself decide on all questions of administration, police and communal economy. It may, however, elect a communal council to decide on the questions, and all communes with 1,500 inhabitants and over do so. These councils are named Kommunalfullmäktige in the country, and Stadsfullmäktige in the towns. Ecclesiastical affairs and questions relating to primary schools are dealt with by the parish assemblies, presided over by the pastor of the parish. Each government has a county council (Landsting) elected by men and women who enjoy municipal suffrage, but they must have completed their 27th year. The county council regulates the internal affairs of the government, meeting annually for a few days in September under a president elected by and from the members. Towns having a population of at least 1/150th of the total population of the realm, and towns already separated from the 'Landstings,' and where the number of inhabitants is not fallen below that which caused their separation, are administered separately by their municipal councils. These towns are Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping, Helsingborg and Gävle. As in elections for the Diet so in the communal elections of municipal representatives, of members of the 'Landstings,' &c., the method of election is proportional. Women are eligible for communal offices.

Area and Population

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION

The first census took place in 1749, and it was repeated at first every third year, and subsequently, after 1775, every fifth year. At present, a general census is taken every ten years, besides which there are annual enumerations of the people.

The area and population of Sweden, according to the census taken on December 31, 1910, and estimate for December 31, 1919, are as follows —

Governments (Lan)	Area English square miles	Population Dec 31, 1910	Population Dec 31, 1919	Pop per square mile 1919

Total	173,035	5,522,403	5,847,037	33.8

In 1919 there were 2,868,395 males and 2,978,642 females.
The growth of the population has been as follows —

Year	Population	Increase per cent per annum	Year	Population	Increase per cent per annum
1840	3,193,887	—	1900	3,136,441	0.71
1980	4,565,668	0.95	1910	5,522,403	0.72

With the exception of (1910) 25,290 Finns, 7,138 Lapps, and some thousands others, the Swedish population is entirely of the Scandinavian branch of the Aryan family.

On December 31, 1910, there were 21,708 foreigners in Sweden, including subjects of Finland 5,538, Norway 4,537, Germany, 3,400, Denmark 2,900, Russia 2,900, the United States 816, the United Kingdom 288, other states 1,329.

The population was divided as follows in 1910 —

—	Male	Female	—	Male	Female
Unmarried	1,690,313	1,686,141	Widowed	105,170	221,816
Married	900,340	910,345	Divorced	2,906	5,372

II PRINCIPAL TOWNS

In 1860 the town population numbered only 431,519, in 1900 1,103,951, and at the beginning of 1920, 1,715,969, showing an increase of from 11 per cent of the whole population of Sweden (in 1860) to 30 per cent (in 1920)

Religion and Instruction

The mass of the population adhere to the Lutheran Protestant Church, recognised as the State religion. There are 12 bishoprics (Uppsala being the metropolitan see), and 2,587 parishes at the beginning of 1920. At the census of 1910, the number of 'Evangelical Lutherans' was returned at 5,497,689, the Protestant Dissenters, Baptists, and Methodists, numbering 14,715. Of other creeds, there were 3,070 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Stockholm), 6,112 Jews, and 317 others. No civil disabilities attach to those not of the national religion. The clergy are chiefly supported from the parishes and the proceeds of the Church lands.

The Kingdom has two universities, at Uppsala (founded in 1177) and Lund (founded in 1668), the former having 2,517 and the latter 1,444 students in the autumn of 1919. There are also a State faculty of medicine in Stockholm (founded in 1810), with 680 students, and private universities in Stockholm (founded in 1877), philosophical and law faculties, with 832 students, and Göteborg (founded in 1889), philosophical faculty, with 239 students. In Stockholm there is also an academy of commerce with 257 students. In 1919 there were 77 public secondary schools, with 27,384 pupils, 51 people's high schools, 3,486 pupils, 15 normal schools for elementary school teachers, 1,971 pupils, 2 high and 7 elementary technical schools, about 4,000 pupils, 5 navigation schools, 289 pupils, military schools, agricultural schools, veterinary and other special schools, besides institutions and schools for deaf mutes and the blind. Public elementary instruction is gratuitous and compulsory (since 1842), and children not attending schools under the supervision of the Government must furnish proofs of having been privately educated. The school age is 7 to 14 years. In 1919 there were 17,085 elementary schools, with 24,265 teachers and 706,841 pupils. Among the recruits (Bevaring) of 1916 only 0.16 per cent were unlettered, only 0.32 per cent unable to write.

Justice and Crime

The administration of justice is entirely independent of the Government. Two functionaries, the Justitie Kansler, or Chancellor of Justice, and the Justitie-Ombudsman, or Attorney General, exercise a control over the administration. The former, appointed by the King, acts also as a counsel for the Crown, while the latter, who is appointed by the Diet, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law. The kingdom, which possesses one Supreme Court of Judicature, is divided (beginning of 1920) into 3 high court districts and 214 district courts divisions, of which 91 are urban districts and 123 country districts.

In town these district courts (or courts of first instance) are held by the burgomaster and his assessors, in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—peasant proprietors—the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. In Sweden trial by jury only exists for affairs of the press.

Pauperism

According to the Poor law ordinances issued in 1918 the communes are bound to assist children under 16 years of age, if their circumstances require it, and all who from age, disease, or infirmity (physical or mental) are unable to support themselves. Each commune and each town (borough) constitutes a poor district, and in each is a board of public assistance. In 1918 these districts possessed workhouses and similar establishments to the number of 1,990, capable of lodging 65,035 people. There were besides 1,693 smaller cottages for the poor, assigned as dwellings for 6,161 paupers.

The total of those in receipt of relief was in 1918 256,441, of which 140,973 belonged to country parishes and 115,468 to towns. Recipients of relief amounted relatively to the mean population to 3.39 per cent in the country, 6.96 in towns, and 4.41 on the average for the whole kingdom.

Finance

To this must be added (for the year 1921) a supplementary budget for extraordinary expenses, calculated by the Ministry of Finance at 442,812,242 kronor (24,388,940 l)

The budget for 1922 balanced at 901,956,300 kronor

The value of the land and house property of Sweden is thus returned for 1919 —

The expenditure for the Church is chiefly defrayed by the parishes and out of the revenue of landed estates belonging to the Church, and the amounts do not appear in the budget estimates. The expenses for public instruction are in great part defrayed by the parishes.

On January 1, 1921, the public liabilities of the Kingdom, contracted principally for productive purposes (railways, &c), were as follows —

		Kronor			Kronor

The debt amounts to 217 kronor per head of the population (at the end of 1910 it was only 96 kronor per inhabitant), but as the receipts from business undertakings and outstanding loans in ordinary times exceed the whole interest, the charge per head is nominal. The assets entered in the State register on January 1, 1920, amounted to 2 820,690,000 kronor. To this sum may be added at least 550,000,000 kronor, representing other assets that have not been booked. Thus the financial situation of the State shows a surplus of assets of about 2,100,000,000 kronor.

The income of the communes in 1917 was 337,070,558 kronor, and the expenditure 378,157,765 kronor. Their assets amounted to 1,207,806,233 kronor, and their debts to 817,701,249 kronor. The revenue of the provincial representative bodies (landsting) was 31,118,233 kronor, and expenditure 30,904,845 kronor, their assets 81,210,905 kronor, and debts 36,333,892 kronor.

Defence

ARMY.

The military forces are recruited on the principle of universal service, but aided by a voluntarily enlisted personnel which forms the permanent cadres for training purposes.

Liability to service commences at the age of 20, and lasts till the end of the 42nd year. The men belong to the first 'uppbåd' of the active army or Bevaring for 11 years, then for 4 years to the second 'uppbåd', and finally for 8 years to the Landstorm. The initial period of training is 225 days for the infantry. It is 285 days for cavalry, horse and field artillery, and heavy field artillery, and 295 days for garrison artillery and engineers. The infantry is called up for exercise 4 times, 3 in the first period of their service, for 30 days each time, and once later for 15 days. The cavalry and artillery have 3 trainings, 2 of 42 days and 1 of 25 days. The garrison artillery and garrison engineers have two trainings of 35 days and one of 15 days, other engineers have two trainings of 35 days and one of 25 days.

The field army is likely to consist, in the first instance, of 6 divisions, each of 2 brigades of 2 regiments (12 battalions and 4 machine gun companies), with a regiment of cavalry (4 squadrons and 1 machine gun section), a regiment of field artillery (11 batteries of 4 guns each), 1 or 2 companies of engineers, a pontoon train, a telegraph detachment, 1 or 2 field searchlight sections, a supply company, a bearer company, ammunition column and train. There would be also a cavalry division of 4 regiments and the horse artillery division (16 squadrons and 3 batteries). The total would amount to about 100,000 combatants. The first 'uppbåd' of the Bevaring would be able (as far as numbers go) to furnish a nearly equal number of reserve troops, while the second 'uppbåd' would provide a sufficient reserve to make good the losses on field service, but it is not known at present what is to be the organisation of the considerable reserves which will be available.

The total number of horses is about 11,000.

The total numbers on the rolls amount to about 633,000.

The strength of the reserve of officers and voluntarily enlisted men amounts to about 33,000, that of the Bevaring to about 400,000.

The Landstorm amounts to about 190,000 of all ranks.

The Swedish infantry are armed with the Mauser rifle (calibre 6.5 mm), the horse and field artillery have the Krupp 7.5 cm Q.F. gun. The military budget for 1920 amounted to 134,023,700 kronor for the army,

34,247,600 kronor for the navy, and respectively 135,694,955 and 22,186,120 kronor as special expenditure for defence

NAVY

The Swedish Navy was built entirely as a coast defence force. Latterly cruisers of considerable speed and gun power have been put in hand.

The following is a list of the principal ships —

1913	Gustaf V	7,150	8	8	4 11 in., 8 6 in.	2	20,000	22.5
1915	Drottning Victoria

There are 10 destroyers, 4 old torpedo gunboats, 42 torpedo boats, and about 14 submarines. The future of the Navy has been under discussion. A Minister of Defence now controls the naval and military services.

The personnel of the Royal Navy is divided into three classes, viz. 1. The Active List, 2. The Reserve, 3. The Bevaring. On the active list are 5 flag-officers, 9 commodores, 44 captain commanders, 123 captains, 108 lieutenants, 54 sub lieutenants, 738 warrant officers, and 4,100 petty officers and men, while about 340 commissioned officers belong to the Reserve.

On the active list of the Royal Coast Artillery are 1 general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant colonels, 8 majors, 52 captains, 49 lieutenants, 24 sub lieutenants, 200 warrant officers, and 1,288 petty officers and men.

Production and Industry

I AGRICULTURE

Sweden has always been an agricultural country. In 1751 only 9.5 per cent of the population depended for a livelihood on the various industries and commerce. In 1840 the percentage had risen to 10.75, in 1870 it had advanced to 19.6, in 1900 to 38.8, and in 1910 to 45.8 per cent, so that to day the population of Sweden is about equally divided in the pursuit of agriculture on the one hand and commerce and industries on the other.

The number of farms in cultivation in 1919 was 428,758 of these there were of 2 hectares and under, 120,788, 2 to 20 hectares, 270,511, 20 to 100 hectares, 2,576, above 100, 84,883. Of the total land area of Sweden 9.4 per cent is under cultivation, 2.8 per cent under natural meadows, and 57.8 per cent under forests, the products of which form a staple export.

The following table shows the area and yield of the chief crops for 3 years —

Crop	Acreage (hectares)			Produce (tons)
	1918	1919	1920	1918	1919	1920

<sup>1</sup> Beans, peas, and vetches

The value of all crops was estimated in 1917 at 1,474 million kronor, in 1918 at 2,401 million kronor, and in 1919 at 2,145 million kronor. On June 1, 1919, the live stock was as follows: Horses, 715,681, head of cattle, 2,550,828, sheep and lambs, 1,563,654, pigs 716,783.

II MINES AND MINERALS

Mining has been from time immemorial the leading industry of Sweden, which was the biggest producer of iron in Europe until the use of coal for the manufacture of pig iron revolutionized that industry. The lack of fossil fuel is the reason why at present mining in Lippaland merely concerns itself with the raw products, though experiments made in recent years have carried the problem of electric production of iron ore a good step forward. The mining of ore from the ore fields of central Sweden has become one of the biggest export industries of the country. There were raised in the year 1919, throughout the Kingdom, 4,951,110 tons of iron ore. The pig iron produced amounted in 1918 to 761,822 tons, and in 1919 to 493,701 tons, the bar iron 426,473 tons in 1918 and 381,541 tons in 1919. Of iron ore in 1917 5,818,498 tons, in 1918, 4,463,760 tons, and in 1919, 2,418,989 tons were exported, of pig iron, 234,923 in 1917, 181,710 in 1918, and 81,573 in 1919. There were also raised in 1919, 1,671 tons of silver and lead ore, 7,279 tons of copper ore, 49,451 tons of zinc ore, 12,278 tons of manganese ore, and 108,770 tons of sulphur pyrites. The gold produced amounted to 21,552 kilograms, the silver to 620, the lead to 827,448, the copper to 3,578,292, the zinc to 2,320,538. There are not inconsiderable veins of coal in the southern parts of Sweden, giving 429,267 tons of coal in 1919. In 1919 there were 45,108 persons (4,067 young people under 18) engaged in mining.

III INDUSTRIES

The industries of Sweden are spread fairly well over the whole country. The mining of iron ore has reached its highest perfection north of the Polar circle, and the most important sawmills are located along the shores of the Gulf of Bothnia. The production of iron and steel has taken place in central Sweden since the earliest times in Swedish history, pig iron is produced chiefly in Sandviken, Domnarvett, Uddeholm, and Fagersta. Cream separators, lighthouse apparatus, telephone supplies, motors, and many kinds of electrical machinery are among the highly specialised products of the metallurgical industries. The porcelain factories of Rorstrand and Gustavsberg and the glass factories of Kosta and Rejmyre produce wares that have achieved a high reputation in the markets of the world. Innumerable factories for the production of finished products are scattered all over the countryside. Of the workmen employed in the industries of Sweden, those who reside in the country exceed in number the workmen who live in towns.

The timber and wood work industries of Sweden are of great importance. The public forests (mostly on crown-lands) have an area of 8,193,981 hectares (not including settlement and crown-farm forests amounting in 1918 to an area of 517,769), and yielded, in 1918, 5,636,240 cubic metres of timber. In 1918 there were in Sweden 1,266 sawmills and planing mills with 40,379 workpeople who turned out sawn or planed timber to the value of 371,788,200 kronor, 565 factories for joinery and furniture with 12,707 work people, the output for the year being valued at 50,730,143 kronor, 108 factories for wood pulp with 13,566 workpeople, output 228,741,807 kronor, and 74 paper and pasteboard mills with 11,813 workpeople, output 233,930,962 kronor. The extent of some other Swedish industries in 1918 is shown in the following table —

Since Jan. 1, 1914, returns as to value of imports and exports are given by the importers and exporters themselves for all goods imported and for most export goods (the so called declared value). Imports are recorded as from the country of consignment, and exports as to the country of ultimate destination.

A new Swedish tariff law came into effect December 1, 1911. It provides for a single tariff instead of the maximum and minimum tariffs till then in effect, and authorises the Government to retaliate for discrimination against Swedish products by imposing surtaxes up to 100 per cent. of duty on dutiable goods, and up to the full value of the goods in the case of articles admitted free of duty under the tariff.

A national Swedish trade mark was introduced (1911) by Sveriges Allmänna Handelsforening (General Commercial Association of Sweden). The upper half of the mark shows the three royal Swedish crowns, on a light blue ground, and the words 'Svensk Tillverkning' (Swedish manufacture) are shown on a light yellow ground below.

The following table shows the value of the trade with the principal countries with which Sweden deals —

Internal Communications

In 1918 147,271 ships and boats passed through the canals of Sweden

At the end of 1919 the total length of railways in Sweden was 9,392 miles, of which 3,409 miles belonged to the State. The receipts of the State railways in 1919 were 298 million kronor, and expenses 309 million kronor. The total cost of construction for the State railways to the end of 1918 was 734,011,000 kronor, and for private railways in 1917 631,091,000 kronor. The total number of passengers on the State railways in 1919 was 34,077,000, weight of goods 13,764,000 tons, private railways in 1919, 25,513,000 tons of goods, and 51,991,000 passengers. The line between Gotheborg and Stockholm is about to be electrified.

The length of the wires of the telegraph at the end of 1919 was 48,761 miles, 22,269 miles of which belonged to the railways. The wires of the State telephone had a length of 398,413 miles, the wires of the private telephone lines a length of only 6,264 miles. There were 3,333 telegraph offices. The number of messages sent in the year 1919 was 9,293,490, including 810,068 in transit. In 1919 there were 383,499 instruments (in Stockholm 131,204) employed in the telephone service, including only 4,708 private telephones.

The Swedish Post Office carried 667,069,000 letters, post cards, journals, &c., in the year 1919. The number of post offices at the end of the year was 3,657. The total receipts of the Post Office in 1919 amounted to 55,471,800 kronor, and the total expenditure to 54,423,800 kronor, leaving a surplus of 1,048,000 kronor.

Money and Credit

The Riksbank, or National Bank of Sweden, belongs entirely to the State and is managed by directors elected for three years by the Diet, except one, the president, who is designated by the King. It is a bank of exchange to regulate financial relations with foreign countries, it accepts deposits of money, and on sufficient security it lends money for purposes in which there is no speculative element. The Bank is under the guarantee of the Diet, its capital and reserve capital are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and its assets in current accounts at home and abroad, but its actual circulation is kept far within this limit.

The following table gives statistics of the National Bank, and private banks (joint stock banks included) in Sweden for December 31, 1920 (18 16 kronor = 14). There are 11 conjointly responsible private banks and 30 joint stock banks (December 1920). Since December 31, 1903, only the Riksbank has the right to issue notes.—

Money, Weights, and Measures

By a treaty signed May 27, 1873, with additional treaty of October 16, 1875, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark adopted the same monetary system.

The Swedish Krona, of 100 ore, is of the value of 1s 1½d, or about 18 kronor to the pound sterling.

The gold 20-kronor piece weighs 8.960572 grammes, 900 fine, containing 8.0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krona weighs 7.5 grammes, 800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. Iron coins were issued in 1917, 1918, and 1919.

The standard of value is gold. National Bank notes for 1, 5, 10, 50, 100, and 1000 kronor are legal means of payment, and the Bank is bound to exchange them for gold on presentation. The 1 kronor notes have been issued since September, 1914.

No gold coins were made at the Swedish mint during 1919, but 24,076,160 silver, bronze, and iron coins, with a nominal value of 1,903,434 kronor, were issued in 1919. It is intended gradually to withdraw the iron coins.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SWITZERLAND.

(SCHWEIZ — SUISSE — SVIZZERA )

Constitution and Government.

I GENERAL

ON August 1, 1291, the men of Uri, Schwyz, and Lower Unterwalden entered into a defensive League. In 1353 the League included eight members, and in 1513 thirteen. Various allied and subject territories were acquired either by single cantons or by several in common, and in 1648 the League became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire, but no addition was made to the number of cantons till 1798. In that year, under the influence of France, the united Helvetic Republic was formed. This failed to satisfy the Swiss, and in 1803 Napoleon Bonaparte, in the Act of Mediation gave a new constitution and out of the lands formerly allied or subject increased the number of cantons to nineteen. In 1815 the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland and the inviolability of her territory was guaranteed by Austria, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia, and Russia, and the Federal Pact which had been drawn up at Zurich, and which included three new cantons, was accepted by the Congress of Vienna. The Pact remained in force till 1848, when a new constitution, prepared without foreign interference, was accepted by general consent. This, in turn, was, on May 29, 1874, superseded by the constitution which is now in force.

The constitution of the Swiss Confederation may be revised either in the ordinary forms of Federal legislation with compulsory referendum, or by direct popular vote, a majority both of the citizens voting and of the cantons being required, and the latter method may be adopted on the demand (called the popular initiative) of 50,000 citizens with the right to vote. The Federal Government is supreme in matters of peace, war, and treaties: it regulates the army, the railway, postal and telegraph systems, the coining of money, the issue and repayment of bank notes, and the weights and measures of the Republic. It legislates on matters of civil capacity, copyright, bankruptcy, patents, sanitary police in dangerous epidemics and it may create and subsidise, besides the Polytechnic School at Zurich, a Federal University and other educational institutions. There has also been entrusted to it the authority to decide concerning public works for the whole or great part of Switzerland, such as those relating to rivers, forests, and the construction of railways.

The supreme legislative and executive authority are vested in a parliament of two chambers, a 'Ständerat' or State Council, and a 'Nationalrat,' or National Council. The first is composed of forty-four members, chosen and paid by the twenty-two cantons of the Confederation, two for each canton. Their remuneration depends on the wealth and liberality of the cantons, the average being about 20 francs (16s.) per day; representatives from the canton of Geneva receive 30 francs (25s.), from Uri and from Unterwalden 15 francs (12s. 6d.) per day. The mode of their election and the term of membership depend entirely on the canton. Three of the cantons are politically divided—Basel into Stadt und Land, Appenzell into Ausser Rhoden and Inner Rhoden, and Unterwald into Obwald and Nidwald. Each of these parts of cantons sends one member to the State Council, so that there are two members to the divided as well as to the undivided cantons. The 'Nationalrat' consists of 189 representatives of the Swiss people, chosen in direct election, at the rate of one deputy for every 20,000 souls. The members are paid from Federal funds at the rate of 25 francs for each day on which they are present, with travelling expenses, at the rate of 20 centimes (2d) per kilometre, to and from the capital. Members employed on commissions receive additional pay at the same rate. On the basis of the general census 1910, the cantons are represented in the National Council as follows:—

Canton	Number of Representatives	Canton	Number of Representatives
Zurich (Zürich)	25	Appenzell—External and
Bern (Berne)	32	Internal	4
Luzern (Lucerne)	8	St. Gallen (St. Gall)	15

Schaffhausen (Schaffhouse)	2

At the elections held in November 1919, the following parties were returned:—Liberals, 61; Social Democrats, 41; Catholics, 41; Agrarian, 29; Liberal Democrats, 9; other parties, 8.

A general election of representatives takes place by ballot every three years. Every citizen of the Republic who has entered on his twenty-first year is entitled to a vote, and any voter, not a clergyman, may be elected a deputy. Both chambers united are called the 'Bundesversammlung,' or Federal Assembly, and as such represent the supreme Government of the Republic. The first step towards legislative action may be taken by means of the popular initiative, and laws passed by the Federal Assembly may be vetoed by the popular voice. Whenever a petition demanding the revision or annulment of a measure passed by the Legislature is presented by 30,000 citizens, or the alteration is demanded by eight cantons, the law in question must be submitted to the direct vote of the nation. For the decision of the question submitted a majority both of the cantons and of the voters is required. This principle, called the referendum, is frequently acted on. The chief executive authority is deputed to a 'Bundesrat,' or Federal Council, consisting of seven members, elected for three years by the Federal Assembly. The members of this council must not hold any other office in the Confederation or cantons, nor engage in any calling or business. It is only through this executive body that legislative measures are introduced in the deliberative councils, and its members are present at and take part in their proceedings, but do not vote Every citizen who has a vote for the National Council is eligible for becoming a member of the executive

The President of the Confederation and the Vice President of the Federal Council are the first magistrates of the Confederation. Both are elected by the Federal Assembly in joint session of the National and State councils for the term of one year, January 1 to December 31, and are not re-eligible to the same offices till after the expiration of another year. The Vice President, however, may be, and usually is, elected to succeed the outgoing President.

The seven members of the Federal Council — each of whom has a salary of 1,000<sup>fr.</sup> per annum, while the President has 1,080<sup>fr.</sup> — act as ministers, or chiefs of the seven administrative departments of the Republic. These departments are: — 1. Foreign Affairs. 2. Interior. 3. Justice and Police. 4. Military. 5. Finance and Customs. 6. Agriculture and Industry (Economie publique). 7. Posts and Railways. The city of Bern is the seat of the Federal Council and the central administrative authorities.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Each of the cantons and demi-cantons of Switzerland is sovereign, so far as its independence and legislative powers are not restricted by the federal constitution; each has its local government, different in its organisation in most instances, but all based on the principle of absolute sovereignty of the people. In a few of the smallest cantons, the people exercise their powers direct, without the intervention of any parliamentary machinery, all male citizens of full age assembling together in the open air, at stated periods, making laws and appointing their administrators. Such assemblies, known as the Landsgemeinden, exist in Appenzell, Glarus, Unterwald, and Uri. In all the larger cantons, there is a body chosen by universal suffrage, called the Grosse Rath, which exercises all the functions of the Landsgemeinden. In all the cantonal constitutions, however, except that of Freiburg and those of the cantons which have a Landsgemeinde, the referendum has a place. This principle is most fully developed in Zurich, where all laws and concordats, or agreements with other cantons, and the chief matters of finance, as well as all revision of the constitution, must be submitted to the popular vote. In many of the cantons, the popular initiative has also been introduced. The members of the cantonal councils, as well as most of the magistrates, are either honorary servants of their fellow citizens, or receive a merely nominal salary. In each canton there are districts (Amtsbezirke) consisting of a number of communes grouped together, each district having a Pflicht (Regierungstatthalter) representing the canton. In the larger communes, for local affairs, there is an Assembly (legislative) and a Council (executive) with a president, maire or syndic, and not less than 10 other members. In the smaller communes there is a council only, with its proper officials.

Area and Population

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION

Area and population, according to the census held on December 1, 1910, and that held on December 1, 1920. The cantons are given in the official order, and the year of the entrance of each into the league or confederation is stated —

Canton	Area sq miles	Population		Pop per square mile, 1920

The German language is spoken by the majority of inhabitants in 19 of the 25 cantons, the French in five (Fribourg, Vaud, Valais, Neuchâtel and Genève), the Italian in one (Ticino). In 1910, 2,594,298 spoke German, 793,264 French, 302,578 Italian, 40,122 Romansch, and 23,031 other languages.

The number of foreigners resident in Switzerland in 1920 was 412,306.

II MOVEMENT OF POPULATION

Years	Total Births	Stillbirths	Marriages	Deaths and Stillbirths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1915	77,931	2,381	19,527	54,912	24,019

1919	74,205	2,080	30,741	57,012	17,193

In 1918 the illegitimate births numbered 3,439, or 4.4 per cent. The number of divorces was 1,699.

The number of emigrants in five years was —1916, 1,464, 1917, 656, 1918, 304, 1919, 3,063, 1920, 9,276.

III PRINCIPAL TOWNS

On December 1, 1920, the census population of the principal towns was as follows —Zurich, 206,120, Basel, 135,385, Bern, 103,986, St. Gallen, 69,733, Lausanne, 67,858, Geneva, 55,738, Luzern, 43,696, Chaux de Fonds, 37,591, Blainpalais (Geneva), 35,472, Biel, 34,414, Winterthur, 26,372, Neuchâtel, 22,959, Freiburg, 20,468, Schaffhausen, 19,954, Caux Bives (Geneva), 19,942, Chur, 15,484, Petit-Saconnex (Geneva), 15,084, Herisau, 14,951, Zhun, 14,023, Lugano, 13,281, Solothurn, 12,970, Beven, 12,702, Locle, 12,441, Norfchach, 11,545, Olten, 11,458, Chateland (Montreux), 10,697, Aarau, 10,606, Bellinzona, 10,170

Religion

There is complete and absolute liberty of conscience and of creed. No one is bound to pay taxes specially appropriated to defraying the expenses of a creed to which he does not belong. No bishoprics can be created on Swiss territory without the approbation of the Confederation. The order of Jesuits and its affiliated societies cannot be received in any part of Switzerland, all functions clerical and scholastic are forbidden to its members, and the interdiction can be extended to any other religious orders whose action is dangerous to the State, or interferes with the peace of different creeds. The foundation of new convents or religious orders is forbidden.

According to the census of December 1, 1920, the number of Protestants amounted to 2,218,589 (57 per cent of the population), of Roman Catholics to 1,586,826 (41 per cent), and of Jews to 20,955 (2 per cent). Protestants are in a majority in twelve of the cantons, and Catholics in ten. Of the more populous cantons, Zurich, Bern, Vaud, Neuchâtel, and Basel (town and land) are mainly Protestant, while Luzern, Fribourg, Ticino, Valais and the Forest Cantons are mainly Catholic. The Roman Catholic priests are much more numerous than the Protestant clergy, the former comprising more than 6,000 regular and secular priests. They are under five bishops, viz., of Basel and Lugano (resident at Solothurn), Chur, St. Gallen, Lausanne and Geneva (resident at Freiburg), and Sitten (Sion), all of them immediately subject to the Holy See. The government of the Protestant Church, Calvinistic in doctrine and Presbyterian in form, is under the supervision of the magistrates of the various cantons, to whom is also entrusted, in the Protestant districts, the superintendence of public instruction.

Instruction

In the educational administration of Switzerland there is no centralization. Before the year 1848 most of the cantons had organised a system of primary schools, and since that year elementary education has steadily advanced. In 1874 it was made obligatory (the school age varying in the different cantons), and placed under the civil authority. In some cantons the cost falls almost entirely on the communes, in others it is divided between the canton and communes. In all the cantons primary instruction is free. In the north eastern cantons, where the inhabitants are mostly Protestant, the proportion of the school attending children to the whole population is as one to five, while in the half Protestant and half Roman Catholic cantons it is as one to seven, and in the entirely Roman Catholic cantons as one to nine. The compulsory law has hitherto not always been enforced in the Roman Catholic cantons, but is rigidly carried out in those where the Protestants form the majority of inhabitants. In every district there are primary schools, and secondary schools for youths.

of from twelve to fifteen. Of the contingent for military service in 1912 0.6 per thousand could not read.

The following are the statistics of the various classes of educational institutions for 1918 — Kindergarten, 302, 4,229 primary schools with 13,371 teachers (8,008 men and 5,363 women), and 555,353 pupils (277,741 boys and 277,612 girls), the 527 secondary schools had 24,999 boys and 24,429 girls with 1,625 men and 252 women teachers, 128 middle schools had 19,792 boys and 6,816 girls with 1,476 men and 232 women teachers. There are also commercial schools, technical schools, schools for the instruction of girls in domestic economy and other subjects, agricultural schools, schools for horticulture, for viticulture, for arboriculture and for dairy management. There are also institutions for the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the feeble minded. In the 28 reformatories of Switzerland in 1917 there were 1,664 children under instruction. In 1920 the State spent on primary education 2,357,529 francs.

There are seven universities in Switzerland. These universities are organised on the model of those of Germany governed by a rector and a senate, and divided into four 'faculties' of theology, jurisprudence, philosophy, and medicine. There is a Polytechnic School, maintained by the Federal Government, at Zurich, with a teaching staff of 281 and 2,267 matriculated students, in 1920. The academy of Neuchâtel was transformed into a university in May, 1909, but without the faculty of medicine. The following table shows the year of foundation of each university, the number of teaching staff and of matriculated students in the various branches of study in each of the seven universities in the winter of 1919-20 —

	Theology	Law	Medicine	Philosophy and Science	Total	Teaching Staff 1918

These numbers are exclusive of 'hearsers,' but inclusive of 897 women students.

In 1911 there were 5,798 libraries with 9,385,000 volumes.

Justice and Crime

The 'Bundes Gericht,' or Federal Tribunal, which sits at Lausanne, consists of 24 members, with 9 supplementary judges, appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and are eligible for re-election, the President and Vice-President, as such, for two years and cannot be re-elected. The President has a salary of 22,000 francs a year, and the other members 20,000 francs. The Tribunal has three sections, to each of which is assigned the trial of suits in accordance with regulations framed by the Tribunal itself. It has original and final jurisdiction in suits between the Confederation and cantons, between cantons and cantons, between the Confederation or cantons and corporations or individuals, the value in dispute being not less than 3,000 francs, between parties who refer their case to it, the value in dispute being at least 3,000 francs, and also in such suits as the constitution or legislation of cantons places within its authority. There are also many classes of railway suits which it is called on to decide. It is a Court of Appeal against decisions of other Federal authorities, and of cantonal authorities applying Federal laws. The Tribunal also tries persons accused of treason or other offences against the Confederation. For this purpose it is divided into four chambers: the Chamber of Accusation, the Criminal Chamber (Cour d'Assises), the Federal Penal Court, and the Court of Cassation. The jurors who serve in the Assize Courts are elected by the people, and are paid ten francs a day when serving.

Each canton has its own judicial system for ordinary civil and criminal trials.

On December 31, 1919, the prison population (condemned) of Switzerland consisted of 3,187, of whom 400 were women.

Capital punishment exists in Appenzell-I Rh., Obwalden, Uri, Schwyz, Zug, St. Gallen, Luzern, Wallis, Schaffhausen, and Freiburg.

Social Insurance

The Swiss Federal Insurance Law (insurance against illness and accident), as passed by both Chambers on June 1, 1911, was accepted by the electors of the Republic with a small majority. The total number of votes cast was 523,731, of which 285,037 were for and 238,694 against the measure.

All Swiss citizens are entitled to insurance against illness, and foreigners also may be admitted to the benefits of the law. Compulsory insurance against illness does not exist as yet, but cantons and communities are entitled under the act to declare obligatory insurance for certain classes or, in general, to establish public benefit (sick fund) associations, and to make employers responsible for the payment of the premiums of their employees.

Insurance against accident is compulsory for all officials, employees, and workmen of all the factories, trades, &c., which are under the Federal liability law. Every person above the age of 14 can insure voluntarily at the Federal insurance administration (or at any insurance corporation). The Swiss Accident Insurance Institution commenced operations on April 1, 1916. In 1919 the societies insuring against illness had 721,452 members.

Finance.

The entire net proceeds of the Federal alcohol monopoly (301,380 in 1920) are divided among the cantons, and they have to expend one tenth of the amount received in combating alcoholism in its causes and effects. Of the proceeds of the tax for exemption from military service, levied through the cantons, one half goes to the Confederation and the other to the cantons.

The public debt of the Confederation (exclusive of the railway debt) amounted, on January 1, 1921, to 64,234,264*l*, mostly at 5 per cent. The floating debt (January 1, 1921) was 10,280,000*l*. The total debt was thus 74,514,264*l*. The value of the National Properties was 9,118,664*l*.

Defence

There are fortifications on the south frontier for the defence of the St Gothard pass, others have been constructed at St Maurice and Martigny in the Rhone Valley.

Switzerland depends for defence upon a national militia. Service in this force is compulsory and universal, with few exemptions except for physical disability. Those excused or rejected pay certain taxes in lieu. Liability extends from the 20th to the end of the 48th year. The first 12 years are spent in the first line, called the 'Auszug,' or 'Élite'; the next 8 in the Landwehr, and the remaining 8 in the Landsturm. For cavalry, however, service is 11 years in the Auszug, and 12 in the Landwehr. The Landsturm only includes men who have undergone some training. The unarmed Landsturm comprises all other males between 20 and 50 whose services can be made available for non-combatant duties of any description.

The initial training of the Swiss militia soldier is carried out in recruits' schools, and the periods are 65 days for infantry, engineers, and foot artillery, 75 days for field artillery, and 90 days for cavalry. The subsequent trainings, called 'repetition courses,' are 11 days annually but after going through seven courses (8 in the case of the cavalry) further attendance is excused for all under the rank of sergeant. The Landwehr men are only called out once for training, also for 11 days.

The country is divided into 6 divisional districts. The field army, formed of the Auszug, consists of 6 divisions and 4 cavalry brigades. A division consists of 3 brigades each of 2 regiments consisting of 2 or 3 battalions, 1 cyclist company, 1 machine gun detachment, 12 batteries of field artillery, 2 howitzer batteries, 2 squadrons of cavalry, and 1 battalion of sappers. A cavalry brigade consists of 2 regiments. A mountain brigade consists of 2 regiments of 3 battalions, 2 mountain batteries, and 1 company of sappers. Altogether there are 106 battalions, 72 field batteries, 12 howitzer batteries, 9 mountain batteries, and 8 cavalry regiments (each of 3 squadrons), besides 12 squadrons of divisional cavalry (guides). There is a staff organisation for three army corps. There are the usual departmental troops, pontoon and railway corps, telegraph troops, &c. The total number of combatants in the field army may be taken at 140,000.

There are also separate forces, mostly Landwehr, for manning the fortifications which close the St Gothard Pass and the Rhone Valley to a possible invader from the south. They amount to about 21,000 men. The Landwehr is organised in 56 battalions and 36 squadrons. Altogether Switzerland can mobilise nearly 200,000 men (combatants), irrespective of the organised Landsturm, who may amount to another 60,000.

The administration of the Swiss army is partly in the hands of the Cantonal authorities, who promote officers up to the rank of captain. But the Federal Government is concerned with all general questions, and makes all the higher appointments.

The Swiss infantry are armed with the Swiss repeating rifle. The field artillery is armed with a Q F shielded Krupp 7.5 cm calibre. The 'position' artillery has batteries of 8.4 and 12 cm guns. The Swiss Government inaugurated an aviation service in 1919, and for that year 72,140*l* was voted for that service. The corresponding sum voted for 1920 is 67,861*l*.

The military expenditure budgeted for in 1920 was 1,930,989*l*.

Production and Industry

The soil of the country is very equally divided among the population, it being estimated that there are nearly 300,000 peasant proprietors.

Of the total area 28.4 per cent is unproductive, of the productive area 35.8 per cent is under grass and meadows, 29 per cent under forest, 18.7 per cent under fruit, 16.4 per cent under crops and gardens. Wheat (130,233 acres, producing 105,900 tons in 1919), rye (54,513 acres, producing 41,500 tons in 1919), oats (57,014 acres, producing 42,000 tons in 1919), and potatoes (828,000 tons in 1919), are the chief crops, but the bulk of food crops consumed in the country is imported.

The chief agricultural industries are the manufacture of cheese and condensed milk. Wine is produced in five of the cantons, tobacco in three. On April 21, 1920 (last census), there were in Switzerland, 129,165 horses, 3,581 mules, 891 donkeys, 1,381,395 cattle, 729,249 cows, 237,849 sheep, 545,306 pigs, 333,278 goats.

The Swiss Confederation has the right of supervision over the police of the forests, and of framing regulations for their maintenance. The entire forest area of Switzerland is 3,290 square miles, or 2,105,214 acres in extent (comprising 91,587 acres of cantonal forest, 1,403,772 acres belonging to municipalities and other corporations, and 609,855 acres of private forests). The district over which the Federal supervision extends lies to the south and east of a tolerably straight line from the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva to the northern end of the Lake of Constance. It comprises about 1,119,270 acres, and the Federal forest laws apply to all cantonal, communal, and municipal forests within this area, those belonging to private persons being exempt, except when from their position they are necessary for protection against climatic influences. In 1876 it was enacted that this forest area should never be reduced, servitudes over it, such as rights of way, of gathering firewood, &c., should be bought up, public forests should be surveyed, and new wood planted where required, subventions for the purpose being sanctioned. In the year 1920, 16,466,785 trees (chiefly coniferous) were planted. The free forest districts comprise 1,477 square miles.

There were, in 1920, 208 establishments for pisciculture, which produced fry of various species to the number of 118,131,000 In 1918 there were 29,377 bee-keepers, possessing an aggregate of 205,934 bees

Switzerland though in the main an agricultural country, has a strong tendency to manufacturing industry There are 5 salt mining districts, that at Bex (Vaud) belongs to the Canton, but is worked by a private company, that at Schweizerhalle (Basel) is worked by the Glenck family, those at Rheinfelden, Ryburg, and Kaiseraugst (Aargau) are worked by a joint stock company, in virtue of a concession from the Canton The output of salt of all kinds in 1919 reached 591,558 quintals (800,953 in 1918) In 1919 there were 9,074 factories in Switzerland (9,317 in 1918) Watch and clock making is an important branch of manufacture, number of clocks exported in 1919, 17,751,900 The number of persons employed in factories (1918) was 381,170, the motive machinery had 515,859 horse power In 1918, 98 breweries produced 922,491 hectolitres (20,319,185 gallons) of beer

On January 1, 1914, there were 1,859 Swiss embroidery establishments operating 8,090 embroidery machines

In Switzerland, for the majority of imports, the values are fixed by a commission on Exports nominated by the Customs department Up to 1891 a single value was fixed for each class of goods, but the Commission now takes into account the difference of prices in different countries of origin For values of exports declarations are, in general, considered sufficient. Returns show the net weight, though the gross weight also is declared. It is sought to record as the country of origin the country of production, and as the country of destination that where the goods are to be consumed. When exact information is not available the most distant known points of transit are recorded. In accordance with this system, Swiss returns show, as far as can be ascertained, the trade between the Confederation and Great Britain, though, since direct commercial intercourse is impossible, the name of Switzerland does not occur in the trade returns of the United Kingdom. The treaty of 1855 provides for the most favoured nation treatment in respect of commerce, residence and other matters affecting Swiss and British interests.

The customs duties amounted in 1917 to 52,229,180 francs, in 1918, to 44,021,036 francs, in 1919, to 67,611,112 francs, in 1920, to 87,717,221 francs.

The following table, in thousands of francs, shows the distribution of the special trade of Switzerland (including bullion but not corn) among the principal countries. Much of the trade with the frontier countries is really of the nature of transit trade —

	Imports		Exports

Internal Communications

In 1920 the State railways of Switzerland had a length of 3,881 miles. There are also 34 miles of foreign railways within the Confederation. The cost of construction of the railways up to the end of 1918 was 2,476,247,157 francs. The receipts from traffic of all the Swiss railways amounted (1920) to 510,716,000 francs (20,428,610*l.*), of which 198,611,000 francs (7,944,440*l.*) was for passenger traffic. The state railways are gradually being electrified. The traffic on the Swiss waters in 1919 was carried on by 153 boats or barges belonging to 22 companies.

In 1920 there were in Switzerland 3,911 post offices. By the internal service there were forwarded 213,245,501 letters, 81,732,420 post cards, 71,532,946 packets of printed matter, 461,837 samples, 277,841,543 newspapers, and 8,520,185 registered parcels, &c. In the international service there were forwarded 27,689,530 letters, 12,594,999 post cards, 9,178,601 packets of printed matter, 1,501,450 samples, 1,836,253 newspapers, and 3,694,098 registered parcels, &c. Internal post-office orders were sent to the value of 2,068,760,029 francs (82,750,400*l.*). Receipts, 1920, 92,615,138 francs (3,704,605*l.*), expenditure, 120,891,921 francs (4,885,676*l.*)

Switzerland has a very complete system of telegraphs, consisting (1920) of 1,664 miles of line with 20,145 miles of wire. There were transmitted 2,525,617 inland telegrams, 4,608,190 international, and 844,020 in transit through Switzerland. Number of offices, 2,404. There were 941 telephone systems with 13,917 miles of line and 272,667 miles of wire, conversations, 122,856,732. The telegraph and telephone receipts in 1919 amounted to 49,335,070 francs (1,993,402*l.*), the expenditure to 46,532,450 francs (1,861,298*l.*)

Money and Credit

On December 31, 1920, the coin minted in Switzerland was as follows —10,880,000 gold coins of the nominal value of 202,600,000 francs, 69,376,000 silver coins of the nominal value of 67,900,000 francs, 165,700,000 nickel coins of the nominal value of 15,970,000 francs, and 113,000,000 copper coins of the nominal value of 1,490,000 francs, total (including other token coins), 373,956,000 coins of the nominal value of 299,790,000 francs.

There were in Switzerland in 1915, 1,047 savings banks of all kinds, with 2,025,491 depositors having to their credit 61,643,239*l.*, in 1917, the total was 82,248,000*l.*

The National Bank, with headquarters divided between Bern and Zurich, opened its doors on June 20, 1907. It has the exclusive right to issue bank notes in Switzerland. On April 15, 1921, the condition of the bank was as follows —

Assets	Francs	Liabilities	Francs
Bullion (gold and silver)	641,467,077	Other assets	29,645,024
Bills	423,415,997	Notes in circulation	961,441,545
Advances	33,298,365	Current and deposit accounts	118,606,510
Securities	5,832,814	Other securities	44,977,000

Money, Weights, and Measures

The international metric system is the sole legal standard of weights and measures in Switzerland. It was made compulsory in the country by the Federal law of July 3, 1875, and since January 1, 1887, no other units than the metric units have been legal. By the Federal law of June 24, 1909, the international electric units were also adopted. By that law, copies of the French standards, deposited at the International Office for Weights and Measures at Sèvres (France), were adopted as the legal standards for Switzerland.

The Franc of 10 Batzen, and 100 Rappen or Centimes, is the monetary unit. The average rate of exchange is 25.22½ francs = £1 sterling.

The 20 franc piece is 900 fine, the 5 franc silver piece is 900 fine, the silver 2-franc, franc, and half franc are 835 fine. Switzerland belongs to the Latin Monetary Union, but since Italy is exonerated from taking back its exported fractional coin in case of the dissolution of the Union, the importation into Switzerland of 2 franc, 1 franc, and ½ franc pieces is prohibited by decree of February 21, 1899, on pain of confiscation. By a Convention of November 15, 1902, with the other States within the Union, Switzerland may coin, exceptionally, 12,000,000 francs in fractional silver pieces, but the issues must be spread over at least 6 years.

Before the war 50 franc National Bank notes were the smallest paper currency, but in consequence of the war, notes of lesser denominations have been issued, viz., 20 franc notes (by law of July 30, 1914), 5-franc notes (August 3, 1914), and 25 franc notes (Sept. 9 1914).

The Centner, of 50 Kilogrammes and 100 Pfund = 110 lbs avoirdupois. The Quintal = 100 Kilogrammes = 220 lbs avoirdupois. The Arpent (Land) = 8 9ths of an acre.

The Pfund, or pound, chief unit of weight, is legally divided into decimal Grammes, but the people generally prefer the use of the old halves and quarters, named Halbpfund, and Viertelpfund.

TURKEY

(MEMALIK I OSMANIE—OTTOMAN EMPIRE)

Reigning Sultan

Mohammed VI, born January 27, 1861, son of Sultan Abdul Medjid, succeeded to the throne on the death of his elder brother, Sultan Mohammed V, July 3, 1918

Children of the Sultan

I Princess Ulvia Sultana, born September 12, 1892, married August 10, 1916, to Ismail Hakkı Bey II Princess Rukia Sabiha Sultana, born April 1, 1894 III Prince Ertogrul Effendi, born October 5, 1912

The Heir Apparent is Abdul Medjid Effendi, cousin of the Sultan, born May 25, 1868 Offspring (1) Prince Omer Faruk Effendi, born February 28, 1898, (2) Princess Durri Chehvar, born January 28, 1914

Sisters of the Sultan

I Senche Sultana, born November 16, 1852 married the late Mahmud Pasha, son of Halil Pasha in 1877, widow 1903

II Medthe Sultana, born July 26, 1856, married (1) 1879, to Nedjib Pasha, widow, 1885, (2) April 30 1886 to Ferid Pasha

The present sovereign of Turkey is the thirty seventh, in male descent, of the house of Othman, the founder of the Empire, and the thirtieth Sultan since the conquest of Constantinople By the law of succession obeyed in the reigning family, the crown is inherited according to seniority by the male descendants of Othman, sprung from the Imperial Harem All children born in the Harem, whether offspring of free women or of slaves, are legitimate and of equal lineage A Council presided over by the heir apparent and comprising several State dignitaries, the Grand Vizier, the Shcykh ul Islam, and others, was instituted in January, 1914, to regulate all matters relating to the Imperial family, including the Damads or persons married to Imperial princesses, under the theoretical supervision of the Sultan

It has not been the custom of the Sultans of Turkey for some centuries to contract regular marriages The inmates of the Harem come, by purchase or free will, mostly from districts beyond the limits of the empire, the majority from Circassia From among these inmates the Sultan designates a certain number, nowadays very limited, to be called Kadin, or full wives The title is only given after a child has been born to the Sultan Ladies of inferior standing on whom the Sultan has looked with favour are called Ikbal, and girls in course of training in the Harem are called Odalik The superintendent of the Harem, always an aged Lady of the Palace, and bearing the title of 'Haznadar-Kadin,' has to keep up intercourse with the outer world through the Guard of Eunuchs

The following is a list of the names, with date of accession, of the thirty four sovereigns who have ruled Turkey since the foundation of the empire and of the reigning house —

House of Othman

Othman	1299	Murad IV, 'The Intrepid	1623
Orkhan	1326	Ibrahim	1640
Murad I	1359	Mohammed IV	1648
Bayezid I, 'The Thunder bolt'	1389	Suleiman II	1687
Interregnum	1402	Ahmed II	1691
Mohammed I	1413	Mustafa II	1695
Murad II	1421	Ahmed III	1703
Mohammed II, Conqueror of Constantinople	1451	Mahmud I	1730
Bayezid II	1481	Othman III	1754
Selim I	1512	Mustafa III	1757
Suleiman I, 'The Magnificent'	1520	Abdul Hamid I	1773
Selim II	1566	Selim III	1789
Murad III	1574	Mustafa IV	1807
Mohammed III	1595	Mahmud II	1808
Ahmed I	1603	Abdul Medjid	1839
Mustafa I	1617	Abdul Aziz	1861
Othman II	1618	Murad V (May 30)	1876
		Abdul Hamid II (Aug 31)	1876
		Mohammed V (April 27)	1909
		Mohammed VI (July 3)	1918

The civil list of the Sultan is variously reported at from one to two millions sterling. To the Imperial family belong a great number of crown domains, the income from which contributes to the revenue.

Constitution and Government

Forms of constitution, after the model of the West European States, were drawn up at various periods by successive Ottoman Governments, the first of them embodied in the 'Hatti Humayoun' of Sultan Abdul Medjid, proclaimed November 3, 1839, and the most recent in a decree of Sultan Abdul Hamid II, of November 1876. The latter provided for the security of personal liberty and property, for the administration of justice by irremovable judges, the abolition of torture, the freedom of the Press, and the equality of all Ottoman subjects. Islam was declared to be the religion of the State, but freedom of worship was secured to all creeds, and all persons, irrespective of religion, were declared eligible to public office. Parliament should consist of two Houses, a Chamber of Deputies and a Senate. Senators should be at least 40 years of age, and would be appointed by the Sultan from among those who have rendered distinguished service to the State. Deputies must be at least 30 years of age, and are elected in the proportion of one for every 50,000 male inhabitants. The mode of election is not laid down in the Constitution, but is the subject of a separate law under which the deputies are chosen by colleges of secondary electors for each Sanjak. Secondary electors must be at least 25 years of age. They are elected from communes and urban wards in the proportion of one for every 500 primary electors. Subject to certain minor disqualifications, all male Ottoman subjects of not less than 25 years of age are primary electors, provided they pay direct taxes to the State. Civil or military officials may offer themselves for election, but must immediately resign their posts on being returned.

This constitution became for all practical purposes a dead letter in 1878, and Abdul Hamid II proceeded to build up an autocracy more complete than that of his predecessors, but in 1908 the prevailing discontent, especially in the army, caused by corruption and misgovernment compelled him to issue an Imperial decree for the convocation of a new Parliament, and constitutional government was restored July 23, 1908. The Constitution now theoretically in force is that of 1876, somewhat modified in its details by legislation subsequent to 1908.

The Senate is a permanent body, but can only sit conveniently with the Chamber of Deputies. The Chamber in existence at the time of the Armistice with Turkey was dissolved on December 21, 1918. A new Chamber, which assembled on January 12, 1920, was dissolved on April 11, 1920, by a decree which ordained that new elections should be held within 4 months, as laid down in the Constitution. The abnormal situation has rendered this impossible. The Constantinople Government has governed without a Parliament since April 1920 but the 'Great National Assembly' sitting at Angora exercises the functions of a Parliament, besides those of supreme executive authority, in the de facto Government set up by Mustafa Kemal Pasha at that place.

The present Cabinet (April, 1921) took office on October 21, 1920, and, taking into account minor changes since that date, is at present constituted as follows:—

Grand Vizier — Tawfik Pasha

Sheikh ul Islam — Nouri Flenchi

Minister of Foreign Affairs — Sefa Bey

Minister of Justice — Arif Hikmet Pasha

Minister of War — General Zia Pasha

Minister of Finance — Abdullah Bey (Acting)

Minister of Public Instruction — Rishad Bey

Minister of Public Works — Abdullah Bey

Minister of Commerce and Agriculture — Hussem Kizim Bey

Minister of Pious Foundations — Left Vacant with Sheikh ul Islam in charge

Subjects of Western Powers resident in Turkey enjoyed extraterritorial privileges from time immemorial under treaties called Capitulations. The greatest single change introduced in 1914 was the abolition by a decree of the Sultan of these Capitulations (September 9, 1914). It had long been felt that these privileges needed revision, especially insofar as they exempted foreigners from the fiscal burdens of Ottoman subjects, but their abolition by an unilateral act gave rise to an unanimous protest of the Powers, and no Power had at any rate publicly assented to it up to November, 1914. This step, which included the suppression of foreign Post Offices and that of the International Board of Health, was taken in September after the outbreak of the European War and the condition of Europe made the protest of the Powers academic rather than effective for the time being. During the war the Central Powers recognised the fait accompli and entered into new Treaty arrangements with the Porte. The other Powers have, however, maintained their attitude. The Treaty of Sevres makes express provision for the revival of the capitulations in favour of all Allied Powers, but aims at the eventual establishment of a judicial and fiscal system under which the capitulations will disappear.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The whole of the empire is divided into Vilayets, or governments, these subdivided into Sanjaks, or minor provinces, these into kazas, or districts, with occasional subdivision into Nahies, or sub districts. A Vali, or governor general, representing the Sultan, and assisted by a provincial council, is placed at the head of each Vilayet. The minor provinces, districts, &c., are subjected to interior authorities (Mutesarrifs, Kaimmakams and Mudirs) under the superintendence of the Vali. The division of the country into Vilayets has been frequently modified of late for political reasons. For similar reasons several of the Sanjaks of the empire are governed by Mutesarrifs reporting direct to the Ministry of the Interior. The tendency has been to increase the number of these so called 'independent' Sanjaks by detaching ordinary Sanjaks from the Vilayets to which they have heretofore belonged. All subjects, however humble their origin, are eligible to, and may fill, the highest offices in the State.

An entirely abnormal situation has come into existence as a result of the growth of the 'National Movement' in the interior, which culminated in the convocation of a Grand National Assembly at Angora in April, 1920, under the auspices of Mustafa Kemal Pasha and those associated with him in the movement. Immediately after coming into existence, this Assembly declared itself invested with all power, both legislative and executive, without, however, throwing off its allegiance to the Sultan. It deputed its executive power to a body of Commissioners, forming what is practically a Cabinet. The Angora Government claims to be the sole lawful Government of Turkey, and it exercises de facto all the functions of government in the whole of Asia Minor not in foreign occupation. It refuses to recognise in any way the Treaty of Sevres. It has broken off all normal relations with Constantinople. The policy of the present Central Government is to bring this dualism to an end by peaceful means, but no definite progress has been made in this direction up to the present (April, 1921).

Area and Population

The Ottoman Empire before the war was made up of (1) Turkey in Europe, (2) Turkey in Asia (Anatolia, Arabia, Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and Kurdistan), and (3) certain islands in the Mediterranean. After the conclusion of the 1st Balkan war (November, 1913), which commenced in October, 1912, the Turkish possessions in Europe were considerably lessened, Turkey in Europe being in part divided among the Allied States (Bulgaria, Serbia, Montenegro, and Greece), and in part created into an independent state of Albania. Cyprus and Egypt, which were formerly under the suzerainty of the Sultan, were, the one, annexed to the British Empire and the other declared a British Protectorate in November, 1914, and January, 1915, respectively.

According to the Treaty of Peace with Turkey (signed at Sevres on August 10, 1920, but not yet ratified by any of the parties), the Empire is reduced still further. Turkey cedes (1) Thrace, west of the Chatalji line, and excepting only the Derkos water supply area, to Greece, as well as Tenedos and Imbros, and the Islands in the ~~Aegean~~ Aegean occupied by Greece, (2) Smyrna with the surrounding strip, comprising Tireh, Odemish, Miggins, Akhissar, Bigirma and Aivali, is to be administered by Greece, under Turkish sovereignty, for 5 years, after which the territory may annex itself to Greece by plebiscite, (3) Mesopotamia, Palestine, Syria, Armenia and the Hejaz become independent, the first three under mandates, (4) Kurdistan has autonomy conferred upon it, (5) Castellorizo and the Dodecanese are ceded to Italy. Turkey retains Constantinople, but the coastal area of the Dardanelles, the Marmora and the Bosphorus are placed under the control of a 'Commission of the Straits' appointed from the League of Nations. In the revised form of the Treaty (March, 1921), Turkey was granted certain concessions, as, for example, a considerable reduction of the demilitarised zone in the Straits, compromise on the question of Smyrna, and a substantial rearrangement of the financial clauses of the Treaty. But as, since the concessions were suggested, hostilities have broken out between Greece and Turkey (still continuing May, 1921), it is doubtful whether the new proposals of March, 1921, will stand.

Turkey will be deprived of a probable area of 438,750 square miles, and of a population of about 12,000,000. The area of New Turkey will thus be 174,900 square miles, and the population about 8,000,000.

<sup>1</sup> This table does not take account of the most recent administrative changes, by which several Sanjaks have been detached from the Vilayets named in it and made "Independent" not of the erection in 1914 of the Nijdi, including the coast district of El-Hassa into a so-called Vilayet as the result of a political arrangement with the real ruler Abdul Aziz Bin Saud, who was formally appointed Wali.

In the small European territory now remaining under Turkish rule Moslems preponderate. Other races represented are Greeks, Bulgarians, Armenians, Gipsies, Jews. In Asiatic Turkey there is a large Turkish element, with some four million Arabs, besides Greeks, Syrians, Kurds, Circassians, Armenians, Jews, and numerous other races.

The population of the chief towns still remaining under Turkey is approximately as follows —

Constantinople	1,000,000	Sivâs (Sebasteia)	65,000
Brûssa	110,000	Bitlis	40,000
Kaisariëh	54,000	Trebizond	55,000
Konia	45,000	Diarbekr	38,000

Religion

Mahommedanism is the established State religion. The Sultan as Caliph is Supreme Head. The chief ecclesiastical dignitary is the Sheikh ul Islam, but his functions are judicial and legal rather than spiritual. He is a member of the Cabinet.

Mahommedans form the vast majority of the population in Asiatic Turkey, but only one half of the population in the provinces which constituted European Turkey before the Balkan War of 1912-13. Recognised by the Turkish Government are a number of non Mahommedan native communities or 'millets,' namely 1. Latins or Catholics, who use the Roman Liturgy, consisting of the descendants of the Genoese and Venetian settlers in the Empire, and other native Catholics of the Latin rite, 2. Orthodox Greeks under various separately recognised Patriarchs, of whom the principal is the Œcumenical Patriarch at Constantinople, 3. Armenians, under their Patriarch at Constantinople, but under the supreme spiritual control of a Catholicos at Echmiadzin, in the Russian Caucasus. In 1903, the old dignity of Catholicos of Sis, in Cilicia, was restored and a new appointment made. There still remains in abeyance the seat of the Catholicos of Akhtamar (Van), an ancient dignity, 4. Armenian Catholics, under a Patriarch at Constantinople, 5. Chaldean Catholics, under a Patriarch at Mosul, 6. Protestants, consisting of converts chiefly among the Armenians, 7. Syrian Catholics, under a Patriarch at Mardin, 8. Syrian Jacobites, under a Patriarch at Mardin, 9. Melchites, under a Patriarch at Damascus, 10. Jews of two rites, now separately recognised, 11. Bulgarian Catholics, 12. Maronites, chiefly in the Lebanon and 13. Nestorians, or Assyrian Christians, under the Patriarch Mar Shimun of Kachannas. The last two are, however, only semi-officially recognised as independent communities. These religious denominations are invested with the privilege of possessing their own ecclesiastical rule. The spiritual heads of the recognised communities possess in varying degrees civil functions, which in some cases, and more especially in that of the Greek Patriarch, are of considerable importance.

In Constantinople about half the settled inhabitants are Mussulman, the other half being made up mostly of Orthodox Greeks, Armenians, Roman Catholics, Armenian and other Uniates, and Jews. There is, besides, a very large foreign population of various professions. In the Islands of the Ægean Sea the population is mostly Christian.

A priesthood in the strict sense of the term cannot be said to exist in Mahommedan Turkey. The Ulema, however, or persons connected in one way or another with the official ministrations of Islam, form a separate class. The principal charges in connection with mosques, theological schools, &c., are to a large extent hereditary.

The number of mosques in the Turkish Empire is 2,120, of which 379 are in Constantinople. The number of the clergy is 11,600. Connected with the mosques are 1,780 elementary schools, where education is supplied gratis. The temporalities of the Church are controlled by the Ministry of Pious Foundations or Evkaf which has a separate Budget of its own. The department of the Sheikh ul Islam, however, and the whole semi religious semi legal organisation subordinate to him are not provided for in this Budget, but in that of the State. The revenue of the Evkaf is principally derived from charges on and reversionary interests in real property which has at one time or another been made the subject of consecration to religious or benevolent purposes, and which is known as Vakuf. A very large proportion of the urban property of the Empire is of this description, and though it can be for practical purposes owned, alienated, and within certain limits transmitted by inheritance as if it were the property of the holder, the ultimate ownership theoretically resides in God, and the pious foundation, to the use of which it was consecrated, retains in it a perpetual interest, represented by annual rents and rights of reversion in certain cases.

Instruction

In Turkey, elementary education is nominally obligatory for all children of both sexes. According to the Provisional Law of October 6, 1913, all children from 7 to 16 are to receive primary instruction, which may, however, be given in State schools, schools maintained by communities, or private schools, or, subject to certain tests, at home. The State schools are under the direct control of the Ministry of Public Instruction, which also provides for the inspection of schools maintained by the non Moslem communities, &c. Besides these there survive a large number of Medresés or theological seminaries, connected with religious foundations. There are middle class schools for boys from 11 to 16 years of age, and according to the Bill introduced in January, 1918, similar institutions for girls (Unas Sultanijessi) are to be introduced. Already the five in Constantinople have 2,000 pupils. In Aleppo there are 7 Moslem, 250 Christian, and 30 Jewish schools, with respectively 19,000, 8,000, and 2,000 pupils. The schools of various descriptions within the empire number about 36,230, and contain about 1,331,200 pupils, or one to twenty-four of population. Training schools for teachers also exist, but the general level of efficiency of the State schools is low. There are a large number of foreign schools, mostly conducted by French, English and American missionaries.

The university, which was nominally founded at Constantinople in 1900, is being reorganised by a Bill introduced in the Chamber in January, 1918. It now comprises 5 Faculties viz., Arts, Theology, Law, Medicine, and Science. The Faculty of Medicine is installed, together with the Military Medical School, in a modern building which occupies an imposing site on the Scutari shore of the Bosphorus. There are numerous special schools belonging to the State or to the recognized communities, e.g., an Imperial art school, a Great National School (Greek) of old foundation with 400 students, and a Greek theological seminary with 80 students.

Justice

Turkey being essentially a Moslem State the laws of the Empire rest in principle on the basis of all Sunni Moslem law, i.e., the Korân, the Hadith or traditions of Muhammad, and the reported sayings and actions of his immediate successors, all of which are considered binding upon the sovereign as upon all Moslems. This religious law, called as a whole the Sheri law, has to some extent been codified, as in the Mejelle or Civil Code which was drawn up in 1869—1876, and embodies the prescriptions of the religious law in regard to certain specified matters, like sale, &c. The bulk of modern legislation, however, has no such connection with the Sheri law, but consists of statutes enacted by successive Sultans in virtue of their absolute authority, measures adopted by Parliament, and 'provisional laws, made under an Article of the Constitution, which empowers the executive, when Parliament is not sitting, to enact laws of a pressing nature subject to subsequent ratification, and on which the widest possible construction has been put. Much of this statute law, including the great Codes of Criminal and Commercial Law and the Codes of Procedure, dates from the 30 or 40 years following the Hatt-ı Sherif of 1839. The Codes just mentioned were based almost entirely on French models, and, though not a little modified by subsequent measures, they still remain in force in all their main lines. The enactment of laws and regulations on European models has continued since the middle of the nineteenth century, and received an enormous impetus with the renewal of the Constitution in 1908, since which date a very great number of new laws and regulations of every kind have been enacted. Corresponding (though only roughly, because the Mejelle, for instance is applied by the lay courts also) to the double variety of law there is a double system of law courts. The lay courts, called in Turkish Nizamiye, date like the Codes from the middle period of the nineteenth century and are modelled closely on the French system. Dealing as they do with all criminal, commercial, and ordinary civil business they are now of preponderating importance, but side by side with them there continue to exist the religious or Sheri Courts which take cognisance of certain specified matters, notably those relating to the title to certain categories of real property, and all matters relating to the personal status of Moslems.

Experiments have been made in connection with the judicial system of the Empire. The most notable of these has been the institution of juges de paix by a law promulgated in April, 1913, and that of 'Single judge' Courts of first instance to replace the ordinary Courts on the French model in the Vilayet of Adrianople October 1913. But the system of juges de paix has had only a very limited application outside Constantinople.

In February, 1917, a law was enacted placing all the courts, civil and religious, under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Justice, but the religious courts were in 1920 replaced under the control of the Sheikh ul Islam.

Finance.

In the Treaty of Peace with Turkey (Treaty of Sèvres, August 10, 1920), it is provided that the Turkish Finances, from the imposition and collection of taxes to the Budget, and the expenditure of Government moneys, shall be controlled by a Finance Commission composed of representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy.

The revenue is derived from tithes, land and property taxes, Customs, sheep and cattle tax, monopolies, and other sources: the largest portions of the expenditure are for military purposes and for debt charges.

No regular Budget existed before the restoration of the Constitution in 1908. Since that year a Budget and a Finance Law have been voted, or enacted by the executive in the absence of Parliament, each year.

The ordinary Estimates for 5 years ending March 31 are shown as follows —

	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19
	£T	£T	£T	£T	£T
Revenue	31,921,163	26,836,488	25,612,572	23,584,165	34,016,698
Expenditure	34,007,619	35,657,545	39,724,720	53,304,511	51,969,711

The main items of expenditure in the budget for 1918-'9 were — Public Debt, £T17,427,425, Ministry of Finance, £T10,755,219, Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones, £T1,218,981, Ministry of Interior, £T1,279,353, Tribes, and Refugee Department, £T2,057,004, Gendarmery, £T2,564,757, Justice, £T1,073,031, Public Instruction, £T1,051,287, Ministry of Commerce and Agriculture, £T1,582,839, Ministry of War, £T6,044,107, and Ministry of Marine, £T1,704,057.

The Public Debt Administration functions independently of the Ministry of Finance, though the Turkish Government has made it a practice to include the Debt figures in the State Budget. No regular budget has been voted since that for 1918-19. The budget for that financial year has been adapted to current requirements. Since the Armistice the whole financial system of the Central Government has fallen into the utmost disorder, and on October 1, 1920, the Allied Powers entitled to representation on the future financial Commission instituted a provisional system of control which is exercised by their Delegates on the Public Debt Administration. The budget for 1921 of the de facto Government of Angora estimates revenue at £T79,333,440 and expenditure at £T86,519,650.

The Ottoman Government, when unable to meet its liabilities, made an arrangement with its creditors, confirmed by the Irade of December 8/20, 1881, supplemented and modified by that of September 1, 1903. A Council of Administration at Constantinople was appointed, and to it were handed over for distribution among the bondholders the funds derived from the excise duties, and certain other funds. Of the total foreign debt, 60 per cent is due to France, 14 per cent to England and 21 per cent to Germany.

The total debt of Turkey on August 31, 1919, was placed at £T465,673,338, of which £T155,713,029 is external debt and £T234,155,138 war issues.

Defence.

According to the records of the Ministry of War at Constantinople, the Turkish army in August, 1914, consisted of 39 divisions. Few of these divisions were up to strength, and the total combatant strength of the Turkish army did not exceed 150,000 men. During the war the army was expanded to a maximum strength of 70 divisions, and up to the time of the armistice nearly 2,700,000 men had been recruited for military service. The maximum combatant strength of the army during the war was approximately 500,000, and this figure was reached in the middle of 1916. Throughout the war desertion was rife and the army rarely approached its full strength. It is estimated by the Turkish authorities that their casualties from all causes, including sickness and desertion, amounted to more than two millions.

After the collapse of the Turkish army in consequence of its defeats in Palestine and Mesopotamia, no systematic reorganisation was attempted until the rise of the National Movement in the interior. At the present time (April, 1921), the position is that the armed forces of the Central Government are negligible, but the de facto Government at Angora possesses an efficient though widely distributed army, the numbers of which are variously estimated. Every effort has been made to organise this army on a proper military footing, under officers of the old Turkish army, and to substitute regular formations for irregulars. The total present strength may be estimated at upwards of 100,000 men. Constantinople is occupied by Allied troops, mainly British and French, the Island area by Greek troops under the British high command, the Dardanelles by British troops at Chanak, and French troops at Gallipoli, the Smyrna and Broussa areas, and the whole of Thrace up to the Chataldia lines by Greek troops, Syria and part of Cilicia by French troops, and Palestine and Mesopotamia by British troops.

By the Treaty of Peace, which was signed at Sévres on August 10, 1920, Turkey agreed to the dismantlement of all fortresses, including the defences of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, and to the reduction of her armed forces to an Imperial bodyguard of 700 men, a gendarmery of 35,000 men and 'special elements' of 15,000 men. Compulsory service is abolished, Turkish soldiers have to serve for a period of 12 years, the number of officers is limited to 2,500 and they must serve for 25 years. All measures of mobilisation are prohibited and no reserve forces are permitted. The Turkish air force is also abolished. The execution of the military clauses of the treaty is placed under the control of Allied Commissions, one of which is to include in its task the organisation of the future armed forces, including the gendarmery. The gendarmery is to be partly staffed with officers supplied by the various Allied or Neutral Powers. The police, which is to be independent of the armed forces contemplated in the Treaty, and is to form part of the civil administration, is also to include Allied or neutral officers.

III. NAVY

By the terms of the Treaty of Sévres the Ottoman navy is abolished. A few gunboats and torpedo boats are permitted to be retained for fishery and police duties.

Production and Industry

Agriculture—Land in Turkey is held under 3 different forms of tenure—namely, 1st, as 'Miri,' or Crown lands, 2nd, as 'Vakuf,' or pious foundations, and 3rd, as 'Mulk,' or freehold property. The first description, the 'miri,' or Crown lands, which form the largest portion of the territory of the Sultan, are held direct from the Crown. The Government grants the right to cultivate an unoccupied tract on the payment of certain fees, but continues to enjoy rights of seigniorial over the land in question. The second form of tenure, the 'Vakuf,' comprises property dedicated for religious or charitable purposes (see under Religion and Education), and is the subject of a complicated and difficult system of law. The third form of tenure, the 'mulk,' or freehold property, does not exist to a great extent. Some house property in the towns and of the land in the neighbourhood of villages is 'mulk.' The law also recognises two other categories of land—i.e., land set aside for the general use of the whole community or section of it (metrukâ) and 'dead' or unutilised land (mevat). The whole law of Real Property is in urgent need of reform and modernisation. A commencement in this direction was made by a series of Provisional Laws promulgated in 1913 and continued by legislative measures in 1918. This new landed property code provides for a general survey and revaluation of all landed property in the Empire, together with a readjustment of taxes, for corporations to hold real estate in the name of the corporation, for the mortgaging of property as security for debts, for the suppression of guedik (guild) property, and for the extension of the right of inheritance.

A large portion of the State revenue is derived from tithes on agricultural produce. The system of levying this is burdensome and oppressive, the general practice being to farm it out to contractors. Experiments have been made in the direction of commutating the tithe to a fixed money payment.

Agriculture is most primitive. The soil for the most part is very fertile, the principal products are tobacco, cereals of all kinds, cotton, figs, nuts, almonds, grapes, olives, all varieties of fruits. Coffee, madder, opium, gums are largely exported. In 1919 Turkey produced 2,453,680,000 kilos of wheat and 1,669,820,000 kilos of barley. Flour milling in Smyrna is being improved and extended. Coffee is grown in the Hodeida region, opium is an important crop in Konia. Tobacco is grown both in European and Asiatic Turkey. The principal tobacco districts are Samsun, Bafra and Charchambe, in 1918 the total tobacco crop amounted to 17,780,882 kilos grown on 55,103 acres. The area in 1919 was 59,943 acres. The principal centres for silk production are Brusa and Constantinople. In 1919 the production of cocoons was estimated at 3,000,000 kilos. The production of olive oil, mainly confined to the Vilayet of Arden, is very important.

The forest laws of the empire are modelled on those of France, but restrictive regulations are not enforced, and the country is being rapidly deprived of its timber. About 21 million acres are under forest, of which 3½ million acres are in European Turkey. The most wooded Sayaks are those of Kastamouni (3,290,000 acres), Aidin (2,322,500 acres), Broussa (2,270,000 acres), Bolu (1,500,000 acres), and Trebizond (1,250,000 acres). The forests consist of pine, fir, larch, oak, cedar and other timber trees. Extensive mulberry plantations have been founded both in European and Asiatic Turkey, and about 250,000 plants are annually distributed to the peasants.

Turkey in 1919 had 4,118,000 horned cattle (6,531,927 in 1913), horses, 630,000 (1,050,580 in 1913), mules, 85,000 (144,600 in 1913), asses, 825,000 (1,373,700 in 1913), sheep, 11,200 (18,721,550 in 1913), goats, 2,065,000 (16,463,180 in 1913), camels, 95,000 (314,000 in 1913).

Mineral—The Turkish provinces, especially those in Asia, are rich in minerals, which are little worked. Chrome ore is worked in Smyrna, Brusa, Adana and Konia. The Government silver mines at Bulghar Maden, Konia, produce annually about 2,600 kilos of silver and 400 tons of silver-lead, zinc is found at Karasu on the Black Sea and in Aidin, manganese ore in Konia and Aidin, antimony ore, 308 tons, copper ore is found in the Armenian Taurus, at Terebohi, near Trebizond, at Arghana Maden, near Diarbekr, said to be one of the largest and most productive mines in the world, borax from 6,000 to 8,000 tons exported annually from the Marmora, meerschaum at Eskishehr, chrome at Mersina, emery at Smyrna, in Aidin, Konia, Adana, and the Archipelago, asphalt in Syria, and on the Euphrates, coal and lignite (400,000 tons annually) at Heraclea on the Black Sea and in the Smyrna district, petroleum in the Middle Tigris valley and various isolated places in Asia Minor, also on the north coast of the Sea of Marmora. The salt mines at Salih in the Yemen yield a large output. There are salt works also at Aleppo, Erzeroum, Samos, and other places. Both gold and silver are found in the Smyrna sanjak, gold and silver and argentiferous lead at Bulghar Maden (Konias), mercury near Smyrna and at Sisma near Konia, kaolin in the island of Rhodes, arsenic in Aidin, iron in Aleppo and in Kossaro (not worked), in Adana (output 40,000 tons a year). Near Brussa quarries of lithographic stone are now extensively worked. There is a good deal of brass-turning and beating of copper into utensils for household purposes.

Fisheries—The fisheries of Turkey are important, the fisheries of the Bosphorus alone represent a value of upwards of 250,000*l*, though the fishery methods are antiquated. The coast of the Mediterranean produces excellent sponges, the Red Sea mother of pearl, and the Persian Gulf pearls.

Manufactures—Industries in Turkey are mostly quite primitive. There is a tendency to start factories on a small scale, but the supply of labour seems likely to prove a difficulty. At Panderma there is a woollen yarn spinning mill belonging to the Oriental Carpet Manufacturers' Company, which produces 2,750,000 lbs. annually, and employs 140 hands. Cotton spinning is carried on in the vilayets of Aidin and Adana, and in the capital. There are five main establishments, two in Constantinople, two in Smyrna, and one in Magnesia, and four factories of lesser importance in Adana. The latter have a total of 10,000 spindles: the former 40,800 spindles, making 50,800 spindles for the cotton manufacturing industry of the country.

Commerce

The total trade of Turkey in various years ending March 13 has been as follows (£T1 of 100 piastres = 18 shillings, or £T10 = 9*l*, or 10*l* = £T11) —

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£T	£T		£T	£T
1900-10	31,432,231	15,420,071	1912-13	49,551,093	23,921,326

Total of all countries	40,809,680	22,105,304	21,436,120	34,058,551

The principal imports from Asiatic Turkey into the United Kingdom and exports to Asiatic Turkey from the United Kingdom (according to Board of Trade Returns) in two years were —

Imports from Turkey	1918	1919	Exports to Turkey	1918	1919
	£	£		£	£
Salonica	3,300	111,940	Coal, coke	8,335	59,883
Lemons	—	2,152,056	Cotton yarn	4,220	467,404
Dried fruit	200,000	234,004	Cottons	1,114,763	6,817,602

Other	—	1,047,791	Machinery	3,045	73,235

The value of the commercial intercourse between the whole of the Turkish Empire in Europe and Asia and Great Britain during the last five years, according to the Board of Trade Returns, is shown in the following table —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into U.K. from Turkey	57,216	167,586	694,715	9,071,080	12,150,700
Exports of British produce to Turkey	426,567	921,093	1,811,754	22,100,713	31,311,578

Shipping and Navigation.

The mercantile navy of the Turkish Empire in 1911 consisted of 120 steamers of 66,578 tons, and 963 sailing vessels of 205,641 tons.

Internal Communications

The length of railway line in European and Asiatic Turkey on November 1, 1914 not including the most recently opened sections of the Bagdad Railway, was as follows —

	Miles open		Miles open
European—		Smyrna Aydın	320
Salonica Monastir <sup>1</sup>	136	Konin Eregli Persian Gulf <sup>1</sup>	135
Constantinople Salonica <sup>1</sup>	317	Mersina Adana	42
Oriental Railways	593	Beirut-Damascus Mzenib	153
Total European	1,046	Riyak Aleppo <sup>1</sup>	204
		Tripoli Homs	63
Asiatic—		Damascus Medina	812
Haidar Pasha Angora <sup>1</sup>	358	Jaffa Jerusalem	54
Eski Shehr Konia <sup>1</sup>	283	Haifa Deraa	105
Mudania Brussa	25	Total Asiatic	2,865
Smyrna-Cassaba <sup>1</sup>	165
Alashen Afion Karahissar	156

These railways have a kilometric guarantee. The guarantees paid by the Debt Council amounted to £1528,918 in 1911, £1420,141 in 1912, £1341,358 in 1913, £1288,042 in 1914.

The Bagdad Railway was intended to extend the Anatolian line from Konia to Adana, Mosul, Bagdad, and Basra with many branch lines. It has been constructed continuously as far as Kara Bunar in Cilicia. Further on the following sections have been completed: Dorak to Bagtché on the Adana side of the Taurus Mountains, Ridjun via Mushmîé to Jerablus on the Euphrates with branch from Mushmîé to Aleppo, Jerablus to El Abiad in the direction of Nisibin (the Euphrates being spanned by a wooden bridge), and Bagdad to Samara, a stretch of about 80 kilometres. A branch line has also been completed from Alexandretta to Toprak Kale on the Dorak Adana-Bagtché section. Of the distance from Konia to Bagdad, 1,509 miles, 1,117 miles (with gaps) are already working. In January, 1919, the British military authorities took over the administration of the Bagdad railway, while the French took charge of the Oriental railways of European Turkey. Total railway mileage in Turkey in 1916, 3,720 miles.

Electric trainways are working in Constantinople, Smyrna, Damascus, and Beyrouth.

There are 1,814 Turkish post offices in the Empire. In the year 1917-18 the inland service transmitted 20,377,837 letters and 4,685,049 post cards, and 21,997,149 samples and printed papers; the international service transmitted 1,853,961 letters and 767,744 post-cards, and 691,696 samples and printed papers. A parcel post system has been introduced into Turkey, and works fairly well. Foreign post offices have ceased to exist since Oct. 1, 1914.

The length of telegraph lines in Turkey is about 28,890 miles, and the length of wire about 49,200 miles; there are 1,017 telegraph offices, messages in the year 1914-15, 5,533,501.

Money, Weights, and Measures of Turkey

In January, 1917, the Turkish Government issued a Charter for a new National Bank, to be styled the Ottoman National Credit Bank (Osmanlı İtibar mülh Bancası). Its capital is 4 million Turkish pounds (3,600,000/). After the expiration of the privileges of the Imperial Ottoman Bank (1925) the new institute is to become the State Bank with the right to issue bank notes.

The Imperial Ottoman Bank, with a capital of £T10,000,000, had, on Nov. 30, 1910, a note circulation of £T941,250, and cash on hand amounting to £T3,586,834. The bank's note issue consisted up to 1914 of notes of £T5 and upwards, secured on a gold reserve of not less than one third of the value of the issue. Other important banks are the National Bank of Turkey, the Arch Levantine Banking Company, the Credit Lyonnais, Banco di Roma, and the Bank of Athens.

Up to December 31, 1919, the total amount of notes issued by the Government amounted to £T159,286,000.

On April 17, 1916, an order was issued reforming the currency. A gold standard, with the piastre as the unit, is henceforth to be general all over Turkey, and the piastre equals 40 para. The piastres, as well as the half piastre (20 para), quarter piastre (10 para) and eighth piastre (5 para) pieces are to be of nickel. Silver coins are 2, 5, 10, and 20 piastres, and gold coins 25, 50, 100, 250, and 500 piastres. Silver is legal tender up to 300 piastres, and nickel up to 50 piastres.

At present, however, (April, 1921) the only money in general circulation, with the exception of 20 para pieces, is paper issued during the war. This forced currency is very depreciated, the Turkish paper lina being worth about one sixth of the gold coin of the same denomination, and the exchange for sterling having recently (January, 1921) fallen from a rate fluctuating in the neighbourhood of P 400 to the £ sterling to a rate fluctuating in the neighbourhood of P 575 to the £ sterling.

The gold 100 piastre piece (which is equivalent to £T1) weighs 7 216 grammes, 916 fine, and thus contains 6 6147 grammes of fine gold. The silver 20-piastre piece weighs 24 055 grammes, 830 fine, and therefore contains 19 965 grammes of fine silver. £T11 equals £10 approximately (pre war)

Weights and measures are as follows —

The Oke , of 400 drams	= 2 8326 lbs avoirdupois
„ Kileh	= 0 9120 imperial bushel
44 Okes = 1 Cantar or Kintal	= 125 lbs avoirdupois
39 44 Okes	= 1 cwt
180 Okes = 1 Cheke	= 511 380 pounds
1 Kile = 20 Okes	= 0 36 imperial quarter
816 Kulchs	= 100 imperial quarters
The Endazé (cloth measure)	= 27 inches
„ Arshin (land measure)	= 30 inches
„ Iunam (land measure)	= 1,098 765 square yards

The kile is the chief measure for grain, the lower measures being definite weights rather than measures. 100 kiles are equal to 12 128 British imperial quarters, or 35 266 hectolitres.

In 1889 the metric system of weights was made obligatory for cereals, metric weights were decreed obligatory in January 1892, but the decree is not yet enforced. In 1915 the metric system was made the official standard of weights and measures.

On March 1, 1917, the Gregorian calendar was introduced into Turkey, to be used side by side with the Hegira calendar.

ARABIA<sup>1</sup>

Large areas in Arabia consist only of desert and steppe, occupied by Bedouin tribes, who are forced to adopt a nomadic existence and own illegals only to their tribal groups. Considerable portions of the Nefud, or Northern Sand belt, and the whole of the Ruba el Khali, or great Southern Desert of soft sand, are quite uninhabitable, although they supply good grazing at certain seasons. There are many tribal communities, settled, half settled, and nomadic, who give effective allegiance only to their own chiefs. They are to be found mainly in the Hinterland of Yemen, in the Asir Highlands, in the interior of Oman, and all round the northern fringe of the Nefud desert, which divides Arabia proper from the Syrian Desert or Hamad. But the oases of Central Arabia and the fertile coastal districts are occupied by settled communities, under eight independent systems of government The total area is approximately 1,000,000 square miles, with a population of between five and six millions

1 The Kingdom of Hejaz, which has attained its independence during the course of the war, has an estimated area of 100,000 square miles, and an estimated population of at least 750,000. But, at present, its frontiers are uncertain, especially that on the north. Should it be extended in the final settlement up to or near to Man, both its area and its population will be considerably larger. Hejaz is barren or semi-barren in its entire area. It may be regarded as the most important principality in Arabia in virtue of its possession of Mecca (80 000 inhabitants), and Medina (40,000 inhabitants), the Holy Places of Islam. Formerly included in the Turkish Vilayet of Hejaz, which extended from Akaba in the north to Asir in the south (but latterly, only from Medina Salih in the north), it was the chief centre of Ottoman influence in Arabia and by means of the Hejaz railway, with its terminus at Medina, the Turks were enabled to maintain garrisons in the ports and the chief towns of the interior. But the Sherif, or Emir of Mecca, as Hereditary Keeper of the Holy Places, wielded great influence throughout the Moslem world. Ottoman control was largely maintained in the past by the payment of an annual subsidy, but the presence of the Turks and their misadministration was always resented. Early in the war the British Government guaranteed the autonomy of the Hejaz, in the event of a successful revolt, and on June 5, 1916 HIS HIGHNESS ALI, the present Emir, proclaimed his independence. In November, 1916, the Emir Hussein issued a proclamation assuming the title King of Hejaz. The Treaty of Peace with Turkey recognises the Hejaz as a free and independent State. The capital is Mecca, and the chief port is Jidda, in the Red Sea, population about 30,000.

2 The Emirate of Nejd and Hasa, the more powerful of the two Central Arabian principalities, has its capital at Riyadh, whence the Saud dynasty exercises jurisdiction over the neighbouring groups of oases. It is the modern representative of the Wahabite Empire founded about 1745 by Mohammed Ibn Saud, Sheikh of Dairiyah. The present Emir of Riyadh, ABD EL AZIZ FAS SAUD, who maintains in intermittent conflict with the neighbouring Emirate of Jebel Shammar, expelled the Turks from Hasa in 1913, and has extended his influence to include Hofuf in the region of the Persian Gulf. Estimated population about 250,000. (South Nejd (south of Rigadh) has about 50,000 inhabitants, Central Nejd about 100,000, Kasim 50,000, and Sasa 50,000.)

3. The Emirate of Jebel Shammar, which lies to the north of Nejd, was formerly within its jurisdiction, but since the middle of last century it has maintained its independence under the Rashid dynasty. It has its capital at Hail, and is far more Bedouin in character than its southern rival. The present Emir of Hail is ABDULLAH IBN MITAH, born in 1907, who succeeded on the assassination of his father, IBN RASHID, in May, 1920. Estimated population, including the Shammar, 200,000.

4 The Principate of Asir, on the west coast of Arabia, between Hejaz and Yemen, has its capital at Sabiyah in Southern Asir. The principate is in the hands of the Idrisi family, the present ruler being MOHAMMED IBN ALI EL IDRISI. This principate, however, has no effective jurisdiction over Highland Asir, where the power is chiefly in the hands of the head of the Aidh family, chief of the Beni Mugheid tribe. Estimated population of all Asir, whether under Idrisi or not (the great majority are independent of him), 1,000,000

5 The Imamate of Yemen, which is centred at Sana, is of considerable antiquity, the Imam tracing his descent to the Prophet's daughter Fatimah, and being credited by his Zeidist followers with infallibility and esoteric knowledge. Considerable areas are devoted to agriculture, cereals and coffee, great tracts of mountain land are extensively cultivated. The present Imam is YAHYA MOHAMMED HAMID RD DIN. Area, 75,000 square miles, estimated population, one million. Capital, Sanaa, population about 25,000. Chief ports, Mocha and Hodeida, population 40,000.

6 The British Protectorate of Aden (see page 95)

7 The Sultanate of Oman (see page 1147)

8 The Sultanate of Koweit, on the north western coast of the Persian Gulf, acquired considerable importance during the discussion of the Baghdad Railway. The Sultan is subsidized by the British Government, which maintains a Political Agent at his Court. The present Sultan, AHMED IBN JOBAR, succeeded his uncle in March, 1921. Estimated population, 50,000.

9 Emirate of Kerak—Kerak is Transjordan, and the Emir is Abdullah, son of King Hussein.

MESOPOTAMIA

Mesopotamia was conquered by Indian and British troops during the Great War. The town of Basra was occupied on November 22, 1914, and Baghdad on March 11, 1917. In the Treaty of Peace with Turkey, Mesopotamia is recognized as an independent State, to be placed under a mandatory Power. The Supreme Council has allotted the mandate to Great Britain.

Government—In 1920 a Council of State was formed, as a provisional measure, to conduct the administration of the country, until a National Assembly can meet and decide upon the future form of Government. For this purpose an electoral law is being drafted.

The Provisional Council of State consists of 18 members, under the Presidency of the Naqib of Baghdad. Eight of these hold portfolios for the administration of the existing departments (Interior, Finance, Justice, Pious Foundations, Education, Defence, Public Works, and Commerce).

Area and Population—The country has an area of 143,250 square miles (the vilayets respectively of Baghdad, 54,540 square miles, Basra, 53,580 square miles, and Mosul, 35,130 square miles), and a population, according to the Census of 1920, of 2,849,282. The following are the detailed figures of the census results:—

Division	Sunn	Shi'ah	Jewish	Christian	Other Religions	Total
Baghdad	130,000	54,000	50,000	15,000	1,000	250,000

Total Vilayet of Mosul	579,713	22,180	14,530	55,470	31,180	703,373
Grand total	1,146,685	1,494,015	87,488	78,792	42,202	2,849,282

Municipalities have been established wherever possible, and tribal councils set up for tribal districts. These councils are developing into Divisional Councils, which are consulted on the expansion of railways, standardization of weights and measures, health service, education, agriculture, and the maintenance of law and order

Instruction—Ninety Government schools of all types, including four municipal State aided schools, a teachers' training school, and a survey school have been opened, extension classes in agriculture have also been started

Finance—Revenue, 1918-19, 2,080,000*l*, expenditure, 1,177,000*l* Revenue, 1919-20, 3,437,000*l*, expenditure, 3,692,000*l*

Production—Mesopotamia is a land of great potentialities, oil being its chief product. Petroleum wells are being worked at Gazara, near Mosul, and at Mandali, north east of Baghdad. At Hit, on the Euphrates, are asphalt deposits. The soil of the country is rich and agriculture is being developed, especially by means of irrigation. Wheat, barley, cotton, date palms, and ground-nuts can be produced

Commerce—Imports and exports in 1919 were as follows —

	Imports	Exports
Basra	9,078,104	2,342,635
Baghdad	2,902,240	4,807,633
Total	11,940,404	7,150,268

Cotton goods form nearly 50 per cent of the imports of the country, sugar is next in importance. Large quantities of both commodities were re-exported into Persia. Carpets and grain were the principal exports

Communications—The principal seaport for Mesopotamia is Basra, situated 70 miles up the Shatt el Arab, at the head of the Persian Gulf. Before the war the rivers Tigris and Euphrates formed the only means of through communication to Baghdad and other parts of the country. There were caravan routes across the desert, and a few poor roads, the Baghdad railway, built on the European 4ft 8½in gauge, was in course of construction, the section from Baghdad to Samarra, 75 miles in length, having been opened just before the war. During the war metre gauge railways were built from Basra to Nasiriyah on the Euphrates, 140 miles, Basra to Amara, on the Tigris, 109 miles and Kut el-Amara to Baghdad, 105 miles, leaving a break of 120 miles between Amara and Kut el-Amara. Metre gauge lines were also built from Baghdad to near Khankin, 103 miles, and on to the Persian frontier, 30 miles. The standard gauge railway from Baghdad to Samarra (75 miles) was extended to beyond Tekrit (58 miles), and branches were made from Baghdad to Hilla on the Euphrates, 58 miles, and to Dhiban, beyond Fallujah, 48 miles. There has also been laid a 2ft 6in gauge from Hilla on the Euphrates to Kif, 21 miles. Since the Armistice the sections between Basra and Amara, and between Fallujah and Dhiban have been taken up, but Basra and Baghdad have been linked by a line up the Euphrates and the line to Telerit has been extended to Qalat Sharqat.

The length of telegraph lines is 2,995 miles and of wire 7,845 miles, of telephone lines, 265, and of telephone wire, 3410 miles. Number of telephone exchanges, 32, number of offices, 1,551

PALESTINE

The natural and historic boundaries of Palestine run from the desert on the east, along the slopes of Mount Hermon over to the Litani on the west where the Lebanon and Anti Lebanon first break into a series of elevated plateaux, and thence over to the coast. In the south, the boundary was formed by the Gulf of Akaba and the Desert of Sin.

According to the Anglo French Agreement of December 3, 1920, the northern frontier, between Palestine and Syria, begins at Ras Nakura along the watershed between the Farah, Kurn, and Kerbera Wadis on the south, and Duhleh el Avon and Zerka Wadis on the north, then follows the watershed between the Litany and the Jordan, as far north as Metullah, then turns eastward, leaving Banias in Palestine, then passes down the Wadi Jeraba to the Sea of Galilee, crosses the Sea of Galilee, and runs to the south of the Yarmuk.

Government —Under Turkish rule, Palestine was spread over three administrative regions, part was in the Vilayet of Beirut, part in the Independent Sanjak of Jerusalem, and part in the Vilayet of Damascus.

In 1917 the country was conquered by British forces who were in occupation until July 1, 1920. The whole country has been divided into seven districts, viz., Jerusalem, Jaffa, Gaza, Beersheba, Samaria (Nablus), Phœnicia (Haifa), Galilee (Nazareth).

High Commissioner —Rt Hon Sir Herbert L. Samuel P C, G B E (Appointed July 1, 1920)

On the 25th April, 1920, the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers at San Remo decided to give a Mandate for Palestine to Great Britain. To be embodied in the Mandate was the object of establishing there a National Home for the Jewish People, according to the Balfour Declaration of November 2, 1917, which has been embodied in the Peace Treaty with Turkey. The Balfour declaration was in these terms — 'His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of that object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

The object of the British Administration in Palestine is to provide for the establishment of the Jewish National Home without, however, prejudicing the civil and religious rights of the non Jewish communities in Palestine. The High Commissioner has appointed an Advisory Council, which is composed of the heads of the principal Government Departments and 10 'unofficial' members, representing the various communities. This Council is regarded as the first step towards the establishment of self governing institutions in Palestine. The Jewish population of Palestine have perfected their internal organisation by convening an Elected Assembly, which elected a National Committee, to represent the Jewish population of Palestine in its dealings with the Administration. English, Hebrew and Arabic are the recognised official languages of the country.

Area and Population — The area and population of Palestine according to the old Turkish Administrative divisions is estimated as follows —

	Area in sq miles	Population
Sanjak of Jerusalem (containing cazas of Jerusalem, Jaffa, Gaza, Hebron, Beersheba)	8,106	390,000
Sanjak of Acre (containing cazas of Acre, Haifa, Nazareth, Tiberias and Safed)	2,972	135,000
Sanjak of Nablus (containing cazas of Nablus, Jenin, and Tulkeram)	2,646	150,000
Total	13,724	675,000

Palestine in British occupation is, however, only about 9,000 square miles in extent, and includes only that part of Historic Palestine which lies to the west of the Jordan. The population of this territory on March 31, 1919, was 647,850, of whom 515,000 were Moslems, 65,300 Jews, 62,500 Christians, 150 Samaritans, and 4,900 others. In 1920, 10,000 Jewish immigrants entered the country.

The population of the principal towns is as follows — Jerusalem, 60,000, Jaffa, 40,000, Shechem (Nablus), 22,000, Haifa, 20,000, Hebron, 18,000, Bethlehem, 15,000, Nazareth, 15,000, Safed, 12,500, Acre, 10,000, and Tiberias, 8,000.

The Jewish Colonies are grouped in four districts as follows — In Judea there are 19, viz, Mikveh Israel, Rishon le Zion, Ness Zionah, Ekron, Gederah, Ber Tobia, Ruchamah, Petach Tikvah, Ein Ganun, Kfar Mikhel, Kfar Saba, Ben Shimon, Hulda, Kfar Urieh, Artu, Moza, Dlub, Kalandiah, and Nachlath Jehudah. In Samaria there are 10, viz, Hederah, Hefzi Bah, Keikur, Gan Shmuel, Zichron Jacob, Marah, Shvujah, Bath Shalom, Shuni and Atlit. In Lower Galilee there are 16, viz, Mithaviah, Sedsherah, Kfar Tabor (Mesha), Jabneel (Jemna), Beth Gan, Ramat (Sarona), Poriah, Mizpah, Tiberias, Kinnereth, Daganiah, Hittin, Migdal, Tel Adas, Bethaniah, and Milhamiah. In Upper Galilee there are 10, viz, Rosh Pinah, Ayeleth Hashachet, Muchnayim, Chama, Mishmar Hajarden, Jessod-Hamaalah, Ein Zeitim, Kfar Gileadi, Pel Har, and Metullah. Each colony has one or more schools, a synagogue, public library, town hall, hospital, pharmacy and public baths

The total population of these settlements is about 15,000. Of the above mentioned the following settlements belong to the Jewish National Fund, which was established by the Zionist Organisation for the purpose of acquiring lands to remain the national property of the Jewish people.—Ben Shimon, Hulda, Kfar Mlal, Dilb, Nahlatz Jehudi, Merhaviah, Kinereth, Daganah and Hittin. The Palestine Land Development Company, a Society similarly organised by the Zionist Organisation, possesses the lands of Tel Adas, Kalandiah, some lands on the Carmel, at Jaffa, Jerusalem, &c. The other colonies were mostly founded by Baron Edmund de Rothschild and by the Jewish Colonisation Association. This Association administers all the properties of Baron de Rothschild. The total area of the Jewish settlements is 590,020 dunams or about 147,505 acres. There are 35,181 dunams (about 8,370 acres) of plantations, and among them 14,777 dunams (about 3,695 acres) vineyards, 33,825 dunams (about 8,456 acres) almond groves, 13,322 dunams (about 3,330 acres) olive plantations, 12,456 dunams (about 3,114 acres) orange groves, and 4,566 dunams (about 1,141 acres) eucalyptus plantations. There are two agricultural schools at Mikveh Israel and Petach Tikvah respectively. The Hebrew High School in Jaffa has 30 teachers and 750 pupils. The Jewish Agricultural Experiment Stations at Atlit and Zichron Jacob carry on agricultural and botanical research work.

Instruction—The approximate number of children under 14 in Palestine is as follows: Moslems 110,000, Christians 12,500, Jews 11,000. The schools maintained by the Government are 123 in number, and contain about 10,000 children; the scholars are mostly Moslems. There are also 53 schools partly maintained by the Government. A general extension of village education is in process of being carried out by the Department of Education, as there are over 90,000 Moslem children who do not attend school at all. Two Government Training Colleges have been established in Jerusalem for men and women. Technical education has been widely introduced, and teachers' examinations have been held throughout the country, and all Government teachers are now civil servants. A Law School has been started in Jerusalem. A School of Pharmacy will open very shortly, a Technical College is in process of organisation, and civil service examinations for clerks have been organised. The Christian communities provide, to a very large extent, for their own children, and about 10,000 children are attending their schools.

The Jews maintain their own schools, for which various Jewish organisations are responsible. Of these, the Zionist Organisation, in 1920, controlled 42 Kindergartens with 2,974 pupils and 113 teachers, 48 Elementary Schools with 6,704 pupils and 312 teachers, 12 Intermediate Schools with 1,252 pupils and 136 teachers, 6 Trade Schools with 325 pupils and 14 teachers, and 10 Evening Classes with 588 pupils and 27 teachers, making a total of 119 schools, 11,843 pupils and 602 teachers. The Intermediate Schools comprise 4 gymnasia, 2 teachers' training colleges, 1 Normal School for Kindergarten teachers, 1 arts and crafts school, 2 agricultural schools. In all these schools Hebrew is the medium of instruction. The budget for these schools amounted to £105,000. The Jewish Technical Institute in Haifa is expected to be opened in 1921.

Justice—The Administration has established the following Courts of Justices.—A Magistrates' Court in every town of importance, composed of a single Palestine Judge, who deals with smaller civil and criminal cases;

FINANCE—PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY—COMMERCE 1355

District Courts, composed of one British and two Palestine Judges in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, Nablus and Nazareth, which hear appeals from the Magistrate's Court and try more serious civil and criminal cases, going round the district as a Court of Assize, and a Court of Appeal in Jerusalem that sits in two chambers. In addition, there are Mohammedan Courts in every town, and Councils of the Sheikhs of the Arab tribes in the Beersheba district, Jordan Valley, which judge cases according to tribal custom. The Jewish population submit many of their civil cases to Arbitration Tribunals. There are 23 such voluntary Tribunals in the different Jewish villages and quarters, with a rota of 245 arbitrators, and an appellate Tribunal sits at Jaffa.

Finance—For the year 1921-22 the receipts were estimated at £E2,214,074, and the expenditure at £E2,286,133.

The main heads of revenue for 1921-22 were customs, £F449,000, house and land tax, £E120,000, annual tax, £E84,000, tithes, £E375,000, State domains, £F21,000, and stamp duties, £E15,000.

Production and Industry—Palestine is essentially an agricultural country. In 1920-21 the area under British Administration, exclusive of Trans Jordan, produced—Wheat, 62,897,017 kilos, barley, 27,233,948 kilos, millet, 30,352,916 kilos, grapes, 5,490,306 kilos, olive oil, 6,706,059 kilos, melons, 16,351,022 kilos, and lentils, 2,724,635 kilos. In 1920-21 there were in the country 262,400 sheep, 271,750 goats, and 9,000 camels.

Limestone is found all over the country, sandstone abounds on the coast, gypsum of good quality is found at Mount Usdum and at Mount Gipsu near Melhuma. Rock salt abounds in the Jordan Valley and on the shores of the Dead Sea, where also sulphur is obtainable. Mineral oil is said to have possibilities, but pending the ratification of the Mandate no work on concessions is permitted. The Dead Sea is about 1,292 ft. below the sea level, and contains cooking salt, carnallite, and bromide. There are medicinal springs near Tiberias.

The only industries of export importance are those of wine making in the Jewish Colonies, especially Zichron Jacob, Rishon le Zion, and Petach Tikvah, soap boiling in Nablus and Haifa, olive oil in Nablus, Akka, and the district round Jaffa.

The Government is making efforts to re-afforest the country, in 1918-19 369,000 trees were planted, and the budget for 1919-20 provides for the planting of 1,820,000 more.

Commerce—For the year ending March 31, 1920, the imports amounted to £I 4,191,060, and the exports to £E 773,443.

The trade was distributed as follows—

Countries	Imports	Exports	Countries	Imports	Exports
	£L	£I		£E	£E

The principal articles of import were rice, £E241,810, sugar, £E419,978, petroleum, £E170,658, and cottons, £E106,281. The principal articles of export were millet, £E35,861, barley, £E40,361, nuts, £E31,793, oranges £E162,409, lentils, £E34,951, wine, £E65,017, and soap, £E142,407.

Shipping and Communications—The most important ports of Palestine are Jaffa, Haifa, Acre, and Gaza. For the year ending March 31, 1920, 357 steamers of 466,714 tons and 2,472 sailing vessels of 18,730 tons arrived at Palestinian ports.

A regular passenger service to Palestinian ports is provided by the Lloyd Triestino (Trieste Brindisi Port Said Jaffa line), the Messageries Maritimes (Marseilles Port Said-Jaffa), and cargo steamers carrying passengers by the Prince Line (Liverpool Tunis Palestine Syria).

The following railways are being worked—Kantara El Arish Rapha Ludd Tulkeram Haifa, 257 miles, Jaffa Ludd Jerusalem, 51 miles, Rapha Beersheba, 37 miles, Haifa Afuleh El Hamme, 60 miles, Haifa Acre, 11 miles, Afuleh Jenin-Nablus Tulkeram, 61 miles, making a total of 480 miles (625 miles on January 1 1921). The section El Hamme to Deraa is being worked by the Hejaz Railway under the control of the French Government. The following lines are not being worked—Wadi Surur-Heh 5.73 miles, and Tineh to Buiberah, 17 miles, making a total of 22.73 miles.

The length of public highways in the country is 523 miles.

Banking and Currency—The most important bank in Palestine is the Anglo Egyptian Bank with branches at Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, and Gaza. The Anglo Palestine Company has its head office in Jaffa, with branches in Jerusalem, Haifa, Tiberias, Safed, and Hebron. In addition there are branches in Jerusalem of the Banco di Roma, the Credit Lyonnais and the Imperial Ottoman Bank.

At present Egyptian currency is legal tender. 1 Egyptian pound (£E) = 100 piastres or 1,000 millimes. £E1 = £1 0s. 6d., and £1 = £E0 97s.

For Turkish currency the following rules have been established by the O.E.T. Administration—Turkish Treasury notes are not accepted as legal tender. 1 Turkish pound (gold) = 1 Egyptian piastres 87.75, Medjidi silver coinage of 1, 2, 5, 10 and 20 Turkish piastres are accepted at the rate of 5 Turkish piastres = Egyptian piastres 3, 1 Beshlik = Piastres Egyptian 1.5 and 1 Metallik = Piastre Egyptian 0.015 up to a limit of piastres Egyptian 1.5.

SYRIA

Syria, a province of Turkey in Asia, has, by the Treaty of Peace with Turkey, August 10, 1920, been recognised as an independent State to be placed under a Mandatory Power. By decision of the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers at San Remo (April 25, 1920), France has been assigned the Mandate for Syria.

The country is ruled by a Governor General who is under the authority of the French Foreign Office.

High Commissioner —General Gouraud.

Area and Population —Syria under the Mandate is bounded by the Mediterranean on the west, by the northern boundary of Palestine on the south, by Mesopotamia on the east, and on the north, according to the Franco-Turkish agreement of March 21, 1921, modifying the boundary set forth in the Treaty of Sevres, the Baghdad railway between Chobanbey and Nisibin.

The Anglo-French agreement of December 23, 1920, defines the frontier between Syria and Mesopotamia as running from Intar, at the south-east corner of the Hauran, north-east across the Syrian Desert, of which the northern portion falls to France. Thence the frontier crosses the Jezirah (land between the Euphrates and Tigris) so as to leave the Western Khabur river to France and Sinjar, which is 65 miles west of Mosul, to Mesopotamia. From Rumeilan Keui the frontier goes direct to the Tigris, and then up that river to the new southern boundary of Turkey.

According to the same agreement the southern boundary of Syria begins at Ras Nakura, then follows the watershed between the Farah, Kun, and Kerbela Wadis on the south and the Duhleh el Ayon and Zerka Wadis on the north, then follows the watershed between the Litany and the Jordan as far north as Metullah, the most northern Jewish Colony, then it eastward, leaving Banias and its "source of the Jordan" in Palestine, then passes down the Wadi Jeriba to the Sea of Galilee, then crosses the Sea of Galilee, leaving the country of the Gadarenes to France. From Seikh to the east of the outflow of the Lower Jordan from the Lake it runs to the south of the Yarmuk so as to include Deraa and Bosrah in Syria. From Deraa the frontier runs to Nasib, thence to Intar and north-east to the nearest point of the Euphrates at Abu Kemal, 50 miles west of Amsh, then it runs to Rumeilan Keui so as to leave all the western Khabur to Syria and Sinjar to Mesopotamia, and thence to the nearest point of the Tigris, about 70 miles north-west of Mosul. The eastern frontier of Syria runs up the Tigris as far as Jezret-Ibn-Omai, when it joins the Turkish frontier laid down in the Treaty of Sevres.

The country has been organised into 4 Governments or territories, viz. —

(1) Government of Aleppo, from the region of the Euphrates to the Mediterranean (Vilayet of Aleppo, Sanjak of Alexandrette); (2) Territory of the Hlaonites or Alaouites (region of Mount Anisurieh); (3) Government of the Great Lebanon from Tripoli (included) to Palestine with Bekaa; (4) Government of Damascus (Hama, Hems, Damascus, and the Hauran).

The Great Lebanon was proclaimed a State on September 1, 1920. It will have the following frontiers —North, the Dahr el Chodib, south, the frontier of Palestine, east, the coast, and west, the heights of anti-Lebanon. Beirut is to be the seat of the new Government. The national flag will be the French Tricolour with a cedar superimposed on the white ground.

The total area of Syria subject to the French Mandate may be estimated at 60,000 square miles. The total population of this area is probably under 3,000,000. The population of the Lebanon is about 400,000. The bulk of the population of Syria is of Arabic origin, and Arabic is the prevailing language, with many dialectical varieties. But there is a large influx of foreign elements, including Turks, Turkomans, Kurds, Circassians, Armenians, Persians, Jews, and a certain number of Europeans. The principal towns are Aleppo and Damascus, population 250,000, Beirut, 180,000, Hama, Hama, and Aintab, between 60,000 and 80,000, Tripoli, Latakia, and Antioch on or near the Northern Coast, 20,000 to 40,000, Zahlah in Lebanon 14,000. There are no statistics of births and deaths.

Religion and Education.—The population of Syria is mainly Sunni Moslems, with a certain number of Shia sects. The Druses number about 150,000. There have been Christians in Syria since the earliest times. There are now three Uniat Patriarchs and one Orthodox Patriarch of Antioch.

There are about 500 French schools with 50,000 pupils. The Greek Catholics have a seminary at Ain Na' near Beirut, and a Patriarchal College in Beirut. The Maronites also maintain their own schools. British Missionary Societies supported 19 educational institutions with close on 1,000 pupils, and about 120 elementary schools with about 9,000 pupils, over two thirds being girls. There is a girls' training college at Beirut and high grade schools at Aleppo, Damascus, and Brumara, in the Lebanon. American Missions have a number of educational institutions throughout Syria, including a college at Beirut, which includes schools of medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, commerce, and arts and sciences. Roman Catholic agencies have numerous schools, with over 20,000 pupils. The Jesuit University in Beirut is empowered to grant degrees to various faculties. The German Protestant Missions have also Mission Schools.

Finance.—In 1914 the revenue was £T3,878,841, and the expenditure £T1,953,855.

Defence.—A French army is in occupation of the whole country.

Production and Industry.—Syria is essentially an agricultural country, the bulk of the population being engaged in the cultivation of the soil and in cattle breeding, the total area normally under crops is roughly 6,900 square miles, or about 10 per cent of the whole area, but might be considerably extended. Cereals, vegetables, and fruit trees are produced in profusion, tobacco, cotton, and hemp are successfully cultivated, and there are some wild plants of value. Wheat is the chief cereal, the average crop being upwards of a million tons. The normal crop of barley is about 500,000 tons, durra (Indian millet), 200,000 tons, maize, oats and rye are of minor importance. Sesame, from which oil is produced, is one of the most valued crops, but is very uncertain, the annual crop being about 30,000 tons, a third being exported. Chickpeas, lentils, beans, vetches, and lupins are largely cultivated, the annual crop of chickpeas being estimated at 500,000 tons. About 4,700 acres in Latakia, Aleppo, Beirut, and Damascus produce about 3,000,000 lb of tobacco, valued at 200,000/. There is a limited amount of cultivation of cotton, hemp, and sugar cane. The most important fruit trees are the olive, vine, mulberry, and orange. Olives are widely cultivated and the annual output before the war was estimated at 158,000 tons, value 2,200,000/. Vines are also widely distributed, yielding before the war about 345,000 tons. Only a small proportion of this is converted into wine. The white mulberry is largely cultivated in Northern Syria for feeding silkworms. The cultivation of oranges and lemons has greatly increased in recent years, and the fruit of these and other trees is largely exported.

It is estimated that in 1914 the country contained about 270,000 horses, mules, and donkeys, cattle 500,000, sheep and goats 4,800,000, camels 200,000, valued at about 10,000,000/

Syria is poorer in minerals than in other resources, but this may be due to insufficient exploration. Northern Lebanon has been worked for iron in ancient and modern times. At Majerba the ore is rich, and the iron good. There is a comparatively rich mine of lignite in South Lebanon. There are indications of petroleum in various places, but the attempts to work it so far have not been successful. There are indications of phosphates, lead, copper, antimony, nickel, chrome, gypsum is widely distributed. There is abundance of marble and good building stone.

The industries of Syria are on a very small scale, by the introduction of Western methods they might be considerably developed. Flour, oil, soap, and silk thread are the most important. Wine and tobacco are produced, the output might be much increased.

Commerce — Before the war the average annual trade amounted to about 3,636,000/ for exports and 6,653,000/ for imports, mainly through Alexandretta and Beirut. The main exports from Syria (pre war figures) are raw silk 420,000/, cocoons 292,000/, sheep, goats and cattle 260,000/, oranges and lemons 226,000/, soap 206,000/, wool 188,000/, tobacco 160,000/, sesame 126,000/. The leading imports into Syria are (1911) cotton fabrics 1,400,000/, cotton yarn 400,000/, sugar 400,000/, rice 287,000/, flour 190,000/, coffee 107,000/, metals and articles of metal 620,000/, engines, carriages, agricultural machines 190,000/, petroleum 215,000/, timber 12,000/. Of the exports (average 1908-13) 750,000/ went to France, 570,000/ to Egypt, about 250,000/ to the United Kingdom. Of the imports an average of 1,786,000/ came from the United Kingdom, Austria 418,000/, France 370,000/, Turkey 475,000/.

Communications — Most of the ports of Syria are visited regularly by the steamers of various shipping companies. The total tonnage entered and cleared at the leading ports in 1913 amounted to 5,256,000. Of this 1,150,600 tons were British, 1,087,800 Austrian, 1,049,300 Russian, 985,400 French, 620,100 Italian, 361,700 German.

Under the Turkish administration there were three classes of roads, the main roads being metalled, but rough. Syria is now comparatively well provided with railways, and new lines and branches are proposed. A line traverses the interior from north to south, with branches to the chief ports. About 190 miles of the Bagdad railway runs through Syria, and about 850 miles of other companies. Of the Hejaz railway about 620 miles traverse Syria.

The official currency as from May 1, 1920, is the Syrian Bank Note, issued by the Bank of Syria, under French Treasury control. The monetary unit is the Syrian pound, divided into 100 piastres (1 piastre = 20 centimes).

URUGUAY.

(REPUBLICA ORIENTAL DEL URUGUAY)

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Uruguay, formerly a part of the Spanish Viceroyalty of Rio de la Plata, and subsequently a province of Brazil, declared its independence August 25, 1825, which was recognised by the Treaty of Montevideo, signed August 27, 1828. The Constitution of the Republic was last amended on January 3, 1918, and came into force on March 1, 1919. The franchise is universal for males over 18 years of age, voting is secret, and the principle of proportional representation operates. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the Senate and the Chamber of Representatives, which meet in annual session, extending from March 15 to December 15. In the interval of the session, a permanent committee of two senators and five members of the Lower House assumes the control of the executive power. The representatives are chosen for three years, in the proportion of 1 to every 12,000 inhabitants of male adults who can read and write. The senators are chosen by an Electoral College, whose members are directly elected by the people, there is one senator for each department, chosen for six years, one third retiring every two years. There are 90 representatives and 19 senators.

The executive is divided between the President of the Republic and a National Administrative Council. The President is elected for four years by the direct vote of the people, and may be re-elected after an interval of 8 years since his last holding office. The National Administrative Council consists of nine members, six of the majority party, and three of the largest minority, three retiring every two years. The election is by direct popular vote. The President appoints the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, of War and Marine, and of the Interior, and has supreme control of these departments. The other ministers—of Finance, Public Works, Industry and Education—are appointed by the Council, which is the controlling power of these departments. The President receives a salary of 24,000 pesos per annum.

President of the Republic—Dr Baltasar Brum (March 1, 1919, to February 28, 1923)

President of the Administrative Council—Dr Feliciano Viera

Area and Population

The following table shows the area and the estimated population of the departments (capitals in brackets) on December 31, 1919 —

The departments enjoy ample autonomy, each having its Local Government Board and Representative Assembly, with extensive control over local expenditure, taxation, and public works.

In 1914 the Uruguayan and Brazilian Boundary Commissions drew up the documents respecting three islands belonging to Uruguay, to be called Socorro, Jacinto, and Denis.

The results of the census of October, 1908, showed a population of 1,042,686 (530,508 males and 512,178 females). Of this total, 181,222 were foreigners, 62,357 being Italian, 54,885 Spanish, 27,789 Brazilian, 18,600 Argentine, 8,341 French, 1,324 British, 1,406 Swiss, 1,112 German, and 5,408 of other nationalities.

The population of Montevideo City on November 30, 1920, was 361,950. Of the other cities, Paysandu had 26,000 inhabitants, Salto, 30,000, Mercedes, 23,000.

Births, deaths, and marriages for three years. The births and deaths are exclusive of still births.

Years	Living Births	Still Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1917	86,752	1,264	6,278	17,318	19,404
1918	88,914	1,341	6,843	20,009	18,905
1919	89,307	1,291	7,537	18,904	20,403

Of the living births in 1919, 11,150 were illegitimate. Divorces 170 in 1917, 195 in 1918, 191 in 1919.

For five years the arrivals and departures by sea at Montevideo were —

	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
Immigrants	212,236	220,527	1,3,421	180,687	158,186
Emigrants	202,222	204,525	164,556	177,254	145,287

Of the immigrants landing in Montevideo in 1919, 10,778 were Spanish, 5,079 Italian, 5,562 Brazilian, 2,331 French, 1,678 German, and 3,741 English.

Religion and Instruction.

State and church are separated, and there is complete religious liberty. The religion professed by the majority of the inhabitants is Roman Catholic. The archbishopric of Montevideo has 2 suffragan bishops in Salto and Melo. The 1908 census showed 430,095 Catholics, 12,232 Protestants, and 45,470 unspecified.

Primary education is obligatory. In 1919 there were 995 public schools with 106,905 enrolled pupils. There were also 183 private schools with 19,410 pupils. Evening courses for adults were attended (1919) by 6,513 pupils (1,951 illiterates).

There is at Montevideo a university, with 4,165 students and 344 teachers in 1920. There are also a preparatory school and 22 other establishments for secondary and higher education with 4,943 pupils in 1919. There are normal schools for males and for females, and a school of arts and trades supported by the State where 185 pupils receive instruction gratuitously. At the military college, with 8 professors, there are 46 pupils. There are also many religious seminaries throughout the Republic with a considerable number of pupils, a university for women, a school for the blind, and one for the deaf and dumb, and a school of domestic science.

For the relief of poverty there are a charity hospital, an hospital for the insane, an isolation hospital, an asylum for beggars, an orphan asylum, and 3 infant schools. The Asistencia Publica is an institution which has general charge of hospitals, asylums, dispensaries, and similar relief works all over the country. For 1919-20 its budget was fixed at 3,711,173 pesos.

Justice

The judicial power rests with the High Court of Justice, consisting of 5 judges elected by the General Assembly of the Chambers. The President is chosen annually by the members of the Court from amongst themselves. This court has original jurisdiction in constitutional, international, and admiralty cases, and will hear appeals in cases in which the decision has been modified or altered in other appeal courts, of which there are 2 each with 3 judges. In Montevideo there are also 3 courts for ordinary civil cases, 2 for commercial cases, 1 for Government, 2 for criminal cases, 2 correctional courts, and 3 for criminal investigation. Each departmental capital has a departmental court, and each of the 214 judicial sections into which the Republic is divided has a justice of peace court, further each section is divided into districts, in which deputy judges (alcaldes) try cases involving small amounts.

In September 1907 the death penalty was abolished, penal servitude for a period of 30 to 40 years being put in its place.

Finance

The receipts and expenditure for recent years are stated as follows —

—	Receipts	Expenditure	—	Receipts	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914-15	7,621,082	7,368,428	1917-18	6,266,261	6,281,204
1915-16	7,031,698	6,890,125	1918-19	7,474,000	6,281,204
1916-17	6,643,401	5,942,489	1920-21	8,137,015	8,747,614

The estimates of revenue and expenditure for 1920-21<sup>1</sup> were (47 dollars = £1) —

Revenue	Dollars	Expenditure	Dollars

The amount of the public debt of Uruguay on January 1, 1920, is officially given as 172,005,288 dollars. Of the total 43,310,390 dollars ranks as internal, 126,559,398 dollars as foreign, and 2,135,500 dollars as international.

Defence

The army of Uruguay consists of a small standing army, and the National Guard. Service in the standing army is voluntary, lasting from 2 to 5 years, with re-engagement up to the age of 44. It consists of 21 line battalions, 4 rifle companies, 10 cavalry regiments, 5 field artillery regiments of 3 batteries each, a fortress artillery company and machine gun company, 1 engineers' battalion, and 1 bearer company with a peace strength of 10,400 officers and men, and a nominal war strength of 50,000.

The National Guard is a militia, service in which is compulsory. It is divided into three classes, or 'bans'. The first 'ban,' or 'mobile' national guard contains all the young men fit for military duty between the ages of 17 and 30, and forms a more or less organised force of 15,000 to 20,000 men. It would take the field with the standing army. The second ban, consisting of men fit for service between 30 and 45, is the 'departmental,' or provincial, national guard. Its units do not move out of their own departments, but the men can be drafted to make good the losses of the mobile units in time of war. The third ban, containing all the men between 19 and 45, is the 'territorial' force, and is only liable to garrison duty in its own districts. The total strength of the National Guard (all three bans) is, nominally, about 100,000 men and 120 guns.

There is also a police force, with an establishment of 5,000.

The infantry of the active army is armed with the Mauser rifle, the field batteries have either Schneider or Krupp 7.5 cm guns. The National Guard is mainly armed with the Remington rifle and old de Bange guns.

The fleet consists of an armoured cruiser Montevideo, the yacht 18 de Julio, and the Uruguay, 1,400 tons, speed 23 knots, launched at Kiel in 1910.

Production and Industry

In Uruguay the agricultural industries are extending. The number of people engaged in agriculture in 1913-14 was 92,462, in 1914-15, 98,301 and in 1918-19, 93,187. The principal crops and their yield for two years were as follows:—

	Area		Yield
	1918-1919	1919-1920	1917-1918	1918-1919
Wheat	Acres 841,427	Acres 688,407	Metric tons 355,444	Metric tons 187,523
Barley	5,197	1,610	2,311	1,578
Oats	85,744	81,145	53,600	18,701
Linseed	52,270	83,645	8,467	12,660

In 1916 there were within the Republic 7,802,442 head of cattle, 567,151 horses, 11,472,852 sheep, 16,663 mules, 12,218 goats, and 303,958 pigs.

Wine is produced chiefly in the departments of Montevideo, Canelones, Salto, Colonia, and Paysandu. In 1918 there were 2,822 properties (2,638 in 1917), of 17,180 acres, producing 41,888,814 kilos of grapes, and 5,628,926 gallons of wine. Tobacco and olives are also cultivated.

In the northern departments several gold mines are worked, and silver, copper, lead, magnesium, and lignite coal are found. The supply of electricity for light, power, and traction is a State monopoly (Bill passed October 20, 1912).

There were in 1918, 16,017 industrial and commercial establishments, with a capital of 134,383,782 pesos.

Shipping and Communications

In 1918 Uruguay had 45 steamers of a total net tonnage of 4,948 tons

The following table shows the vessels entered and cleared at the ports of Uruguay for 3 years

Year	Entered				Cleared
	Steamers		Sailing Vessels		Steamers		Sailing Vessels
	No	Tonnage	No	Tonnage	No	Tonnage	No	Tonnage
1917	6,096	6,34,885	2,760	513,609	6,046	6,275,996	2,719	525,723

There were besides, in 1919, 8,072 barques of 8,084,269 tons that entered and 8,004 barques of 8,063,018 tons that cleared all the ports. The port of Montevideo is visited by the steamers of 20 different companies, of which 12 are British, 2 German, 3 French, 2 Italian, and 1 Spanish.

The National roads of Uruguay have a total length of 2,240 miles, and there are about 3,100 miles of departmental roads, of which about 200 miles are macadamised. River transport is also very extensive.

The three principal railway systems are the Central (988 miles), the Midland (501 miles), and the East Coast (71 miles), all British owned. At the end of 1917 the railway system of Uruguay open for traffic had a total length of 1,660 miles of standard gauge, of which 1,060 miles are under State guarantee. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919, the railway receipts were 10,156,034 pesos, as compared with 8,624,732 pesos collected during the previous fiscal year. The gross earnings of the railways were 1,109,065 pesos, of which the Central Railway obtained 875,000 pesos, the Eastern Railway, 128,175 pesos, and the Northern Railway, 105,890 pesos. There are 170 miles of tramway in operation, the tramway lines of Montevideo have been electrified.

The telegraph lines in operation have a total length of 4,819 miles, in 1919, 258 offices through which 1,505,705 telegrams passed. Two telephone companies of Montevideo have 26,872 miles of wire, and in the Republic, 29 companies have 37,390 miles of wire. Number of subscribers 18,788. The Government will take over the whole of the postal services as soon as arrangements have been completed.

In 1919 there were 995 post offices. The correspondence movement (internal) comprised 103,802,411 letters, packets, &c., and external 12,026,807.

Money and Credit

The Bank of the Republic had a paid up capital on December 31, 1920, of 20,335,955 dollars. This bank has the exclusive right to issue notes. The president and directors are appointed by the Government. On December 31, 1918, notes to the value of 55,649,927 dollars were in circulation and its stock of gold amounted to 48,057,793 dollars in bullion and 45,172,862 dollars in gold coin.

On November 30, 1919 the gold reserve in the banks of the country amounted to 60,557,072 pesos, distributed as follows: 53,627,758 pesos in the Bank of the Republic, 3,201,982 pesos in other Uruguayan banks, and 3,727,332 pesos in foreign banks.

In 1912 the Government created a National Insurance Bank (Banco de Seguros del Estado) with a monopoly of insurance business of all kinds. No new insurance companies may now be established. The Insurance Bank opened its doors on March 1, 1912. The business of the bank is divided into the following departments: Fire insurance, automobile insurance, workmen's accident insurance, hail insurance, life insurance, animal insurance, marine insurance, and insurance for window panes and mirrors. In 1919 the volume of business transacted by the insurance bank amounted to 120,942,523 pesos, and the profits were 2,212,612 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures

There is no Uruguayan gold coin in circulation, but the monetary standard is gold, the theoretical gold coin being the peso nacional, weighing 1.697 grammes, .917 fine. The law of June 23, 1862, authorised the coinage of the doblon, or 10 peso gold piece, but, as yet, only foreign gold is in circulation and is legal tender (4 70 pesos=£1)

The silver peso or dollar weighs 25 grammes, 900 fine. Other silver pieces are half, fifth, and tenth of a peso. Nickel coins are 5, 2, and 1 centesimo pieces.

The metric system of weights and measures was adopted by a law of May 20, 1862, and came into force on January 1, 1867, replacing the old Spanish weights and measures which were current with slight modifications. By a law of October 2, 1894, the metric system was made compulsory in all civil and commercial transactions. The strict requirements concerning weights and measures were reinforced by a decree of February 8, 1918.

VENEZUELA.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DE VENEZUELA )

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Venezuela was formed in 1830 by secession from the other members of the Republic of Colombia. The Constitution in force is that of June 13, 1914. Legislative authority is vested in a Congress of 2 chambers, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The former consists of 40 members elected for 3 years, 2 for each State, Venezuelans by birth and over 30 years of age. The latter is constituted as follows. Each State chooses by direct election for 3 years one deputy, a Venezuelan by birth and over 21 years of age, for every 35,000 inhabitants, and one more for an excess of 15,000. A State with fewer than 35,000 of population will have one deputy. The Federal District and the Territories which have, or may reach, the population fixed by law will also elect deputies.

The executive power is exercised by the President of the Republic in conjunction with the Cabinet Ministers through whom he acts. The President is elected by Congress for 7 years, must be a Venezuelan by birth and over 30 years of age, by the new Constitution (1914) there is no restriction as to re-election. Failing the President, temporarily, the President can nominate any member of the Cabinet to act in his place.

President of the Republic—General Juan Vicente Gómez, elected May 3, 1915, for the period 1915 to 1922.

The President-elect has not yet taken office, retaining his post of Commander in Chief. Accordingly the Provisional President, Dr. V. Márquez Bustillos, elected April 19, 1914, continues to act as head of the State.

The Cabinet consists of 7 Ministers: the Ministers of the Interior, of Foreign Affairs, of Finance, of War and Marine, of Fomento, of Public Works, and of Public Instruction. The seat of the General Powers of the Nation is at the City of Caracas but, when any unforeseen circumstance requires, the Executive Power may fix its residence at any other point of the Federal District.

The States are autonomous and politically equal. Each has a Legislative Assembly, whose members are chosen in accordance with their respective Constitutions. Each State has a President and a general Secretary. The States are divided into districts and municipalities. Each district has a municipal council, and each municipio a communal junta. The Federal District and the Territories are administered by the President of the Republic through Governors, who in turn appoint secretaries.

Area and Population.

Venezuela has an area of about 398,594 square miles. According to the census of 1891, the latest taken in Venezuela, the population was 2,323,527. Official estimates for December 31, 1918, place it at 2,852,614, the density for the entire country being 7 persons to the square mile. But the official figures have been very much questioned and it is said that 2½ millions is nearer actuality. It is now divided into a Federal District, 20 States and 2 Territories, as follows—

State	Capital	Pop. Dec. 31, 1918	State	Capital	Pop. Dec. 31 1918
Apure	San Fernando de Apure	30,527	Portuguesa	Guanare	114,488

Miranda	Guamare	17,967
Nueva Esparta	La Asuncion	53,704		Total	2,852,614

Some of the more important cities with their population according to the census of 1891, are Caracas 90,000, Merida (State of Merida), 13,366, San Cristobal (Táchira), 16,797, Bocono (Trujillo), 13,233, Valencia (Carabobo), 54,387, Barquisimeto (Lara), 27,069, Ciudad Bolívar (Bolívar), 17,735, Puerto Cabello (Carabobo), 13,176, Barcelona (Anzoategui), 14,089, Maturín (Monagas), 20,130, La Victoria (Aragua), 14,709, Villa de Cura (Aragua), 15,792, and Maracubo (Zulia), 34,740 (estimated at 48,500 in 1915).

The movement of population, according to official statistics, is shown as follows:

Year	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1917	8,600	77,486	57,802	7,857	7,182
1918	12,691	75,882	67,886	6,133	5,841
1919	17,170	8,000	62,011	12,423	12,879

Religion and Instruction

The Roman Catholic is the State religion, but there is toleration of all others. The Archbishop of Caracas has 5 suffragan bishops.

Instruction is given both in public and private schools, and teaching is entirely free. But under a new scheme introduced in 1915, all pupils whether of elementary, professional or high schools, must pass the requisite State examination. The State also prescribes the courses of study for all grades of schools. Great stress is laid on practical instruction, and accordingly in 1915 the Government established practical courses in medicine, and began to build laboratories for all grades of schools. Elementary instruction is free, but backward, and from the age of 7 to the completion of the primary grade, compulsory. At Caracas is the central University (it has been closed since October, 1912), and in Merida is the University of Los Andes. Superior instruction is divided into schools, viz: Philosophy and Letters, Physical, Mathematical, and Natural Sciences, Medical Science, Political Science, and Ecclesiastical Science. These schools can be established separately or can unite to form Universities. There are at present in activity, the University of Los Andes, eight schools of Political Science and of Ecclesiastical Science, and in Caracas Schools of Medical Science and of Ecclesiastical Science, besides private schools of Political Science. Steps are being taken for the establishment of other schools and institutes for superior instruction. The University Faculties have teaching members (professors), ordinary members (doctors), and honorary members. The Government supports also the following Institutes for special instruction: a School of Plastic Arts, another of Music and Elocution, two of Arts and Trades (one for men and the other for women), and three of Commerce. Total expenditure on education 1920-21, 4,328,181 bolivars (2,465,452 bolivars for elementary education).

Justice.

Federal judicial authority resides in the Court (which is also Court of Cassation) and in various tribunals and courts established by special laws. The Federal Procurator General is appointed for 3 years.

The States have each a Supreme Court with 3 members called respectively President, Relator, and Chancellor. Each State has also a superior court, courts of first instance, district courts, and municipal courts. The States' judicial officers hold their posts for 3 years. In the Territories there are civil and criminal judges of first instance, and also judges in the municipalities.

Finance

The revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows:—

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue	2,881,000	2,235,000	2,759,700	1,948,634	2,360,871
Expenditure	2,221,744	1,372,254	3,085,097	1,918,634	2,318,360

<sup>1</sup> Estimates.

The following table shows (in bolivars) the principal items of the budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921:—

Items	Revenue	Items	Expenditure
	Bolivars		Bolivars
Customs	14,000,000	Department of Interior	12,166,529

Other revenue	1,827,000
Total	59,612,000 (2,360,871)	Total	58,338,600 (2,318,360)

The public debt on Dec. 31, 1919, was 138,366,338 bolivars (5,534,652). Of the total the internal consolidated debt at 3 per cent amounted to 49,070,832 bolivars. The debt due under international conventions (known as diplomatic debt), amounted to 2,863,980.

Defence

In 1920 a law was promulgated according to which all Venezuelans have to serve two years with the active forces of the army, and to remain in the reserve until the age of 45. The active army consists of infantry, 20 battalions, each of 400 men, artillery, 8 batteries, each of 200 men, and 1 naval battalion. The naval force contains one battalion distributed among the vessels of the navy, which consists of an unarmoured cruiser (acquired in September, 1912), 3 gunboats, a transport, a tug, a torpedo boat, and several coastguard vessels

Production and Industry

The surface of Venezuela is naturally divided into 3 distinct zones—the agricultural, the pastoral, and the forest zone. In the first are grown coffee, cocoa, sugar cane, maize, cotton, beans, &c., the second affords runs for cattle, and in the third tropical products, such as caoutchouc, balata (a gum resembling rubber), tonka beans, copiba, vanilla, growing wild, are worked by the inhabitants. The area under coffee is estimated at from 180,000 to 200,000 acres. The coffee plantations number about 33,000, and those of cocoa 5,000. There are about 11,000 sugar plantations. The annual production of sugar may be estimated at 60,000 tons.

One fifth of the population is engaged in agriculture. The live stock in Venezuela is estimated as follows—2,004,257 oxen, 176,668 sheep, 1,667,272 goats, 191,079 horses, 89,186 mules, 312,810 asses, 1,618,214 pigs. A new census of stock has been ordered. In the agricultural and cattle industries about 60,000 labourers are employed.

Venezuela is rich in metals and other minerals. One of the principal mining industries is the production of gold in the region to the south east of Ciudad Bolivar. In 1918 19,760,000 grammes of gold were produced and 958,000 grammes exported. Copper ore production was 29,798 tons in 1918. Coal is worked at Coro, in Falcon State, and at Naricual. Total production in 1918, 25,332 tons. Salt mines in various States are now worked by the Government. The gross revenue during the first year of Government administration was 6,377,259 bolivars, and the net revenue exceeded 5,000,000 bolivars. Petroleum is found in many places, the production in 1919 amounted to 50,709 tons. Asphalt from Lake Bermudez is exported to the United States. Output in 1918, 46,453 tons. Round the island of Margarita and neighbouring islets off the north coast of Venezuela pearl fishing is carried on.

Venezuela has few industries, most manufactured materials required being imported. There are two cotton mills at Valencia, one at Caracas, and one at Cumana, producing textiles which compete with imported Manchester goods in the cheaper qualities. Coarse fibre sacks are also manufactured locally. There is also a cement and a glass factory at Caracas. Salt and matches are Government monopolies, the latter is farmed by a British Company.

Commerce

The value of the imports into and exports from Venezuela in the last 5 years was

	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	2,335,063	3,542,318	5,316,722	3,382,759	5,243,147
Exports	4,107,988	4,993,746	4,794,670	3,920,566	9,724,268

Principal domestic exports in 1918-19 and 1917-18 were —

	1917-18	1918-19		1917-18	1918-19
	Bolivars	Bolivars		Bolivars	Bolivars
Coffee	29,216,516	125,093,198	Hides	7,722,155	13,733,390

Netherlands	—	319	11,706	204,988
Italy	55,983	46,009	59,827	56,241

Of the imports in 1918-19, the United States furnished 73 per cent and the United Kingdom 22 per cent, and of the exports the United States took 47 per cent and the United Kingdom 6 per cent (1,099,118*l* of the imports from United States consisted of gold specie).

Total trade between Venezuela and the United Kingdom (according to the Board of Trade returns) for 5 years —

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Venezuela to U Kingdom	171,747	215,335	423,060	975,008	951,679
Exports to Venezuela from U Kingdom	919,390	943,931	1,071,199	1,359,987	267,029

Shipping and Communications

The number of vessels which entered ports of Venezuela in 1918-19 was 819 of an aggregate tonnage of 643,297 (British vessels, 60 of 153,478 tons). Foreign vessels are not permitted to engage in the coasting trade except by special concessions or by contract with the Government.

Venezuela had in 1918, 11 steamers of 5,298 tons, and 15 sailing vessels of 2,432 tons.

The roads of the country have recently been much improved. There are now good carriage roads from Caracas to La Guaira and Macuto, from Caracas to Valencia and Puerto Cabello, eventually to be continued to San Cristobal (683 miles), and from Caracas to Guatire, projected as far as Ciudad Bolivar, from Maracay two new roads have been opened to Ocumare de la Costa, and to Villa de Cura and the Llanos of Apure, in remoter parts away from the rivers, traffic is carried on by means of pack animals and small mule carts. A new road has also been constructed in the western part of the country from Orica, the present terminus of the Tachira Railroad southward of the mountains of San Cristobal. Total mileage of road on December 31, 1919, 1,636.

In Venezuela there are 12 lines of railway (5 national and 7 foreign the latter including 4 British and 1 German) with a total length of (January 1st, 1921) 644 miles. The Great Railway of Venezuela, 113 miles in extent, is one of the longest lines in the Republic, running between Caracas and Valencia. Other lines are the La Guaira and Caracas line (22 miles), the Venezuela Central Railway (45 miles), the Puerto Cabello and Valencia Railway (34 miles), the Bolivar Railway (143 miles), the oldest line in operation in the country, and which runs from the port of Tucacas to Barquisimeto. Great Tachira Railway (74 miles), Great Railway of La Cera (52 miles), Caranero Railway (33 miles), Guanta to Barcelona Railway (22 miles), and Santa Barbara to El Vigia Railway (37 miles). In 1919 gross railway receipts amounted to 16,042,648 bolivars, and working expenses to 9,359,028 bolivars. In Caracas electric tramways are worked by a British Company.

There are about 11 160 miles of navigable water in Venezuela. The Compañía Venezolana de Navegación has a virtual monopoly of the navigation of the river and its tributaries and the Lake of Maracaibo.

The telegraph system has (1920) a network of 6,081 miles, 215 telegraph offices, messages 15,722. Receipts amounted to 496,192 bolívares (362,361 bolívares in 1917). A British company supplies telephonic communication in most parts of the settled country in the neighbourhood of Caracas. Length of telephone lines in the Republic (December, 1914) 12,511 miles. There are 309 post offices (1917), which handled 4,663,251 letters, 368,346 official communications, 380,153 post cards, and 6,075,922 pieces of printed matter.

There are wireless stations at Maracay, Maracaibo, and San Cristóbal.

Money, Weights, and Measures

The Bank of Venezuela (capital 12,000,000 bolívares) had on May 31, 1920, a reserve fund of 2,244,523 bolívares, cash holdings of 47,161,030 bolívares. The Bank of Caracas has a capital of 6,000,000 bolívares, with reserve amounting (July 31, 1920) to 1,215,901 bolívares. There are also two other banks, the Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 1,250,000 bolívares, and the Commercial Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 400,000 bolívares.

The new Venezuelan banking law (1918) authorises the free establishment of banks in Venezuela, which, provided they are incorporated as native companies, shall have power to issue notes to bearer convertible on presentation. Two British banks, the Royal Bank of Canada and the Commercial Bank of Spanish America have established branches at Caracas, and the former has also branches at Puerto Cabello, Maracaibo, and Ciudad Bolívar. The latter has also opened a branch at Puerto Cabello. The National City Bank of New York and the Mercantile Bank of America have also opened branches at Caracas. The former has also opened branches at Maracaibo and Ciudad Bolívar. A Dutch bank, the Hollandsche Bank voor West Indië, has opened a branch at Caracas.

The official monetary unit is the Bolívar (equivalent to 0.293230 grammes fine gold), which corresponds to the franc. It is divided into 100 centimos. The face value of £1 is 25.25 bolívares, in 1919 the average rate of exchange was 22 bolívares to the £1. According to the monetary law of June 15 1918 it is intended to coin pieces of gold (100, 20, and 10 bolívares), silver (5, 2, and 1 bolívar, and 50 and 25 centimos), and nickel (12½ and 5 centimos).

The bank notes in circulation are as follows (the figures in brackets showing their values at par): 1,000 bolívares (£39 11s 8d), 800 bolívares (£31 13s 4d), 500 bolívares (£19 15s 10d), 400 bolívares (£15 16s 8d), 100 bolívares (£3 19s 2d), 50 bolívares (£1 19s 7d), 20 bolívares (15s 10d), and 10 bolívares (7s 11d).

Gold coins are the old Spanish onza (80 bolívares) (very rare) and 20 bolívares. Silver coins are 5 bolívar pieces, commonly called fuerte (3s 11½d), 2½ bolívares (1s 11½d), 2 bolívares (1s 7d), 1 bolívar (9½d), ½ bolívar, called a real (4½d), and ¼ bolívar, called a medio (2½d). Nickel coins are 0.125 bolívar, commonly called a cuartillo or a tocha (1½d), and 0.05 bolívar, called a centavo (½d).

A decree of May 18, 1912, provided that the official system of weights and measures shall be the metric system.

UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH.

The University offers facilities for POST-GRADUATE STUDY AND RESEARCH in all the Faculties, and is prepared to receive applications for admission as Research Students

The New DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY (Ph D) was opened to students beginning their Post-Graduate Course in October, 1920, but any Research Student admitted during the five years preceding that date may count for the Degree his period of Research Study in the University

Applicants, who must be over 21 years of age, must satisfy the University Authorities that their previous training has been suitable, that the line of Special Study or research which they propose is a fit and proper one, that they are qualified to prosecute the same, and that they propose to do so during a period to be approved, which shall be not less than two academical years. No applicant will be admitted unless he is a graduate of an approved University, or satisfies the Senatus that he possesses other qualifications which entitle him to admission.

A special programme of Post-Graduate Courses in all the departments, and the regulations for the Ph.D Degree, may be obtained on application to the Secretary

Applications from those desirous of entering upon a course of Advanced Study or Research should be addressed to the Secretary to the University

WILLIAM WILSON,

Secretary to the University

The Nation

AND

THE ATHENÆUM.

"The Nation" and "The Athenæum" have been amalgamated and now appear in one cover. To all intents and purposes, however, they maintain their separate entities. Under the new plan there is a division in the arrangement of the political and literary material with the result that far greater space is devoted to science, musical and dramatic art, and literature at home and abroad. It is thus possible to maintain a much closer and more varied treatment of these great subjects than "The Nation" was able to do.

"The Nation and 'The Athenæum' conduct an appeal to the higher interests of Politics and the civilised life such as no other critical journal has ever been able to offer. Both journals have a world-wide reputation, and make a strong appeal to all progressive thinkers.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, THEOLOGY AND ART
ESTABLISHED 1828

EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE 9d., POSTAGE 1d.

THE news of the week is compressed into an animated narrative, and thus readers of the paper are insured against missing the true bearing and the essential details of current events

The leading articles deal in an independent and unconventional spirit with the chief matters of political, economic, and general interest

Books of special interest and importance are dealt with in the long reviews, while the shorter notices give in a condensed form the judgment of equally competent critics on contemporary literature

In the weekly review of novels, readers of fiction may find a useful guide for making out their lists for the circulating libraries

New Book by Viscount Bryce

MODERN DEMOCRACIES

2 vols 8vo. 50s. net

The Daily Telegraph—“Viscount Bryce's book on Modern Democracies may justly be considered a colossal achievement. In two stout volumes of 600 pages each the veteran author, who is 82 years of age, tackles his subject with the energy and freshness of a young man, devoting to his task a knowledge of the issues, a thoroughness of treatment, a sureness of analytical power such as are rarely to be met with in an age like ours. These two volumes are eminently readable, and their value for the historical student cannot be estimated too highly.”

The Daily News—“Must long remain the standard treatise upon the subject with which it deals.”
